This is also the case in war. Allah says: 'Surely, Allah loves those who fight in His Way in ranks as if they were a firm and compact wall.' (as-Saff: 4) This simile is instructive because ‘a firm and compact wall’ is one in which the bricks are not coming loose since they are held in place by the building of which they are part. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was inspecting the rows in preparation for one of his battles, he saw one of the soldiers sticking out of line so he indicated to him with his stick to stand with the straight line.

Then, Allah Glorified is He states that the angels say: ‘And we are most surely they who declare the Glory [of Allah].’ (as-Saffat: 166) The angels wonder how they could be content to be worshipped besides Allah the Most High when they were only created to glorify Him.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He states:

وَإِن كَانُوا۟ لَيَقُولُونَ ﴿١٦٧﴾ لَوْ أَنَّ عِندَنَا ذِكْرًا مِّنَ ٱلْأَوَّلِينَ ﴿١٦٨﴾
لَكُنَّا عِبَادَ ٱللَّهِ ٱلْمُخْلَصِينَ ﴿١٦٩﴾ فَكَفَرُوا۟ بِهِۦ ۖ فَسَوْفَ يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿١٧٠﴾

[The disbelievers] used to say [167] If only we had a scripture like previous people [168] we would be true servants of God [169] yet now they reject [the Quran]. They will soon realize [170] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 167 - 170)

‘A reminder’, as stated in the verse, refers to scriptures, ‘…like previous people,’ meaning those that were similar to that which were revealed to previous prophets. Then, Allah says that they say, ‘we would be true servants of Allah.’ How strange it is that they should seek to justify their polytheism on this basis,

= narrated, ‘Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would turn to face us before making his (takbir) and say, "Come close together and straighten up." This was narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim. They also narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, "Straighten your lines, for straightening the lines is a part of the perfection of prayer."' although Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent down to all of them. Earlier prophets, who came before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were sent to a specific people for a specific time and were all committed to delivering Allah's legislations to His creation. As for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him he was the only prophet deputised by Allah to make laws for people because his Message is universal in terms of time and place until the Day of Judgment.

How is it, then, that they wanted a revelation from their forefathers when they had the last of all prophets with them? He was given general commands by Allah and then he clarified, expounded, and set them out in detail.

Allah's saying, 'Yet, now they reject …' (as-Saffat: 170) means that when the prophet they were asking for was sent down to them, they disbelieved in him. Therefore, this is only a matter of arrogance, disputation, and obstinacy in refusing to accept the truth and following it.

In Arabic, the letter sin and the word sawf both mean 'will' and indicate the future tense, but sawf refers to a more distant time than sin. Hence, in the Quranic verse, '…They will soon realise' (as-Saffat: 170), there is a very inclusive time phrase. The verb, '…realise' (as-Saffat: 170) is in the present case which is used for the present and the immediate future, while the word sawf denotes the distant future. Accordingly, sawf is used in this verse because amongst those who lived at the time of the revelation were those who would die before witnessing the recompense of the polytheists or the victory of Islam. Regarding the disbelievers who died before witnessing such events, they will know of which in the Hereafter when they see the punishment. A believer, on the other hand, has no need of this knowledge because he already believes in Allah's revelation. An example of such belief is the saying of 'Ali Allah be pleased with him 'Were the veil [of the Unseen] to be removed from me, I would not increase in certainty.'

When Muslims were in tight circumstances and distress, before the opening of Mecca, Allah revealed the verse: '[Their] assembly will be defeated, and they will turn their backs [in retreat].' (al-Qamar: 45) In the verse, the letter sin is used to denote the near future, which surprised 'Umar Allah be pleased with him the one whose opinion was in accordance with that which the Quran would soon reveal on many occasions. He said, ‘What assemblies are those which will be defeated when we are unable to protect ourselves or our families?’ When it happened, though, and Muslims entered Mecca as triumphant warriors, he said,(1) ‘Allah Glorified is He spoke the truth: “[Their] assembly will be defeated, and they will turn their backs [in retreat].”’ (al-Qamar: 45)

A believer ardently believes in what Allah the Almighty tells to happen, for it is a thing preordained in His Knowledge and so long as it was destined in pre-eternity, and given that there is no force that can oppose what Allah Glorified is He, has destined, and that He does not become incapacitated in any way that prevents Him from implementing His decrees, thus, it must necessarily come to pass.

A case in point here is the Quranic verse: ‘Allah's Commandment came, therefore do not desire to hasten it.’ (an-Nahl: 1) In Arabic, a past tense verb, as maintained by grammarians, describes an action in the past, whereas a present tense verb describes an action in the present or the future. However, how can one resolve the conflict between the past tense in ‘… came …’ and the prohibition to hasten it in ‘do not desire to hasten it’, which denotes that this will happen in the future? The answer is that the one speaking in this verse is Allah the Almighty not any of us. He is not bound by time and when He tells of something, then it will happen, and nothing can stop it, for it has been destined in pre-eternity. Thus, Allah’s Judgment has been issued in pre-eternity, so do not seek to hurry its occurrence.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He states:

(1) 'Ikrima Allah be pleased with him said, ‘When the verse, “[Their] assembly will be defeated, and they will turn their backs [in retreat]” (al-Qamar: 45) was revealed, ‘Umar said, “Which assembly is to be defeated?!” ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him said, "On the day of the battle of Badr, I saw Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him seizing his chainmail and saying, '[Their] assembly will be defeated, and they will turn their backs [in retreat]' (al-Qamar: 45), and so that day I understood the interpretation of the verse."’ This was narrated by Ibn Kathir in his Exegesis [4/226] and he ascribed it to Ibn Abu Hatim.

وَلَقَدۡ سَبَقَتۡ كَلِمَتُنَا لِعِبَادِنَا ٱلۡمُرۡسَلِينَ ﴿١٧١﴾ إِنَّهُمۡ لَهُمُ ٱلۡمَنصُورُونَ ﴿١٧٢﴾
وَإِنَّ جُندَنَا لَهُمُ ٱلۡغَٰلِبُونَ ﴿١٧٣﴾

Our word has already been given to Our servants the messengers [171] it is they who will be helped [172] and the ones who support Our cause will be the winners [173] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 171-173)

The Quranic phrase, '…Our Word has already gone forth (sabaqat kalimatuna)…' (as-Saffat: 171) means that Allah Glorified is He decreed these things before the universe existed. There are a few phrases that are synonymous to this one; one could say sabaqat kalimatuna, waqaat kalimatuna or haqqat kalimatuna. Sabaqat means the matter was delineated before it happened; waqaat (meaning 'it happened') relates to the time of its occurrence, while haqqat means that it is Allah's sole right to judge in accordance with His Power, and it is absolutely true that His judgment shall occur according to His Will. Thus, these meanings come together and complete each other.

Now, what is this 'Word' that has gone forth from Allah Glorified is He to His Messengers? It is the Quranic verses: 'Most surely they shall be the assisted ones, and most surely Our host alone shall be the victorious ones.' (as-Saffat: 172-173)

These two points that the messengers will inevitably be supported and that the hosts will undoubtedly be victorious refer to the 'Word that has gone forth' and the decree that cannot be repealed.

On account of this, Muslim scholars have inferred from these verses that for an army to earn victory certain prerequisites need to be fulfilled, but when neglected, defeat will surely happen.

Looking at the outcome of a conflict between Muslims and non-Muslims, it can be found that when Muslims were victorious, they were fulfilling these prerequisites, but when they were defeated, it was due to failure to meet such conditions, and they should have turned to themselves and search for the cause of their shortcoming. Had they maintained such prerequisites, Allah Glorified is He would have delivered His promise of victory to them.

This matter can be clearly inferred from the battles of Badr and Uhud. In the Battle of Badr, Muslims were victorious because they did not break the laws set by Allah the Most High relating to attaining victory. In the Battle of Uhud, however, they were not victorious even though they had Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in their midst. This was natural and should not come as a surprise. They disobeyed the command of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so how could they be granted victory despite their disobedience? I swear by Allah, had He given them victory on that occasion, the command of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would have become negligible in their eyes. They would have said, 'On such-and-such a day, we were disobedient but were still victorious.' Consequently, the final result of the Battle of Uhud was the defeat of the failed Muslims, whereas Islam was victorious and its laws and principles were held high.

As for the messengers, they have full trust in Allah's promise of victory. To them, this matter is not open to discussion. This is proven in the story of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. When he, along with the children of Israel, left Egypt, Pharaoh and his troops followed them until they almost caught up with Musa (Moses) and his people at the edge of the sea. Thereupon, Prophet Musa's (Moses') people said that they were most surely being overtaken. (ash-Shu'ara': 61) In response, Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him said: '… By no means, surely my Lord is with me. He will show me a way out.' (ash-Shu'ara': 62) He said it with full confidence, denying an event that seemed but a moment away; the sea was in front of them and the enemy was behind them, yet he said, '…By no means, surely my Lord is with me. He will show me a way out.' (ash-Shu'ara': 62) This is out of full belief in Allah's statement: 'Most surely they shall be the assisted ones' (as-Saffat: 172).

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He states:

فَتَوَلَّ عَنْهُمْ حَتَّىٰ حِينٍ ﴿١٧٤﴾ وَأَبْصِرْهُمْ فَسَوْفَ يُبْصِرُونَ ﴿١٧٥﴾
أَفَبِعَذَابِنَا يَسْتَعْجِلُونَ ﴿١٧٦﴾ فَإِذَا نَزَلَ بِسَاحَتِهِمْ فَسَآءَ صَبَاحُ ٱلْمُنذَرِينَ ﴿١٧٧﴾

So [Prophet] turn away from the disbelievers for a while [174] a Watch them: they will soon see [175] Do they really wish to hasten Our punishment? [176] When it descends on their courtyards, how terrible that morning will be for those who were warned! [177] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 174 - 177)

Allah’s saying, ‘Therefore, turn away from them…’ (as-Saffat: 174) means leave them to their falsehood and turn aside from them. Why should that be the case, when Allah the Exalted is able to aid His religion from the very beginning? Muslim scholars maintain that it is because Allah wants falsehood to worsen, prevailing until people feel constricted and tormented by it and, therefore, come to hate it. Another reason is to train the people of truth to overcome trials and tribulations so they may get stronger in their belief.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And [then] see them, so they too shall see’ (as-Saffat: 175); this verse is an order to Prophet Muhammad to look at their state and their eventual outcome. They will also come to see this outcome as well as the punishments they hasten that will befall them: ‘What! Would they then hasten on Our chastisement?’ (as-Saffat: 176) In another verse, Allah Glorified is He states that the disbelievers used to say to their Prophets: ‘… bring us what you promise us, if you should be of the truthful.’ (al-Ahqaf: 22) This is idiocy on their part, for this punishment that they deny and seek to hasten is going to happen inevitably: ‘But when it shall descend in their court (fa idha nazal bi sahatihim), evil shall then be the morning of the warned ones.’ (as-Saffat: 177) The Arabic word saha (court) refers to a wide-open place or the space that people seek for fresh air. The word nazal in this verse also means ‘comes upon them and surprises them’.

Allah's saying, ‘… evil shall then be the morning of the warned ones’, means their awakening (sabah) will be horrific and evil. Morning (As-Subh) is the best time for battle so that one might surprise the enemy before it is prepared. Alternatively, it could refer to the punishment coming on them all of a sudden in broad daylight, such that they are unable to hide their disgrace. The word mundharin in this verse alludes to those whom Allah has admonished and warned.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He states:

وَتَوَلَّ عَنْهُمْ حَتَّىٰ حِينٍ ﴿١٧٨﴾ وَأَبْصِرْ فَسَوْفَ يُبْصِرُونَ ﴿١٧٩﴾

[Prophet], turn away from the disbelievers for a while [178] Watch them: they will soon see [179] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 178 - 179)

The earlier verse in which Allah Glorified is He states, ‘Therefore turn away from them till a time,’ (as-Saffat: 174) refers to turning aside from them in this worldly life. Similarly, the Quranic verse, ‘and [then] see them …’ (as-Saffat: 175) has also to do with seeing in this world and so does the verse: ‘… for they too shall see.’ (as-Saffat: 175)

‘Time’ as mentioned in the verse, may signify punishment in this world or in the Hereafter, as can be inferred from the verse, ‘… So should We make you see part of what We threaten them with …’ which means in this world, ‘… or should We cause you to die, to Us shall they be returned’ (Ghafir: 77) which means in the Hereafter.

However, ‘time’ mentioned in this verse, ‘And turn away from them till a time’ (as-Saffat: 178) refers to the Hereafter, for it is not a repetition of the previous verse. The same is the case with the verse, ‘and [then] see, for they too shall see,’ (as-Saffat: 179) which alludes to the punishment, overtaking them all of a sudden in the Hereafter, that they once denied and rejected, and they will then say, ‘Our Lord! We have seen and we have heard’ (as-Sajda: 12).

Then, Allah Glorified is He states:

وَٱلۡحَمۡدُ لِلَّهِ رَبِّ ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿١٨٢﴾

Your Lord, the Lord of Glory, is far above what they attribute to Him [180] Peace be upon the messengers [181] and praise be to God the Lord of all the Worlds [182]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 180 - 182)

Allah the Almighty concludes this chapter with a glorification confirming His transcendence and affirming His attributes and actions to be beyond similarity and similitude. People's attributes and actions are totally different from those of Allah the Almighty; we should understand the Divine Attributes and Actions in the light of His saying, '…there is nothing like unto Him…' (ash-Shura: 11).

The meaning of the verse, 'Glory be to your Lord …' (as-Saffat: 180) is that Allah is transcendent above and beyond any shortcoming or any similarity to creation. Creation comprises essences dhawat, but they are not like unto Allah's Essence/dhat. They exist but their existence is not like unto His. They have independence, but it is not like His independence; they have wisdom but not like unto His, etc.

In the Quranic phrase, '… the Lord of Honour' (as-Saffat: 180), the word 'Lord' Rabb signifies nurture tarbiyya and implies nurturing the one being nourished in order to successfully achieve the goal appointed to him. To prepare the one being nourished, one doing the nourishing needs to first know the end for which this one being nourished is created. Subsequently, one doing the nourishing must have the wisdom to lay out the way which enables the one being nourished to attain that end.

So, who determines the end of man's existence? As previously stated, the manufacturer of something is the one who determines the purpose of its creation first and foremost, even before he embarks upon it. Did the inventor of the television set, for example, invent it and then say, 'It is for you to find out the uses of this set?' Of course not, he defined the purpose of manufacturing it first. Similarly, none but Allah, the Creator of man, is to determine the purpose of man's creation. Furthermore, products are maintained by their manufacturers, and so is man's behaviour which cannot be reformed except with Allah's Guidance.

This is why we assert that this world only becomes corrupt when man leaves this framework, starts to set for himself the purpose of his existence, lays down his own guidance for life and puts his Creator and His Guidance aside. The path that the Creator has laid down for his created beings is akin to a manual, by means of which a product is maintained and any arising damage can be rectified. The one who lays down such a manual must necessarily be precise and wise so that nothing escapes him, and nothing needs to be changed or corrected. The Creator Glorified is He is more knowledgeable about His slaves and His creation, and He knows better what is best for them in this world and the Hereafter: 'Does He not know, Who created? And He is the Knower of the subtleties, the Aware.' (al-Mulk: 14)

If this were not the case, why would the Creator invite us to come to Him five times through prayer during the day and the night and make the prayers obligatory upon us under all circumstances? This is why Salat Al-Safar (travel prayer) and Salat Al-Marid (the sick prayer) have been legislated. Even if one's illness is severe, he must pray, even with his glance or thoughts.

As already stated in this regard, when one desires to see the president or some dignitary, then one must get an appointment and follow certain procedures. Furthermore, the issue to be discussed shall be specified, and then it is that dignitary who ends the meeting at his own will. As for meeting with your Lord, it is a meeting of a beloved who allows His admirer to specify the time, place and subject of the meeting. He may begin and ends it whenever he likes. If you want to meet your Lord, you only need to get prepared for it and say Allah akbar (Allah is the Greatest), a phrase that brings you directly into the presence of your Lord Glorified is He.

Imagine that a product is checked by its manufacturer five times a day, could there remain any problems or defects with it?! For this reason, whenever Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him found himself troubled by some matter, he would rush to pray. He peace and blessings be upon him would also say, 'Give us rest by it (i.e. prayer), O, Bilal.'(1) Indeed, give us rest by it, not from it!

(1) This was narrated by the Imam Ahmad ibn Hanbal in his Musnad [5/364] and Abu Dawud in his Sunnan [4985] on the authority of a man from amongst the Companions.

At the end of this chapter, Allah the Exalted mentions His glorification, then His Lordship with which He nurtures and prepares one for the task assigned to him. Nonetheless, why do you need such nurture? You need it so that you may be honoured by Allah: '… the Lord of Honour (Al-izza)…' (as-Saffat: 180). Al-izza (honour, power, and glory) implies defeating others but not getting defeated by anyone.

Thus, we set forth the parable, and indeed Allah is beyond all similitudes; for example, when a small boy goes out in the street alone, other boys may wind him up, pick a fight with him or beat him. If, however, his father takes him by the hand and goes out with him, no one will dare approach him out of fear of his father. Likewise, a Muslim should always put himself in the care of his Lord and be with Him, for only then no one will dare to offend him.

Hence, the izza (honour) is one of Allah's Attributes, by virtue of which He the Most High bestows upon His slaves the victory that cannot be suppressed, along with the power that renders one in no need of others. Another type of izza (honour) is pride in sin, of which Allah says: 'and when it is said to him to guard against (the punishment of) Allah, pride carries him off to sin. Therefore, hell is sufficient for him, and certainly, it is an evil resting place.' (al-Baqara: 206) This type of 'izza (honour) represents baseless arrogance.

Another example of this type is the statement of the hypocrites, as mentioned in the Quranic verse: '...If we return to Medina, the more honoured (Al-a'azz) will surely drive out the meaner therefrom ...' (al-Munafiqun: 8). Indeed, they spoke the truth, but who was really the 'the more honoured' and who was the 'meaner'?

The Quranic verse, '… above what they describe' (as-Saffat: 180) refers to Allah's transcendence above their lies and attributions. Allah says: 'and peace be on the prophets' (as-Saffat: 181); this means on all of them because despite the fact that sometimes they burdened us with difficult things, they took us by the hand to safety and success. Thus, we ask Allah to grant them peace and to confer His blessings upon them whenever they are mentioned.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says, 'and all praise is due to Allah, the Lord of the worlds.' (as-Saffat: 182), for He is the One Who guided and helped us to follow the right path through His messengers. All praise is also due to Allah the Almighty for the reward, bliss, and gardens that He has prepared for us in the next world. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: '… and the last of their calls shall be, "Praise be to Allah, the Lord of the worlds."' (Yunus: 10) It is narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Whoever wants to be given the fullest measure of reward on the Day of Judgment should finish his gatherings by saying, "Glory be to your Lord, the Lord of Honour, above what they describe and peace be on the prophets, and all praise is due to Allah, the Lord of the worlds. (182)"' (as-Saffat: 181-182)

the chapter of

Sad

In the Name of God,(1) the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of Sad (2):

صٓ ۚ وَٱلْقُرْءَانِ ذِى ٱلذِّكْرِ ١

Sad, By the Quran with its reminding [1]
(The Quran, _Sad:_ 1)

We have previously discussed the disjoined letters (Al-huruf Al-muqattaa) in the beginnings of Quranic chapters. We clarified that Allah Glorified is He opens some chapters with a single disconnected letter like sad, nun and qaf, others with two letters like ta sin and ha mim, others with four letters like alif lam mim sad and yet others with five letters like kaf ha ya'ayn sad and ha mim ayn sin qaf.

We also explained that letters are of two types, one of which is those that are components of words. The component letters are those from which words are formed. For instance, the verb Katab (he wrote) is composed of the letters:

(1) The Islamic conception of 'Allah' is not the same as the Christian and Jewish conception of 'God'. However, the word 'Allah' does not refer to a tribal god or God of only Muslims, it refers to the Creator of the whole world, the One God (who has no son). We prefer, however, to use 'Allah' rather than 'God' as it has a unique character: it cannot be used to refer to any false gods and does not have any derivatives like goddess, gods, etc. It is a unique word used solely to describe the One God of this universe.

(2) The chapter of Sad is Meccan according to the consensus of the scholars. It contains 88 verses, and it is the 38th chapter according to the order of the Mushaf and is located in the 23rd juz' (1/30 parts of the Quran). It was revealed after chapter al-Qamar and before chapter al-A'raf and thereby it was the 37th chapter to be revealed. See Al-Itqan fi Ulum Al-Quran 1/27.

kaf, ta and ba. The letter kaf or ta on its own has no meaning. The second type of letters is the ones which have meaning in themselves such as the letter ta that is added to the end of a verb and acts as its subject. In the verb katabtu (I wrote), ta refers to a first person subject 'I', whereas in katabta (you wrote), it refers to a second person subject 'you', and in katabti (you wrote), it refers to a female in the second person.

We also mentioned that there are 28 letters in the Arabic alphabet, 14 of which appear at the beginning of some chapters. The best viewpoint in this regard is that such letters constitute the fabric of the Quranic words and the bricks of its construction. Even though the Arabs know and speak these letters, they are incapable of imitating the Quran or producing the like of it despite the fact that language was their skill, forte and genius. The letters are the same letters and so are the words, but as the Quran is the word of Allah, they necessarily fell short.

The Quranic verse: 'Sad. I swear by the Quran, full Dhi Adh-Dhikr (of admonition).' (Sad: 1) is an indication of inimitability and its aspect. The letter Sad is one of the letters used in the Quran. The Quran is miraculous because the Arabs failed to produce the like of it, not even a single verse like its verses in spite of being the nation of rhetoric and eloquence. They were the only nation to hold open forums and markets for language and oratory such as that of 'Ukazh, Al-Mirbad and Dhi Al-Majanna. Their reverence for speech and eloquence was such that they hung the best pieces on the walls of the Ka'ba. Accordingly, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was supported by a miracle of the same nature at which his people excelled.

The intended meaning here is that the letter Sad, mentioned in the verse in question, is one of their alphabets.(1) Then Allah says, '...I swear by the Quran...' (Sad: 1). This means the Quran which they were incapable of imitating. Being written, the Quran is sometimes referred to as ‘the Book’, and it is sometimes referred to as ‘the Quran’ (the Recital) because it is recited. It is written down in books, recited, and memorised.

(1) Some scholars attempted to interpret the word Sad. Ad-Dahhak said that it means, 'Allah spoke the truth (sadaqa Allah), that it is an oath which Allah swore and that it is one of His Names. Muhammad ibn Ka'b Al-Qurazi said it is the opening letter of Allah's Names. Samad, Sani' Al-masnua't, Sadiq Al-wa'd and Qatada said it is one of the names of the Quran. Al-Qurtubi mentioned these views in his exegesis [8/5784] and then said, 'And it is argued that the interpretation of such letters is only known by Allah alone.'

The Quranic phrase, ‘...(dhi adh-dhikr) full of admonition’ (Sad: 1) signifies the reminder the Quran contains. The word adh-dhikr (admonition) may allude to many things just as the Arabic word ‘ayn refers to a spring of water, an eye, silver and gold, a spy or a distinguished person. It is left then to the listener's intelligence and the context to determine the meaning. These meanings have a common name combining them, and this is one of the merits of languages.

In the same way, the word An-najm may refer to a star in the sky or a plant that has no stalk. An example of this is the Quranic verse: ‘And An-Najm (the herbs) and the trees prostrate.’ (ar-Rahman: 6) It is also used in this sense by a poet:

In my travels toward you, the najm (star) I heed,
In the desert upon it grazes my steed.

The word Adh-dhikr may refer to the Noble Quran as in the verse: ‘And they say: "O, you to whom the Reminder (Adh-dhikr) has been revealed! You are most surely insane!"’ (al-Hijr: 6) The word Adh-dhikr may also refer to the Scriptures of previous messengers as in the Quranic verse: ‘so ask the people of the [earlier] Message [ahl adh-dhikr] if you do not know’ (an-Nahl: 43).

It may also signify reputation and prestige, as in the verse: ‘and verily, this [the Quran] is indeed a Reminder (dhikr) for you and your people, and you all will be questioned.’ (az-Zukhruf: 44) This meaning is also used in the verse: ‘We have certainly sent down to you a Book in which is your mention (fihi dhikrukum)…’ (al-Anbiya’: 10). The Arabs and their language would never have come into prominence had their language not been that of the Quran.

The word Adh-dhikr is also used to refer to remembrance as in the Quranic verse, '... But Satan caused him to forget to mention [Yusuf (Joseph)] to his lord ...' (Yusuf: 42), and it is also used to the glorification of Allah as in the verse: ‘…there glorify Him therein in the mornings and the evenings. Men whom neither merchandise nor selling diverts from the remembrance of Allah…’ (an-Nur: 36-37).

The word Adh-dhikr may also denote another meaning: a handsome gift from Allah the Most High or an act of obedience by a worshipper to Him. Hence, the word Adh-dhikr in the Quran resembles a diamond glittering in one's hand; each way you turn it, it sparkles. All of such meanings apply to the verse: 'Sad. I swear by the Quran, full of admonition.' (Sad: 1)

Allah Glorified is He states:

بَلِ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ فِى عِزَّةٍ وَشِقَاقٍ ﴿٢﴾

Yet the disbelievers are steeped in arrogance and hostility [2] (The Quran, Sad: 2)

It is known that the Arabic article bal (but nay) is used for negation of what precedes it and affirming what follows it. In this verse, bal affirms that disbelievers are lost in false pride and opposition, but what is the preceding sentence that it negates? It is preceded by the verse: 'Sad. I swear by the Quran, full of admonition.' (Sad: 1) The Quran is the miracle of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and they were required to believe in and be content with it, but they disbelieved. The meaning is thus, 'but nay, the disbelievers rejected it, indeed they were in self-exaltation and opposition.'

Some scholars are under the opinion that the verse, 'Sad. I swear by the Quran, full of admonition' (Sad: 1) is an oath, the complement of which comes at the end of this chapter in the verse: 'that most surely is the truth: the contending one with another of the inmates of the fire.' (Sad: 64) Though, it is not correct to infer an oath and then search for an appropriate complement for it.

The words, '(fi izza) in self-exaltation ...' (Sad: 2) refer to sinful pride, namely arrogance and wilful rejection of the truth. This is a baseless pride: '...and opposition (shiqaq).' The word shiqaq is derived from the root word shiqq which signifies a barrier between two things. There are many ways of expressing this meaning in the Arabic language. We can say, 'hadha fi shiqq wa hadha fi shiqq' which means 'these two things do not come together'. It is similar to the word adw (enemy) because two enemies do not proceed to come together. The origin of the word adw developed from the Arabic language and environment where there were many valleys. A valley has two ends, and each end is called an udwa. An example of the usage of this origin is the Quranic verse: ‘[Remember that day] when you were at the near end(1) of the valley [of Badr], and they were at its farthest end...’ (al-Anfal: 42); thus, the word adw is derived from the word udwa meaning that each one is off in his own direction. Similar to this is the word janib (to put to one side) and also the word hadd, as mentioned in the verse: 'Verily, those who contend (yuhaddun) against Allah and His Messenger...' (al-Mujadala: 5). Furthermore, another example of this is the word inharaf (to deviate) meaning one went to one edge (harf), and the other went to another, i.e. one went to an extreme, and the other went to another extreme. This is clear in the verse: ‘and amongst mankind is he who worships Allah as it were, upon the very edge (i.e. in doubt) (harf)...’ (al-Hajj: 11). All such words refer to a lack of union as stated in the verse under discussion: ‘Nay! Those who disbelieve are in self-exaltation and opposition.’ (Sad: 2) Their pride is false and sinful. The word shiqaq means ‘dissention that is unlikely to be resolved’. The intended meaning of the verse, however, is that they failed to take heed of what happened between previous nations and their prophets. For this reason, it is not intended that the Quran narrates to them the events of history in the verse: ‘and, verily, [to this day] you pass by the remnants of their dwellings at morning time and by night. Will you not, then, use your reason? (as-Saffat: 137-138) Rather, it is only to remind them of those incidents of which they are heedless.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He states:

كَمۡ أَهۡلَكۡنَا مِن قَبۡلِهِم مِّن قَرۡنٖ فَنَادَواْ وَّلَاتَ حِينَ مَنَاصٖ ۝٣

How many generations We have destroyed before them!
They all cried out, once it was too late, for escape [3]
(The Quran, Sad: 3)

The word kam (how many) at the beginning of this verse is predicative and thus indicates a large number. It is as though Allah Glorified is He left it up to the listener to imagine the number and define the amount. One does not use such an expression unless he is certain of how great the number involved is. One may, for instance, say to another who has denied his favours, ‘How much I have given you!’ or ‘How patient I have been with you!’ meaning a great many times.

---

(1) Al-Udwa means a side or direction. Al-Farra said, ‘Al-udwa means the end of the valley, the near end being closer to Medina and the far end being closer to Mecca.' See Lisan Al-'Arab, the root word (ada).

The word qarn means a generation or a period of time characterised by a single factor such as prophethood or something else, as we find, for instance, in the phrase, ‘the people of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him', or ‘the people of Hud peace be upon him'. The word qarn may also be used to signify a century, and it is named as such because its years are relatively close together (mutaqarina).

Allah's saying, ‘... before them ...’ (Sad: 3) is wonderfully precise because after the coming of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Allah did not destroy a group of people entirely as He did before his coming. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He addressing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says: ‘But Allah was not going to chastise them while you were amongst them…’ (al-Anfal: 33). Thus, Allah's saying, ‘...before them...’ (Sad: 3) means that this issue happened formerly and will not be repeated in the ummah of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. We find a similar example of this in the Quranic verse: ‘...Why, then, did you kill Allah’s prophets before...?’ (al-Baqara: 91) Had Allah the Almighty not said, ‘before them', Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would have thought that his people would plan to kill him as previous prophets were killed, but Allah Glorified is He reassured his heart saying: ‘...before...’ (al-Baqara: 91); this means that he should be reassured, for this will not happen again. In this way, Allah Glorified is He strengthens the heart of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

The Quranic verse, ‘...then they cried...’ (Sad: 3) suggests that when the punishment was inflicted upon them and their general destruction was at hand, they called out to anyone who might hear them to save and rescue them. Yet, whom were they calling? The Quran does not specify whom they were calling to show the state of terror overwhelming them. Calling out in desperation for help has degrees which differ according to the level of danger. If someone throws a stone at you, for instance, you will react internally; you will seek help from yourself, thereby raising your hand or your foot, for example, to ward off the harm.

If the danger is beyond your capacity such that you cannot repel it yourself, you call out to the nearest person to you: your father, mother, brother, neighbour, someone passing by in the street, etc. If none of them can help you, you cry out (ya huwa) which means ‘O, Allah, I have none but You to turn to and call upon.’

When the disbelievers were overwhelmed by destruction, they cried at the top of their lungs to whoever could save or rescue them, but that was impossible, for who is it that could save them from Allah’s punishment?! So their calls were of no avail. The word lat in the verse, ‘…then they cried while the time of escaping had passed them by’ (Sad: 3) is composed of two letters: la (no) used for negation and the letter ta which is added to the end. The letter la denotes negation generally; it, however, may be used to negate something situated somewhere as in the saying, la rajul fi ad-dar (there is no man in the house), and it may negate the place itself as in the saying, la dar askunuha (I have no house to live in). If the letter ta is added to it, it negates time specifically and therefore it is followed by the word hin meaning ‘time'. Similar to it are the words thamma and thummat (both mean ‘then’), as one poet(1) said,

Then we rose to our steeds, blazed,
Their manes kerchiefs unto our hands (2)

The word (manas) means a retreat or an escape. Thus, the meaning of wa lat hin manas is ‘and this was not the time for retreating or escaping'.

Then, Allah Glorified is He states:

---

(1) The name of the poet is Abda ibn Yazid At-Tabib, from the tribe of Tamim. He is one of the poets who spanned the period before and after the coming of Islam. He was black and very courageous. He took part in numerous battles including fighting against the Persians with Al-Muthanna ibn Haritha. He passed away in the year 25 AH. He composed 18 poems totalling 156 couplets.

(2) This couplet is cited from a poem of 81 lines, based on the extended metre (Al-basit), the first of which is:
Is the bond of Khawla still tied aft her exit,
Or do you live distant, from her distracted

وَعَجِبُوٓاْ أَن جَآءَهُم مُّنذِرٞ مِّنۡهُمۡۖ وَقَالَ ٱلۡكَٰفِرُونَ هَٰذَا سَٰحِرٞ كَذَّابٌ ﴿٤﴾
أَجَعَلَ ٱلۡأٓلِهَةَ إِلَٰهٗا وَٰحِدًاۖ إِنَّ هَٰذَا لَشَيۡءٌ عُجَابٞ ﴿٥﴾

The disbelievers think it strange that a prophet of their own people has come to warn them: they say, ‘He is just a lying sorcerer [4] How can he claim that all the gods are but one God? What an astonishing thing [to claim]! [5] (The Quran, Sad: 4-5)

What in fact is stranger is their surprise. They deem it strange, when their situation is actually more astonishing. They are surprised that, ‘...there has come to them a warner from st themselves, and the disbelievers say, "This is an enchanter, a liar."’ (Sad: 4) Yet, what causes real surprise is to send down to them a messenger of some other species. This is why Allah the Most High says in another verse: ‘And nothing prevented people from believing when the guidance came to them except that they said, "What! Has Allah raised up a mortal to be a messenger?"’ (al-Isra’: 94)

They wanted an angel to be their messenger. Had an angel come to them, it would have come in the form of a man, and had it proceeded as such, the doubt would still remain. In response, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Say: "Had there been in the earth angels walking about as settlers, We would certainly have sent down to them from the heaven an angel as a messenger."’ (al-Isra’: 95) Allah Glorified is He also says: ‘And if We had made him angel, We would certainly have made him a man, and We would certainly have caused confusion to them what they had confused.’ (al-An‘am: 9)

As such, a messenger must be of the same nature as those to whom he is sent, for he carries guidance which he himself is to implement, in addition to being an example and a role model for his people. How could human beings follow in the footsteps of an angel? Surely, had an angel come to them, they would have turned away arguing that angels are infallible and capable of things they cannot afford. Furthermore, they would have said that angels do not have any passions or lusts as we do, etc.

Thus, what is strange is that they should be surprised that a messenger is one amongst their own kind. The fact that a messenger is one of their own kind represents a part of the evidence against them. In addition, it is only in this way that a messenger can act as a role model for people. Reminding the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of His favours, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Indeed, there has come unto you [O, mankind] a messenger from amongst yourselves ...' (at-Tawba: 128); this means of your own kind, not a stranger. This is a merit for you and your wonder is out of place.

Not only is he of their own kind, namely mankind, but he is also of the same race, namely an Arab. Furthermore, he is from a noble Arab tribe, Quraysh. They knew his lineage and knew his morals even before he was sent as a messenger to them. Hence, Allah the Exalted refutes their ideas by saying: ‘and when Our clear communications are recited to them, those who hope not for Our meeting say, "Bring a Quran other than this or change it." Say: "It does not beseem me that I should change it of myself. I follow naught but what is revealed to me. Surely, I fear, if I disobey my Lord, the punishment of a mighty day." Say: "If Allah had desired [otherwise], I would not have recited it to you, nor would He have taught it to you. Indeed, I have lived a lifetime amongst you before it. Do you not then understand?"’ (Yunus: 15-16)

Undoubtedly, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him lived amongst his people for 40 years before his mission, and they knew everything about him. In this way, it is the other way round of what they deem strange which is surprising.

Mentioning what they used to say, Allah Glorified is He states: ‘...and the disbelievers say, "This is an enchanter, a liar."’ (Sad: 4) The word sahir (enchanter) signifies someone who conjures up illusions in order to deceive people into seeing things in other than their true reality, in spite of not changing their reality. Sihr (magic) does not affect the reality of things. It only affects people’s eyes as stated in the verse: ‘... they deceived the people’s eyes...’ (al-A‘raf: 116).

It should be noted that there is a difference between magic and the miracle of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. His miracle resembled magic because he was challenged by magicians. When Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him threw down his staff and the magicians saw it devouring their magic, they said, ‘We believe in The Lord of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him’ because they knew for certain that what Musa (Moses) peace be upon him did was not magic. This is because they knew magic and the tricks of magicians well and what Musa (Moses) did was not of such kind.

They saw the staff turning into a snake and swallowing up their trickery, for magicians can see things as they really are. They see the ropes as ropes even when people see them as snakes moving and writhing. On this basis, the magicians knew that what Musa (Moses) peace be upon him did in front of them was not magic.

In reply to those who accused Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of being a magician, we would say that if we granted that such had been the case, and he would have enchanted those who believed in him; how was it then that you remained disbelievers? Why did he not put a spell on you as he did with those who believed in him and thereby calling a halt to your enmity and disbelief?

Then, they say, as stated in the verse: ‘What! He makes the gods a single deity [Allah]? A strange thing is this, to be sure!’ (Sad: 5) They found it strange and rejected the call of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to Divine unity; namely to the worship of Allah alone without associates. They used to worship many gods, and therefore, there were many idols around the Ka’ba. There were those amongst them who worshipped the sun, the moon, the planets, the stars, the angels, etc. However, why did they have this misconception? It arose from their belief in the immensity and greatness of the universe. It is such a perfect and wondrous universe that has the earth with its rivers, mountains, fields, fruits, and its heavens with their stars, constellations, the sun, the moon, the planets, etc. From their perspective, this vast universe is too much to be created by a lone individual; there must surely have been many who shared in its creation.

It was the greatness of the universe which led them to believe in many gods, but we maintain that the reverse is true in this regard. The perfection and magnificence of the creation prove that there must be a Creator Who is the One and only. Had there been many creators, the universe could not have been in such order and harmony. Had there been many creators, it would have been as Allah Glorified is He clarifies in the verse: '... [If there had been], then each deity would surely have stood apart [from the others] in whatever it had created, and they would surely have [tried to] overcome one another ...' (al-Mu'minun: 91).

Their argument, as stated in the Quran, 'What! He makes the gods a single deity [Allah]?' (Sad: 5) is fallacious in two ways: First, their assumption that the immensity of a creation is proof of its having many creators, while it is in fact a proof that there is only one creator; Second, they state that there are many gods. Yet, the very existence of a god means that He is worshipped and obeyed in its commandments and prohibitions. So tell us, what have these gods ordered you to do and from what have they prohibited you? What have they prepared for those who obey them of reward and what they have prepared for those who disobey them?

In effect, your attributing divinity to such gods is a lie. It is vain talk for which Allah has given no authority. Had, you, disbelievers, understood the meaning of the word 'god', the meaning of 'worship' and that the one being worshipped must have guidance for his worshippers to follow, you would not have advocated a multiplicity of gods.

For this reason, Allah Glorified is He sets forth a parable for them by saying: 'Allah sets forth an example. There is a slave belonging to several partners contending with one another, and there is another slave wholly owned by one man. Are the two alike in condition? ...' (az-Zumar: 29) That is to say, does the one who is a slave to one master render the same level of service as one who serves several masters? Would that they are agreed, but they are at loggerheads, differing amongst themselves. Similarly, the one who worships Allah Glorified is He alone and the one who worships many gods are not the same.

It can be observed that in the Quranic verse: '... A strange thing is this, to be sure,' (Sad: 5); the word 'ujab (strange) is used, whereas the word 'ajibu (they wonder) is employed in the previous verse: 'And they wonder…' (Sad: 4). The word 'ajibu is derived from the verb 'ajab, the verbal noun of which is 'ajaba, whereas the word 'ujab denotes an exaggerated form used to emphasise amazement and wonder. The root letters of the verbal noun constitute the word in addition to the extra letters which indicate the emphatic form, in the same manner as we say, tawil (tall) and tuwal (extremely tall) or (gharib) (strange) and ghurab (extremely strange).(1)

Allah Glorified is He states:

وَٱنطَلَقَ ٱلۡمَلَأُ مِنۡهُمۡ أَنِ ٱمۡشُواْ وَٱصۡبِرُواْ عَلَىٰٓ ءَالِهَتِكُمۡۖ إِنَّ هَٰذَا لَشَيۡءٞ يُرَادُ ٦
مَا سَمِعۡنَا بِهَٰذَا فِي ٱلۡمِلَّةِ ٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ إِنۡ هَٰذَآ إِلَّا ٱخۡتِلَٰقٌ ٧

Their leaders depart, saying, 'Walk away! Stay faithful to your gods! That is what you must do [6] We did not hear any such claim in the last religion: it is all an invention [7] (The Quran, Sad: 6 - 7)

The word mala (the chief persons) refers to awe-inspiring, neat, and well-dressed people, who take the forefront during gatherings. The chief persons, as mentioned in the verse, allude to the leaders and the prominent disbelievers of Quraysh, at the head of which were Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughira, Abu Jahl, Ubayy ibn Khalaf, Umayya ibn Khalaf, Utba ibn Rabia, his brother Shayba and An-Nadr ibn Al-Harith. Allah the Almighty specifically mentioned those chiefs because they were the leaders and the call of Prophet Muhammad

---

(1) The occasion of the revelation of these verses is mentioned by Al-Wahidi in Asbab An-Nuzul [p. 209]. He says, 'The scholars say that when 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab embraced Islam, the believers rejoiced, but it was unbearable for the Quraysh. Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughira told the leaders and notables of Quraysh, 'Go to Abu Taleb.' So, they went to him and said, 'You are our elder and chief. You know what these fools are doing. We have come to you so that you might arbitrate between us and your nephew.' He sent for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and invited him to talk. He said, 'O, my nephew, your people have a question to ask you, so do not be too hard on them.' He peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'And what do they ask?' Abu Taleb said, 'They said, "Leave us alone and leave our gods alone and we will leave you and your god alone."' To that, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Will you give me one word, by which you will rule the Arabs and the non-Arabs will yield before you?' To which Abu Jahl replied, 'By Allah! We will give it you and ten more like it.' Thereupon, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Say, "There is none worthy of worship except Allah."' They were repulsed by that, stood up and said, 'What! He makes the gods a single deity [Allah]? ... (Sad: 5). 'How could one god encompass the entire creation?' Then, on this incident, Allah Glorified is He revealed the verse: 'The people of Nuh (Noah) and Ad, and Fir'on (Pharaoh), the lord of spikes, rejected (messengers) before them.' (Sad: 12)

peace and blessings be upon him would pull the rug from under their feet. Thus, it was they who stood to lose out because of his call.

A story is related in this regard. These leaders went to Abu Taleb, uncle of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said to him, ‘If your nephew wants dominion, we will make him our king. If he wants wealth, we will gather wealth for him until he becomes the richest of us ...’, and so they continued. So, Abu Taleb spoke to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said, ‘O my nephew, spare yourself and spare me. Do not put a greater burden on me than I can bear. Your people came to me and said such-and-such.’ Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied with his famous answer, ‘By Allah, O, my uncle, were they to put the sun in my right hand and the moon in my left on condition that I leave this matter, I would not leave it until Allah manifests it or I perish beforehand.’(1)

When their efforts came to nothing and they realised that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would not call a truce with them over their gods and that he would not accept their offers and bargaining, they hurried back to the people to urge them to stick fast to their gods and to be patient therein. Allah relates what they did: ‘And the chief persons of them break forth by saying, "Go and steadily adhere to your gods..."’ (Sad: 6). This means that those chief persons went to their people and urged them to keep worshipping their gods and to be careful so that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him should not lead them away from them.

They continued their statements: '...This is most surely a thing sought after (shay' yurad).’ (Sad: 6) They told their people that this was something that had serious consequences and had been well thought out. If you disbelieved in your gods, they would become angry with you and you would be afflicted with drought and famine. The Quranic phrase shay' yurad may suggest that they thought this was a plot against them as leaders so that they would become lowly after having been privileged, and they would be made equal with the rest of the people.

(1) Al-Bayhaqi narrates in Dala’il An-Nubuwwa [2/187] through the narration of Ibn Ishaq that Abu Taleb said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘O, my nephew, your people came to me and said that you harm them in their gathering place and their place of worship. Spare yourself and spare me. Do not impose on me a burden greater than what I can bear, neither can you. Waive for your people what they dislike of your speech.’ Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, ‘O, my uncle, if the sun was placed in my right hand and the moon in my left, I would not leave this matter until Allah manifests it or I perish seeking it.’ Abu Taleb could not but say, ‘Keep going in your affair and do what you please, for by Allah, I will never turn away from you, come what may.’

As for their statement, ‘We never heard of this in the former faith…’ (Sad: 7), it means ‘we have not heard that Allah is just One.’ The ‘former faith’ mentioned in this verse refers to the most recent of the faiths to Islam, namely Judaism and Christianity. Surely, Judaism and Christianity were originally revealed from heaven in a monotheistic form, but what encouraged the disbelievers to accuse them of polytheism was the claim of the Jews that Uzair (Ezra) peace be upon him was the son of God and the claim of the Christians that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was the Messiah, the son of God, and their claim that God was the third of three. Accordingly, the disbelievers of Mecca said that they had not heard of pure monotheism in the earlier faiths. ‘... This is nothing but a forgery’ (Sad: 7) means that this is only fabrications and lies. The word ikhtilaq (forgery) refers to something invented with no basis in reality. Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He states:

أَءُنزِلَ عَلَيْهِ ٱلذِّكْرُ مِنۢ بَيْنِنَاۚ بَلْ هُمْ فِى شَكٍّ مِّن ذِكْرِىۖ بَل لَّمَّا يَذُوقُوا۟ عَذَابِ ﴿٨﴾

Was the message sent only to him out of all of us?
In fact they doubt My warning; in fact they have not tasted My punishment yet [8] (The Quran, Sad: 8)

This is another turn in their argument and denial of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Earlier, they were taking issue with the humanity of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and demanding that he should be an angel. In this stage, they have abandoned this stance and moved to a personal level. In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘and they say, "Why was not this Quran revealed to a man of importance in the two towns?"’ (az-Zukhruf: 31)

This means ‘Why should it be Muhammad specifically, when we have great people and leaders amongst us who are more deserving of bearing this Message.’ At this point, they say: ‘Has the reminder been revealed to him from amongst us? ...’ (Sad: 8). Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He replies to them by saying: ‘Will they distribute the Mercy of your Lord?...’ (az-Zukhruf: 32) In this way, Allah the Exalted regards prophethood of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as a mercy to them. Allah says in another Quranic verse: ‘...We distribute amongst them their livelihood in the life of this world, and We have exalted some of them above others in degrees, that some of them may take others in subjection...’ (az-Zukhruf: 32).

In this verse, Allah says to them, 'How can you expect to have a say in a matter as important as this? Do you want to apportion Allah’s Mercy? It is Allah Who has apportioned the lowly matters of this world amongst you and made some of you leaders and others slaves, some rich and some poor, etc. If it is Allah Glorified is He Who organises the simplest matters of your lives, how can you desire to apportion His Bounty and Mercy? Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... Allah knows best upon whom to bestow His Message...’ (al-An‘am: 124); this is Allah’s bounty which He bestows upon whomsoever He wills.

The word dhikr (reminder) in the Quranic verse: ‘Nay! They are in doubt as to My reminder…’ (Sad: 8) refers to the Quran. It is as if Allah the Almighty is consoling Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with this verse and putting his mind at ease, for He addresses him in another verse by saying: ‘We know indeed that what they say certainly grieves you, but surely they do not call you a liar; however, the unjust deny the communications of Allah.’ (al-An‘am: 33) The meaning is thus: 'Do not be troubled, O, Muhammad, for it is not you that your people are denying, but it is what you have brought to them of this Reminder. You are considered by them to be truthful, trustworthy and beyond reproach. This matter has nothing to do with you and is not some personal matter; rather, it is about Me. This is to reassure, console and relieve the pain Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him suffered at the hands of his people.

Allah says: ‘... Nay! They have not yet tasted My chastisement!’ (Sad: 8) This is a type of threat. It is to say: 'They will not remain in this state of safety and security. Indeed, their punishment is coming.' This is because the Arabic word lamma (not yet) denote a negation of an event in the past while affirming its occurrence in the future. When one says, 'fulan lam ya'ti

(So-and-so did not come), it negates his coming in the past, but he may or may not come in the present or the future. However, when one says, 'fulan lamma ya'ti (So-and-so has not come yet), it means that he did not come in the past, but he will come presently or in the future. Thus, the meaning of the verse '... Nay! They have not yet tasted My chastisement,' (Sad: 8) is 'until now Allah's punishment has not come to them, but it will inevitably come.'

أَمْ عِندَهُمْ خَزَآئِنُ رَحْمَةِ رَبِّكَ ٱلْعَزِيزِ ٱلْوَهَّابِ ﴿٩﴾ أَمْ لَهُم مُّلْكُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ
وَمَا بَيْنَهُمَا ۖ فَلْيَرْتَقُوا۟ فِى ٱلْأَسْبَٰبِ ﴿١٠﴾ جُندٌ مَّا هُنَالِكَ مَهْزُومٌ مِّنَ ٱلْأَحْزَابِ ﴿١١﴾

Do they possess the treasures of your Lord's bounty, the Mighty, the All-Giving? [9] Do they control the heavens and earth and everything between? Let them climb their ropes[10] their armed alliance is weak and will be crushed [11]
(The Quran, Sad: 9 - 11)

Having negated their ability to apportion His Mercy, Allah, in this verse, negates that the keys to the treasures of His bounty are in their hands. The Arabic question word 'Am', translated as 'Do', clearly indicates their total inability to do any of the matters mentioned in the verse being discussed, which really means 'Do they distribute the Mercy of your Lord?! Or do they possess His bountiful treasures?! 'They have neither this nor that because prophethood is a mercy. The treasures of Mercy are only owned by Allah, the Giver and the Lord of Mercy. No one has any part in this because Allah the Almighty did not give the keys to His treasuries to anyone, even to the closest pious saints of Allah who were granted illuminating glimpses of the unseen to strengthen their certain footsteps on the Right Path. He only gives them what He wills from His bounty and any miracle for which they wish. However, the keys to His treasuries remain in His hand: 'He has the keys to the unseen; no one knows them but He...' (al-An'am: 59). Therefore, this verse ends with Allah's Names: '... the Almighty, the All-Giving' (Sad: 9). The Almighty is He Who always conquers and never overpowered in His affairs, or else, how could they take the treasuries of mercy from Him? He is also, '...The All-Giving' (Sad: 9), Who gives His generosity and magnanimity to any chosen person.

Then Allah the Almighty says: ‘Do they control the heavens and earth and everything between? Let them climb their ropes’ (Sad: 10). This means that if they have dominion over the heavens and the earth and all that is between them, let them ascend into the heavens so that they might manage the affairs of creation. Allah the Exalted clarifies this matter in other verse: ‘Jinn and mankind, if you can pass beyond the regions of heaven and earth, then do so. You will not pass without Our authority’ (ar-Rahman: 33).

Hence, when man reached and walked on the surface of the moon, some of the philosophically inclined sophists said that he reached due to the power of knowledge, but how could this be whereas Allah Glorified is He says afterwards: ‘A flash of fire and smoke will be released upon you, and no one will come to your aid’ (ar-Rahman: 35). Thus, this refers to the Power of Allah, the Creator, Who grants and denies authority to and from whom He wills. Had this verse not been revealed, those who deny the night ascension of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would have been correct.

Allah’s saying, ‘Their armed alliance is weak and will be crushed’ (Sad: 11) refers to the disbelievers of Mecca who will be defeated whatever happens, just as their preceding deniers of the Messengers who were defeated.

Subsequently, Allah the Almighty consoles Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by restating him how the previous nations denied their prophets. Thus, Allah the Exalted reminds Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that he is not the first one who encountered this matter. Allah begins telling the story of the longest mission of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. Therefore, He the Almighty says:

كَذَّبَتۡ قَبۡلَهُمۡ قَوۡمُ نُوحٖ وَعَادٞ وَفِرۡعَوۡنُ ذُو ٱلۡأَوۡتَادِ ﴿١٢﴾ وَثَمُودُ وَقَوۡمُ لُوطٖ وَأَصۡحَٰبُ لۡـَٔيۡكَةِۚ
أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ ٱلۡأَحۡزَابُ ﴿١٣﴾ إِن كُلٌّ إِلَّا كَذَّبَ ٱلرُّسُلَ فَحَقَّ عِقَابِ ﴿١٤﴾

The people of Noah, 'Ad, and firmly supported Pharaoh rejected their prophets before them [12] Thamud, the people of Lot, and the Forest-Dwellers each formed opposition [against theirs] [13] They all rejected the messengers and they were deservedly struck by My punishment [14] (The Quran, Sad: 12 - 14)

The phrase, ‘... The firmly supported’ (Sad: 12) either refers to things that are firmly fixed in the ground that are thought to be the pyramids, or it could refer to poles with which he tortured his enemies. ‘The Forest’ refers to the garden with intertwining trees and entwined branches. ‘The Forest-Dwellers’ were the people of Shu’aib (Jethro) peace be upon him. ‘...each formed opposition [against theirs]’ (Sad: 13) means that those mentioned disbelievers opposed, resisted and joined together against their messengers. ‘They all rejected the messengers ...’ (Sad: 14) which means that each of them denied his messenger. The phrase, ‘...and they were deservedly struck by My punishment’ (Sad: 14) means that it became incumbent for them to be punished for their denial. Therefore, they should not be left without punishment for taking this stance against Prophet Muhammad. They could not evade Allah’s punishment such as those who had been deservedly stricken by it.

وَمَا يَنظُرُ هَٰٓؤُلَآءِ إِلَّا صَيۡحَةٗ وَٰحِدَةٗ مَّا لَهَا مِن فَوَاقٖ ﴿١٥﴾

All the disbelievers here are waiting for is a single blast that cannot be postponed [15]
(The Quran, Sad: 15)

The punishment of disbelievers is a trivial matter for Allah the Exalted; it will be just one blow on the Trumpet. The scholars conceive that this refers to the second blast on the Trumpet, upon which the creation will be resurrected. Allah’s saying, ‘... that cannot be postponed’ (Sad: 15) means that there will be no respite for them after it.

وَقَالُواْ رَبَّنَا عَجِّل لَّنَا قِطَّنَا قَبۡلَ يَوۡمِ ٱلۡحِسَابِ ﴿١٦﴾

They say, ‘Our Lord! Advance us our share of punishment before the Day of Reckoning!’ [16]

The phrase, ‘...our share of punishment...’ (Sad: 16) means the share of the disbelievers from requital. The Arabic word qittana (punishment) is derived from Al-qit‘a, the piece on which someone’s requital is recorded. This means that they, admittedly being sinful, wish to have their share from punishment hastily in this life before the Day of Judgment. However, the punishment in this world is an insufficient requital for their disbelief because it is as terminable as this world is. Yet, Allah postpones it until the Hereafter, the abode of eternity, the infinite residence. In fact, the blast will not be their punishment, but it is like the alarm announcing the advent of this Day.

Allah Glorified is He expounds upon this in His saying: ‘They also said, “Allah, if this really is the truth from You, then rain stones upon us from the heavens or send us some other painful punishment”’ (al-Anfal: 32). This is an evidence of their foolishness because there is no rational person who would ask Allah for such a strange request. Allah the Almighty shows that their stubborn refusal of the Message is against their own interest; instead of asking Allah for guidance, they say, ‘... “Then rain stones upon us from the heavens or send us some other painful punishment”’ (al-Anfal: 32).

Hence, Allah the Almighty expresses their incredulity at hastily asking of the punishment: ‘Do they really wish to hasten Our punishment? When it descends upon their courtyards, how terrible that morning will be for those who were warned! (as-Saffat: 176-177)

It is strange that the disbelievers of Mecca said, ‘Before the Day of Reckoning!’ (Sad: 16) Thus, this implies that they believe in this Day as they speak of it, acknowledging its existence to the extent that it is manifested in the lapses of their tongues. The scholars assume that this refers to the presence of a remaining pure natural disposition before having a devious mind. A disbeliever misuses his mind in denial, but he must still be aware, for his lies have no basis in reality. Accordingly, a liar often tells a lie on one day and then forgets and tells a contradictory one on the next. The speech of the truthful person does not change because he describes reality; however, a liar narrates the feigned non-existent things. Therefore, it is said, ‘If you are an accomplished liar, then have an excellent memory’; for example, a liar once unbearably said that he went out to the city on the night of Eid Al-Fitr (Lesser Eid which habitually comes at the beginning of Shawwal, the tenth lunar Hijri month), and the moon was high in the sky. How could this be? It is an inconsistent lie!

It is only the professional interrogator who is able to discriminate between truthful speech and false ones; the truthful person describes reality which is manifested, even if an interrogator asks him a thousand times, his speech will be consistent. However, a liar relates fantasies; his speech necessarily contradicts itself, and his forgeries become apparent. As falsehood is the product of fictions and lies, so a person cannot precisely detect the lies as he is drawn into a web of tangled imaginary scenarios weaved by a liar.

Thus, their saying: ‘Before the Day of Reckoning!’ (Sad: 16) came as a slip of their tongues, revealing that they really believe in this Day inside themselves. Similarly, the saying of the hypocrites came as such, ‘... “Give nothing to those who follow Allah’s Messenger until they abandon him”...’ (al-Munafiqun: 7). They made their standard profitable because everything is materialistic and has its price. They presumed that the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him will evade him when he does not pay for them.

When the revelation to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was delayed, the disbelievers alleged, ‘Muhammad’s Lord has forsaken him.’(1) This refers to the remaining natural disposition that spontaneously overwhelms them, when their natural disposition is manifested in the slip of their tongues.

Alternatively, they may have said, ‘They say, “Our Lord! Advance us our share of punishment before the Day of Reckoning”’ (Sad: 16) by way of mockery of the punishment imposed by Allah. They do not believe in the occurrence of punishment; thus, their hastening for it is a form of mockery. However, this sarcasm does not accord with their saying: ‘... Our Lord ...’ (Sad: 16).

ٱصْبِرْ عَلَىٰ مَا يَقُولُونَ وَٱذْكُرْ عَبْدَنَا دَاوُۥدَ ذَا ٱلْأَيْدِ ۖ إِنَّهُۥٓ أَوَّابٌ ﴿١٧﴾ إِنَّا سَخَّرْنَا

(1) Ibn Kathir mentioned in his Tafsir [4/523] from Sufyan ibn ‘Uyaynah that it has been narrated on the authority of Al-Aswad ibn Qays who heard Jundub saying that Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him delayed his visit to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the polytheists began to say that Muhammad has been forsaken. At this Allah the Glorious and Exalted revealed: ‘By the morning brightness and by the night when it grows still, your Lord has not forsaken you [O, Prophet], nor does He hate you.’ (ad-Duha: 1-3)

sunrise [18] And the birds, too, in flocks, all echoed his praise [19] We strengthened his kingdom; We gave him wisdom and a decisive way of speaking [20] (The Quran, Sad: 17 - 20)

Patience means raising the forbearance of the self above events so that they do not sap its strength. The person afflicted by troubles needs additional strength to his natural one, so he should not let hardships or afflictions undermine his strength.

A human being should be especially aware of doubling an initial affliction; when he is weak in the face of adversities, the affliction and the weakness will be together against him. As for believers, afflictions are of two sorts; the first is the events that have stricken him in which man has no hand such as the careless student who fails in his exam, whose failure is a result of his laxity and negligence. This person should blame and discipline his own self, rectify his mistakes and remedy his vice. This is the real strength, namely to face reality and to bear responsibility. The second affliction is the forbearance with events in which man has no hand. This kind is the predestined affliction imposed by Allah upon people, where He sets nothing but good of people, even if it is seemingly evil.

Likewise, the man may pray for something superficially good according to his perspective, but as he has no answer, he becomes desperate. However, he has forgotten that his Lord knows better where goodness lies; thus, He does not answer him. His Wise answer to man's call is not to respond to his request. Hence, Allah Glorified is He teaches believers to reply to those who rejoice at their misfortunes: 'Say, "Only what Allah has decreed will happen to us..."' (at-Tawba: 51). Indeed, Allah has never imposed afflictions on people against their interests; afflictions bring nothing but good to believers. They are either to test or to raise the rank of believers or else to show disbelievers the endurance and the unshaken strength of believers in the face of adversity.

From another perspective, an afflicted person may have an adversary. If he has an adversary, he requires greater strength, patience, and endurance because every time he faces him, the depths of his soul urges for revenge, whereas if he does not have an adversary in the decreed affliction imposed by Allah, this is easier to be endured because it is from Allah the Almighty. A person can do nothing in the face of illness or death, except to say, ‘There is neither strength nor power except with Allah’; he says this, to reflect his patience and to look forward to his reward.

Accordingly, Allah the Exalted says on the affliction, in which there is an adversary: ‘Though if a person is patient and forgives, this is one of the greatest things’ (ash-Shura: 43). A person needs perseverance to assist him either in being patient or in forgiveness. As for the predestined affliction in which there is no adversary, Allah the Almighty says: ‘... Bear anything that happens to you steadfastly; these are things to be aspired to’ (Luqman: 17). The verse in chapter Luqman refers to an affliction with no adversary, so it does not have ‘Lam’ the emphatic letter in Arabic, whereas the verse in chapter ash-Shu'ara' refers to an affliction with an adversary and contains ‘Lam’, the Arabic emphatic letter.

Allah Glorified is He consoles Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and alleviates the troubles caused by his people. Their accusations to the Messenger of being a magician, liar, crazy, and other unbearable allegations, saddened and hurt him. Many verses consoles him such as Allah’s saying: ‘We know well that what they say grieves you [O, Prophet]. It is not you they disbelieve; the evildoers reject Allah’s revelation’ (al-An‘am: 33). Moreover, Allah soothes him: ‘[But] bear you with patience whatever they may say...’ (Sad: 17); then He gives him an example from previous revelations: ‘...Remember Our servant Dawud (David) ...’ (Sad: 17). However, why does Allah mention Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him specifically at this point?

The scholars conceive that Dawud’s (David’s) people accused him with more atrocious allegations than those charges fabricated against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The disbelievers of Mecca trumped up that he was a magician, a soothsayer and a liar, but Dawud’s (David’s) people violated his honour, chastity, and purity as they falsely claimed that he sent one of his generals to a distant war, hoping that this general would be killed so as to take his wife. Despite this Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him was patient.

Allah the Almighty addresses Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to be patient just like Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him. Even though Prophet Muhammad is the last prophet and Allah conferred upon him the merit of laying down the Islamic laws for his nation, yet He tells him to be patient just like Dawud (David) and the other messengers peace be upon them. Consequently, it is noticed that all messengers and their people of revelation are one whole; each of them received the appropriate Message from Allah. Hence, Allah the Almighty says: '... Remember Our servant Dawud (David) ...' (Sad: 17). Afterwards, He mentions a number of messengers to show that they are all united under one mission, so there is no distinction between them. Accordingly, Allah Glorified is He says: 'In matters of faith, He has laid down for you [people] the same commandment that He gave Nuh (Noah), which We have revealed to you [O, Muhammad] and which We enjoined on Ibrahim (Abraham), Musa (Moses) and 'Isa (Jesus): "Uphold the faith and do not divide into factions within it"...' (ash-Shura: 13).

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him also said, 'Do not favour me above Yunus (Jonah), the son of Matta.'(1) People do not know the criteria for preferring one to another; they should leave preference to Allah, as He the Exalted says: 'We favoured some of these messengers above others...' (al-Baqara: 253).

Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him attained a great honour when Allah the Almighty says: '... Remember Our servant Dawud (David) ...' (Sad: 17). Similarly, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him attained this honour at the beginning of the chapter of al-Isra': 'Glory to Him Who made His servant travel by night...' (al-Isra': 1). The night journey was unremarkable due to the fact that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was a sincere slave who worshipped Allah earnestly; thereby, he deserved this great honour. Therefore, when the people of Taif shunned, cursed, and abused him, consolation came from Allah to tell him that if the earth does not greet him cheerfully, heaven will.

Allah's saying, '... a man of strength...' (Sad: 17) means that he is very strong in worship. Indeed, faith requires strength to help a person to be obedient, to dissuade him from disobedience, and to curb the defiance of the self. As for obedience, it requires strength, as it usually involves heavy acts upon the self, requiring an innate strength. Hence, Allah the Almighty says: '... Though this is hard indeed for anyone but the humble' (al-Baqara: 45).

(1) Al-Bukhari's narration is excerpted from the Hadith of 'Abdullah ibn Mas'ud [3412]: 'None of you should say that I am better than Yunus (Jonah) the son of Matta'. Similarly, it is narrated by Ibn 'Abbas [3413] that: 'It is inappropriate for a slave to say that I am better than Yunus (Jonah) the son of Matta'.

As for disobedience, it is attractive and pleasurable and it satisfies desires beseeching the self, so it needs determination and strength to restrain a given person. Thus, strength is often mentioned in the Quran, as Allah said about Dawud (David) peace be upon him '... a man of strength...' (Sad: 17), and on Yahya (John) peace be upon him: '…O, Yahya (John), hold on to the Scripture firmly…' (Maryam 12).

A believer should have strong will and impetus to perform acts of obedience, as he is inclined to be lazy in performing them. Furthermore, he should have strength to restrain himself from disobedience because he is inclined towards it. Yet, man is only lazy when he detaches his actions from their consequences and requital. If he brings the rewards to mind, obedience will be easy for him as well as disobedience will be proscribed; he will flee from it as he flees from a lion.

Illustratively, if a young man is oppressed by his sexual lusts—the most violent of all human passions—and he is told that he could spend the night with a beautiful girl, but in the morning he would be put inside a blazing oven for an hour, he would refuse the deal. Thus, calling the punishment of a particular act of disobedience to mind prevents a person from it. Similarly, remembering the rewards for obedience drives him towards it.

In the Himalayas on Mount Everest, many people who tried to reach its peak have been found; victims died upon their way up. What drove them to take such dangers and troubles upon themselves was the desire to conquer the highest peak in the world, along with the love of being renowned and to be remembered forever in the halls of fame. To reach this target, they disregarded the dangers.

What makes a man abstinent in performing acts of obedience is that he does not bring the rewards to mind. Were he to remember their rewards, these deeds would have been easy for him. As a poet(1) said:

---

(1) He was Abu Firas Al-Hamadani, a poet laureate, the nephew of Sayf Ad-Dawlah. He was born in 320 AH, passed away at the age of 37 in 357 AH. Sayf Ad-Dawlah used to=

Achieving impossibly attainable targets is easy for us,
Whoever seeks the beauty finds the dowry inexpensive (1)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him explained this matter in his saying: 'No one who commits illegal sexual intercourse is a believer at the moment when he is committing this. No one who steals is a believer at the moment when he is stealing, and no one who drinks wine is a believer at the moment when he is drinking it.' This means that a person at the time of committing these sins is not in a state of faith, for he has been heedless of Allah Glorified is He and heedless of the penalties. Had he brought Allah to mind, he would not have been sinned.

Afterwards, Allah the Exalted describes Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him: '... who always turned to Us' (Sad: 17). The Arabic word awwab (always repenting) is an emphatic word form that means that he is frequently turning and repenting to Allah. This word indicates that man is not infallible; he is liable to fall into disobedience and that he is liable to return to sin many times after repentance. Yet, what is important is that he renews his repentance and does not resolve to repeat his sin.

Thus, one of Allah's Names is the Most Forgiving, as He says: 'Yet I am the Most Forgiving towards those who repent, believe, do righteous deeds and stay on the right path' (Ta Ha: 82). Allah the Almighty does not merely say 'forgiving' because a human being is prone to heedlessness and his disobedience is repetitive; thus repeated disobedience needs repeated forgiveness. Accordingly, Allah's Mercy on people entails that he is Most Forgiving. Allah's description of Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him '... who always turned to Us' (Sad: 17), further explained the verse that comes later: '... He asked his Lord for forgiveness, fell down on his knees and repented' (Sad: 24).

Then Allah the Almighty says: 'We made the mountains join him in glorifying Us at sunset and sunrise' (Sad: 18). At '...sunset...' (Sad: 18) refers to the time between noon and sunset, whereas: '... and sunrise' (Sad: 18) refers to the ascension of the sun to the sky, namely mid-morning. It is known that the mountains are inanimate, which is the lowest creation. However, a human being is the master of this universe, the highest of species, followed by animals, then plants and finally the inanimate creations.

Allah Glorified is He tells people that even though man considers inanimate creations to be dead and devoid of life, yet they glorify Him during their life. Indeed, they have a different sort of life although they are immovably static. Nevertheless, each species has a sort of life appropriate for itself. A human being has two lives: one in his awakening and another during his sleeping. The nature of life when he is sleeping differs from that when he is awakened. During sleep with his eyes closed, he can see people and things; he can distinguish between colours, live out long stories, and understand their details. Furthermore, there is a life which follows his death and another one which follows the resurrection.

To establish the evidence that everything in the universe has its appropriate form of life, read Allah's saying: '…There is not a single thing that does not celebrate His praise, though you do not understand their praise…' (al-Isra': 44). To evade discrepancies, some scholars conceived that glorification in this verse refers to indication; meaning that inanimate creations identify their Creator and that the glorification here is not that form of articulation. Nonetheless, had the glorification in this verse referred to indication, Allah the Exalted would not have said afterwards: '…Though you do not understand their praise…' (al-Isra': 44). People can understand glorification by virtue of indication, yet there should be a different form of glorification unknown to them.

Similarly, Allah the Exalted mentions birds: '... As do the birds with wings outstretched? Each knows its [own way] of prayer and glorification...' (an-Nur: 41). It is not the task of man to search for the way that birds pray; each species knows how to perform its prayers to Allah, the Creator. Likewise, an ant unquestionably saw Sulaiman's (Solomon's) soldiers and rush to warn its colony: '... "Ants! Go into your homes, in case Sulaiman (Solomon) and his hosts unwittingly crush you"' (an-Naml: 18). Allah's precision and justice is clear in the ant's speech: '...unwittingly…' (an-Naml: 18). This means that they are neither tyrants nor oppressors, yet if they pass over the ant colony, they will crush it inattentively.

The hoopoe of Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him was irrefutably aware of the concept of monotheism. It was the means to the guidance of the people who had gone astray and worshipped the sun instead of Allah. When it came back to Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him it said: '…I have learnt something you did not know. I come to you from Sheba with firm news. I found a woman ruling over the people who have been given a share of everything. She has a magnificent throne.' (an-Naml: 22-23)

The hoopoe was affected and enraged as it saw them prostrating to the sun instead of Allah: '[but] I found that she and her people worshipped the sun instead of Allah. Satan has made their deeds seem alluring to them, and diverted them from the right path. They cannot find the right path. Should they not worship Allah Who brings forth what is hidden in the heavens and earth and knows both what you people conceal and what you declare? [25]' (an-Naml: 24-25) The hoopoe fully and excellently perceived the whole issue of creed better than many competent people who failed to duly acknowledge this matter.

Furthermore, a human being who has discovered farfetched boundaries in the universe, using his understanding and intellect, was taught by a raven how to cover the corpse and nakedness of his brother: 'Allah sent a raven to scratch up the ground and show him how to cover his brother's corpse ...' (al-Ma'ida: 31).

Thus, each creature has its distinctive way of life, own language, unique prayer and acts of humility to Allah the Most High. So, it is impossible to forcibly accredit only one method for glorifying Allah while excluding others. This is illustrated in Allah's saying: '…So that those who were to die might die after seeing a clear proof and so that those who were to live might live after seeing a clear proof…' (al-Anfal: 42). This implies that they have a life because death (mentioned in the verse) is the opposite of life. Moreover, this is also illustrated in Allah's saying: '…Everything will perish except His Face…' (al-Qasas: 88). By relating the two verses together, it is found that everything has a distinctive way of life, even though it is not known to the people, yet it exists as evidenced by the fact that everything will die. Scientists have recently taken to recording the languages of birds and animals as well as trying to decode the basics of these languages.

Amongst the miraculous things showing Allah's Power in creation is that when they wanted to send the 110-ton rocket 'Discovery' out into the space, they found a problem that prevented its departure. They found that a 4-gram woodpecker had made 42 holes in the insulation wall of the fuel chamber, the matter that prevented the rocket from taking off. Amazingly, the 4-gram bird was subjugated to build its nest in this enormous rocket and to prevent it from blasting off.

Assumingly, the birds wanted to take vengeance when they saw that man challenges them in the world of flight. In the same respect, he has found that the biggest threat to planes is the world of birds and that bird flocks obstruct aeroplanes and swarm around airports. It seems that there is some kind of enmity between birds and the inventions that compete with them in the world of flight.

Thus, scientists have looked for ways to repel birds from airports; they have come across the idea of recorded sounds that emit electronic birdcalls as a warning to other birds when there is some kind of danger. They broadcast such sounds around the airports, but birds have not been fooled by this deception; so these sounds no longer bother them. Hence, they had to have recourse to another method; they made plastic models of hawks and hung them up because birds are afraid of them. However, the birds perceived the deception and even mocked them when some of them built their nests on the wings of these hawks. As birds have their own world, dominion and secrets, as people know only a few of these mysteries.

Thus, the verse about Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him, ‘We made the mountains join him in glorifying Us at sunset and sunrise’ (Sad: 18) means that mountains actually glorify Allah; yet their glorification is known only by Allah. However, the miracle granted for Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him is that mountains were glorifying Allah along with him in one voice.

In the same respect, it is wrong to say, ‘The pebbles glorified Allah in the hands of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him’ because pebbles would glorify Allah even in the hands of Abu Jahl. However, it would be more correct and miraculous to say, ‘Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him heard the glorification of the pebbles in his hands.’

Some of the great scholars have taken this verse, ‘... at sunset and sunrise’ (Sad: 18), as evidence of the legality of performing the Duha (mid-morning) prayer that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to pray. It is also called the Ishraq prayer.(1) However, what are 'sunset' (the period between noon and sunset) and 'sunrise' (the period of the ascension of the sun in the sky) prayers referred to? Since they basically depend on the time, thus every place has its 'sunset' and 'sunrise' that differs from others.

They are related to time so they always exist due to the rotation of time. It has been previously clarified that a given ritual prayer is always performed unceasingly all over the clock. In one place, for example, people are performing the dawn prayer; in another, they are performing the noon prayer, whereas in a third they are performing the afternoon prayer, etc. By this rotation of time, Allah sets His Will to be worshipped interminably in all times. The Prophet said, 'Indeed, Allah stretches His Hand during the night so that those who commit sins by day may repent, and He stretches His Hand in the day so that those who commit sins by night may repent.'(2) There is always nighttime or daytime, thus Allah's hand is permanently extended.

Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He says: 'And the birds, too, in flocks, all echoed his praise' (Sad: 19). The birds assembled around Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him because he had the most beautiful voice in reciting the Mazamir (Psalms). The birds gathered, in flocks, around him and echoed his glorification. Thus, there is an orchestra of faith comprising of Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him the mountains, and the birds; all glorified Allah the Almighty as one whole chorus.

Hence, the scholars explained Allah's Words: '... all echoed his praise ...' (Sad: 19) to mean that Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him, the mountains and the birds were all continuously repenting and returning humbly to Allah.(3)

(1) It is narrated by Ibn 'Abbas Allah be pleased with him that he said, 'I used to pass over the verse, '... at sunset and sunrise' (Sad: 18), and did not know to what it referred until Umm Hani Allah be pleased with her told me that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him entered upon her and asked for water with which to perform his ablutions. He then prayed Duha (mid-morning) and said, "O, Umm Hani, this is called the Ishraq prayer."' This was related in Tafsir Al-Qurtubi [8/5800] and As-Suyuti ascribed it in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur [7/150] to At-Tabarani in his book Al-Awsat and Ibn Mardaweyh from Ibn 'Abbas.

(2) It was related by Muslim in his Sahih [2759], and Ahmad in his Musnad [4/395, 404] on the authority of Abu Musa Al-Ash'ari Allah be pleased with him.

Allah the Almighty then says: ‘We strengthened his kingdom; ...’ (Sad: 20). This means that Allah Glorified is He strengthened him with victory and endued him with awe, which is one of the greatest means to power. If Allah wills to weaken a king, He takes his awe-inspiring from people’s hearts; accordingly, people no longer fear him, and they gain courage to go against him.

As for Allah’s saying,‘...We gave him wisdom and a decisive way of speaking’ (Sad: 20), wisdom means the act of putting things in their appropriate places; thus, this will bring the desired fruits shortly and easily. Allah chooses the most appropriate word in the language; the word hikma (wisdom) is derived from the Arabic word hakama meaning the rein of a horse. This rein is used to easily guide and control a horse; it is loosened to let the horse go faster or is tightened to slow it down or cause it to halt.

Some scholars said that the adjective ‘wisdom’ means here prophethood and sober judgement. Both Prophets Dawud (David) and Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon them were distinguished by dominion and prophethood endued by Allah the Almighty. Hence, their opponents were obliterated because absolute power eradicated the severity of the opposition.

The phrase ‘...We gave him wisdom and a decisive way of speaking’ (Sad: 20) refers to arbitration between disputants; each of them has his argument, and a judge should arbitrate between them to validate truth and invalidate falsehood. However, Dawud’s (David’s) enjoyment of sober judgment is destabilised on the grounds that Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him altered one of his father’s judgements. Nevertheless, this alteration is also to be accredited to Dawud (David) peace be upon him because his son, Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him is the person who judged justly. A person does not like anyone to outperform him except his own son; Hence, Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him was happy by this.

= mountains and the birds obey and return to Dawud (David) peace be upon him to glorify Allah with him. This was the viewpoint of Qatada, mentioned by Ibn Kathir [4/30] and in Tafsir Al-Qurtubi [8/5802] as well as by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur [7/153] on the authority of ‘Abd Ar-Razzaq, ‘Abd ibn Hamid and Ibn Jarir.

Have you heard the story of the two litigants who climbed into his private quarters? [21] When they reached David, he took fright, but they said, 'Do not be afraid. We are two litigants, one of whom has wronged the other: judge between us fairly – do not be unjust – and guide us to the right path [22]

When Allah the Almighty asks, 'Have you heard...?' (Sad: 21), this question emphasises that the person should have been aware of the asked matter. For example, if someone asks, 'Has not this happened to you?' this means that it has indeed happened. Similarly, Allah's saying, 'Was there not a period of time when man was nothing to speak of?' (al-Insan: 1) means that there was a time when man was not yet thought of. This rhetorical question urges the listener to provide the answer by himself; thus, he will affirm it. This affirmative style approves the answer in contrary to normal statement that can be believed or denied. Alternatively, this rhetorical device leads the listener to wish for tidings. Tidings are not exactly the same as normal statements; rather, they refer to important information that should be highlighted and should raise concern. Daily pieces of information are not tidings, yet the Day of Resurrection mentioned by Allah the Exalted is a 'tiding', as He the Exalted says: 'What are they asking about? The momentous tidings about which they differ.' (an-Naba': 1-3)

Allah's saying, '…climbed into…' (Sad: 21) means that they did not enter through the door, but from above the wall. This is a proof that these litigants are not earthly creatures; rather, they were a group of angels who came from the heaven in the shape of human beings. The 'sanctuary' refers to the sacred place where a worshipper sits alone and talks to his Lord. It is also mentioned in Allah's saying about Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her: '…Whenever Zakaryya (Zechariah) went in to see her in her sanctuary, he found her supplied with provisions…' (Al-'Imran: 37). Nowadays, a sanctuary is the qibla (the place indicating direction to the Ka'ba).

Then Allah Glorified is He says: ‘When they reached Dawud (David), he became frightened...’ (Sad: 22). The question that arises is why would Dawud (David) peace be upon him shrink in fear from seeing them while he was in the presence of Allah by praying, glorifying and worshipping Him?

The scholars say that fear is of two kinds: that which moves one’s heart to uneasiness, while he seems apparently to be calm and unaffected, whereas there is another kind of fear which leaks from the heart to the external appearance. The fear of Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him was of the second type because, as the scholars say, when the angels saw him in this state they said: ‘... Do not be afraid ...’ (Sad: 22). They would not have said this unless his external appearance indicated fear. Allah’s saying also implies that they were not amongst his subjects nor even human beings because the subject would not dare to say to the king, ‘Fear not.’

As for their saying: ‘...We are two litigants, one of whom has wronged the other...’ (Sad: 22), it shows that they are harmonious despite their dispute, for they spoke together in one breath, perhaps in turn, or perhaps, one of them spoke and the others confirmed his. Anyway, their speaking in this harmonious way indicates that there was no dispute between them, and neither of them wanted to get the best of the other. So, they must have had some other goal. The meaning of ‘has wronged’ is that someone tried to overbear or oppress the other.

Then Allah says: ‘...Judge between us fairly. Do not be unjust...’ (Sad: 22). This also shows their boldness, indicating that they are from angels. The phrase, ‘... Do not be unjust ...’ (Sad: 22) means ‘Do not stray from the truth or commit any wrong.’

Allah the Almighty mentions their saying: ‘...and guide us to the Right Path’ (Sad: 22). They pray for both of them, without any differentiation, despite of being litigants. Also, they do not mention who is the oppressor or the oppressed. The Right Path refers to the truth itself. Afterwards, they went on explaining their case:

فَقَالَ أَكۡفِلۡنِيهَا وَعَزَّنِى فِى ٱلۡخِطَابِ ٢٣

This is my brother. He had ninety-nine ewes and I just the one, and he said, "Let me take charge of her," and overpowered me with his words' [23]
(The Quran, Sad: 23)

Their words 'my brother' gives an impression of affection; despite their dispute, nevertheless, they are brothers. Similarly, Allah says: 'Their brother Nuh (Noah) said to them, "Will you not be mindful of Allah?"' (ash-Shu'ara': 106) Regarding the strongest sort of enmity, namely vengeance, Allah the Almighty says:'…But if the culprit is pardoned by his aggrieved brother…' (al-Baqara: 178). This kind of affection may soften the heart of a blood avenger over a killer.

So the case is 'This is my brother. He had ninety-nine ewes and I just had one ...' (Sad: 23). The word 'ewe' has three meanings in Arabic; it may refer to a female sheep, to a mountain sheep or to a wild cow. Allah's saying, '... and he said, "Let me take charge of her"...' (Sad: 23) means that a litigant explained the case that he gave the ewe to his brother and that he will take care of it with his many sheep, without additional burdens or workloads.

Allah's saying, '... and overpowered me with his words' (Sad: 23) means that he dominated him with arguments and evidence. It is known that a judge passes his decision based upon evidence and proof as Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Verily, I am only a human, and claimants bring to me (their disputes). Perhaps, some of them are more eloquent than others. I judge according to what I hear from them. So, if I pass a judgment in favor of one of you that detracts from his brother's rights, then he should not take it as I in fact give him a portion of (hell) Fire'.(1)

(1) It was narrated in Sahih Al-Bukhari [2458] and in Sahih Muslim [1713], on the authority of Umm Salama that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him heard a dispute outside his door, so he went out to them and said, 'Verily, I am only a human, and claimants bring to me (their disputes). Perhaps, some of them are more eloquent than others. I judge according to what I hear from them. So, if I pass a judgment in favour of one of you that detracts from his brother's rights, then he should not take it, as I in fact give him a portion of (hell) fire, he may burden himself with it or abandon it.'

So, the litigant means that his brother has beaten him by his speech and the strength of his argument, yet he is not content because he has been oppressed. Thus, he has come to bring his case to Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him to judge it.

Therefore, Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him listened to the claim of the first party but did not listen to the other; this is a mistake of the judge. To this end, the expert judge says that if a claimant comes with his eye has been put out, he should not judge in his favour until he hears from the other party; perhaps, both of his eyes have been put out.

However, Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him gave his judgment directly, as Allah says:

قَالَ لَقَدْ ظَلَمَكَ بِسُؤَالِ نَعْجَتِكَ إِلَىٰ نِعَاجِهِۦ ۖ وَإِنَّ كَثِيرًا مِّنَ ٱلْخُلَطَآءِ لَيَبْغِى بَعْضُهُمْ عَلَىٰ بَعْضٍ
إِلَّا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَعَمِلُوا۟ ٱلصَّـٰلِحَـٰتِ وَقَلِيلٌ مَّا هُمْ ۗ وَظَنَّ دَاوُۥدُ أَنَّمَا فَتَنَّـٰهُ فَٱسْتَغْفَرَ رَبَّهُۥ
وَخَرَّ رَاكِعًا وَأَنَابَ ﴿٢٤﴾ فَغَفَرْنَا لَهُۥ ذَٰلِكَ ۖ وَإِنَّ لَهُۥ عِندَنَا لَزُلْفَىٰ وَحُسْنَ مَـَٔابٍ ﴿٢٥﴾

David said, ‘He has done you wrong by demanding to add your ewe to his flock. Many partners treat each other unfairly. Those who sincerely believe and do good deeds do not do this, but these are very few.’ [Then] David realized that We had been testing him, so he asked his Lord for forgiveness, fell down on his knees, and repented [24] We forgave him [his misdeed]. His reward will be nearness to Us, a good place to return to [25] (The Quran, Sad: 24 - 25)

By his saying: ‘... He has done you wrong ...’ (Sad: 24), Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him attributed oppression to one of them. He included an irrelevant clue to be a part of the argument of the judgment. Had not a litigant had ninety-nine sheep, would it have been permissible to ask his brother to give him his ewe? This has no relevance to the case; so, Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him hastily judged before hearing out the other party and then included an irrelevant clue to the case. Perhaps, he was envious of having ninety-nine ewes.

Then Allah the Exalted says: ‘... Many partners treat each other unfairly. Those who sincerely believe and do good deeds do not do this ...’ (Sad: 24).

This means that this is not a unique case but a widespread and frequent one between partners; one of them often transgresses against the other. Even though they only entered into the partnership through mutual understanding, agreement, and friendship, yet, all this does not prevent him from inclining to oppression. This is similar to the gamblers who, apparently, seem to be good friends; meanwhile, each one of them is set upon taking the money from the others' pockets.

Then Allah the Almighty turns our attention to the fact that this matter is not, generally speaking, absolute; there are other partners who are not oppressors. They are the people whom Allah Glorified is He described in His saying: '...Those who sincerely believe and do good deeds do not do this...' (Sad: 24); yet they are very few or rare: '... but these are very few ...' (Sad: 24).

In a Qudsi Hadith, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him narrates from his Lord: 'Allah the Most High says: "I make a third with two partners as long as each of them does not cheat the other, but when he cheats him, I depart from their bond."'(1) This means that if treachery and oppression creep into the partnership, Allah Glorified is He leaves the bond to be voided of blessings, ruined and lost.

Then Allah the Exalted says, clarifying the state of Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him after the case had passed: '... [Then] Dawud (David) realised that We had been testing him ...' (Sad: 24); he realised that Allah had tested him. Thus, Allah the Almighty taught and tested Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him the rules and principles of judging him with this case. Consequently, it was a necessary lesson for three reasons; the first was that he was scared in the presence of his Lord from similar human beings, thinking that they would kill him. The second mistake was that he judged in favour of the first litigant without listening to the other, whereas the third error was that he included an irrelevant clue to the case.

(1) It is narrated by Abu Dawud in his Sunnan [3381], Kitab Al-Buyu' (Book of Commercial Transactions), chapter on Partnerships, on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him. Shams Al-Haqq says in his Commentary ['Awn Al-Ma'bood 9/170], 'Allah's partnership with them is a metaphor. He equated the blessings, virtue, and profit with the shared wealth and made Himself the third partner.' It is also narrated by Ad-Daraqutni in his Sunnan [Kitab Al-Buyu', Hadith No.139] on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him. In the version of Abu Hayyan At-Tayami [140], he says, 'The hand of Allah is over two partners so long as one does not betray his companion. If one of them betrays the other, He raises it from them.'

Allah's saying, '... We had been testing him ...' (Sad: 24) comes from the Arabic phrase fatan adh-dhahab meaning that gold is heated with fire to be refined from any impurities.

When Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him realised this, he did not fall into denial or conceitedness; rather, he sought forgiveness from his Lord. Allah Glorified is He says: '... so he asked his Lord for forgiveness, fell down on his knees ...' (Sad: 24); this means that he fell down on the floor unintentionally in prostration on the floor to Allah. Likewise, Allah Glorified is He says: '…[they]… fall down upon their faces [in prostration]…' (al-Isra': 107). Thus, the verb 'fall down' has two meanings; the first is that he fell down from his bowing into prostration. The second meaning is that revealed in Allah's saying: '... and repented ...' (Sad: 24); this means that he returned to Allah in repentance.

In conclusion, the result comes as Allah says: 'We forgave him [his misdeed]...' (Sad: 25). Allah Glorified is He promises him with closeness and high rank: '... His reward will be nearness to Us ...' (Sad: 25). It is appropriate to his esteem that the mountains and the birds glorified Allah with him. Moreover, Allah promises him with: '... A good place to return to' (Sad: 25).

عَن سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ ۚ إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يَضِلُّونَ عَن سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ لَهُمْ عَذَابٌ شَدِيدٌۢ بِمَا نَسُوا۟ يَوْمَ ٱلْحِسَابِ ﴿٢٦﴾

'David, We have given you mastery over the land. Judge fairly between people. Do not follow your desires, lest they divert you from God's path: those who wander from His path will have a painful torment because they ignore the Day of Reckoning' [26] (The Quran, Sad: 26)

The word 'mastery' (Sad: 26) either refers to Dawud (David) as vicegerent of Allah on earth in the general sense, for all men are vicegerents; yet Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him was the mainstay of this mastery. Or else, it could mean that he is vicegerent of the prophets in carrying their Messages to mankind. As long as he is the vicegerent, then he is employed; if he does his job well, he will keep it, otherwise it will be taken away from him.

The cause of corruption is that if circumstances meet the human's desires, he imagines that he has become autonomous on other creation; he forgets that he is a vicegerent and not self-sufficient. Only if he remembers that his vicegerency can be taken off at any moment, he will remain well-mannered with his Lord Who made him a vicegerent in the first place, as Allah says: 'But man exceeds all bounds when he thinks he is self-sufficient' (al-'Alaq: 6-7). Allah says: '... Judge fairly between people ...' (Sad: 26); so, as long as a human being is Allah's vicegerent on earth, he should inhabit it, establishing regulations and truth therein. Allah the Almighty gives valuable advice to whoever has to judge between people: '... Judge fairly between people. Do not follow your desires ...' (Sad: 26). Allah guides the person to the truth which is in front of him, so he should put in it in its right place and should not follow his desires because they would distort his judgment.

In this respect, some scholars have studied Allah's saying concerning Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'He does not speak from his own desire The Quran is nothing less than a revelation that is sent to him.' (an-Najm: 3-4) They roused the question that if this is a Divine revelation, so why does Allah reprove him, as in His sayings: 'Allah forgives you [O, Prophet]! Why did you give them permission ...' (at-Tawba: 43), 'O Prophet, why do you prohibit what Allah has made lawful to you ...' (at-Tahrim: 1) and 'He frowned and turned away when the blind man came to him' ('Abasa: 1-2)?

The scholars say that Allah Glorified is He is not correcting Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. He is simply saying that the Messenger has no personal desires deviating him from the right judgment, whether the matter is decreed by Allah or other matters left to be legislated by him.

When Allah the Exalted outlined the task of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him he defined the role of the Quran as a miraculous Book, which carries only the principal guidelines of the methodology. It is the guardian of the previous Books, for Allah has confirmed that preceding Books have been taken out of context and altered and that those who believed in them had not been trustworthy. As Allah says: '... In accordance with that part of Allah's Scripture which they were entrusted to preserve...' (al-Ma'ida: 44).

The preservation of their revealed Books was a legal responsibility which was liable to being obeyed or disobeyed. However, these people disobeyed the responsibility entrusted upon them, as Allah says: '…They have forgotten some of what they were told to remember…' (al-Ma'ida: 13). Allah the Exalted also mentions those who did not forget but took it out of context: '…They distort the meaning of [revealed] words…' (al-Ma'ida: 13). Moreover, there are some of them who brought their own speech and inserted it into Allah's speech: 'There are some who twist the Scripture with their tongues to make you [people] think that what they say is part of the Scripture when it is not; they say it is from Allah when it is not. They attribute lies to Allah, and they know it' (Al-'Imran: 78).

Therefore, those people cannot be trusted with preserving the Book of Allah through experience. This is why Allah the Exalted did not entrust the preservation of the Quran to those who believe in it; rather, He took responsibility for the preservation of the Quran. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: 'We have sent down the Quran Ourselves, and We Ourselves will guard it even before you [O, Prophet]' (al-Hijr: 9).

The True Lord the Exalted gave this position to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; to clarify it, the Prophet said, 'The parable of myself and the prophets who came before me is that of a man who has built a house and made it good and beautiful, except for a place of one brick in a corner. People would go round it, appreciating the building, but saying, "Why has this brick not been laid here?" I am that brick and I am the Last of the prophets.'(1)

The True Lord the Most High clarifies the role of His Messenger in the completion of religion by saying, '…This day I have perfected for you your religion and completed My Favour upon you…' (al-Ma'ida: 3). This is not all, indeed Allah entrusted him with another role, and that is the protection of this religion, through him and scholars who come after him. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: '…that you be witnesses over mankind and the Messenger (Muhammad) be a witness over you…' (al-Baqara: 143).

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [3535] and Muslim in his Sahih [2286] on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him testifies that he has delivered the message to us, and it is upon us to convey and extend his teachings so that we can testify that we have delivered it to the generations who came after him. Therefore, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him warned us of a group to come who would disbelieve in his Sunnah (way of life/teachings) by saying, 'We are only responsible for following the Book of Allah. What we find in it to be permissible, we will treat it as permissible; and what we find in it to be impermissible, we will treat as impermissible.'

Tracing the word ta`ah (obedience*)* in the Quran, one finds that it comes in many forms. One time Allah Glorified is He says, 'Obey Allah, and obey the Messenger [Muhammad]…' (at-Taghabun: 12), in which the commandment to obey is repeated. Another time He says, 'And obey Allah and the Messenger [Muhammad]…' (Al-'Imran: 132) without repeating the commandment to obey. Also in another place He says: '…Obey Allah and His Messenger…' (al-Anfal: 20).

So, the repetition of the command to obey twice, once for Allah and once for His Messenger, emphasizes that when it is for Allah, it is a command regarding a matter in its totality, such as prayer, and when it is for the Messenger of Allah, it is a command regarding the details of how to pray. If, however, a command from the Messenger of Allah came consecutive and identical to that of Allah, the command is stated once without repetition. If the command is just from the Messenger of Allah, and nothing has come from Allah regarding a specific matter, then Allah says: 'Obey the Messenger (Muhammad).'

Hence, we can perceive the excellence of expression in Allah's saying: 'O you who believe! Obey Allah and obey the Messenger [Muhammad] and those of you who are in authority…' (an-Nisa': 59). Allah has not said regarding those in authority: 'and (obey) those of you who are in authority.' Why is this? This is due to His wanting to draw our attention that our obedience to those entrusted with authority emanates from our obedience to Allah and to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. There is no obedience specific to them because there is not any obedience to the creation once it involves disobedience to the Creator.

So, Allah's saying, '...Judge fairly between people....' (Sad: 26), is a command to the generality of mankind, and not particularly to His Messenger. It is appropriate here to mention Allah's saying to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in another verse: 'We [Allah] have sent down the Scripture to you [O, Muhammad] with the truth so that you may judge between people in accordance with what Allah has shown you. Do not be an advocate for those who betray trust.' (an-Nisa': 105)

The previously mentioned verse has a story behind it. It was revealed regarding the following men: Zayd ibn As-Samin*,* who was a trustworthy man despite being a Jewish, Qatadah ibn An-Nu`man and Tu`mah ibn Ubairiq. Qatadah had armour which Ibn Ubairiq had stolen from him. Ibn As-Samin, the Jew, was unjustly accused of this theft. After a careful investigation, they found the armour with Ibn Ubairiq,(1) the Muslim, and the Jew was proved innocent.

Upon this the people rushed to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him so that he might not pronounce judgment upon the Muslim, as it would be a disgrace for the Muslims in front of the Jews. The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him hesitated over this matter and so Allah revealed to him: 'We (Allah) have sent down the Scripture to you [O, Muhammad] with the truth so that you may judge between people in accordance with what Allah has shown you… (an-Nisa': 105). This means all the people, be they Jews, Christians or Muslims. In fact, the Messenger of Allah did pass sentence upon the Muslim and cleared the Jew of the charge. Such considerations of judging in favour of a Jew over a Muslim did not carry any weight with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or the Muslims because the truth is more important and more cherished than this or that.

When some Jews witnessed how Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him judged in favour of a Jew man and condemned a Muslim man, they turned towards Islam, and many of them embraced it. Mukhayriq (2) Allah

(1) His name was mentioned by Ibn Hajar Al-`Asqalani in his biographical dictionary of the companions, Al-Isabah fī Tamyiz As-Sahabah [Biography no. 4238]: Tu`mah ibn Ubairiq ibn `Amr Al-Ansari. He was also narrated by Abu Ishaq Al-Mustamli amongst the names of the Companions. He said, 'He participated in all the battles except Badr.' Abu Musa (whose surname, as I assume, is Al-Madini) said, 'There has been some talk about the faith of Tu`mah.'

(2) His name was Mukhayriq An-Nadari Al-Isra'ili, from the tribe of Banu An-Nadr. It was also said that he was from Banu Qainuqa. He was a learned scholar who entered Islam and was martyred at Uhud. He left, by will, all his wealth to the Prophet peace= be pleased with him was at the head of them. He openly announced his Islam and gave away all his wealth to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. He then set out to join a battle with the Muslims as soon as he heard the call to mobilise—even before offering a single rak`a (unit of prayer) to Allah. Mukhayriq Allah be pleased with him was martyred during this battle. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said of him, 'What a good man Mukhayriq was. He entered paradise without having prayed a single rak`a.' This is what the verse means: '...Judge fairly between people...' (Sad: 26).

The word '...mastery (or successor, khalifa)...' (Sad: 26) refers to the fact that Allah has placed us all in charge of the earth. Then over His vicegerents, He has appointed a leader to take care of their affairs and judge between them in any issues of disagreement in accordance with the Law of the One Who has assigned them as vicegerents on earth. The word khalifa could also mean the status of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as a successor to all the prophets who preceded him. He would alert people to that which had been erased from the true messages of previous prophets through the course of history. Judgment between people only occurs when they disagree, for, had they not disagreed, they would not have taken the case to a judge. Moreover, it is not for a judge to intervene in those matters over which people agree, except if they conflict with the True Lord the Most High. When this happens, it is incumbent upon him to intervene.

The word Al-haqq '... fairly [or in truth] (bi Al-haqq)...' (Sad: 26) refers to something fixed and unalterable, which is an attribute that can only apply to Allah the Exalted. As for humans, their affairs are in constant change, and their conditions are temporal and unstable. They can never remain the same. Their lives are full of vicissitudes. However, all the laws and principals that govern human life are from Allah the Almighty. Therefore, they are constant and immutable. Since Allah the Exalted has completed His Blessings upon us, perfected His religion, and has chosen for us Islam as our religion, and then no one should emend anything in it. Any amendments would be an assault on Allah’s thorough and perfect knowledge of the wisdom behind each and every ruling.

= and blessings be upon him who gave it away in charity. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said of him, 'Mukhayriq is the forerunner of the Jews, Salman is the forerunner of the Persians, and Bilal is the forerunner of the Ethiopians.' See Tamyiz As-Sahabah by Ibn Hajar [Biography no. 7843].

The opposite of Al-haqq (truth) is Al-batil (falsehood). Sometimes falsehood predominates, but the truth is the truth and ultimately will be dominant. Sometimes the True Lord Glorified is He allows falsehood to predominate for a reason so that people may be bitten and burned by its fire, with which the sweetness of truth becomes evident. It is only when the bitterness of falsehood bites and hurts that people will flee in pursuit of the truth.

So, even if falsehood lifts its head up for a while, it is still truth that is uppermost. The True Lord the Most High gives us an example to illustrate this issue by saying: ‘He [Allah] sends water from the sky which fills riverbeds to overflowing, each according to its measure. The stream carries on its surface a growing layer of froth, like the froth that appears when people melt metals in the fire to make ornaments and tools. In this way, Allah illustrates truth and falsehood—the froth disappears, but what is of benefit to mankind remains in the earth—this is how Allah makes illustrations.’ (ar-Ra‘d: 17)

The truth is absolute and unchangeable. Furthermore, it is this changelessness that makes us realise that Divine Laws have not come to make the Word of Allah uppermost; rather, it is to put down the word of disbelievers. This meaning is clear in Allah’s saying: ‘... and [He] made the word of those who disbelieved the lowest, while the word of Allah that is the highest...’ (at-Tawba: 40). Allah the Exalted did not conjoin the second phrase to the first. He did not say ‘and made Allah’s Words the highest', for Allah’s Cause does not need to be made supreme. It is an unalterable reality; it is the eternal truth.

Allah then says, addressing our master Dawud (David) peace be upon him: ‘... Do not follow your desires, lest they divert you from Allah’s Path…’ (Sad: 26). The word Al-hawa (a vain desire or inclination*)* refers to the inclination of the soul to something it desires without looking to the principles that govern that thing. Inclinations differ as people differ. Even close friends differ in their food, drink and tastes; when they buy something, each buy different sorts and different things. Indeed, there is a common factor binding them, which is their friendship, but still their desires are different. If your desires differ from mine, we must have recourse to a source of uncontested opinion. If that unanimous source is a higher authority above us, there is no objection. Objections arise when one becomes subject to one's equal and lets him rule over his affairs and he follows his opinion.

The True Lord the Exalted decides this issue by saying: 'But if the truth were in accord with their own likes and dislikes, the heavens and the earth would surely have fallen into ruin ...' (al-Mu'minun: 71). We can understand how conflicting desires could ruin life on earth, but how could it ruin the heavens? Furthermore, why did Allah mention the heavens before the earth?

The scholars say that this is indeed so. Ruination would spread beyond the earth and corrupt the heavens as well, meaning that it would corrupt Allah's Law which He has sent down from heaven. If it would corrupt Allah's heavenly revealed laws which constitute the truth for mankind, then this corruption exceeds the corruption of what is on the earth. When some disbelievers said, 'Or you [Muhammad] make the heaven fall upon us in fragments as you have claimed...' (al-Isra': 92), this was hawa (vain desire). Had Allah answered their request, the heavens and the earth would indeed have been ruined. It is from Allah's Mercy that He restrained their desires in the speculative systems that treat people justly in the issues of difference. As for those matters that involve no difference of opinion, Allah the Almighty has left them open for people to do with them as they please.

If someone were to ask, 'Why has Allah left the matters in which there can be no difference of opinion open?' The answer is that people will arrive to one truth upon which they will agree, and this is just what we see in empirical science, for example. It is a field which is open to all, Russians as well as Americans. Indeed, we see them place strong protective measures for their research so that it may not reach anyone else nor allow anyone to steal or plagiarise what others have achieved.

So heaven does not interfere in matters over which we will agree. This is a question that our master Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him decisively settled, giving us the example himself in the context of the pollination of date palms. When he suggested to some date growers that they should not pollinate them manually, it was subsequently a bad harvest year and the date palms did not produce fruit. So Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to them, 'You know better about the affairs of your world.'(1)

Why is this so? The reason for this is by experimentation you will reach one conclusion upon which you will all agree and take it from others. As for inclinations and desires, they differ from one person to another, and from which conflicts—serious or minor—may stem.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He clarifies the reason for the prohibition of following one's desires by saying: '... lest they divert you from Allah's Path ...' (Sad: 26). That is, do not follow your desires because they will lead you astray from Allah's Way. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him clarified this matter for us when he drew a straight line for the Companions along with numerous other lines around it, and then he recited the noble verse: 'And verily, this is my Straight Path, so follow it, and follow not (other) paths, for they will separate you away from His Path…' (al-An'am: 153).

No matter how small they are, differences cause the divergence of paths. One millimetre can make paths diverge. If two lines were drawn from one point and one of them diverged from the other by just one millimetre, the result would be that the farther one went from the original point, the greater the divergence would be. Have you seen, for example, what the train controller who controls and changes the directions of the trains does? He moves the end of a lever which moves no more than five millimetres, and because of this movement, the train is directed away from Alexandria to Aswan. This is how paths diverge. A huge difference can arise from a tiny move. A miniscule difference at the point of origin results in a bigger and bigger difference the farther away from it one moves.

Similarly, just as various paths diverge, so does a single path when it is broad and has room for divergence. The desert path to Alexandria, for instance, is a wide dual-direction highway. One can travel on one of the two routes in a winding manner, going right and left, the consequence of which is a lengthened journey. Therefore, people choose the ‘middle way', which means that you keep the two sides of the road at an equal distance from yourself.

(1) Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (2362) on the authority of Rafi` ibn Khadij that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, when the palm trees did not bear fruits, 'I am only a human being. When I tell you to do something with regard to your religion, and then follow it, but if I tell you to do something based on my own opinion, I am only a human being.' Also according to the Hadith narrated by Anas [2363], he said, 'You know better about your worldly affairs.'

The True Lord the Exalted then clarifies the outcome of deviation from the main path by saying: ‘...Those who wander from His Path will have a painful torment because they ignore the Day of Reckoning’ (Sad: 26). Heedlessness of this Day and forgetting the final end is what causes people to fall into intense punishment. If a human keeps in the forefront of his mind the recompense for bad deeds, he will not do them. Likewise, if he recalls the reward of good deeds, he will be neither careless nor lazy about performing them.

وَمَا خَلَقْنَا ٱلسَّمَآءَ وَٱلْأَرْضَ وَمَا بَيْنَهُمَا بَٰطِلًا ۚ ذَٰلِكَ
ظَنُّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ ۚ فَوَيْلٌ لِّلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ مِنَ ٱلنَّارِ ﴿٢٧﴾

It was not without purpose that We created the heavens and the earth and everything in between. That may be what the disbelievers assume – how they will suffer from the Fire! [27] (The Quran, Sad: 27)

The meaning of the verse is that Allah has not created the heaven and the earth and all that is between them without meaning and purpose; rather, He created them with exact wisdom. This is why you find them constant and unchanging. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘It is not for the sun to overtake the moon, nor does the night outstrip the day. They all float, each in an orbit.’ (Ya Sin: 40) Had the creation been ordered otherwise, there would be collisions every moment between the celestial bodies and the constellations.

‘... That is the assumption of those who disbelieve...’ (Sad: 27) means that disbelievers think that they have been created in vain, to no end, to no purpose. This is their conjecture, and it is no more than conjecture. Had the creation happened randomly as they imagined, it would not have been a creation. Since a created being must have a purpose in the mind of its creator before he makes it. As we said, the person who invented the washing machine or the refrigerator defined its purpose before making it. He did not make it and then say, ‘Think over and try to find some use for this machine.’

It is the one who makes something who defines its role. He lays down the principles for the upkeep of his creation. For this reason, we say that all the deviation in the world stems from the desire of its inhabitants themselves to lay down the purpose of Allah's creation. They want to lay down the principles for the upkeep of Allah's creation and ignore those that Allah the Almighty has laid down. They feign ignorance of what Allah has decreed and appointed and do not refer the matter to its proper and relevant authority as one should in worldly affairs. Each manufacturer knows best what is good for his product.

Then comes the threat: '…so woe to those who disbelieve from the Fire.' (Sad: 27) The Creator the Exalted often warns and threatens His created beings with punishment in the Fire. Some people see in this a kind of cruelty, yet, actually, this is a form of mercy, not cruelty. It is out of Allah's Mercy towards us that He stresses the enormity of sin and clearly states the punishment for it. It is out of His Mercy that He tells us of the subsequent retribution before a particular sin is committed. On recalling the prospect of punishment, a person recoils and refrains from a particular sin. So, great wisdom underlies such warnings and threats.

أَمْ نَجْعَلُ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَعَمِلُوا۟ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ كَٱلْمُفْسِدِينَ
فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ أَمْ نَجْعَلُ ٱلْمُتَّقِينَ كَٱلْفُجَّارِ ﴿٢٨﴾

But would We treat those who believe and do good deeds and those who spread corruption on earth as equal?
Would We treat those who are aware of God and those who recklessly break all bounds in the same way? [28]
(The Quran, Sad: 28)

After having mentioned the requital of disbelievers in the fire, the True Lord the Most High wanted to state its opposite; it is through opposites that things become distinct. Allah the Almighty chose to compare for us disbelievers and believers. Believers are the people who have lived righteously by the standards of Allah's Law, followed the Straight Path, held their hands and tongues from harming others and have been a source of peace and happiness. How could we put such people on an equal footing with corrupt disbelievers?

This is a hint from the True Lord the Exalted. It is as though He is telling us to be wary of equating these with those. Beware not to be overcome by mercy for the oppressors and those who spread corruption on the earth. For if you have mercy on them, you have indeed put them on an equal footing with believers.

Therefore, we used to refute the communists by saying to them, 'You have certainly taken your revenge on your enemies, the capitalists and the feudalists, and you perpetrated horrors upon them, but what about those of them who died before you could get to them and extract your revenge? Undoubtedly, they oppressed people and still went unpunished.' So you have to admit to the existence of another life in which vengeance will be exacted on evildoers who escaped it in this world. Otherwise, the doers of good will be equated with evildoers.

Allah Glorified is He refers to '... those who spread corruption in the earth...' (Sad: 28) since He created the earth in a state of well-being. If one is unable to contribute to its well-being, by helping people and making them happy, then one should at least preserve it as it is and not corrupt it. There are many facets to well-being on earth. To explain this idea, we previously used the example of a well. One either leaves it is as it is so that people can benefit from it or one can improve upon it by building a wall around it to protect it, or adding some equipment to it to help lift the water, etc. One could also throw rubbish into it, and this would be an example of corruption.

We also said that if a person entered a garden that no one had entered before, he would find it in its original, natural state. He would see no broken trees nor smell any foul odours, despite the presence of insects, animals, dung, etc. However, as soon as people would start frequenting it, it would become damaged and spoiled. Why is this? This is so because it is no longer in its original state of well-being in which Allah has created it. People have not interacted with it according to Allah's Way. Had they done so, everything would have proceeded in a rightly manner.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He emphasises this principle by saying, '…or shall We treat the pious as the wicked?' (Sad: 28) Al-fajir (the wicked) is the one who departs or quits (yafsuq) the way and law that protects him and his society, just as the fresh, ripe date detaches itself from its peel (tafsuq). Before protecting society from a wicked individual, the True Lord the Exalted protects an individual from the society even though the individual is but one person, while society is a multitude. Accordingly, it is the individual who benefits and gains most from Allah's Way.

Likewise, sooner or later, when a person is confronted with an issue of private concern or interest, he turns to the truth out of necessity since he cannot find protection except through it. We have previously given an example of university students. The story of the three adolescent young men that we have previously mentioned is a case in point. These three persons followed their own evil whims and caprice. They remained on this bad condition for a long period of time until one of them showed repentance to Allah, which is why the other two bitterly mocked him and stigmatized him with the worst characteristics. But the question to be asked now is "If one of these two men had a sister, would he allow her to get married to his companion who repented or to the one who was still committing evil?!" It goes without saying that he will allow her to get married to the righteous one, not the evil-doing one. Certainly, he will prefer the latter companion because he is confident about him and trusts him. Thus, the truth stays the truth, virtue remains virtue and the righteous, and the wicked cannot be regarded as equal.

The True Lord the Most High then gave His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him some words of assurance to comfort and solace him. The stories in the Quran mainly came as a source of comfort and strength to his heart.

كِتَٰبٌ أَنزَلۡنَٰهُ إِلَيۡكَ مُبَٰرَكٞ لِّيَدَّبَّرُوٓاْ ءَايَٰتِهِۦ وَلِيَتَذَكَّرَ أُوْلُواْ ٱلۡأَلۡبَٰبِ ٢٩

This is a blessed Scripture which We sent down to you [Muhammad], for people to think about its messages, and for those with understanding to take heed [29] (The Quran, Sad: 29)

The 'Divine Book' referred to here is the Noble Quran. The word Mubarak (blessed) signifies something that gives benefit and goodness above that which is expected of it. As when we say of something that, 'we take from it, yet it does not decrease', we call it 'blessed'. Similarly, a man who lives on a moderate income, and yet we see him raising his children in the best way and living amongst people as though he was rich. So people say of him, ‘Indeed, he is a blessed man,’ and, ‘Surely, Allah blesses his small wage so it becomes plentiful.’ How is it, though, that Allah puts blessings in small things of life?

The scholars say that first Allah bestows contentment upon the small portion, so its owner feels content with it. Then Allah the Almighty protects him from extra expenses so that all his expenses go towards useful and necessary things. People imagine that rizq (one’s provision or sustenance) is synonymous with wealth. They do not know that protection from expenses is a form of rizq. We say that rizq can be positive in the sense of gaining income, and it can be negative in the sense of minimising expenses.

An example of this is a man who lives off of lawful earnings. When his son gets sick, a cup of tea and an aspirin are sufficient as a cure for him. As for the one who lives on ill-gotten money and accumulates fortunes, when his son gets sick, he must take him to the best doctors and spend many times what the first one has spent.

The Quran is indeed blessed and its verses are blessed as well in terms of the apparent rulings since it trains one to be upright. This uprightness, if looked at from an economical perspective, costs one nothing. Indeed, it costs one nothing to be upright; it is deviance that costs one dearly. That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘A believer eats in one intestine (is satisfied with a little food), while a disbeliever eats in seven.’(1)

Indeed, a disbeliever will eat a lot to feel satiated, but a few morsels suffice a believer and keep his body nourished. A believer does not eat until he is hungry, and when he gets hungry, any food becomes tasty to him, even if it is just some dried bread and salt. A wise Arab said, ‘The food of the hungry is (always) delicious.’ Nowadays, however, we see people preparing salads, appetisers and hors d'oeuvres before their food. Why is this so? It is to encourage people to eat a lot, almost to the point of surfeit, and then after that they need to take digestive aids, laxatives and other medications.

(1) Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih [2060] [184] in the Book of Al-Ashribah (drinks) on the authority of Jabir and Ibn `Umar Allah be pleased with them both. An-Nawawi said, in his commentary on Sahih Muslim: ‘According to another narration, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said this after he had entertained a disbeliever as a guest. He drank the milk of seven goats. On the next morning, after he embraced Islam, he drank the milk of one goat and could not finish the second goat’s milk.’ The point of the Hadith is to content oneself with little worldly provisions and to urge oneself to practice Zuhd (renunciation) and satisfaction (with whatever Allah has ordained).’

These are not the characteristics of a believer. Our master, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him laid down a method for healthy eating. He said peace and blessings be upon him 'We are a people who do not eat until we are hungry; and when we eat, we do not eat to our fill.'(1) This method takes care of the economical side and achieves welfare in all aspects – economically, socially, politically and security-wise, without incurring costs.

The Quran is blessed from another perspective. When you interact positively with its doctrine and apply it lovingly and appropriately, the True Lord reveals special secrets to you that arouse the wonder of others and opens up for you marvellous spiritual doors. Was not Musa (Moses) peace be upon him a prophet of Allah, amazed by the deeds of a righteous slave of Allah? This righteous slave worshipped Allah according to Musa's Law, yet despite this, Allah commanded Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to follow and learn from him with sincerity and zeal. When Musa (Moses) peace be upon him followed him with sincerity and love, he learnt tremendous lessons from him. This is related in Allah's saying: 'O, you who believe! If you obey and fear Allah, He will grant you a criterion (to tell right from wrong), will expiate for you your sins and forgive you, and Allah is the Owner of the Great Bounty.' (al-Anfal: 29)

The word furqan (the criterion or discriminator between true and false) used in this verse does not refer to the Quran; rather, it is a criterion specific to those who follow the primary Furqan, namely the Quran. Furthermore, by means of it, they reach the level of taqwa (God-fearing piety). The True Lord Glorified is He gives them a special criterion because they have followed the Quran with sincerity and ardent love.

The meaning of tadabbur (pondering or reflection) in '... that they may ponder over its verses...' (Sad: 29) is not to take a superficial look at matters; rather, it is to look contemplatively into their consequences or end results. We should look at the background issues and consequences so that we may extract the lessons they teach. It was for this reason that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him objected when Al-Khidr (a righteous servant of Allah) put a hole in the boat; he looked at the surface of this matter and its outward logic. Logic says that a sound boat is better than a faulty one, yet this righteous servant of Allah had another criterion. He did not compare a sound boat with a holed one; rather, he compared between a holed boat and no boat at all. Which is better? There was an oppressor who was taking people's boats if they were sound. So this hole saved the boat from this oppressor, and it remained the property of its owners. This is knowledge of the hidden realms and the Unseen that Allah bestows upon whomever He wills of those of His slaves who have been sincere to Him.

Allah continues: '... and that people of understanding may remember.' (Sad: 29); this means people with attentive and heedful minds. Pay attention here that the True Lord the Exalted extorts us to use our intellect and understanding to reflect upon His signs within the universe. A person who is equal to you or someone with whom you have some business will not draw your attention to some item unless he is sure that you will become interested in it; otherwise, he will avoid it or conceal its defects. An example of this is someone who is selling you a good piece of merchandise; you will see him explaining its merits and invite you to test it yourself and check its quality. He will also tell you about other not as obvious, or subtle, features.

As for the one selling poor merchandise, he distracts you from its faults and busies your mind with other things so that you will not notice the defects in the goods. For instance, one enters a shop to buy shoes. If they are too tight, the seller says to you, 'They stretch with wear.' However, if they are too big, he will say, 'They look a little small for you.' As far as he is concerned, the important thing is to engage your mind until you buy it.

The True Lord the Most High invites us to reflect upon His signs, ponder them and search thoroughly and carefully into them because He knows that when we look and reflect on them, we will be convinced by them and that through them we will arrive at the truth. Despite this, we hear some people who take a stance on some religious questions, say, ‘This matter is beyond research. There is no role for the intellect in it.’ We answer this by saying that we have been ordered to carefully consider and reflect upon the universe, so there is nothing wrong with looking into them.

After this, the sequence of the Quran brings us back once again to our master Dawud (David) peace be upon him not to tell us his story, but because he was the father of another prophet, our master Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon them:

وَوَهَبۡنَا لِدَاوُۥدَ سُلَيۡمَٰنَۚ نِعۡمَ ٱلۡعَبۡدُ إِنَّهُۥٓ أَوَّابٌ ﴿٣٠﴾ إِذۡ عُرِضَ عَلَيۡهِ بِٱلۡعَشِيِّ
ٱلصَّٰفِنَٰتُ ٱلۡجِيَادُ ﴿٣١﴾ فَقَالَ إِنِّيٓ أَحۡبَبۡتُ حُبَّ ٱلۡخَيۡرِ عَن ذِكۡرِ رَبِّي حَتَّىٰ
تَوَارَتۡ بِٱلۡحِجَابِ ﴿٣٢﴾ رُدُّوهَا عَلَيَّۖ فَطَفِقَ مَسۡحَۢا بِٱلسُّوقِ وَٱلۡأَعۡنَاقِ ﴿٣٣﴾

We gave David Solomon. He was an excellent servant who always turned to God [30] When well-bred light-footed horses were paraded before him near the close of day [31] He kept saying, ‘My love of fine things is part of my remembering my Lord!’ until [the horses] disappeared from sight [32] ‘Bring them back!’ [he said] and started to stroke their legs and necks [33] (The Quran, Sad: 30 - 33)

One of the wonders of the Quranic order regarding the mention of Dawud (David) and Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon them is a common aspect found in verses related to both. The first mentioning of our master Dawud (David) peace be upon him occurs in the chapter of al-Baqara in Allah’s saying, ‘So they defeated them by permission of Allah, and Dawud (David) killed Jalut (Goliath)…’ (al-Baqara: 251), and the last mentioning of him is in the chapter of Sad: ‘And to Dawud (David) We gave Sulaiman (Solomon)…’ (Sad: 30). Similarly, the first mentioning of our master Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him occurs in the chapter of al-Baqara in Allah’s saying, ‘And they followed [instead] what the devils had recited during the reign of Sulaiman (Solomon)...’ (al-Baqara: 102), while the last mentioning of him is in Allah’s saying: ‘And We certainly tried Sulaiman (Solomon) and placed on his throne a body; then, he returned…’ (Sad: 34).

Allah the Most High says: ‘And to Dawud (David) We gave (wahabna) Sulaiman (Solomon)...’ (Sad: 30). The verb wahab means to give without return. If someone commented saying that all granting of children is a bestowment from Allah without return, we would say, 'Yes.' However, the Creator Glorified is He endows each human being with a self, then He provides that self with other gifts, which are the special personal traits and attributes of his character, such as leadership, wisdom, etc. For this reason, those who ask for a specific gift while being undeserving or unqualified for it, request it by way of gift such as in the verse saying: ‘...he [Sulaiman (Solomon)] said, "My Lord, forgive me, and bestow upon me a kingdom such as shall not belong to any other after me."’ (Sad: 35) Likewise, Allah says: ‘So give me [Zakaryya (Zechariah)] from Yourself an heir who shall inherit me and inherit (also) the posterity of Ya`qub (Jacob). And make him, my Lord, one with whom You are well-pleased!’ (Maryam: 5-6)

Our master Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him was a very old man when he asked Allah for a son. His wife was also barren, so all the means for having children were unfavourable and unsound. So Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him asked Allah the Almighty to bestow upon him a child by way of gift from Him. Furthermore, even though all means are, in essence, a gift from Allah, yet they are a general gift. It is only those particular qualities with which a person is endowed that are considered a special gift.

Allah the Exalted then says: ‘... How excellent a slave! (ni`ma l-`abdu) ...’ (Sad: 30). We know that the word ni`ma (how excellent!) is used in Arabic for praise. The praise in this context is for a creedal characteristic, that is, `ubudiyyah (worshipful servitude, devotion, and obedience to Allah). We mentioned previously that people detest the words `abd (a slave) and `ubudiyyah (slavery—when not related to Allah), and they are right to detest them. In relation to humans, slavery is enforced exploitation and dispossession of the assets of a person by his master. However, regarding slavery to Allah, it is the slave who profits and benefits from his master. This is the proper form of slavery that is considered an elevation in rank and dignity for a slave.

Therefore, when the True Lord the Exalted conferred the blessing of the Isra' (Night Journey) and Mi`raj (Ascension to Heaven) upon Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him He proclaimed it by saying: ‘Glorified is He

Just to give an example from ordinary life—and indeed Allah is beyond comparison—think about a master craftsman who has apprentices. He will draw near to himself the good learner, who is sincere, efficient, and obedient and renders good service. Due to these qualities, he will single him out to teach him special skills. He will not keep back from him the finer points and secrets of his craft. He will impart some of the subtleties of his craft to him which he does not grant to other apprentices.

So, even though Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him was a king, his Lord praised him for the attribute of servitude: '... How excellent a slave!' (Sad: 30). Then Allah Glorified is He clarifies for us the basis of praising him for servitude by saying: '... Verily, he was ever oft-returning in repentance (to Us)!' (Sad: 30) This means that he was consistently repenting and turning back to Allah. Whenever he slipped up, even in the slightest way, he would reproach himself for it, turn back to his Lord, and repent to Him. Allah the Most High describes repentance by saying: 'The repentance accepted by Allah is only for those who do wrong in ignorance [or carelessness] and then repent soon after ...' (an-Nisa': 17).

The phrase, '... in ignorance [or carelessness] (bi-jahalah)...' (an-Nisa': 17) means that they do not commit wrongdoings intentionally or by design. Furthermore, if they fall into sin, they do not feel pleased with it and do not brag about it; rather, they are saddened and they blame themselves: '…it is those to whom Allah will turn in forgiveness, and Allah is Ever-Knowing and Wise. But repentance is not [accepted] of those who [continue to] do evil deeds up until, when death comes to one of them, he says, "Indeed, I have repented now" or of those who die while they are disbelievers. For them We (Allah) have prepared a painful punishment.' (an-Nisa': 17-18)

We can illustrate the difference between these two types of people using the example of a group of students who travelled on scholarship to France, for example. Amongst them was an upright man, committed to Allah's Path.

One night, he was surprised by a dissolute woman who presented herself to him and kept seducing him until he finally gave in and committed adultery with her. This person sinned ignorantly (bi-jahalah), that is, without intention or planning. This is opposed to the one who would go out looking for debauchery and collecting the addresses of those who commit indecencies. This is the one who wilfully pursues and commits sins.

The word awwab means one who constantly turns to Allah in repentance. It is an intensive form mubalaghah and means ‘someone who repeatedly returns to the truth'. Such a person does not rejoice in sin but regrets it at once, redresses the wrong done, and gets himself back to the right path. The proof of this is Allah’s saying after it: ‘When there were displayed before him, in the afternoon, nobly bred, swift-footed steeds [for fighting in Allah’s Cause]. And he said, "Alas! ..."’ (Sad: 31)

The word Al-`ashiyi signifies the time period after the mid-noon till sunset. The horses were ‘displayed before him', as in a military parade in which the leader inspects his troops and forces. The word ‘...nobly bred steeds (Al-safinat)...’ (Sad: 31) is the plural of the word safin. It is used to refer to a horse that is of noble lineage. One can recognise a highborn horse by its gait and stature. It does not stand on four feet but gracefully upon three, as though in a state of complete readiness. The word ‘...swift-footed steeds (Al-jiyad) ...’ (Sad: 31) is the plural of the word jawad and means strong and fast horses.

So, when these nobly bred and swift-footed steeds and military forces were paraded before our master Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him he said, ‘"Alas! I did love the good [these horses] instead of remembering my Lord’ until [the sun] had hidden in the veil [of night].’ (Sad: 32) The scholars said that the word ‘good’ (khayr) is used here to refer to the horses based on the Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that stated, ‘Goodness (khayr) is tied to the forelocks of horses until the Day of Resurrection.’(1)

(1) Agreed upon Hadith narrated by Muslim in his Sahih [987] in the Book of Zakat [Hadith no. 26] on the authority of Abu Hurayra that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Goodness is in the forelocks of horses until the Day of Resurrection', or he said 'tied to the forelocks of horses until the Day of Resurrection.’ Al-Bukhari narrated it in his Sahih [2850] on the authority of `Urwah ibn Al-Ja`d.

He peace and blessings be upon him also said, ‘The best thing you can raise is a horse whose reins you hold, and once you hear any shout [of battle] you fly towards it.’(1)

Therefore, our Lord when commanding us to prepare for the enemies of His Law and Religion, He said: ‘And prepare against them whatever you are able of power and of steeds of war by which you may terrify the enemy of Allah and your enemy ...’ (al-Anfal: 60). What this means is a general force and more specifically horses.

So, when the horses were displayed before Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him he said, ‘... I did love the good [these horses] instead of remembering my Lord’ until [the sun] had hidden in the veil [of night].’ (Sad: 32) This means that the love felt for horses was not out of boasting or pride, like those who breed horses for show, racing, and fame. My love for them only springs from the remembrance of my Lord and His Way. He has ordered the preparation of power and instruments of power by which His Way can be established on earth.

The subject of the verb tawarat (became concealed or disappeared) in the part of the verse saying, ‘... until [the sun] had hidden in the veil [of night] ...’ (Sad: 32) is mustatir (implicit or hidden pronoun, referring to the sun setting). So when the subject is not directly stated, it is implied or understood from a previous mention such as in one’s saying, ‘A man came to me and I honoured (him)’, that is, I honoured the man previously mentioned.

(1) It was narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayra that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Amongst the best lives one can lead is that of a man who holds the reins of his horse in Allah’s Cause. He flies on its back every time he hears a shout or commotion (of battle). He flies on his horse, seeking the places where he can expect martyrdom or death (in Allah’s Cause). Or that of a person who tends sheep at the top of one of these peaks or in the bottom of one of these valleys, establishing the prayer, paying the charity, and worshipping his Lord until the certainty (death) comes to him. He has no concern with the affairs of people except the doing of good.’ It was related by Muslim in his Sahih [1889] in the Book of Al-Imarah (Government) in the chapter of the merit of Jihad (Striving) and Ribat (guarding the Muslim frontiers in Allah’s Cause) [125]. Ibn Majah also narrated a similar version in his Sunnan [3977] in the Book of Al-Fitan (Trials) in the chapter of seclusion.

Allah’s saying, ‘... until [the sun] had hidden in the veil [of night] ...’ is a common sight of the sun until it sets. Accordingly, the meaning is ‘until the sun went down and disappeared from view'.

Some scholars(1) held the opinion that Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him missed the `isha’ (night prayer) because of his preoccupation with the display of horses, and when this happened, he said, ‘Bring them back to me ...’ (Sad: 33), meaning the horses, ‘... then he began to pass his hand over their legs and their necks.’ (Sad: 33) His stroking of their shanks and necks was out of courtesy and care for them. The legs and necks of the horses are mentioned specifically because they are its noblest parts. The neck carries the mane, while the legs are the instruments of lifting and running. Thus, the meaning is that he was pleased with them and so he caringly stroked their necks and legs.

However, some of the exegetes (2) had another opinion. They said that what was meant by the word mash in this verse is that he wanted to slaughter and kill them because they distracted him from his prayer. This opinion is closer to the isra’iliyyat (unreliable narratives originating from Jewish and Christian narrations) because it was not the horses that busied him in such a way. Rather, it was he who busied them and everyone else around him. So, why place the guilt on the horses?

What is astonishing about the isra’iliyyat is that they contain so many narratives that cast vile aspersions of the prophets of the children of Israel.

(1) This was the opinion of Al-Hasan Al-Basri, Al-Kalbi and Muqatil. Al-Qushayri said that at that time there were no noon (zhuhr) or afternoon (`asr) prayers. Rather this was a supererogatory prayer from which he was distracted. [This opinion was also mentioned by Al-Qurtubi in his exegesis (vol. 8, p. 5837).] Ibn Jarir and Ibn Mundhir narrated that `Ali Allah be pleased with him. said, ‘The prayer which Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him missed was the afternoon (‘asr) prayer.' [It was mentioned by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (vol. 7, p. 177).]

(2) Two opinions are held regarding this issue:

1. He started to stroke their manes and hamstrings. This opinion was attributed to Ibn `Abbas and was narrated by Ibn Jarir At-Tabari, Ibn Mundhir, and Ibn Abu Hatim.
2. He cut their throats and legs with a sword. This opinion was attributed to Ubay ibn Ka`b and was narrated by At-Tabarani in his book Al-Awsat and by Al-Isma`ili in his Mu`jam and Ibn Mardawayh through a good chain of narrators.

We often see them accusing their own prophets of things that totally do not befit such a station. The underlying reason behind these false accusations was their own indulgence in sins; those who transgress the bounds of right while following a religion try to find a shortcoming in the one who has brought him this religion to justify their own excesses. It was due to this that they fabricated derogatory and slanderous accusations against their Prophets.

وَلَقَدْ فَتَنَّا سُلَيْمَٰنَ وَأَلْقَيْنَا عَلَىٰ كُرْسِيِّهِۦ جَسَدًا ثُمَّ أَنَابَ ﴿٣٤﴾

We certainly tested Solomon, reducing him to a mere skeleton on his throne [34] (The Quran, Sad: 34)

The word Fitnah (trial or test from which derives the verb fatana) means to test. Fitnah is not unpleasant in itself; it is to fail in it and to be unable to go through it—this is the unpleasant element to tests. What is the problem if you face a test, and you pass it successfully? The origin of the word fitnah comes from the phrase 'fitnat adh-dhahab' which means the burning of the gold to purify it. Some gold is mixed with other substances; if we want pure gold, what should we do? We smelt the gold until it is free of all impurities. This is exactly the effect of tests and trials on people. They are put to the test to sort the good from the bad. Allah the Almighty thus tested Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him just as He tested his father Dawud (David) peace be upon him before him at the sanctuary.

Allah the Exalted then says: '... and placed on his throne (kursi) a body (jasad) ...' (Sad: 34). The word kursi refers to the throne that a king sits on, while the word jasad refers to the qalib (mould) of a living being. This exterior form is called a jasad when it becomes devoid of a soul.

Scholars hold numerous opinions regarding the interpretation of this verse. Some of them said that our master Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him had another son other than Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him. However, that other son was corrupt, like the case of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him who also had a bad son. This son planned and executed an overthrow against Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him. He usurped his father's throne and remained the king for a long time. When the True Lord Glorified is He willed to reinstate Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) to his throne, He rendered the body of this wicked son inert and lifeless upon the throne. This way after being a powerful king, who was listened to and obeyed by everyone, he became powerless, even over his own self and body. Soon after this, his people revolted against and killed him. Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him then reassumed his throne.

Some of the scholars said in explanation of this verse that our master Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him had many slave-girls and one night he said, ‘Tonight I will visit seventy slave women, each of whom will bear a son who will be a knight, riding his horse in Allah’s Cause.'(1) So the matter was all well intentioned and for Allah’s sake, except that he forgot to say, ‘If Allah so wills.’ The result was that only one of them gave birth to a lifeless body unable to move or act. This was because a believer is required to mention Allah’s Will first, when he decides to do something in the future, as Allah the Exalted instructs by saying: ‘And never say of anything, "I shall do such and such thing tomorrow", except [with the saying], "If Allah wills!"…’ (al-Mu’minun: 24)

For when a person says, ‘I will do such-and-such tomorrow', he is determining an action over which one has not the slightest bit of control. You cannot guarantee that you will still be alive to do it. You cannot guarantee that the means or circumstances will not change. Thus, when you state that the matter is dependent upon Allah’s Will, you are preserving your dignity and clearing yourself from telling a lie, for you may will something to happen, and Allah wills otherwise.

Perhaps that sovereignty lured Sulaiman (Solomon) and a trace of pride had entered him, for he ruled the worlds of mankind, jinns, animals, and birds. He was obeyed throughout the world around him. This is why he did not say, ‘If Allah so wills', and Allah requited him for this.

(1) Narrated by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (vol. 7, p. 182) that Ibn Sa`d said, ‘Al-Waqidi narrated to us from Ma`shar, from Al-Maqbari that Sulaiman (Solomon), the son of Dawud (David) peace be upon them said, ‘Tonight I will visit a hundred of my wives, each of whom will give birth to a knight who will struggle in Allah’s Cause', but he did not say, ‘if Allah wills.’ Had he made the matter conditional on Allah’s Will, it would have happened. He visited a hundred wives, but none of them became pregnant except for one who gave birth to a half-formed child.

Other scholars(1) said that Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him begot a child and that some jinn bore ill will towards his son. They feared that he would do to them as Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him did to them and so they desired to kill his son. To prevent this, Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him raised him above the clouds to nurse from the water therein. It is as though he peace be upon him wanted to flee Allah's Decree.

There are other scholars(2) who are under the opinion that the body was that of Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him. It is Allah's Will that He has given normal human beings control over their limbs. So, when they want to stand, they stand, and when they want to move, they move, without them knowing what is happening in their limbs, muscles, and joints to make them stand and move. It is as though Allah is illustrating this by means of a similitude found in the human's own self to better approximate the truth and help humans attain a deeper understanding of the issues that are dependent upon His Power in light of His saying: '... there is nothing like unto Him...' (ash-Shura: 11).

So, if you, O, created being of Allah, do as you want, and your limbs obey you and move merely by willing it, without commanding your body to do anything. Will you, then, regard such ability as too far or difficult for the Creator the Exalted Who says: 'Verily, His Command, when He wills a thing, is only that He says to it, "Be!" and it is.' (Ya Sin: 82) Indeed, the True Lord Glorified is He says to a thing, 'Be!', but you do not say, 'Be!' Allah has not burdened you with it. He has made your limbs obey you without any commands from you. Even were you to command them, they would not respond to you. In fact, they are responding to the Creator the Most High. Thus, whenever Allah the Exalted wants, He can divest you of this capacity; then, you would want to move your hand, but you would be unable to. This is to show you that this capacity is a gift from Him, not something intrinsic to yourself.

(1) Al-Qurtubi mentioned this opinion in his exegesis (vol. 8, p. 5843) and attributed it to Ash-Sha`bi. The upshot of it was that when a son was born to Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him the devils gathered and said, 'If a son of his lives, we will never be free from the affliction and subjugation we are in. Come, let us kill him or drive him insane.' On learning this, Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him ordered the wind to carry his child up to the clouds. He sought to nourish his son from the clouds out of fear of the harm which the devils might inflict upon him. Allah punished him for his fear of the devils; unawares, the body fell dead upon his throne.

(2) This opinion was mentioned by Al-Qurtubi in his exegesis (vol. 8, p. 5844) without attributing it to anyone. It was also opined that the body was that of Sulaiman (Solomon) himself. He had fallen gravely ill until he became, merely, a body. A sick and emaciated person can be described by saying, 'He looks like a discarded body.'

The True Lord, Blessed is He, endowed our master Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him with the ability to control his limbs (just like any normal human being). Then, He the Most High increased and extended his capacity to the control of others of his own kind and of different species as well. Allah the Almighty granted him control over the whole world; it would be influenced by him and respond to his authority. So, it was a matter of superiority in dominion and control over Allah’s forces.

It seems that some of that feeling found its way to Sulaiman’s (Solomon's) soul, and the True Lord Glorified is He wanted to alert him to the fact that such power was not intrinsic to him; rather, it was a gift from Him, which He could take away whenever He chose. Then he would not be able to control his own body or control others. Thus, Allah cast him like a corpse on his throne, unable to do anything or issue any command.

Since this blessing was a gift conferred by Allah, Who gave you a kingdom the like of which shall never be granted to anyone after you, then you must maintain a firm grip on His Rope, always turning to the One Who gave you this power.

In this respect, it was related that Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him once rode upon a carpet, and the wind carried him wherever he wished. Suddenly, however, the carpet inclined one way, and it nearly made him fall off. So he ordered it to level out for him, at which the carpet said to him, ‘We were commanded to obey you as you obey Allah.’

So Allah tested him because He granted him a kingdom that would not belong to any other being after him. He did not want him to transgress or become proud. Therefore, indeed, Allah speaks the truth when He says: ‘No! [But] indeed, man transgresses because he sees himself self-sufficient.’ (al-‘Alaq: 6-7)

After all, Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him was a human. The True Lord the Exalted wanted to show us that although a human has control over his own body and can control those around him, and even control species other than his own, yet none of this power is inherent in him, but it is a gift to him. The proof of this was that Allah the Almighty deprived him of his dominion in a single moment and cast him like a corpse upon his throne, unable to command or forbid, with no authority over anything.

When Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him understood the situation, he turned and repented, '... then he returned.' (Sad: 34) That is, he returned to the state he was in before going through this trial. Or else it could mean that he returned to the body, containing his soul or that he turned to Allah the Almighty with repentance and acknowledgment of the cause of this test. Therefore, '...then he returned...' has two possible meanings in this context: he returned and repented, in recognition of the cause, or he returned and repented to the One Who causes all things (Allah).

The word jasad (corpse) is used to refer to the external bulk and structure, without a soul in it. Concerning it, Allah the Exalted says: 'So, when I have fashioned him completely ...' (al-Hijr: 29) this is referring to the body. Allah the Most High also says in the story of As-Samiri (the Samaritan): 'So he brought forth for them [out of the fire] a calf, a [mere] body, which had a mooing sound...' (Ta Ha: 88). This means the external shape and appearance of a calf, but without a soul.

If someone were to ask if such things could happen to messengers, could they make mistakes and be corrected, then the answer is 'Yes.' It is only blameworthy, however, when one is corrected by someone at his own level. It is not blameworthy to be corrected by someone at a higher level. So, what is the problem if the One correcting Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him was his Lord the Glorious and Exalted Himself—and not just anyone? Surely, it was an honour for Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him to be corrected by Allah the Almighty. For this reason, when the True Lord Glorified is He corrected the judgment of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him He said: 'O Prophet, why do you prohibit [yourself from] what Allah has made lawful for you, seeking the approval of your wives? ...' (at-Tahrim: 1) Allah Glorified is He also said: 'He frowned and turned away because there came to him the blind man.' ('Abasa: 1-2) Did Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him feel too proud to be corrected by his Lord? No, never did he feel this way, and the clear proof of this fact is that he was the one who conveyed this correction to us and informed us of it. A person would not tell people something about himself unless there is honour in it for himself.

قَالَ رَبِّ ٱغۡفِرۡ لِي وَهَبۡ لِي مُلۡكٗا لَّا يَنۢبَغِي لِأَحَدٖ مِّنۢ بَعۡدِيٓۖ إِنَّكَ أَنتَ ٱلۡوَهَّابُ ٣٥

He turned to Us and prayed: 'Lord forgive me! Grant me such power as no one after me will have – You are the Most Generous Provider' [35] (The Quran, Sad: 35)

This noble verse gives us a glimpse into the story of our master Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him. Each glimpse into his life provides a distinct lesson, an admonition and an honourable stance taken by our master Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him in the course of his mission. The first glimpse into his story is of his father Dawud (David) peace be upon him when he passed judgment in the case of the crop of a field (into which some sheep strayed by night and grazed). The field with its crop belonged to a certain man, but along came the livestock of another man and ate the former's crop. The True Lord the Most High related the story of the judgment that Dawud (David) peace be upon him had passed and what the final judgment was after his son Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him corrected it on the basis of his viewpoint. Then Allah affirmed the soundness of the two judges, saying: 'And [remember] Dawud (David) and Sulaiman (Solomon) [how it was] when both of them gave judgment concerning the field into which some people's sheep had strayed by night and pastured therein, and [how] We bore witness to their judgment, for [though] We made Sulaiman (Solomon) understand the case [more profoundly], yet We vouchsafed unto both of them sound judgment and knowledge [of right and wrong] ...' (al-Anbiya': 78-79). The words, '...had strayed by night and pastured therein ...' (al-Anbiya': 78) mean that the sheep spread out in the field and ate the harvest.

When the case was presented to Dawud (David) peace be upon him he judged that the owner of the crop should take possession of the herd. However, on hearing this judgment, Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him rejected it and said, 'Rather, give the field to the owner of the sheep for him to cultivate until it is restored to the way it has been before the sheep grazed and give the sheep to the owner of the field for him to benefit from them.' Once the field was good again, it should be given back to its owner, and the sheep should be given back to their owner. It is as though Allah the Most High inspired Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him to give this sound judgment to amend that of his father, Dawud (David). See how the sanctity of the word of heaven as it applies itself to the word of the inhabitants of the earth? After this, Allah the Glorious and Exalted affirmed the soundness of both judges, saying: '... yet We vouchsafed unto both of them sound judgment and knowledge [of right and wrong] ...' (al-Anbiya': 79).

So, for a definitive authority passing judgment to correct an authority that previously passed judgment is not indicative of a fault in the original. It is just that this one understood some aspects of the case from a certain perspective and judged accordingly, while the other understood the issue from another perceptive and judged in accordance with it. Therefore, we find within the courts a preliminary verdict and then an appeal. Even after these procedures, a judgment can be repealed. Does the appealed ruling disgrace the preliminary verdict or the repeal disgrace the appeal? No, because the higher ruling takes into account certain factors that have been missed by the lower ruling, and thus, there is no problem.

When we examine this story, we find that scholars do not propound for us the grounds upon which Dawud (David) peace be upon him based his ruling, nor do they inform us of the grounds of the judgment that Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him pronounced. Having examined this, we say that during the past agriculture did not take place on land that was owned and monopolised by certain people; rather, the earth was a public property. Wherever a person sowed his seeds and the sky watered them until they bore fruit, he could harvest it without having to own the land. In other words, whoever came first would cultivate the land.

Ownership was restricted only to the crop, not to the land. Upon this principle the judgment of our master Dawud (David) peace be upon him was formed. So long as the land was not the possession of the farmer the issue revolved around the crop and the herd. As for our master Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him he saw that the crop represented, as we say, a claim staked on the land, and laying claim to a land makes ownership permissible. So, he affirmed that the owner owned the land and judged that the landowner should take the sheep and benefit from them, while the owner of the sheep should take the land and cultivate it until it returned to its former good state. Then each one should take back his own property. Each of them had his viewpoint and based his judgment upon it. Allah says regarding them both: '... yet We vouchsafed unto both of them sound judgment and knowledge [of right and wrong] ...' (al-Anbiya': 79).

The other glimpse we get of the life of our master Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him is the trial that befell him. We said that the origin of the word fitnah comes from the melting and burning of a metal to separate the gangue materials and impurities from it so that it becomes purer and harder. The word fitnah has been generally applied to any kind of testing that differentiated the good from the bad amongst humanity. So, in this verse it refers to an affliction.

By going deeper into the meaning of fitnah (testing*)*, we will find it widespread throughout Allah's entire creation on earth. Each created being is at once a test for others and tested himself. In plainer words, the poor people are a trial for the rich people, and the rich people are a trial for the poor. A rich person is tested through the poor people; will he selfishly withhold Allah's Blessings from them or will he give away from what he possesses? Will he treat the poor with contempt because of their poverty or will he respect Allah's Decree regarding them? Similarly, a poor person is tested by means of the rich people. Will he envy them because of their riches and object to Allah's Decree that he should be poor, or will he be patient and wish abundance for others. The same applies to the strong and the weak, and the healthy and the sick, the ignorant and the learned, and so on. Thus, each of us is a test to others and is himself tested. What is important, however, is who will be successful in this test.

This is a reality that the True Lord, Blessed is He, has clarified in His saying: '... And We have made some of you [people] as trial for others. Will you have patience? ...' (al-Furqan: 20) The scholars say that the word ba`d (some*)* does not specify a certain individual; rather, it refers to equal parts of a whole that are left indistinct, such as in Allah's saying: '... and We have raised some of them above others in degrees [of rank] that they may make use of one another for service ...' (az-Zukhruf: 32).

So who has been raised and who has been outranked? Scholars say that each of us is raised in something and outranked in something else. Consequently, all people are equal. You have your field in which you are proficient and excel others, and so your rank is above them in this area. You also have other domains at which you are not good and know nothing about. So others are ranked above you in them since they surpass you in those areas at which you are not good.

This results from the distribution of gifts and blessings amongst creation, for they are all Allah's created beings. None of them is Allah's son or is descended from or has some kind of relationship with Him. The True Lord, Blessed is He, has scattered His Bounties amongst all His slaves, giving them gifts in equal measure. Had Allah caused every human to combine in his person all the virtues and good qualities, people would not need one another. Rather, Allah wants His created beings to join hands and help one another in their daily lives.

The strong need the weak, and the weak need the strong. The learned need the ignorant, and the ignorant need the learned. This is how people are bound together by need, and not superiority.

We previously shed light on this issue through the example of a Pasha or a VIP who returns from his work and finds the plumbing of his house to be blocked and releases an awful stench. He will rush to find a plumber to clear the blockages. He may well get in his car and go directly to the plumber's place of work and implore him to come back with him. In this situation, the plumber is raised above the Pasha.

I remember one time in Mayt Ghamr in Bursa, a cafe named Babah. The workers there were staging a revolt. They said, 'It is not right for the workers to serve others! It is not right that they should clean peoples' shoes!' When they were asked why they said this, they replied, 'Because it is degrading and humiliating.'

We said to them, 'In that case, we will do it for ourselves.' Thus, indeed, we did to show them. We went on strike, and we each bought our very own shoe polish and polished our shoes. After a while, these people came to the café and complained of unemployment and poverty, pleading with the people to return to the previous set-up. We subsequently discussed this with them, and one of us said to one of them, ‘Tell me, by Allah, when you ask me a question and I answer you, do I make you pay a fee for the answer?' ‘No,’ he answered. ‘If you knew,’ he replied, ‘how much this answer cost me of my life, effort and diligence, along with the trouble my family went through in my upbringing, you would realise that in those days I was subservient to you as you are now subservient to me. Yet, you have only considered us in our times of rest, while you looked at yourselves in your times of toil. The distribution is equal. Each is subservient to the other. It is not a matter of humiliation but mutual integration in daily life.’

This is why the True Lord says: ‘will you have patience’? (al-Furqan: 20) This means will we have patience with our mutual trials of each other? Even messengers peace and blessings be upon them were tested by means of disbelievers who would persecute and harm them, and disbelievers were tested by means of messengers peace be upon them.

Thus, it is from Allah’s blessings that He distributed His gifts and bounties throughout all creation, and He tells us ‘But those who were favoured would not hand over their provision to those whom their right hands possess so they would be equal to them therein’ (an-Nahl: 71).

Now we return to Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him and say, ‘Could it be that both prophethood and kingship appealed to Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him and he found traces of their love in his heart, so Allah chose to correct his innermost thoughts for him?’ Allah the Almighty certainly wants him for greater duties than he was currently involved. This is why he was tested with this, finding himself on his throne like a mere skeleton.

This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was always well mannered with his Lord and creation. He said, 'O, Allah, I seek Your Forgiveness from every deed by which I sought Your countenance, but it is mixed up with something done not for you.'(1)

(1) This was mentioned by Ibn Rajab Al-Hanbali in his book Jawami’ Al-’Ulum wa Al-Hukm on page 27 from the prayer of Mutraf ibn ‘Abdullah. He used to say, ‘O, Allah, I seek Your forgiveness for those things which I have repented to You of but then returned to them. I seek Your forgiveness for those things which I placed upon myself for You but then did not fulfil. I seek Your forgiveness for the things which I claimed were done for the sake of Your Countenance but which became mixed up in my heart with that which You know.’

This means that things can befall the prophets, and they can be afflicted. Yet, who is this affliction from? It is from Allah, the One Who sent them. The test is something to correct the course of the one tested; it is not out of dislike for him, Allah forbid! So, this is why Allah the Exalted afflicted Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him. He was preparing him for something greater than being a king of the mundane; his Lord wanted to prepare him for something of the unseen realms (Al-malakut).

When Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him returned and repented to his Lord, he said, '... My Lord, forgive me, and bestow upon me a kingdom such as shall not belong to any other after me. Verily, You are the Bestower.' (Sad: 35) This means that he repented to his Lord from the illusions that he had. It is as though he said, 'O, Lord, you tested me with kingship and prophethood. This happened to no one before me, and I became deluded by it, so grant me a dominion greater than this that will be appropriate to none after me, and this time I will be faithful and not deceived. O, Lord, give me another chance. Try me.' After Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him made this prayer, his Lord answered him and gave him what he sought.

On account of this, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him respected the prayer of his brother Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him. It has been narrated in a Hadith that a devil manifested itself to Prophet Muhammad while he was praying so as to distract him from his prayer. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him grabbed it and was going to tie it to the pillar in the mosque such that the children of Medina might amuse themselves at its expense, but then he remembered the prayer of his brother Sulaiman (Solomon), '... My Lord, forgive me, and bestow upon me a kingdom such as shall not belong to any other after me....' (Sad: 35). Thus, he did not do it out of respect for Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him(1).

(1) This Hadith was narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (541), in Bab Al-Masajid (chapter 8 Hadith 39), on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him who said that Prophet Muhammad said, 'Indeed an 'ifrit from the jinn started to assault me yesterday to distract me from my prayer. Allah gave me power over him, so I repelled him fiercely. I was going to bind him to the side of one of the pillars of the mosque such that you would all wake up and see him, but then I remembered the words of my brother Sulaiman (Solomon), "O, my Sustainer! Forgive me my sins, and bestow upon me the gift of a kingdom which may not suit anyone after me." So, Allah drove him away in disgrace.'

The word (Al-wahhab) ‘the Bestower’ (Sad: 35) is a hyperbole (sighat al-mubalagha), and it indicates a great deal of giving. We said previously that Al-hiba is a grant that has no recompense. Hence, no one can achieve kingship by means of his own skill or effort but only as a gift from Allah the Exalted. It is Allah Who grants dominion, and He did so even to the disbeliever who argued with Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him about his Lord. Allah Glorified is He: ‘Have you not considered the one who argued with Ibrahim (Abraham) about his Lord [merely] because Allah had given him kingship?’ (al-Baqara: 258) He also says: ‘Say, "O, Allah, Owner of Sovereignty, You give sovereignty to whom You will and You take sovereignty away from whom You will"’ (Al-‘Imran: 26).

وَءَاخَرِينَ مُقَرَّنِينَ فِي ٱلۡأَصۡفَادِ (٣٨) هَٰذَا عَطَآؤُنَا فَٱمۡنُنۡ أَوۡ أَمۡسِكۡ بِغَيۡرِ حِسَابٖ (٣٩)

So, We gave him power over the wind, which at his request ran gently wherever he willed [36] and the jinns, every kind of builder and diver [37] and others chained in fetters [38] This is Our gift, so give or withhold as you wish without account [39] (The Quran, Sad: 36-39)

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘So, We gave him power over the wind...’ (Sad: 36); the subjugation of the wind to Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him was the first power that was added to his previous dominion. The word (rukha'a) ‘gently’ (Sad: 36) means softly and delicately, like a horse that carries its rider smoothly without jerking him or causing him to fall. Some of the scholars, however, said that the word ‘gently’ in this verse contradicts with the concept of ‘... the stormy wind ...’ (al-Anbiya’: 81). To this we say that it was indeed stormy, but that was in another situation. The word rih (wind) has several different uses in the story. If the wind bore him in leisure, then it was soft and gentle, and if it was carrying things for him, then it was vigorous. Thus, it is used to describe different things.

We have said previously that if the word rih comes like this in the singular, then it is indicative of punishment as in the verses that describe the punishment of the tribe of 'Ad, where Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And in 'Ad [was a sign], when We sent against them the barren wind, it left nothing of what it came upon but that it made it like disintegrated ruins' (adh-Dhariyat: 41-42). If it comes in the plural, however, it depicts bearing goodness, like when Allah Glorified is He says: 'And We have sent the fertilising winds and sent down water from the sky and given you drink from it' (al-Hijr: 22).

It is well known that air pressure is what keeps things in equilibrium. So, if we vacuumed all the air from one side of a building, for example, it would collapse in the same direction because air pressure is what supports it and keeps it in equilibrium. If Allah the Almighty decides to destroy something by means of the wind, then He causes it to blow from one direction. It is as though the True Lord Glorified is He is saying that the wind should only bring adversity and punishment, but He subjugated it to Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him such that in his hands it brought only good: 'So, We gave him power over the wind, which at his request ran gently wherever he willed…' (Sad: 36).

Allah's saying, '... wherever he willed' means that wherever he wanted it to go it went. This means that Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him would address the wind, which speaks no language. Nevertheless, Allah the Exalted made it understand. It is as though he was the commander, and the wind was his subject. The True Lord gave each species its own language through which it could communicate. If Allah causes a human to understand one of these languages, he would indeed understand it and could address any species with it. Another example of this is when Sulaiman said, 'O, people, we have been taught the language of birds' (an-Naml: 16).

We were once told about the crocodiles of the Upper Nile and of the symbiosis between them and the birds that feed on the remnants left between their teeth. The crocodile, after eating its food, comes ashore and opens its mouth. The birds then come and pick the remnants from between the crocodile's teeth to clean them. If the birds sense the presence of hunters, they would make a special noise that crocodiles recognise. Upon hearing it, a crocodile would immediately take to the water to save itself from the hunters. This is how crocodiles support the survival of birds, and birds support the survival of crocodiles. So, ponder how such ample exchange of benefit is present in the world of birds and animals.

Nobody can reach the level of understanding animals or the birds except someone to whom Allah has given this ability. Allah the Most High gave this special gift to Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him and thus he understood the birds and the ants. Allah tells us that when Sulaiman (Solomon) and his soldiers came to the Valley of the Ants, one ant said, 'Ants! Go into your homes, in case Sulaiman (Solomon) and his hosts unwittingly crush you.' Sulaiman (Solomon) smiled broadly at its words and said, 'Lord, inspire me to be thankful for the blessings You have granted me and my parents, and to do good deeds that please You; admit me by Your grace into the ranks of Your righteous servants.' (an-Naml: 18-19) So, Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him understood them and perceived that Allah the Exalted had bestowed this blessing upon him and that this called for gratitude.

Similarly, he understood the hoopoe, spoke to it and had a conversation with it. The story of Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him and the hoopoe shows us that anyone who takes responsibility for a matter must follow it up closely to be able to tell the attentive from the inattentive.

Had Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him not been checking for the hoopoe, he would not have realised that it was not present. He wondered where the hoopoe was. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘and he took attendance of the birds and said, "Why do I not see the hoopoe, or is he amongst the absent?’ (an-Naml: 20) This indicates that he thought the hoopoe was maybe present, but he could not see it. This is why he ‘wondered’ if the hoopoe was absent because he had looked but did not find it. Then, the hoopoe came, and Allah narrates his story: ‘But the hoopoe stayed not long and said, "I have encompassed [in knowledge] that which you have not encompassed, and I have come to you from Sheba with certain news. Indeed, I found [there] a woman ruling them, and she has been given of all things, and she has a great throne."’ (an-Naml: 22-23)

The thing that bothered it was that the Queen and her people were worshipping the sun instead of Allah the Most High. The hoopoe said, ‘…and Satan has made their deeds pleasing to them and averted them from [His] Way, so they are not guided.’ (an-Naml: 24)

This glimpse of the story teaches us that when you assign someone to some duty, you must not turn away from this person when he consults with him; rather, you should hear his side, respect his opinion, and not bear down on him. We also learn that the hoopoe was aware of the cause of monotheism and faith.

The hoopoe teaches us that every person must preserve his means of subsistence and keep them always in mind if he wants to live a noble life, that is, because one's means of subsistence are a priority, before setting goals and planning. We understand this from the hoopoe's questions when he wondered '[And] so they do not prostrate to Allah Who brings forth what is hidden within the heavens and the earth and knows what you conceal and what you declare.' (an-Naml: 25) However, why does he specify Al-khab' – (what is hidden or concealed), which means things that are hidden under the earth? Scholars say it is because the majority of the hoopoe's food comes from under the ground. This is why Allah gave it a long beak, so it can peck the earth and extract its food.

Allah Glorified is He then says, 'and the jinns, every kind of builder and diver' (Sad: 37) which means we also subjected jinns to him. Of these are the 'builders' who populate the land and work and strive thereon, and of them are the 'divers' who work in the sea and extract its treasures. Allah Glorified is He says, '…and others ...' (Sad: 38), which refers to the jinns '... chained in fetters.' (Sad: 38) This means that they were tied and shackled with chains. The word asfad (fetters) is the plural of safd, and it means a chain. So, these ones in chains are not free like the builders and the divers. However, why has Allah the Exalted kept these ones chained up and left others free? Scholars say it is because there are obedient and righteous jinns, and there are disobedient ones who refuse Allah's Way. The ones who were bound in chains could also be those who rebelled against Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him. Thus, it seems that the righteous ones served him by virtue of their faith, and the wicked ones served him by virtue of their fetters and chains; the former was out of desire, and the latter was out of fear.

Then Allah says, '(And We told him,) "This is Our gift ..."' (Sad: 39), and this gift fits the request Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him made when he asked Allah for a dominion that would not be fitting to any other than him. He said, '...Verily, You are the Bestower!' (Sad: 35), and Allah Glorified is He answered him by saying, '... This is Our gift ...' (Sad: 39); given that We have granted you this, We will have you do with it as you will, for We trust you:

‘... so give or withhold as you wish without account!’ (Sad: 39) This means that you are free to give or withhold.

The True Lord Glorified is He only granted Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him free reign because he trusted him to be just and righteous since he did promise Allah to be just and righteous when he asked Him for this gift. It is related that he used only to eat the grits and bran of the grains and leave the best part for the public and slaves. Hence, it turned out he did not seek this broad dominion and blessing so that he might indulge or boast thereof. He did so only so that he could put it into the service of Allah's Cause and because he was destined to face the greatest power of that time. It is sufficient that Allah the Exalted described this power as having a magnificent throne.

In this confrontation the value of dominion and power becomes manifest. When Bilqis tried to tempt him with wealth, he rebuked her for offering him wealth and said, ‘Do you provide me with wealth? But what Allah has given me is better than what He has given you. Rather, it is you who rejoice in your gift.’ (an-Naml: 36)

This is where the wisdom manifests; when Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him sought a dominion that would not be fitting to anyone who would come after him, he sought it so that no one may be more distinguished than him and so that no one would try to tempt, bribe or otherwise make him incline to wealth as Bilqis tried with her vast kingdom in the highlands of Yemen during those times.

What shows the shrewdness of Bilqis in this situation is that she consulted with the nobles and wisest of her people who were her counsellors. She said, ‘O, eminent ones, indeed, to me has been delivered a noble letter. Indeed, it is from Sulaiman (Solomon), and indeed, it reads: "In the name of Allah, the Entirely Merciful, the Especially Merciful."’ (an-Naml: 29-30)

We may first ask, ‘How did she know it was a "gracious letter"?' Scholars say that she referred to it as such because she found it on her pillow without it being brought by a messenger or anyone, nor did anyone seek permission to see her and was refused by the guards. This is how she knew it came from a higher authority. The affair of the letter’s owner must necessarily be elevated above hers since the letter reached her by such means. This is why she consulted her people. She said, ‘O, eminent ones, advise me in my affair. I would not decide a matter except when you are present with me [to advise].' (an-Naml: 32) The story ends up with her saying that she has wronged herself, and so she decided to devote herself, with Sulaiman (Solomon), to Allah, the Lord of the Worlds. Allah says: 'and I [Bilqis] submit with Sulaiman (Solomon) to Allah, Lord of the worlds.' (an-Naml: 44)

So, Allah's saying, '...This is Our gift, so give or withhold as you wish without account.' (Sad: 39), shows that His gift to prophets is not for boasting or pride, but a gift to serve Allah's Cause. This is why we see that those who have been granted glimpses of the Unseen do not use their knowledge for personal gain. Perhaps, sometimes miracles appear at their hands or on their tongues, and they do not realise it. They break the laws of nature without even realising it. This is because Allah the Exalted gifted them some of his secrets, and they do not seek to use them for raising themselves above others but to increase and deepen their servitude to Allah so that they could be role models for all beings, thus guiding them to the path of the truth.

In this respect, it is related(1) that 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him prayed for rain once when it had ceased to fall and the ground had dried up. He made the weak children, elders, women and even the animals go out as well. It is as though he were saying, 'O, Lord, if You have withheld the rain from us because of our sins then give us water for the sake of these.' Despite this, it did not rain, and 'Umar Allah be pleased with him decided to leave. While he was heading home, he came across a slave standing amongst some boulders raising his hands and gazing toward the heavens. 'Umar said afterwards, 'By Allah, he had not put his hands down before the rain began pouring like water from a water skin.' 'Umar Allah be pleased with him was surprised at this; how was it that his prayers were not answered and yet this slave's were! He watched the slave closely until he studied his face, and then he went to the slave trader and said to him, 'Show me your slaves.' The slave trader thought that he wanted to buy one and thus showed him the best he had, those with sound postures and fit muscles, but 'Umar Allah be pleased with him did not give any of these a second glance. The man said to him, 'By Allah, I only have this other slave who is tiresome (kall) to his master, whatever he is turned to, he brings no good.’

(1) The story of 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab with the slave during the prayer to Allah to make the rain fall

When the said slave came, 'Umar Allah be pleased with him recognised him and said to him, ‘Is it you?’ The slave looked at him, raised his eyes to the sky and said, ‘O, Allah, even as you have exposed me amongst your created beings, take me without testing me.’ Thus, he passed away then and there. This is the state of one upon whom sainthood and miracles manifest. He is not happy with them and he does not want to be made known to the people. He does not desire miracles but is content with the affection that Allah shows to him by means of them.

وَإِنَّ لَهُۥ عِندَنَا لَزُلْفَىٰ وَحُسْنَ مَـَٔابٍ ﴿٤٠﴾

His reward will be nearness to Us, and a good place to return to [40] (The Quran, Sad: 40)

The word zulfa means nearness or a state of proximity. That Allah gave him a dominion unfitting for any who would come after him, to do with it as he saw fit, is proof of this closeness.

He could give to whomever He willed and hold back from whomever He willed. Allah Glorified is He gave him this gift because He knew that Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him would not use it in tyranny or oppression; rather, he would use it in the way that Allah wanted. He was entrusted with Allah’s gift.

The phrase, ‘and a good place to return to’ (Sad: 40) refers to an excellent welcome with Allah the Exalted on the Day of Judgment.

The sequence of the Quran then takes us to the story of another prophet, Prophet Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him:

وَٱذْكُرْ عَبْدَنَآ أَيُّوبَ إِذْ نَادَىٰ رَبَّهُۥٓ أَنِّى مَسَّنِىَ ٱلشَّيْطَـٰنُ بِنُصْبٍ وَعَذَابٍ ﴿٤١﴾

Bring to mind Our servant Job who cried to his Lord, ‘Satan has afflicted me with weariness and suffering’ [41] (The Quran, Sad: 41)

Allah says, ‘Bring to mind’ (Sad: 41), which means remember with praise, ‘Our servant Ayyub (Job)’ (Sad: 41). That Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him is described in this verse as being a slave is an honour for him, for it is an indication of the affection that the Lord has for His slaves. We said previously that slavery is a hateful word to mankind because the slavery of people is repressive and abusive since the master takes the best fruits of his slave's labour. As for slavery to Allah, it is praiseworthy and beloved because in it the slave gets the best of his Master.

For this reason, Allah the Exalted when He bestowed His gift upon Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him during the Night Journey, He attributed it to his servitude to Him and said that He transported 'His servant' by night. (al-Isra': 1) When the hospitality of the earth got so miserly, particularly after the Ta'if incident, His Lord wanted to show him the hospitality of the heavens! The characteristic that raised Muhammad to this level was the sincerity of his servitude to his Lord.

Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him says, '...Satan has afflicted me with weariness and suffering.' (Sad: 41) The word Al-mass literally means feather-like, gentle contact. It refers to a lighter degree of contact than that meant by the Arabic word Al-lams (touch). Scholars say that he said this because he had fallen very ill with a disease that affected his skin. It is as though Shaytan (Satan) was hovering around him insinuating evil thoughts, saying to him, 'How could Allah have done this to you when you are a messenger? How could He leave you like this and not cure you?'

This is how body suffering, pain and Shaytan's insinuations were combined against Prophet Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him. This is why He said, '…weariness and suffering' (Sad: 41). The word nusb with a damma on the letter nun is just like the words nasab with a fatha and nassab, and they all mean weariness. Like the words bukhl and bakhal, both having the same meaning: stinginess.

Scholars say that 'Shaytan's touch' in reality is an action of Allah's. It is Allah Who 'does' since Shaytan and his insinuations are a cause, while Allah is the Creator of causes (the One Who originates causes). 'Shaytan's touch' (mass Ash-Shaytan) refers to his insinuations which occupied Prophet Ayyub's mind. It is as though the True Lord Glorified is He wanted Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him to wake up to the fact that it was not correct for these insinuations to be in his mind.

When sickness and the insinuations of the Shaytan combined afflicted Prophet Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him he weakened and turned to his Lord. He prayed to Him to cut off Shaytan's whispers since warding them off needs a strong power, and his strength was dwindled by his sickness. This is why he prayed to Allah, so that he would not be further weakened by the insinuations of Shaytan. When he prayed to Allah, He the Most High answered him:

ٱرۡكُضۡ بِرِجۡلِكَۖ هَٰذَا مُغۡتَسَلُۢ بَارِدٞ وَشَرَابٞ ﴿٤٢﴾

Stamp your foot! Here is cool water for you to wash in and drink [42] (The Quran, Sad: 42)

It is as though the True Lord Glorified is He is saying to him, 'I am not afflicting you out of dislike for you or to make things difficult for you. I only wish to hear from you that you hate the one who is occupying your mind with something that distances you from Me.' 'Stamp your foot!...' (Sad: 42) means that the cure is very easy for Allah. As if Allah the Almighty is saying, 'The cure is right at your very feet.' The word rakd literally means to thrust with speed and force. One says 'rakadat Al-faras' which means, 'I spurred the horse with my feet so it would go faster.' The sequence of events then moves from stamping the feet directly to the result: '... Here is cool water for you to wash in and drink!' (Sad: 42) Allah did not say, 'so he stamped the ground, and the water came out… etc., He summed it up and sufficed with the command urkud (stamp).

The disease which afflicted Prophet Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him appears to have been a skin infection of some kind that caused abscesses to erupt on his skin. Nowadays, we see dermatologists sometimes curing skin diseases with topical ointments that treat the symptoms without curing the real cause of the disease.

It was part of Allah's Mercy to Prophet Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him that He made his ultimate cure both internal and external through a single stamp that released the water wherein he could wash himself with the cool water to treat the external symptoms and drink it to cure the internal causes of the disease.

The True Lord Glorified is He then goes on to speak of some of His blessings upon Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him His Prophet:

وَوَهَبۡنَا لَهُۥٓ أَهۡلَهُۥ وَمِثۡلَهُم مَّعَهُمۡ رَحۡمَةٗ مِّنَّا وَذِكۡرَىٰ لِأُوْلِي ٱلۡأَلۡبَٰبِ ﴿٤٣﴾

And We restored his family to him, with many more like them: a sign of Our mercy and a lesson to all who understand [43] (The Quran, Sad: 43)

From Allah's saying, 'We restored his family to him ...' (Sad: 43), it appears that some of his family had distanced themselves from him when the illness afflicted him. When Allah cured him, they came back to him. '... with many more like them...' (Sad: 43) means that Allah gave him the likes of his family in offspring and followers. '... a sign of Our mercy and a lesson to all who understand.' (Sad: 43); the word dhikra (sign) refers to a thought that comes to one and turns him towards the object of the reminder, particularly when one is in the process of moving away from that object.

The point of the reminder in this verse is that when he was ill, relief came to him from Allah the Most High. His body returned to a state of soundness after it had healed from the disease and its cause. Then his family returned to him and more like them out of concern for his feelings. This is what is meant by Allah's saying: '... a sign of Our mercy ...' (Sad: 43). These numerous gifts came as the fruit of his patience and his contentment with Allah's Decree.

So, the reminder that we take from this story is that when difficulties afflict someone, he should turn to Allah and seek refuge with Him from his distress; indeed, who would respond to the distressed or who would remove the illness but Allah? (an-Naml: 62)

Allah Glorified is He loves to see His slaves seek refuge with Him and that is why He afflicts them. It has been narrated that the angels say, 'O, Lord, Your slave has cried out in prayer to You, and You have not answered him.' So, Allah the Exalted replies to them, 'Amongst My slaves are those whose prayers I love. I afflict them so I can hear their voices.'

وَخُذْ بِيَدِكَ ضِغْثًا فَٱضْرِب بِّهِۦ وَلَا تَحْنَثْ ۗ إِنَّا وَجَدْنَٰهُ صَابِرًا ۚ نِّعْمَ ٱلْعَبْدُ ۖ إِنَّهُۥٓ أَوَّابٌ ﴿٤٤﴾

‘Take a small bunch of grass in your hand, and strike [her] with that so as not to break your oath.’ We found him patient in adversity; an excellent servant! He, too, always turned to Allah [44] (The Quran, Sad: 44)

The word dighth refers to a bunch of grass or of date stalks. The phrase, ‘... so as not to break your oath ...’ (Sad: 44) shows us that a vow was made that Allah did not want Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him to break. This verse brings us to a story that is narrated in the Sunnah. It was(1) said(2) that the Shaytan went to one of Prophet Ayyub’s (Job's) wives and said to her, ‘Ask Ayyub to seek refuge in me, and I will heal him immediately on condition that he says, "Verily, the one who healed me was Shaytan!"' Since she was keen to see him get better, she said to him, ‘By Allah, such-and-such thought came to me.’

Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him said to her, ‘This is Shaytan. You listened to him and now you want me to obey him! By Allah, beside Whom there is no other deity, I will whip you 100 times.’ This was the oath that Allah Glorified is He did not want Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him to break, so He said to him, ‘Take a small bunch of grass in your hand, and strike (her) with that so as not to break your oath ...’ (Sad: 44).

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did something similar to this when a man with a big belly (ahban) came to him. The word ahban comes from the root habana, and it means ‘with a big belly’ or with oedema in his stomach. He had committed fornication with a sick and skinny woman, and when he admitted his crime, Prophet Muhammad was afraid that he would die if he performed the prescribed punishment upon him so he ordered them to whip him once with a bunch of hundred date stalks or grass.(1)

(1) It was related by Ahmad ibn Hanbal in his book Az-Zuhdas well as ‘Abd ibn Hamid and Ibn Abu Hatim, on the authority of Ibn ‘Abbas who said, ‘Once Satan (Iblis) sat in the street with a chest and began dispensing medicines to people. Ayyub’s (Job's) wife said to him, "O, slave of Allah, there is someone here who is afflicted with such-and-such. Can you give him some medicine?" "Yes," he replied, "on the condition that if I cure him he says to me, ‘You cured me.’ I do not want any reward from him other than this." She went to Ayyub (Job) and told him of this, to which he said, "Woe to you! That was Iblis. By Allah, it is upon me to lash you a hundred times if Allah cures me." When Allah cured Ayyub (Job), He commanded him to take a bunch of stalks, so He took a raceme with one hundred stalks on it and struck her once with it.’

(2) The story of Ayyub (Job) peace be upon him with Shaytan.

Allah’s saying, ‘...and strike [her] with that...’ (Sad: 44) means ‘since you have promised to whip her then do it this way: "... so as not to break your oath. We found him patient in adversity..."’ (Sad: 44). Easing his circumstances was a reward for his patience and his turning to his Lord. Amongst that, Allah the Almighty also included any pain that he had to bring down on others since he vowed to whip his wife. So, Allah ordered him to whip her so as not to break his vow, but He reduced the burden so as not to hurt him through his family.

بِخَالِصَةٖ ذِكۡرَى ٱلدَّارِ ﴿٤٦﴾ وَإِنَّهُمۡ عِندَنَا لَمِنَ ٱلۡمُصۡطَفَيۡنَ ٱلۡأَخۡيَارِ ﴿٤٧﴾

Remember Our servants Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, all men of strength and vision [45] We caused them to be devoted to Us through their sincere remembrance of the Final Home [46] With Us they will be among the elect, the truly good [47] (The Quran, Sad: 45 - 47)

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Remember (udhkur) ...’ (Sad: 45) which means ‘with praise’. He also says: ‘...Our servants...’ (Sad: 45); the word ‘ibad (servants) is the plural of ‘abd. We have said before that slavery is hateful amongst men, but slavery to Allah is an honour and a source of dignity.

‘... Ibrahim (Abraham) ...’ (Sad: 45) was the father of the prophets, and Allah Glorified is He granted him ‘...Ishaq (Isaac)...’ (Sad: 45) after he submitted to His judgment when He commanded him to sacrifice his son Ismail

(1) It is related that Sa’id ibn Sa’d ibn ‘Ubada said, ‘There was a man amongst our houses who was weak and deformed (mukhdaj). He took no notice of the people of the household except for one of the slave-girls with whom he fornicated, even though he was a Muslim. Sa’d raised the matter to the Messenger of Allah who said, "Give him the physical punishment prescribed for him." They said, "O, Messenger of Allah, he is too weak for it. If we lashed him a hundred times, we would kill him." ‘Then take a raceme with one hundred stalks on it and strike him once with it, then let him go," he replied.’ It was related by Ahmad in his Musnad (5/222) and Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (2574).

(Ishmael) peace be upon him. '...Ya'qub (Jacob) ...' (Sad: 45) was the son of Ishaq (Issac) peace be upon him. We have already taken a look at the story of these prophets when we explained Allah's saying [on the tongue of Ibrahim (Abraham) to his son Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon them] that he saw in a dream that he was slaying him for sacrifice to Allah, and he asked his advice. (as-Saffat: 102) Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him did not want to go ahead with sacrificing his son until he had clarified for him the command that had been directed towards him. Since he cared greatly for him, he did not want to take him unaware because this could have made him hate his father if he did not know the command beyond his father's action.

He also wanted to share with his son the honour of submitting to Allah the Exalted so his son would not be deprived of its rewards. This is why Allah Glorified is He says, 'And when they had both submitted and he put him down upon his forehead' (as-Saffat: 103), and then Ibrahim (Abraham) laid Ismail (Ishmael) down on his face, and at this Allah Glorified is He says: 'We called to him, "O, Ibrahim (Abraham), You have fulfilled the vision." Indeed, We thus reward the doers of good' (as-Saffat: 103-105). Both of them have submitted themselves to Allah the Almighty so He commanded Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him to lift his hand off his son's throat, and Allah gave him a ram to sacrifice and conveyed to us the story as a reminder to all coming generations. This is how Allah the Exalted rewards the good-doers, as Ibrahim (Abraham) was a true believing servant of Allah. Then in time, Allah the Almighty gave him the glad tiding of Ishaq (Issac) peace be upon him who would be a prophet and one of the righteous. So, Ishaq (Issac) came, and Ya'qub (Jacob) came after him as a result of Ibrahim's (Abraham's) submission and obedience to his Lord's Commandment to sacrifice Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon them. Allah thus preserved Ismail (Ishmael) and granted Ishaq (Issac) and Ya'qub (Jacob) to Ibrahim (Abraham) from His bounty. For the True Lord Glorified is He does not wish to torture people when testing them.

This is why we say that every Muslim has a debt of gratitude to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. Why is this? This is due to the fact that had this sacrifice actually happened to Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him it would have become a tribulation from Allah for men that they should seek closeness to Allah through sacrificing their own sons. Prophet Ibrahim

(Abraham) peace be upon him however because of his faith and submission of the matter to Allah, carried this burden for us and lifted this matter from us. Otherwise, it would have become an obligatory act of worship for every believer who came after him. He spoke the truth, the one who said:

Submit to your Lord in His judgment, with wisdom,
He judges, and so you may be safe and gain advantage.
Remember the friend of Allah, sacrificing his son,
When his Creator said, ‘And when they had submitted themselves.’

We learn from this that any event or matter which harms man outwardly, tires him or afflicts him should not be looked at without reference to its doer; rather, we must understand any event within the context of the one who did it and link it to him.

We previously clarified this issue saying that imagine, for example, your son came to you with blood covering his face. The first question you would keep asking him is, ‘Who did this to you?’; you would expect him to give you a name. If your son said to you, ‘My uncle hit me’, you would calm down a bit thinking that maybe he has done something to make his uncle hit him. However, if he gave you the name of a person who is your enemy, you will get furious. Thus, one cannot judge an action except within the context of its doer since depending upon the relationship between the action and its doer the degree of good or evil therein is decided.

As for the phrase (ulil-aydi wa al-absar), ' men of strength and vision’ (Sad: 45), the first part means ‘those who have aydi’. Aydi (hands) is the plural of yad (hand), but it can also be used to refer to actions performed by the hand. One might say, ‘So-and-so has a hand over me’ which means in Arabic that he has done something good for me. Since most actions are undertaken by the hands, thus, acts of charity that are done by the hand are given the name of the limb that performs them. This is why a poet said:

Abounding favours over me, he has done,
Them I could not count, but of them I am one

There is a difference between an act that is accomplished and stands on its own, and another which necessitates a response from another party. When, for example, we want to spend and give, he who has wealth can give by his very hand. As for the one who has nothing, he cannot give anything, but he can advise those who have wealth to give out from it.

Allah the Almighty tells us that there is no blame on the weak, the sick or those who have no means to equip themselves, provided that they are sincere towards Allah and His Prophet: ‘here is not upon the doers of good any cause [for blame]’ (at-Tawba: 91).

When you advise someone to give out charity, this action is not of the hand but of the tongue. Nevertheless, because the hand is the instrument by which most actions are done, we attribute all goodness to the hands. Allah Glorified is He also reminds us and says: ‘Indeed, those who pledge allegiance to you [O, Muhammad] are actually pledging allegiance to Allah. The hand of Allah is over their hands’ (al-Fath: 10).

If a man finds he has no wealth and is unable to give verbal advice, then Allah the Exalted will certainly not prevent him from performing good actions relating to spending. It suffices him to be happy with those who spend and to be pleased by the gifts given to others.

An example(1) of this is the man who was heard praying at the Ka’ba and saying, ‘O, Allah, You know that I disobey you, yet I love those who obey You.' Al-Asma’i heard a man praying at the Multazam door saying, ‘O, Lord, I know that I disobey you, and I am ashamed to ask of You when I am disobedient, but there is no Allah but You, so to whom should I go?’ Al-Asma’i said to him, ‘You there! Indeed, your Lord has forgiven you because you have placed your request in a befitting manner.’

It is well known that a believer should put great effort into his supplications, especially at the Multazam door, and should try to make his supplications and requests befitting to this honourable place.

Another level that Allah the Exalted has provided for the one who has nothing to give, to not be deprived of the reward of giving, is to be sad about having nothing to spend. Allah the Almighty says that there is no blame to those[1] who, when they came to the Prophet seeking mounts, were told by him, ‘I cannot find any mounts for you’, so they turned away, their eyes overflowing with tears out of sorrow that they had no means to spend on the mounts to be able to accompany the prophet in his battle’ (at-Tawba: 92). Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He does not deprive a believer of having a share in spending, even if he had nothing.

(1) The story of Al-Asma’i with the man who was praying at the door of the Ka’ba

Amongst the other meanings of the word yad is ‘strength’ as when Allah says that His Hand is over their hands. Thus, the meaning of ulil-aydi is ‘those endowed with strength’ which means those strong in their obedience to Allah.

Wa Al-absar (and vision) refers to insight in faith, wisdom and knowledge. As for the vision relevant to the sense of sight, both believers and disbelievers have it. So, in this verse, absar means seeing and beyond, insight upon insight.

Sight on its own is not enough because Allah’s signs in creation are a ‘given’ factor as we say in mathematics. These signs need penetrating insight to be able to reach the objective, which believes in the One Who granted us these givens.

When eyes look at the universe and see Allah’s signs within it, but then neither intellect nor feelings are engaged nor do they lead to realising the Designer and Creator, then there is no value in these eyes. Thus, absar in this verse refers to those who have inner sight that has engaged their intellect and feelings with the signs they see and those who know that this universe could only be attributable to a manifest, capable and dominating power that has no likeness unto him. Had there been a partner, his effect would have manifested, and he would have defended his rights to sovereignty. So long as this opponent does not manifest, and no one claims to have created anything, then it is simply a matter of submitting to the One Who claims it.

(1) Muhammad ibn Ka’b Al-Qurtubi said, ‘They were seven of them: Salim ibn ‘Awf of Banu ‘Amr ibn ‘Awf, Harmi Ibn ‘Amr of BanuWaqif, ‘Abd Ar-Rahman ibn Ka’b and Yakni Abu Layla of Banu Mazin ibn Najjar, Fadlullah of Banu Al-Mu’alla and ‘Amr ibn ‘Utba and ‘Abdullah ibn ‘Amr Al-Muzani of Banu Salama. (Tafsir ibn Kathir 2/381). As-Suyuti mentions in his book Asbab aN-Nuzul that Ibn Abu Hatim relates via Al-’Awfi on the authority of Ibn ‘Abbas that he said, 'Prophet Muhammad commanded the people to set forth for battle with him. A group of companions came to him, amongst them was ‘Abdullah ibn Mu’qal Al-Muzani who said, "O, Messenger of Allah, carry us with you." "By Allah," he replied, "I find nothing on which to carry you." So, they turned away and wept. It was hard for them to be held back from the jihad, and they had neither transport nor money. So, Allah revealed regarding them the verse: “Nor there is blame on those who, when they came to you [O, Prophet] with the request to provide them with mounts ...” (at-Tawba: 92).

This is why Allah says: ‘[O, Muhammad], "If there had been with Him [other] gods, as they say, then they [each] would have sought a way to the Owner of the Throne."’ (al-Isra’: 42)

Allah the Almighty mentions the hands before the eyes because the work of the hands is the outcome of vision. One sees Allah’s signs in creation and realises that He is the Lord of all, the Creator of all and the Provider of all. The result of this is that our hearts soften towards the needy, and we give charity to them because maybe one day we will be in their same position and need someone to give us. We do not envy the rich when we are needy because the goodness of the rich will return to us anyway.

This is why Allah the Exalted commands those who would fear for the future of their own helpless children and says: ‘and let those [executors and guardians] fear [injustice] as if they [themselves] had left weak offspring behind and feared for them. So let them fear Allah and speak words of appropriate justice’ (an-Nisa’: 9). Allah Glorified is He also tells us of the orphans whose father was a righteous man and says: ‘and their father had been righteous’ (al-Kahf: 82).

Allah then says, ‘We caused them to be devoted to us’ (Sad: 46). Akhlasnahum means ‘what We gave them was purely for them’. This thing that they have been given is something which constantly turns their minds towards the Hereafter, the abode of recompense. By means of this remembrance, a person remains constantly aware of the reward of obedience and the recompense of disobedience, and since he keeps these outcomes in mind, he becomes obedient and distances himself from disobedience.

This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said in clarifying this issue, 'When the fornicator is committing fornication, he is not a believer! When the thief if stealing, he is not a believer! When the drunkard is drinking, he is not a believer!'(1)

(1) This Hadith is agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim. Al-Bukhari relates it in his Sahih (2475) and Muslim in his Sahih (57) in the chapter Kitab Al-iman on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

Why did He negate belief for these cases? The scholars say that it is because they are heedless of the outcome of their actions and heedless of the recompense. Heedlessness makes us lazy about the acts of obedience, makes us fall into disobedience, and deludes us. If men were always mindful of the recompense of disobedience, they would not fall into it.

We have previously given a parable for this: imagine a young man with an evil lust, and we told him that we will give him what he wants, but when the night is over, we will take him to a burning oven and put him inside it for one hour. What do you think this young man will do? Of course, he will abstain from his sin and flee from it. Why is this so? This is due to him seeing the consequences and visualising the punishment!

Similar to this is the student who studies hard, to the extent that he forgets to eat or drink. Why does he do this? This is due to him thinking of the sweetness of success, the nobility of excellence and the high status he will have amongst his family and friends. Contrary to the negligent student, he acts so because he is heedless of the consequences of his neglect and the humiliation of failure once the results come out.

The phrase dhikra ad-dar (the remembrance of the final Home) means he remembers it constantly; he bears in mind the reward for obedience and embarks upon it, along with bearing in mind the punishment for sin and fleeing from it.

Allah's saying, '…With Us, they will be amongst the elect, the truly good' (Sad: 47) means they are of those whom Allah has chosen. Allah the Most High selects from amongst His creation; He selects particular times and particular places as He wills. Amongst the places He selected are the Ka'ba and Bayt Al-Maqdis; amongst the times He selected Ramadan; amongst mankind He selected the messengers, and amongst the angels He selected messengers. This selection is not out of favouritism for the one chosen; rather, it is a trust placed upon the one chosen to spread goodness amongst his kind. Messengers are not selected out of indulgence; rather, it is a great burden pertaining to themselves, their families, and their wealth.

Similarly, selecting Ramadan is not just for obeying and worshipping Allah during Ramadan but for spreading obedience throughout all our times; after all, we take from Ramadan the energy needed for the whole year. Thus, selecting times, places, people, or angels are not for fun but for spreading goodness throughout all of the creation.

The word (Al-akhyar) 'the truly good' (Sad: 47) is the plural of khayyir, and it means that Allah chose them because of the goodness in them. This is what qualified them for the selection.

وَٱذۡكُرۡ إِسۡمَٰعِيلَ وَٱلۡيَسَعَ وَذَا ٱلۡكِفۡلِۖ وَكُلّٞ مِّنَ ٱلۡأَخۡيَارِ ﴿٤٨﴾

And remember Our servants Ishmael, Elisha, and Dhul-Kifl, each of them truly good [48]
(The Quran, Sad: 48)

Prophet Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him is well known to us through his story with his father, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon them. The difference of opinion amongst scholars here surrounds Prophet Dhul-Kifl (Ezekiel) peace be upon him because there are some people whom Allah mentioned in the context of the messengers, yet He mentioned only their names and descriptions. In this verse, Dhul-Kifl (Ezekiel) peace be upon him is mentioned with this description: 'With Us, they will be amongst the elect, the truly good.' (Sad: 47)

Elyas (Elijah) peace be upon him is unknown to us except in name. The Quran does not tell us who he was or when or to whom he was sent, and there is no mention of the teachings he brought. Similarly, the Quran mentions only Dhul-Kifl (Ezekiel) and describes him in this verse as being of 'the elect, the truly good'. In the chapter of al-Anbiya', the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'and [mention] Ismail (Ishmael) and Idris (Enoch) and Dhul-Kifl (Ezekiel); all were of the patient' (al-Anbiya': 85-86).

He is described once as being 'from the truly righteous', once as 'from the steadfast' and once as 'from the truly good, and for this Allah admitted him into the domain of His Mercy. It is because of this that the scholars have differed about him; was he a messenger or not? The majority of scholars(1) say that he was, the proof being that Allah included him amongst these other messengers.

(1) Some scholars believed that he was not a prophet but one of the righteous men of the children of Israel. Ibn Kathir considered the evidence for his being a prophet to be stronger because Allah associated him with the prophets. He said in the chapter of al-Anbiya': 'And=

Amongst the things that are said of Dhul-Kifl (Ezekiel)(1) is that he lived in the time of Elyas (Elijah) peace be upon him and was one of his followers. Elyas (Elijah) peace be upon him desired to appoint someone as his successor and wanted to see, in the last days of his life, how this person would act around the people. Elyas (Elijah) was so devoted to the cause of Allah, that when he no longer had the strength to fulfil his role, he wanted to test the person he would choose and see what he would do. So, he sat amongst his people and asked, 'Who will accept three things from me ('man yataqabbal minni bi thalath')?' The letter bi usually precedes a price, as when one says, 'I bought such-and-such for such-and-such (ishtaraytu kadha bi kadha).' So, his question means that whoever takes responsibility for three things I will appoint him as my successor. Then he said, counting these three things: '... he fasts during the day, stands in vigil prayer during the night, and does not lose his temper.' A man of unremarkable countenance stood up and said, 'Me.'

So, Elyas (Elijah) asked him, 'You will fast the day, stand in prayer at night and will not lose your temper?' 'Yes,' he answered, but Elyas (Elijah) still rejected him. The next day Elyas (Elijah) peace be upon him sat in his gathering and made the same proposition to the people. The same man stood up and said, 'Me.' So, Elyas (Elijah) knew that the man had conviction and was resolved to carry out this duty so he appointed him as his successor over the people.(2)

The scholars have discussed these three conditions that Prophet Elyas (Elijah) peace be upon him instituted as tenets for appointing a successor. They = remember Ismail (Ishmael), Idris (Enoch), and Dhul-Kifl (Ezekiel); they were all steadfast. We admitted them to Our Mercy. They were truly righteous.' (al-Anbiya': 85-86) Ibn Kathir said in Al-Bidaya wa An-Nihaya (1/227), 'It seems obvious from his being mentioned and praised in the Gracious Quran alongside prophets that he is a prophet may his Lord send peace and blessings upon him. This is the well-known position (Al-mashhur).

(1) The story of Elyas (Elijah) and Dhul-Kifl (Ezekiel) peace be upon them when Elyas (Elijah) wanted someone to succeed him.

(2) As-Suyuti relates this hadith about the prophets of Allah Elyas (Elijah) and Dhul-Kifl (Ezekiel) peace be upon them in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (5/661) and ascribes it to ibn Jarir and Ibn Abu Hatim on the authority of Mujahid (5/663). He also ascribes it to 'Abd ibn Hamid and Ibn Abu Ad-Dunya in Dhamm Al-Ghadab and to Ibn Jarir, Ibn Mundhir and Ibn Abu Hatim on the authority of `Abdullah ibn Al-Harith (5/663). Kitab Al-Qudahhe ascribes it to Ibn Sa`id An-Naqqash on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas.

said that the one who fasts by day refrains from that which Allah the Most High has made lawful when not fasting, and by means of this, he has insured to keep his distance from the unlawful. The one who prays at night has abandoned rest and comfort so as to get closer to his Lord, and so he would not take up such a position for luxury or comfort but to fulfil its charges. Had he desired comfort, he would have slept to his heart's content.

As for controlling temper, it is a trait that must be present in whoever would lead his charge or take part in judging between people. It is obvious that the masses are diverse regarding their character and traits, so it is necessary for anyone who is taking responsibility for them to be forbearing and hard to anger. This is because anger clouds the intellect and hinders the natural process to the right choices or right judgments. This is why a judge is told 'restrain yourself' when he gets angry, i.e. because no one is fit for the position of judgment when he is angry.

Thus, he requested someone in control of his temper because anger impedes rationality, aptitude, and impartiality which will result in unsound judgments.

Scholars say of Dhul-Kifl's (Ezekiel's) pledge not to lose his temper that Shaytan was unable to make any progress regarding his fasting during the day or his praying at night so he decided to make him angry. He sent some of his progeny to him to make him angry, but Dhul-Kifl (Ezekiel) peace be upon him was unperturbed, so he said to them, 'Leave him to me. I will take care of this matter myself.'

Dhul-Kifl (Ezekiel) peace be upon him(1) would sleep only once a day, a short nap, and this would be all the sleep he got by day or night. He would order his servant not to allow anyone to interrupt him during this short time, and this was when Shaytan (Satan) lay in wait for him. He knocked on Dhul-Kifl's (Ezekiel's) door and made a racket saying, 'I am a man who has been wronged by his people. They did such-and-such to me, and I want you to give me justice.' Dhul-Kifl (Ezekiel) peace be upon him replied, 'Did you not know that this is the time during which I rest. Go and come back at the time when I sit to judge between people, and I will judge your affair.'

(1) The story of Dhul Kifl (Job) with the devil

The next day Shaytan came and did as the day before. When he came on the third day, he found the door locked, but he found his way in to Dhul-Kifl (Ezekiel) peace be upon him by means of his secret passage. Scholars say he entered by means of a small window while the guard was distracted and knocked on the door of Dhul-Kifl's (Ezekiel's) bedroom.

When he saw him, he said, 'How did you get in?' At which Shaytan hesitated, so he continued, 'So, it is you then!' (i.e. Shaytan). At this, he replied, 'By Allah, I have schemed so much to get you angry but have been unsuccessful' Then, he (Satan) departed.(1)

As for the difference of opinion between the scholars about the prophethood of Dhul-Kifl (Ezekiel) peace be upon him I wish to extricate the scholars from their differences by coming to a point upon which we can agree. They say that the word kifl is derived from the word takafful, as when Allah said that he placed Maryam (Mary) in the care of Zakaryya (Zechariah); kaffalaha means a protector and supporter. Those who said he was a messenger sought to prove their case by means of two points: The first is that Allah mentioned him amongst the messengers, and the second is that Elyas (Elijah) appointed him as his successor; the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He accepted this and did not change it. This indicates Allah's consent to the matter, just as He approved the request of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when he asked his Lord to boost him by means of his brother Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him who was better in speaking skills, so Musa (Moses) asked Allah to send him with him as a helper.(2)

The others say that he was rather just calling people to Allah the Exalted. The people were corrupt during his time, and he saw that this corruption could not be removed except by means of a man who was impartial when judging between people and whose verdicts were just. He found himself to have these gifts, so he presented himself to his people as one who would take responsibility for their affairs justly; thus, they elected him. Therefore, in the opinion of these scholars, he was not a messenger but a man who had a methodology similar to those of the messengers.

(1) As-Suyuti relates this story in his book Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (5/661) on the authority of Mujahid and ascribes it to Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abu Hatim.

(2) The word Ar-rid' means a helper and supporter. (Al-Qamus Al-Qawim 1/260).

هَٰذَا ذِكْرٌ ۚ وَإِنَّ لِلْمُتَّقِينَ لَحُسْنَ مَـَٔابٍ ﴿٤٩﴾ جَنَّٰتِ عَدْنٍ مُّفَتَّحَةً لَّهُمُ ٱلْأَبْوَٰبُ ﴿٥٠﴾
مُتَّكِـِٔينَ فِيهَا يَدْعُونَ فِيهَا بِفَٰكِهَةٍ كَثِيرَةٍ وَشَرَابٍ ﴿٥١﴾

This is a lesson. The devout will have a good place to return to [49] Gardens of lasting bliss with gates wide open [50] They will be comfortably seated; they will call for abundant fruit and drink [51] (The Quran, Sad: 49 - 51)

Allah's saying, 'This' (Sad: 49) refers to what was mentioned previously about prophets. The word (dhikr) 'is a lesson' (Sad: 49) which refers to something to make one remember as when Allah says that if one of the two witnesses should make a mistake, the other one could remind her. (al-Baqara: 282) So, Allah says in this verse that He reminds him of the line of messengers and the stances their nations took towards them, how they withstood the stupidity of their people, along with their people's lack of respect for them that included verbal and physical abuse. Allah the Almighty reminds Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of this, for he suffered harm from his people, so that he should know that he is not the first of the messengers and that what happened to his brethren, the other messengers, will happen to him. If we are to measure the affliction by the immensity of the message, we will realise that Muhammad's share of hurt was greater than that of all the other messengers.

So, Allah's saying, 'This is a lesson' (Sad: 49) comes as a consolation to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings upon him that he may know that he is not alone in this and that his greatness lies in withstanding the ignorance of his people. This is because when people pretend they do not know their messenger, it indicates that they are benefitting from the prevalent corruption. In this case, the messenger will be an adversary for his people because the more he blocks their corruption, the greater their mockery, harm and enmity towards him will be, and the more they will accuse him of magic, madness, lies, etc.

Such is Allah's Way with anyone who takes up the Message and confronts corruption in the society; he will necessarily find those who will transgress against him and accuse him of falsehood, they will try to discredit him and cast doubts upon his intentions. This is a natural reaction, for it shows that he has impacted their corrupt way of life which indicates the success of his mission.

Allah then says, ‘... and the devout will have a good place to return to:…’ (Sad: 49) which means an excellent place on Judgment Day. Thus, this verse is speaking of the Afterlife and the excellent reward that awaits Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. In this verse, there are two gifts for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings upon him:

The first is the consolation from Allah’s saying, ‘This is a lesson...’ (Sad: 49); secondly, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... and the devout will have a good place to return to:…’ (Sad: 49). It is as if Allah is saying that this is a reminder to console him, and more importantly, it is the magnificent reward that awaits him in the Hereafter. The Arabic conjunction wa (and*)* comes to join the two phrases, ‘This is a lesson ...’ (Sad: 49) and ‘... the devout will have a good place to return to’ (Sad: 49).

The Arabic word muttaqun (pious people) is derived from the root waqa, which means to protect an object from any harm that might disrupt it. We use the phrase ittaqa ash-shay’ to refer to a person using a cover to protect themselves from an imminent harm.

If we look at this lexical root in the Quran, we will find that Allah Glorified is He obligated human beings to have taqwa (piety) to ward off evil. He made man responsible for protecting (yaqi) himself from any evil that may come his way. This root comes in several forms in the Quran. For instance, Allah the Almighty uses the phrase: 'Protect yourselves from (the anger of) Allah (ittaqu-Allah).' In other instances, He says, 'Protect yourselves from your Lord (ittaqu Rabbakum),' and says: 'Protect yourselves from Me (ittaquni).' He also used this word in the phrase, 'Protect yourselves from the Fire (ittaqu-n-Nar)', and the phrase, 'Protect yourselves from the captivations of sedition (ittaqu-l-fitna).'

These phrases all share a common meaning because, as we have said, Allah Glorified is He has attributes of Majesty and attributes of Beauty. The meaning of the phrase, 'Protect yourself from Allah Glorified is He' is, 'Place a barrier between yourself and Allah’s attributes of Majesty such as the Attribute of Retribution (Al-Muntaqim), the Attribute of Dominance (Al-Qahhar) and the Attribute of Compulsion (Al-Jabbar).'

People who want to deviate from Allah’s Way should fear these Divine attributes and restrain themselves from sins. Indeed, we should protect ourselves from Allah’s attributes of Majesty, for the Almighty Allah Glorified is He is able to strike sinners suddenly, and they would be unable to endure His vengeance.

We can understand the same meaning from the phrase, 'Protect yourself from the Fire.' Certainly, hellfire is one of Allah’s forces and an effect of His attributes of Majesty and Power.

The Quran uses the word taqwa in one instance without specifying from what we should protect ourselves. In this instance, it indicates the complete and comprehensive nature of taqwa (protection), whereby a person should protect himself from Allah’s Wrath, whether it be in the form of the fire or the world’s tribulations.

The descriptive words (husn ma’ab) '... a good place to return to,' (Sad: 49) refer to the most pleasant abode prepared for righteous people. Some scholars claimed that this phrase was referring to the souls returning to their matching bodies on the Day of Judgment, but this opinion is baseless. The valid opinion is that the phrase 'a good place to return to' is referring to the reward prepared for believers in paradise. Therefore, these words are referring to the Gardens of Eden.

We can understand this by looking at the story of the beginning of creation. Before Allah the Almighty made the universe, He took a covenant from His created beings in a previous phase that is known as marhalat adh-dharr (the phase of spirits). Allah Glorified is He described that covenant in the following verses, 'And [remember] as your Lord took from the seeds of Adam, from their backs, their offspring and made them bear witness concerning themselves. [Allah asked,] "Am I not your Lord?" They said, "Yes, indeed, we bear witness [that You are our Lord]."' (al-A‘raf: 172)

Allah Glorified is He continues: '[That covenant was made so] that you do not say on the Day of the Resurrection, "Surely, we were heedless of this (faith)", and [so] that you do not say, "Surely, it is our ancient fathers who associated others in worship with Allah, and we were [their] subsequent offspring [who were misguided by them and followed polytheism on their footsteps]. Would You [Allah] punish us for what [previous] wrongdoers performed?"' (al-A'raf: 173)

Therefore, the natural disposition of faith was rooted in our hearts in our previous lives before this world ('alam adh-dharr). In that previous realm, our spirits had testified that Allah the Exalted is the Lord, the Creator and the Educator (Al-Murabbi) of all things. This means that our final abode will be to Allah the Most High where we will be held accountable for all our actions, regarding their concordance with our primordial pledge.

In this world, whoever fulfils the old covenant (al-'ahd al-qadeem) and carries it through to the new covenant (al-'ahd al-jadeed) will succeed and have a good abode of return in the Hereafter (husn ma'ab). On the other hand, there are people who oppress themselves and break the promise that they had pledged during this phase of spirituality. These disbelievers will lose and fail (on the Day of Judgment), and they will have an evil place of return (ma'ab ash-sharr) in the Hereafter.

Now, as the phrase, 'a good place to return to', is a general term, Allah Glorified is He chose to clarify and explain it to us with more details. He described it as '… gardens of lasting bliss (jannat 'Adn) with gates wide open' (Sad: 50). The phrase jannat 'Adn ('gardens of Eden' or the 'gardens of lasting bliss') is synonymous (lexically, a badal) with the phrase husn ma'ab (a good place to return to). In this verse, Allah the Almighty has affirmed that the 'good place to return to' is jannat 'Adn alone, as if no other place can be justly described as a good place of return.

The word jannat is the plural of the word janna (garden), and it refers to any place with intertwining leaves that shade the underlying passers. This name also means that the garden (janna) hides (tajin) any person who walks inside it by preventing their need to leave for anything else. This is also the meaning of the word janna (garden) in this world. Allah Glorified is He said, describing one of the earth's gardens (jannat): 'And recite to them the parable of two men, upon one of whom We had bestowed two vineyards (jannatayn) of grapes' (al-Kahf: 32).

Another example of a janna is the garden in which Allah Glorified is He tested Prophet Adam's response to Divine commands and prohibitions. Some people say that Allah placed Prophet Adam peace be upon him in heavenly paradise (of the Hereafter) and that He forced him out of these heavenly gardens into this world when he ate from the tree. This opinion is not valid because the first thing that Allah the Almighty said about Prophet Adam was: 'Behold, I am about to establish upon Earth one who shall inherit it' (al-Baqara: 30). Therefore, Prophet Adam was not created in the heavenly paradise, but here, on earth.

Then, Allah placed Adam in a garden from this world because when you want to train a person for a particular mission, you must take responsibility for their residence and expenses. You have to sustain your trainees with the necessities of life that allow them to concentrate on their training tasks.

Allah the Almighty provided this sustenance to Prophet Adam peace be upon him in an earthly garden. However, when Prophet Adam forgot Allah’s Command and followed the devil, his nature changed, and he was no longer fit to remain in that garden. Allah Glorified is He says, 'But as soon as the two [Adam and Hawwa (Eve)] had tasted [the fruit] of the tree, they became conscious of their nakedness.' (al-A‘raf: 22)

Consequently, the first time in which Prophet Adam became aware of the concept of exposure and nudity was a result of his disobedience of his Lord’s Command. Therefore, if you see the exposure of any faults in this world, you should know that they are the result of transgressions against Allah’s creation or abandonment’s of His laws.

Due to that sin, the private parts of the body became symbols of shame and nakedness (‘awra) for Prophet Adam peace be upon him. Apparently, these parts were not different from any other part of the body, such as the mouth, for example. They became shameful signs of nakedness because waste products were excreted from them when Prophet Adam ate from the prohibited tree. It appears that his body did not produce waste excrements when he had previously eaten from the lawful trees in accordance with Allah’s Commandments. At this point, he was only eating for sustenance and keeping himself alive, just as soldiers are given types of food that leave little waste. However, when Adam disobeyed Allah’s Command and ate from the forbidden tree, waste products were eventually formed, and their filthy nature became apparent on the body.

Allah Glorified is He says: '... and they began to cover themselves with pieced-together leaves from the garden' (al-A'raf: 22). He wanted to cover this nakedness and hide it momentarily. However, this was to become a necessary practice for mankind onwards. It stayed as a reminder of the sin that could not be removed. Thus, it was through disobedience that the concept of our nakedness was born.

Had Adam peace be upon him been aware of Satan's (Shaytan's) whispers, he would not have listened to him or eaten from the tree. However, Satan deceived them by saying, 'Your Lord has but forbidden you [from consuming] this tree lest you two become [as] angels or lest you live forever' (al-A'raf: 20). Satan did not sincerely believe that the tree could grant them immortality. In fact, he had previously asked Allah Glorified is He to grant him life until the Day of Resurrection, as He narrated in the following verse: '[Satan said,] "Then, O, my Lord, grant me a respite till the Day when all shall be raised from the dead"' (Sad: 79). If Satan had really believed that this tree would grant Adam immortality, he would have eaten from it himself. Thus, the Devil was lying, but Prophet Adam peace be upon him did not realise it at the time. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And, indeed, long ago did We impose Our commandment on Adam, but he forgot it, and We found no firmness of purpose in him.' (Ta Ha: 115)

Why did Adam peace be upon him not succeed in his first test? Scholars said that Adam peace be upon him was to be the father of all humanity. His offspring were to be of two types. Some of them will be infallible, such as prophets and messengers, while most of mankind will be fallible. Thus, it was appropriate for Adam to represent both of these types concerning his children in his life.

This disobedience happened when his responsibility was being tested. Yet, Adam's early disobedience does not negate the infallibility of prophets because Adam peace be upon him was only selected as a prophet after this test. In addition, he repented from that sin and Allah the Almighty accepted his atonement, as He the Most High says: 'Thereupon Adam received words [of guidance] from his Lord, and He [Allah] accepted his repentance' (al-Baqara: 37). Allah Glorified is He also says: 'Thereafter, [however,] his Lord elected him [for His grace], accepted his repentance, and bestowed His guidance upon him' (Ta Ha: 122).

Therefore, Allah the Exalted selected Adam to be an infallible prophet after that first test he had undergone. The Quranic phrase, 'Thereafter, [however,] his Lord elected him' (Ta Ha: 122) indicates a succession of events and a period of time between his disobedience and his election.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'gardens of lasting bliss ('Adn)' (Sad: 50); this refers to the final reward of the Afterlife. The word 'Adn means that these gardens will be an everlasting residence. This is in contrast with the gardens of this world, which can only provide temporary benefit before inevitable loss or destruction.

For instance, these worldly gardens may be struck by drought, as in the Quranic narration regarding the people of the garden, where Allah Glorified is He says: 'Behold, We [but] try them as We tried the owners of a certain garden who vowed that they would surely harvest its fruit on the morning [without distributing the alms to the poor]. They made no allowance [for the Will of Allah]. Thereupon, a storm ta'if from your Lord came upon that [garden] while they were asleep, so that by the morning, it became barren and bleak' (al-Qalam: 17-20).

Thus, in some cases, disasters may claim gardens of this world. In other cases, the owners of a garden may die and leave it to their heirs. For this reason, Allah the Exalted wanted to reassure believers that their heavenly rewards in the Gardens of paradise will be everlasting and unchangeable. Paradise's sustenance will not run out for these believers, nor will believers perish in its gardens.

Allah Glorified is He then says: '...with gates wide open (mufattaha)' (Sad: 50). The Arabic word mufattaha (wide open) is a passive participle (ism maf'ul) that lexically denotes the great intensiveness of any particular action and that the action was performed by an unidentified subject. This means that these doors will be opened to their utmost width by a force that was not identified in the verse.

(1) Allah Glorified is He destroyed the garden with a storm. The word ta'if, in this verse, refers to an overwhelming punishment. (Al-Qamus Al-Qawim 1/409)

It could be that the guardians of paradise will open these gates when they see the people of the Garden approaching them as a welcoming gesture to believers. Allah Glorified is He says: '… until they reach it, and its gates are widely opened, and its keepers will say unto them, "Peace be upon you! You have done well. Enter, then, this [Paradise] herein to abide forever."' (az-Zumar: 73)

The gates may even open automatically at the sight of incomers, or furthermore, slide at the mere will of every believer who wishes to enter. This may be similar to the sight we currently see in some major hotels, where a doorman opens the gates of the lobby to designated visitors as a sign of hospitality. Furthermore, many hotels have sliding doors that open automatically whenever someone approaches them, and then close automatically after a person enters the building.

This example of prolific advancement of mankind in designing sliding doors increases our recognition of Divine bounties and rewards mentioned in the Quran. Allah Glorified is He say regarding another adornment and luxuries: 'And were it not that [with the prospect of boundless riches before them] all people would become one [evil] community, We might indeed have provided for those who [now] disbelieve in the Most Gracious roofs of silver for their houses and [silver] stairways on which they ascend.' (az-Zukhruf: 33) We have now seen lavish elevators and escalators that ascend vertically inside buildings. This Quranic description of luxurious buildings was revealed more than fourteen centuries ago amongst an illiterate, Bedouin nation who knew nothing about the abundant crafts of construction as they were living in tents and abodes made of wool and animal fur.

Such verses in the Quran gave us glimpses of the potential constructions of the world of men, and indeed, technological progress will continue to produce remarkable devices. These devices support the Quranic descriptions of paradise after disbelievers had previously found them arduous to believe. If mankind's limited knowledge is able to produce such generous technological implementations, it is more plausible that the Creator of human beings, Allah the Exalted can provide more sublime constructions to reward His creation in the Hereafter.

Allah Glorified is He says in his description of the people of paradise: '…They will be comfortably seated (muttaki'in fiha)' (Sad: 51). A muttaki' is someone who is in a position between lying and sitting down (qa'id), or between lying and sitting up (jalis). There is a difference between sitting down and sitting up, even though they share a common meaning. Sitting down (qu'ood) refers to someone who was standing and then sat down, whereas sitting up (juloos) refers to someone who was lying and then sat up.

When a man is standing, he carries his whole weight upon his feet. If he gets tired of standing, he may sit down, thereby shifting his weight to his posterior. Then, if he still gets tired of sitting down, he may recline on his side, a position between sitting and lying flat on the ground. In this state, the weight of his body is more evenly distributed and is thus the most restful position for him. This is why Allah the Almighty chose this position for the people of paradise.

Zulaykha, the wife of Al-'Aziz chose this resting state for her guests, Allah Glorified is He says: '…and prepared for them a sumptuous repast (muttaka'a)' (Yusuf: 31). The Arabic word muttaka' indicates that the gathering was not in a bored state. The reclining position is the most comfortable resting position for a person.

Allah Glorified is He says of the people of paradise: '…reclining upon carpets lined with rich brocade,(1) and the fruit of both these gardens will be within easy reach' (ar-Rahman: 54). He also says in the chapter of ar-Rahman: '… reclining upon green foldings (rafraf) and carpets ('abqary)(2) rich in beauty' (ar-Rahman: 76).

Allah Glorified is He also says in reference to the resting state of the people of Paradise: '… wherein upon couches (ara'ik) they will recline' (al-Kahf: 31). So, the people of paradise will recline on couches filled with istabraq (brocade), which is the thick and heavy form of satin silk. If the stuffing and the inside of the beds will be made of brocade, imagine what their external textures will be made of.

(1) Al-istabraq refers to heavy, natural silk embroidery. It is suitable for outdoor clothing and winter because it is warm. (Al-Qamus Al-Qawim 1/18)

(2) 'Abqari: The Arabs believed that the jinns lived in a place known as 'Abqar because various wondrous stories were attributed to it. It is also said that it is a place in Yemen where embroidered carpets were made and that anything good and well made was attributed to it. (Al-Qamus Al-Qawim 5/2)

The word rafraf refers to the folds that we find on curtains. The word ara'ik is the plural of the word areeka, and it refers to a couch with ornaments and covers that are similar to mosquito nets. The people of paradise will be reclining upon these fabrics.

There must be further comforts in terms of food and drink after believers recline on these lavish couches. Allah Glorified is He says: '... they will call for abundant fruit and drink' (Sad: 51). Therefore, the welcome that is extended to each of them will be of the specific nature that a person desires. Nothing is placed before them that they do not want. Thus, this reception is not obligatory upon everybody since part of the service may not agree with their inclinations.

Allah the Most High mentions the fruits first, even though they are a luxury that traditionally comes after a main meal. Scholars said that the presence of fruits or desserts indicates that a main meal is unquestionably present.

Allah Glorified is He says: '...and drink' (Sad: 51). Scholars said that the drink intended in this verse is grape juice. Fruits and grape juice are mentioned specifically because they were not abundantly present in the environment in which the Quran was revealed. Thus, they were highly valued by the Arabs, whose foods mostly consisted of dates, wheat, and barley. So, Allah the Almighty mentions the foods that they desired the most at that time. Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: '… and with fruit of any kind that they may choose and with the meat of any bird that they may desire' (al-Waqi'a: 20-21).

In the chapter of al-Baqara, Allah the Exalted clarifies that the fruits of the Hereafter will only share the names, the colours and the shapes of this world's fruits, but they will have a different and a more sublime taste. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Whenever they are granted fruits as their appointed sustenance, they will say, "We were granted that sustenance in our older days!" However, they will only be given similar fruits with which they will recall that [past sustenance]. And there, shall they have spouses pure, and there, shall they abide [for eternity].' (al-Baqara: 25)

So, the fruits of paradise will resemble the fruits we recognise in this world. An apple there will look like an apple here such that a person would say, 'This is like the apples I ate in the (past) world.' However, the reality of the fruits of paradise will be completely different as these fruits came forth by the pure Power of Allah the Almighty.

In another verse, Allah Glorified is He described the gatherings of the people of paradise. For instance, in describing their divans and couches, He says: '[And in it] there will be beds [of comfort] raised high, cups placed ready, pillows (namariq) ranged and carpets (zarabiyy) spread out' (al-Ghashiya: 13-16). The word namariq is the plural form of the word namraqa, which is a pillow upon which one rests. The word zarabiyy is the plural of the word zarbiya, which is a decorated rug. As for drinking vessels, Allah described them in this verse as akwab. In other verses in the Quran, He described them as abareeq or ku'oos. These are all drinking vessels, but each of these words has a slightly different meaning. A koob (cup) is the singular form of the plural akwab, and this is an empty vessel that has neither an 'urwa (handle) nor a khurtoom (spout). However, if a vessel contains something to drink, it is called a ka's. If a cup has a handle or a spout, it is called an ibreeq (which is the singular form of the plural abareeq).

One of the habits of the Arabs was allowing a small quantity of liquid to remain in their cups after drinking, which they would proceed to pour on the ground. The drinker did this to indicate his contentment and lack of greed. A poet(1) spoke of this when he said: 'For the earth has a share of the noble man's cup.'(2)

Another Arabic tradition was that they used to avoid filling any cup to its top rim. This allowed them to see the fluid level more clearly, so that they can distinguish between an empty cup and a cup that is full of drink. This also indicated the clearness of the liquid and the cleanliness of the utensil.

---

(1) The poet is `Abd Al-Ghani An-Nabulsi. He was a scholar of Islam and literature and was a Sufi. He was born in Damascus in 1641 CE and grew up there. Then, he travelled to Baghdad, Palestine, Lebanon, Egypt and the Hijaz area. He passed away in Damascus in 1730 CE at the age of 89. He wrote many great works of which Ta`teer Al-Anam fi Ta`beer Al-Manam was one.

(2) The full couplet is the following:
We drank and spilt a mouthful on the ground,
For the earth has a share of the noble man's cup
It is from a poem in the bahr at-tawil that has three couplets.

A poet once described this concept by saying: 'Were the cup not half-full, one could think that, in the palm of its drinker it stood alone.' He meant to say that if a cup was filled with fluid until its rim, the viewer might think that the cup was empty if they are unable to distinguish the liquid’s meniscus from the cup’s rim.

A few years ago, we also had a noble tradition related to food in our country. We used to eat a light meal called tabaq al-karama (the plate of dignity) in our own homes before attending a feast at another person’s house. The feast’s guests did that in order to avoid a strong appetite before approaching the host’s food. This allowed them to enjoy the feast with a higher degree of decorum.

We can now return back to the verse we are studying. After the blessings of reclining, eating, and drinking, a person’s mind will naturally turn to the concealed company of a beautiful mate. This is what Allah the Exalted promises righteous people in the following verse.

Allah Glorified is He says:

وَعِندَهُمْ قَٰصِرَٰتُ ٱلطَّرْفِ أَتْرَابٌ ﴿٥٢﴾ هَٰذَا مَا تُوعَدُونَ لِيَوْمِ ٱلْحِسَابِ ﴿٥٣﴾
إِنَّ هَٰذَا لَرِزْقُنَا مَا لَهُۥ مِن نَّفَادٍ ﴿٥٤﴾

They will have well-matched [wives] with modest gaze [52]
‘This is what you are promised for the Day of Reckoning [53]
Our provision for you will never end [54] (The Quran, Sad: 52-54)

The words '... mates with a modest gaze,' mean that each one of them only gazes at her designated companion. This also means that no other man will desire the companion of his brother because each female companion only desires her own mate.

We know that, in this respect, indeed, the eye and the glance have an unambiguous effect as they have a speech and a language of their own. An example of this is what Allah Glorified is He says in the story of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him: '… And when the women saw him, they were greatly amazed at his beauty, and [so flustered were they that] they cut their hands [with their knives], exclaiming, "Allah save us! This is no mortal man!

This is nought but a noble angel."' (Yusuf: 31) Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) said, 'O, my Lord! Prison is more desirable to me than [compliance with] what these women invite me to do, for, unless You turn away their guile from me, I might yet yield to their allure and become one of those who are unaware [of right and wrong].' (Yusuf: 33) The first verse described the plan of one woman, the wife of Al-'Aziz*,* to lure Prophet Yusuf (Joseph). Then, why did Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) use the words 'what these women invite me to do' as well as 'their guile' and 'I might yet yield to their allure' (Yusuf: 33) all in the plural form? These women must have all looked at him in an alluring way, and he understood that each one of them desired him.

Thus, the glance has a language that carries meanings and expresses the soul of its owner. This is why Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) referred to the group of women, and not to the wife of Al-'Aziz alone, although she was the chief plotter. Additionally, years later, when her husband, Al-'Aziz, wanted to summon Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) from prison, Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) said, 'Ask him [first to find out the truth] about those women who cut their hands.' (Yusuf: 50)

There are other stories of the language of the eyes in Arabic literature. This includes the story of Abu Dulama(1) when he entered the court of the caliph(2) who was surrounded by his notables. The caliph wanted to tease Abu Dulama*,* so he jokingly said to him, 'O, Abu Dulama*.* You have to ridicule one of us, or I will have you killed.'

All the people present were looking at Abu Dulama, each one saying with his gaze, 'Do not lampoon me, and I will give you whatever you wish.' Some of their eyes pleaded with him, while others threatened him with their frowns. Eventually, Abu Dulama decided to please all the attendants and lampooned none other but himself, hoping to gain the gifts that awaited him from the notables. Everyone was surprised by him when he said(1):

(1) Abu Dulama was Zand Ibn Al-Jawn Al-Asadi. He was a talented poet, given to light-heartedness and joviality. He was dark, heavily built and handsome. His father was a slave to a man from the Asad tribe, and the man freed him. He grew up in Kufa and attached himself to the caliphs of Banu Al-ʻAbbas. They liked him and would shower him with gifts, and he praised some of them in poetry. He was accused of heresy because of his impudence, and there are many differing tales about him. He died in the year 161 AH.

(2) He was the Caliph al-Mahdi Al-ʿAbbasi, Muhammad Ibn `Abdullah Abu `Abdullah Al-Mahdi Billah. He was born in 127 AH and died in 169 AH at the age of 42. He was a caliph for 10 years, led a praiseworthy life, and was of seemly appearance and character. He was generous and built Jamiʿ Ar-Rasafa. This was mentioned in Al-A'lam by Az-Zirikli.

'Shall I not tell you of Abu Dulama,
He is neither highly born nor dignified.
If he wears a turban, he is a monkey,
And if he takes off his turban, he is a pig.'

The notable people around the caliph generously rewarded Abu Dulama for these verses of poetry, and he became a wealthy man for his quickly thought out verses.

Therefore, the words, '...well-matched mates with a modest gaze' (Sad: 52) mean that each of these female companions in paradise will lower her gaze from all people except her man, and this is a desirable characteristic in any woman. Additionally, any generous man may give away anything he owns in his life except his wife. This is because he cannot allow anyone to look at her with any desire. This is a characteristic of the faithful people in this world and in the Hereafter.

Thus, one of the virtues and wondrous aspects of faith was that it dislocated false beliefs from the hearts and inherent choices from the minds. Faith also redirected people’s traditional affections. We can see this in the stories of the companions of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him namely the Emigrants (Al-muhajireen) and the Helpers (Al-ansar). Faith removed disbelief from their hearts and erased stubbornness from their minds. Then, it overcame the strongest of their emotions, which is the affection of a man towards his wife. A man from the Helpers said to his brother from the Emigrants, who came without his family, 'Look at my two wives. I will divorce whichever you like so that you may marry her.'(2) Nevertheless, the Emigrant refused the generous offer and said, 'May Allah bless your family and your wealth. Show me where the marketplace is.' This is the degree to which faith impacted the earliest believers.

(1) These two couplets are from a poem in the meter called bahr al-wafir that has a total of four couplets. They were mentioned by Abu Al-Faraj Al-Asfahani in Al-Aghani, Ibn ‘Abd Rabbih in Al-`Aqd Al-Farid and An-Nuwayri in Nihayat Al-'Arab fi Funun Al-Adab.

(2) Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him paired the Emigrants with the Helpers as brothers after the Emigration to Medina. It appears that he paired ‘Abd Ar-Rahman ibn =

Now, we can return to the verse we are studying. Allah Glorified is He describes these wives as '... well-matched (atrab),' (Sad: 52). The word atrab could mean that all these women are equal in appearance or age, such that one of them is not distinguished over the other. They are all beautiful, of one age and one stature. This will ensure that each man's eyes will be kept to their own woman and that no one will desire the female companion of another man. If all the women are of one standard appearance, every man will only look to his wife as well. Another meaning of the word atrab is that every woman will be appropriate to her man and that she has the ability to take the appearance that he likes.

Allah Glorified is He then says: 'This is what you are promised for the Day of Reckoning,' (Sad: 53). Thus, these are the rewards promised for believers on the Last Day. It was Allah Glorified is He Who made that promise, and He is well capable of fulfilling His promises. Indeed, He is the fully Capable (Al-Qadir) the Almighty (Al-'Aziz) and the Ever-Triumphant (Al-Ghalib). There is no power that can object to His wishes and no force that can oppose Him.

As a created being, you may make a promise and intend to fulfil it sincerely. However, you cannot guarantee, with certainty, that your circumstances will allow you to keep your promise. An obstacle may arise and prevent you from = `Awf with Sa`d ibn Ar-Rabi` Al-Ansari Allah be pleased with them. Sa`d said to him, 'My brother, I have the most wealth amongst the people of Medina, so look to half my wealth and take it, and I have two wives, so look which of them is most pleasing to you so that I may divorce her for you.' 'Abd Ar-Rahman ibn 'Awf refused the offer and replied to him, 'May Allah bless your family and your wealth. Show me where the market place is.' They showed him where the marketplace was, and he bought, sold, and made a profit, so he thus came back with some butter and cheese. After some time, he came one day wearing clothes dyed with saffron. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked him, 'How are you?' Abd Ar-Rahman replied, 'O, Messenger of Allah. I married a lady.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked, 'What did you give her as a dowry?' He replied, 'The weight of a date stone in gold.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'A sheep would have been enough.' 'Abd Ar-Rahman Allah be pleased with him later related, '(I was blessed to the extent that) every time I lifted a rock, I would expect to find some gold or silver underneath it.' This was related by Ibn Sa`d in At-Tabaqat Al-Kabir (3/116,117), and Adh-Dhahabi in Siyar A`lam An-Nubala' (1/92).

doing so. Indeed, the promises of Allah are not your promises. Allah’s promises are true because His Power is unrestrained.

Allah Glorified is He said: '... for the Day of Reckoning' (Sad: 53). This refers to the reckoning of the pious people because everyone will be held accountable for their actions on the Day of Judgment, including the faithful obedient and the faithless sinful. So, the rewards mentioned in this verse were referring to the reckoning of the faithful people as Allah Glorified is He says: '...and the devout will have a good place (husn ma’ab) to return to' (Sad: 49).

Allah Glorified is He then said: '…this, verily, shall be Our provision [for you] with no end to it' (Sad: 54). Allah the Exalted does not say, '… this shall be your provision,' but He says: '... Our provision,' (Sad: 54). Indeed, the speech of believers in paradise will constantly confirm the perpetuity of Divine blessings and the truth of Allah’s promise.

After Allah Glorified is He mentions the righteous and pious people, He then mentions evildoers to illustrate their contrasting destiny.

Allah Glorified is He says:

هَٰذَا ۚ وَإِنَّ لِلطَّاغِينَ لَشَرَّ مَآبٍ ﴿٥٥﴾ جَهَنَّمَ يَصْلَوْنَهَا فَبِئْسَ الْمِهَادُ ﴿٥٦﴾
هَٰذَا فَلْيَذُوقُوهُ حَمِيمٌ وَغَسَّاقٌ ﴿٥٧﴾ وَآخَرُ مِن شَكْلِهِ أَزْوَاجٌ ﴿٥٨﴾

But the evildoers will have the worst place to return to [55] Hell to burn in, an evil place to stay [56] all this will be theirs: let them taste it–a scalding, dark, foul fluid [57] and other such torments [58] (The Quran, Sad: 55 - 58)

The words, 'All this ...' (Sad: 55) refer to the rewards prepared for the pious people in paradise. Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '... but verily, the most evil of all abodes (sharra ma’ab) awaits those who transgress the bounds of what is right' (Sad: 55). The Arabic words sharra ma’ab means 'the worst destination, place of return and outcome'. The word ma’ab in this verse has the same meaning as it had previously. It refers to the return of all people to Allah Glorified is He the One Who took the covenant from them and gave them an innate disposition (fitra) to believe in Him.

Every child is born with this innate disposition. However, sinful disbelievers did not fulfil the covenant they took upon themselves. Instead, they went against their previous testimony when Allah the Almighty had asked them in the primordial phase of spirits, 'Am I not your Lord?' They answered: 'Indeed, we do bear witness thereto!' (al-A'raf: 172)

Just as Allah the Exalted elucidates 'the most beautiful of abodes' in the previous verses, He elucidates 'the most evil of abodes' in the verses that followed. He says: 'Hellfire they will have to endure,' (Sad: 56). They will roast in its fires, '...and how vile a resting place (al-mihad) it will be' (Sad: 56). The word Al-mihad (resting place) refers to the bed of a child that has been set out for him to have peaceful sleep. A child has no part in preparing a resting place since he depends on a guardian to prepare it for him. The case is similar with these transgressors as they will have no say regarding the 'resting place' into which Allah the Almighty will cast them. Therefore, the word Al-mihad was used in this verse to mock and ridicule disbelievers, as indeed, their abode in the Hellfire is far from a resting place.

'This, then, is prepared for them, so let them taste it, scorching fire (hameem) and molten pus (ghassaaq)' (Sad: 57). Thus, disbelievers will taste the most severe of punishments. The word hameem refers to a fire that is at its highest possible temperature, and the word ghassaaq refers to the pus that seeps from the burning skins of those inflicted with this punishment. We pray that Allah Glorified is He protect us from such a destiny. The Arabic word ghasaqat is used to describe the flowing nature of a substance. For instance, Arabs used the words ghasaqat 'aynuhu to refer to a person whose tears flowed from his eyes.

The punishment does not end with the hameem and ghassaaq mentioned in this verse, for there are other forms of punishment that will await them. Allah Glorified is He says: '… and coupled with it, further [suffering] of a similar nature' (Sad: 58). For example, there will be punishments with molten metal (muhl). In addition, there will be a tree known as zaqqum which produces fruits that resemble the heads of devils. Therefore, Allah the Almighty has prepared other forms of punishment for transgressors, which He did not mention in the verse we are studying, but has mentioned them in other verses of the Quran.

After Allah Glorified is He gave us this comparison between the reward of pious people and the brutal outcome of evildoers, He illustrated the striking difference between these two groups of people. Indeed, good company assists a person’s obedience and good deeds, whereas bad company pulls its friends into evil and draws them into disobedience.

For instance, a student in school is more likely to succeed if a hardworking friend assists his studies. They may revise together and remind each other of the consequences of negligence on the final result. On the other hand, a student is more likely to fail if he joins a turbulent group of friends. Bad company may persuade an outstanding student to skip their studies or lessons, and he may even learn crooked and corrupting habits.

Consequently, at the end of the year, a successful student may find that his good friend was a major cause for his own accomplishment, while a failing student may blame his bad company for many wasted opportunities.

Due to the importance of this concept, Allah the Exalted chose to illustrate this matter in the following verses.

Allah Glorified is He says:

هَٰذَا فَوْجٌ مُّقْتَحِمٌ مَّعَكُمْ ۖ لَا مَرْحَبًۢا بِهِمْ ۚ إِنَّهُمْ صَالُوا۟ ٱلنَّارِ ﴿٥٩﴾
قَالُوا۟ بَلْ أَنتُمْ لَا مَرْحَبًۢا بِكُمْ ۖ أَنتُمْ قَدَّمْتُمُوهُ لَنَا ۖ فَبِئْسَ ٱلْقَرَارُ ﴿٦٠﴾
قَالُوا۟ رَبَّنَا مَن قَدَّمَ لَنَا هَٰذَا فَزِدْهُ عَذَابًا ضِعْفًا فِى ٱلنَّارِ ﴿٦١﴾

[It will be said], ‘Here is another crowd of people rushing headlong to join you.’ [The response will be], ‘They are not welcome! They will burn in the Fire [59] They will say to them, ‘You are not welcome! It was you who brought this on us, an evil place to stay [60] adding, ‘Our Lord, give double punishment to those who brought this upon us’ [61] (The Quran, Sad: 59 - 61)

These verses illustrate one of the main encounters that will occur on the Day of Judgment between two groups of people who were each other's companions for evil pursuits. One of these groups will be the leading disbelievers, and the other group will be their followers in disbelief. The dialogue itself will be between three groups or parties. These groups will be the angels who guard the fire, the leaders of the disbelievers who will go first into hellfire, and then the followers whom these leaders had misguided in this world.

The angels will direct the first words to the leaders of disbelief who have already been residing in the fire for some time: '[Prepare yourselves as] there is a crowd (fawj) [of your followers] who will rush [into the Fire] (muqtahimmun) with you [soon].' (Sad: 59) Thus, the angels will alert the people of hellfire that a group of their followers will be joining them. The Arabic word muqtahim is used when a person is making a rushing entrance. This means that this late group of disbelievers will enter the fire quickly and forcefully.

Why would people rush as they are entering hellfire? Scholars said that these disbelievers will not be moving by their own free will but, instead, will be forced and pushed into it violently, as Allah Glorified is He says elsewhere: '… on the Day when they shall be thrust into the fire with [an irresistible] thrust' (at-Tur: 13).

The Arabic word fawj (crowd) is used to refer to a group of people, just as we use the words fawj al-hujjaj in our reference to a group of pilgrims or fawj al-musafireen in our reference to a group of travellers.

When angels inform them of newcomers, the leaders of disbelievers in Hellfire will say, 'There is no welcome (la marhaban) for them. Surely, they will be roasting in the Fire [as well]' (Sad: 60). The words la marhaban (no welcome) mean that there will not be any salutations or greetings for these new residents. Generally, this is the behavioural pattern followed by evil friends. In the end, their friendships easily turn into enmity, and they start cursing each other.

In this example, leaders will curse their followers, and followers will curse their leaders. In this verse, we have leaders saying that their followers are not welcome with them. This is because these followers were not entering hellfire to save their leaders or to lighten the punishment for them. They have only entered the fire to be roasted in its flames as well.

The crowd of disbelieving followers who will hurtle into the fire will respond to their leaders, 'No indeed, it is you who has no welcome. You have prepared it for us' (Sad: 60). Indeed, leaders of disbelief had forwarded the messages of misguidance and disbelief to their followers and, thus, brought them to this evil end: '… and how vile a destiny it will be' (al-Mujadala: 8).

Allah Glorified is He says: 'They will say, "Our Lord, doubly increase the torment of the ones who have prepared [this destiny] for us in the Fire' (Sad: 61). In another verse, the Quran describes this situation, quoting disbelievers as saying, 'And they will say, "O, our Lord, we obeyed our leaders and our great men, and it is they who have led us astray from the right path! Our Lord, bring them torment twofold and banish them utterly from Your Mercy."' (Fatir: 67-68) They will ask Allah the Almighty to increase the punishment of their leaders because their leaders did not go astray alone but led them astray as well. There is a dual nature to their crime, and each of these sins deserves a punishment of its own. Thus, leaders must receive a more brutal punishment than their followers. Indeed, Allah the Exalted will not punish his servants with a torment that is more than they deserve.

The words of the followers to their leaders, 'You prepared it for us' (Sad: 60), mean that they have lead them through temptation, embellishments and glamorised misguidance. They facilitated disobedience for them.

In another verse in the chapter of al-Baqara, Allah Glorified is He affirmed that those who were friends in evil will disassociate themselves from one another on that Day. Allah Glorified is He says: '[On that Day] it will come to pass that those who had been [falsely] adored shall disown their followers, and the latter shall see the suffering [that awaits them], with all their hopes cut to pieces! And then those followers shall say, "Would that we had a second chance [in life], so that we could disown them [our leaders] as they have disowned us!" Thus, will Allah show them their works in a manner that will cause them bitter regrets, but they will not come out of the Fire.' (al-Baqara: 166-167)

This situation resembles Satan's disownment of his followers on the Day of Judgment. Satan will say, 'Behold, Allah promised you the true promise! I, too, held out [all manner of] promises to you, but I deceived you. Yet, I had no power at all over you. I but called you, and you responded to me. Hence, do not blame me, but blame yourselves. It is not for me to respond to your cries, nor for you to respond to mine.' (Ibrahim: 22)

Therefore, this is the end of those who are friends in evil actions. Indeed, their friendship will end in enmity and mutual cursing. As for those who are friends in righteousness, they will be associates in this world and in the next.

This is clear in Allah's saying: 'On that Day, all friends (al-akhilla') will be enemies to one another except the righteous [friends]' (az-Zukhruf: 67). The word akhilla' (friends) is the plural of the word khaleel. This khulla (friendship) means that they love each other for the sake of Allah Glorified is He. They met upon this agreement and separated upon it. Their friendship transcends mere meetings and empty gestures; instead, it causes their minds to merge as if the very atoms of their bodies have become intermingled.

This is what Isma'il Sabri,(1) may Allah have mercy upon him, articulated when he said:

'And when we met, our yearning reached its limit,
Two companions melting in ardour after blames,
As though a friend in the qualities of his friend,
Flowed into an embrace, becoming the same.'(2)

How can the leaders of disbelief embellish misguidance and seduce their followers by using falsehood? Scholars said that the heavenly way must necessarily conflict with the soul's lusts and caprices and that when these lusts and caprices overcome man, he directs his worship to a false deity that sets no commandments or prohibitions. This is how people go astray and come to worship idols and inanimate objects. This worship gives them the religious feelings that they are naturally inclined to possess but without religious obligations. They are liberating themselves from Divine commandments of Allah’s true Path by inventing their own deities.

(1) He was Isma'il Sabri Basha, one of the best poets of the modern era. He distinguished himself by the beauty of his verses and the sweetness of his style. He studied law in France and rose through the ranks of judgeship in Egypt. He used to write his poetry in the margins of books and magazines, and his friends would spread it furtively. He rejected a meeting with Lord Cromer, saying, 'I will never be a prime minister if I must abandon my conscience.' He was born in 1854 CE and passed away in 1923 CE at the age of 69.

(2) These two couplets are in the meter of bahr at-tawil.

We previously said that worship (Al-'ibada) is the obedience of the devotee to their deity’s commandments and prohibitions. The sun or the moon did not issue any commandments or prohibitions to the people who worshipped them and did not offer them any rewards or warn them from any punishments. Thus, these are false deities because the true deity, Allah the Exalted has a defined path and a specific set of orders and bans. He also offers paradise as a reward for those who obey His commandments and will punish the people who defy these orders.

The people of the fire then made another observation. Allah Glorified is He says:

أَمْ زَاغَتْ عَنْهُمُ ٱلْأَبْصَٰرُ ﴿٦٣﴾ إِنَّ ذَٰلِكَ لَحَقٌّ تَخَاصُمُ أَهْلِ ٱلنَّارِ ﴿٦٤﴾

They will say, ‘Why do we not see those we thought were bad’ [62] and took as a laughing-stock? Have our eyes missed them? [63] This is how it will really be: the inhabitants of the Fire will blame one another in this way [64] (The Quran, Sad: 62 - 64)

The people of the fire will wonder about the destiny of the people they had considered as evil in the past life, namely the believers in Allah. This means that the disbelievers of Quraysh will wonder about the place of Prophet Muhammad’s Companions whom they had assumed were misguided (for not worshipping their idols) in this world.

Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him heard the same sayings from the disbelievers at his time. They said, 'We do not see in you anything but a mortal man like ourselves, and we do not see that any people follow you except those who are quite obviously the most inferior among us, and we do not see that you could be in any way superior to us. On the contrary, we think that you are liars.' (Hud: 27) The disbelievers of Mecca directed similar descriptions to the early Companions of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him such as Bilal and Khabbab Allah be pleased with them.

So, leaders of disbelievers will be looking around in the fire and will not be able to find these ‘wicked’ men with them. They will ask, surprisingly, 'How is it that we do not see [here any of the] men whom we considered wicked?' (Sad: 62) Then, they will return to themselves and wonder if they were mistaken to have made believers the targets of their worldly mockery and derision: 'Were we incorrect in making them a target of our derision (sikhriyya)?' Indeed, in this past life, they described them as wicked when they were actually righteous men. Thus, they will find that their destination was not the same as the people of the fire. The word sikhriyya which is used in this verse means ridicule and mockery. However, the word sukhriyya with a damma refers to the exploitation of a person in a form of labour.

Then, disbelievers will ask further questions: '... Or is it that [they are here, and] our eyes have missed them?' (Sad: 63) They will wonder if the believers in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were, perhaps, in the fire, but that their eyes had been averted from seeing the believers’ presence. This, too, was not true as these believers will be in paradise.

Indeed, the verse started by mentioning the sayings of the disbelievers with the phrase: '... How is it that we do not see?' (Sad: 62) This is very similar to the words spoken by Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him in the story of the hoopoe when he said: 'How is it that I do not see the hoopoe' (an-Naml: 20). He meant to say that the hoopoe must surely be present although not being visible to him. Then, he amended his statement by saying: '... or could he be absent from this gathering?' (an-Naml: 20)

Allah Glorified is He then says: 'Indeed, such will be the [confusion and] mutual wrangling of the people of Hellfire’ (Sad: 64). The mutual enmity of the people of the fire is inevitable, for they will be misguided or have been misguiding to others. Therefore, each group will cast the blame on the other after seeing the outcome of their actions.

On top of that, it is the Quran which has informed us of their future enmity, and the Quran does not make statements that contradict reality. You can see this fact in the Quranic references to society, from the time of Prophet Muhammad until the present day. Allah the Most High did not inform us of anything that contradicted reality. Allah Glorified is He said: '… Thus, (it is that) no change will you ever find in Allah's Way' (Fatir: 43).

For example, the believers were victorious over the disbelievers in the battle of Badr and took some of the disbelievers as captives. A year later, the battle of Uhud followed, and the disbelievers came from Mecca to a place close to Medina. The indicators were pointing to a victory for the Muslims, but they contravened Allah's Way by disobeying Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had ordered the archers not to leave their posts for any reason. However, when the archers saw that the Muslims had the upper hand and that victory was imminent, they rushed to the battlefield to gather the war spoils and abandoned their posts. The disbelievers seized the opportunity and flanked the Muslims. Thus, the initial victory of the Muslims was dispersed and, although they were not defeated in this battle, they were not triumphant. This happened after Allah the Almighty had promised victory to Prophet Muhammad's troops. Allah Glorified is He says: 'For, long ago has Our Word gone forth unto Our servants, the messengers, that, verily, they indeed would be aided and that, verily, Our hosts would [in the end] be victorious,' (as-Saffat: 171-173).

Despite this, the lack of victory at Uhud was beneficial for the faith of Islam, for had the Muslims been victorious in spite of their disobedience to Prophet Muhammad's commands, his commandments would have become less significant in their future. They would have said, 'We were disobedient in the battle of Uhud and were still victorious.' Thus, if you see a soldier of Islam defeated, know that he has gone against Allah's orders in some form by disobeying the directions of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or the directions of the commander put in authority by Prophet Muhammad.

So, Allah's traditions regarding victory are constant, but the believer's discipline in following Allah's orders might deviate. This is why we say that Muslims were not victorious in the battle of Uhud, but Islam was victorious as were the commandments of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Similarly, Allah the Exalted has warned us about self-delusion and pride in our strength and numbers because victory does not necessarily come from large numbers. Victory only comes when we follow Allah's Decrees. This was a lesson we learnt at the battle of Hunayn. It was Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him himself who was afflicted by this illusion of numbers. It was claimed that when he saw the number of Muslims compared to the number of disbelievers, he said, 'We will not be defeated today for lack of numbers.'(1) Allah Glorified is He taught the Muslims an unforgettable lesson on that day. The disbelievers were almost victorious, but Allah's Mercy was eventually bestowed upon the believers. Then, with Allah's grace, the battle ended in the favour of the Muslims.

Pride and self-delusion are incompatible with the principles of discipline, and victory is neither by numbers nor by technology. Victory only comes from following Allah's Commandments as He says: 'Fight against them! Allah will chastise them by your hands will bring disgrace upon them and will aid you against them, and He will soothe the hearts of those who believe.' (at-Tawba: 14) He also says: '… and it was not you who cast, when you did cast it, but it was Allah Who cast [the winning strike]' (al-Anfal: 17).

Allah the Exalted told us that the people of the fire will fight amongst themselves. Therefore, we have faith that these events will happen as He told them to us.

Allah the Almighty then chose to give Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him evidence by saying:

(1) Allah Glorified is He said, "Indeed, Allah has aided you on many battlefields [when you were few]. and [He did so, too,] on the Day of Hunayn, when you took pride in your great numbers they proved of no avail whatsoever to you …" (at-Tawba: 25). Ibn Hisham said in As-Sira An-Nabawiyya (4/73) that Muhammad ibn Ishaq said, 'Some of the people of Mecca informed me that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said when leaving Mecca for Hunayn, seeing the large number of troops he had with him, 'We will not be defeated today for lack of numbers.' Some people, however, claim that it was a man from the tribe of Bani Bakr who said this phrase.

رَبُّ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ وَمَا بَيْنَهُمَا ٱلْعَزِيزُ ٱلْغَفَّٰرُ ﴿٦٦﴾

[Prophet] say, ‘I am only here to give warning. There is no god but God the One, the All Powerful [65] Lord of the heavens and earth and everything between, the Almighty, the Most Forgiving [66] (The Quran, Sad: 65-66)

We understand these verses in light of what the Quran narrated to us at the beginning of the chapter, regarding the disbelievers’ denial of Prophet Muhammad’s message. In the first verses of the chapter, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Now these (people) deem it strange that a warner should have come unto them from their own midst, and [so] the deniers of the truth are saying, "A [mere] spellbinder is he, a liar! Does he claim that all the deities are [but] one god [Allah]? Verily, a most strange thing [monotheism} is,'' (Sad: 4-5) until they said, '"Has the reminding revelation been revealed to him [Muhammad] from amongst all of us?" Nay, but it is My Own reminder that they distrust! Nay, they have not yet tasted my punishment.' (Sad: 8)

So, the verses at the beginning of the chapter show us that these people have misunderstandings regarding two issues. The first is the issue of Divine unity as in their words, 'Does he claim that all the deities are [but] one god,' (Sad: 5) and the second is prophethood as in their words: 'Has the reminding [book] been revealed to him [Muhammad] from amongst all of us?' (Sad: 8)

Thus, Allah revealed verses that aimed to correct these misunderstandings. Allah Glorified is He says in this instance: 'Say [O, Muhammad]: I am only a warner' (Sad: 65). Allah the Exalted chose to mention the warning in this verse, even though Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came as both a bearer of glad tidings and a warner because this speech is aimed at disbelievers.

Regarding the other matter, namely Allah’s Oneness, Allah Glorified is He says: 'There is no deity except Allah, the One, Who holds absolute control over all that exists, the Lord of the heavens and the earth and all that is between them the Almighty the All-Forgiving!' (Sad: 65-66)

Allah Glorified is He says:

قُلْ هُوَ نَبَؤٌا۟ عَظِيمٌ ﴿٦٧﴾ أَنتُمْ عَنْهُ مُعْرِضُونَ ﴿٦٨﴾ مَا كَانَ لِىَ مِنْ عِلْمٍۭ
بِٱلْمَلَإِ ٱلْأَعْلَىٰٓ إِذْ يَخْتَصِمُونَ ﴿٦٩﴾ إِن يُوحَىٰٓ إِلَىَّ إِلَّآ أَنَّمَآ أَنَا۠ نَذِيرٌ مُّبِينٌ ﴿٧٠﴾

Say, This message is a mighty one [67] yet you ignore it [68]
I have no knowledge of what those on high discuss [69]
it is only revealed to me that I am here to give clear warning[70]
(The Quran, Sad: 67-70)

The word naba' (message) refers to any important piece of information that is backed up by facts that are in accordance with reality. Allah Glorified is He said in the chapter of an-Naba': 'About what do they (most often) ask one another? About the notable tiding (an-naba') [of resurrection]' (an-Naba': 1-2). He described it as 'notable' because the matters of this world and the Hereafter are dependent upon it. If a person follows their sinful passions in this world, then in the next world, they will roast in a fire that has no end.

It is incumbent upon every person to clarify his goals in life. The real goal is that which has no more phases after it. Goals which are followed by other needs are not true goals but are only stages that take a person to a further endeavour. If a student passes an admission exam to a school, this success takes them only to primary school. Success in this stage will allow the student to enter secondary school, and then to university, and so on.

Even if that person obtains a doctorate, he will still move on to continuous stages until he dies. Death is not the ultimate end, for Paradise or the Hellfire come after it. These are the goals after which there are no others because they are ever lasting. This is why Allah Glorified is He brought these goals to our attention.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'It is a notable tiding (naba'), from which you [the disbelievers] are veering away (mu'ridoon).' The word mu'rid means 'a person who turns away'. This idiom describes a common form of behaviour when people are called to spend charitably or perform some other good deeds. Some of them turn away, and they may do so in stages. Firstly, they may look away, and then turn their heads and sides before walking away as they give us their backs.

The Quran has painted this picture for us. Allah Glorified is He describes the destiny of those who refuse to spend their money in the way of Allah in the following verse: '… But as for all who lay up treasures of gold and silver and do not spend them for the sake of Allah, give them the tiding of grievous suffering [in the life to come]. [This will happen] on the Day when that [hoarded wealth] shall be heated in the fire of hell and their foreheads and their sides and their backs branded therewith.' (at-Tawba: 35)

Thus, the reward is from the same breed as the deed. They will be burnt in the same order of their veering away in this world: 'These are the treasures which you have laid up for yourselves! Taste, then, [the evil of] your hoarded treasures.' (at-Tawba: 35) So, the limbs which participated in turning away are the very ones which will be punished, and the amount of punishment will be in accordance to the amount of turning away that they did.

Then, Allah the Most High told us that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him does not know the Unseen Knowledge (Ghayb). Allah Glorified is He says: '[Say, O Muhammad:] … 'In no way did I have any knowledge of the most exalted chiefs [of the Angels] as they took adversary stands [amongst themselves].' (Sad: 69)

Allah Glorified is He previously spoke of the argumentation of the people of the fire by saying, 'Indeed, such will be the [confusion and] mutual wrangling of the people of Hellfire' (Sad: 64). Allah the Almighty describes the argument presented by the angels at the time of the creation of Prophet Adam peace be upon him: 'Will You place on it beings that will spread corruption thereon and shed blood, whereas it is we who extol Your limitless Glory, praise you and hallow your name?' (al-Baqara: 30) This was the 'argument' presented by the angels. It was not a traditional argument as it is unlike the stubborn arguments presented by human beings against Allah's Orders. Allah Glorified is He describes these angels: 'Nay, [they are] honoured servants. They speak not until He has spoken unto them, and [whenever they act,] they act at His orders.' (al-Anbiya': 26-27)

Therefore, the conversation that took place between Allah and the angels was merely named an argumentation, although it seemed that the angels were only in dismay that He was going to create yet another set of created beings who would disobey Him and spread corruption in the earth, just as the jinn had done before them.

Then, Allah the Exalted told us that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him does not know the Unseen Knowledge by himself. Rather, Allah Glorified is He informs him of this knowledge through revelation: 'Decidedly, nothing is revealed to me except that surely I am only an evident constant warner.' (Sad: 70)

Thus, the One Who taught human beings these concepts will teach them about things to come, and this is a high level in the knowledge of the Unseen. Indeed, the Unseen is veiled from us. Similarly, the past and future times are also veiled. The past is veiled because the events of ancient times, for example, were not recorded. Even the records laid by human beings are spurious because they have only stated a man's opinion about a particular event. Similarly, the future hides what is yet to happen. As for the present time that we live in, most of it occurs in other places that are veiled from us.

The objective of this verse is to confirm that disbelievers will argue together in hellfire. This is because the one who informed us that the angels argued with Allah Glorified is He has also informed us that the disbelievers will argue with each other.

Allah Glorified is He also said: '... evident constant warner' (Sad: 70). These words were not addressed to righteous people. Rather, they were being addressed to disobedient people. Allah Glorified is He says:

وَنَفَخْتُ فِيهِ مِن رُّوحِى فَقَعُوا۟ لَهُۥ سَٰجِدِينَ ﴿٧٢﴾ فَسَجَدَ ٱلْمَلَٰٓئِكَةُ
كُلُّهُمْ أَجْمَعُونَ ﴿٧٣﴾ إِلَّآ إِبْلِيسَ ٱسْتَكْبَرَ وَكَانَ مِنَ ٱلْكَٰفِرِينَ ﴿٧٤﴾

Your Lord said to the angels, 'I will create a man from clay [71] When I have shaped him and breathed from My Spirit into him, bow down before him [72] The angels all bowed down together [73] but not Iblis, who was too proud. He became a rebel [74] (The Quran, Sad: 71-74)

This speech from Allah the Most High was to inform the angels that He will create Prophet Adam peace be upon him. Yet, the angels assumed that

Allah the Almighty was consulting them regarding the creation of man, and this is why they pointed out their fears. They should have realised that the matter was settled, that the case was closed and that Allah was informing them by saying, 'Behold, indeed, I will create (inni khaliq) ...' (Sad: 71), which is in an emphatic lexical tone.

Thus, we should mention that some people point out Allah's speech regarding the creation of man from clay. They say that the Quran said in one verse that He created Adam 'from water'. In another verse, He said that Adam was created from mud (teen). In another verse, the Quran stated that Adam was created from dark slime (hama' masnun). Still another verse stated that He was created from sounding clay (salsal).

The fact, however, is that these are various stages of one creation, and not different starting points for His creation. When earth is mixed with water, it becomes clay. If clay is left until it starts to decay and its smell changes, it will be 'dark slime' (hama' masnun), and if it dries and becomes hard, then it will be sounding clay (salsal) like pottery.

When Allah the Almighty created man, He did so from a type of clay that contains all of the elements of soil. Scientists have discovered that soil like this is that which is suitable for agriculture because if clay or soil is too cohesive, the water remains around the roots and the plants become unstable and wilt. If it is too sandy, the water leaks away before the roots can absorb it. Thus, we need a form of soil that is between the two types such that it holds enough water for the plants to benefit from and absorb the nutrients while allowing the excess water to drain away without harming the roots.

Scientists have discovered that the human body is composed of sixteen elements, starting with oxygen which comprises 67%, the highest percentage of all, and ending with manganese. These sixteen elements have been also found to be the ingredients of clay which confirms the truth that Allah has created man from clay.

Allah says: '… and when I have formed him fully and breathed into him of My spirit, fall you down before him in prostration' (Sad: 72). Allah the Almighty thus commanded the angels that, when the creation of Adam has been completed, both his form and his soul, they should bow down before him. That was not meant as worship of Adam but as obedience of the One Who has given the command to bow down. This act of prostration was not meant to ascribe any divinity to the new created being or hold him sacred, but the angels obeyed it solely in submission to the Lord and Creator Who has thus ordered them. For example, we prostrate ourselves in the direction of the Ka'ba. Is this meant to idolise it? No, rather, it is showing obedience to Allah Who has made it obligatory for us to observe salat (prayer) in its direction.

So when Allah the Exalted gave His command: 'The angels prostrated themselves, all of them together except Satan. He found glory in his arrogance and [thus] became one of the disbelievers.' (Sad: 73-74)

Allah Glorified is He asked Iblis (Satan):

قَالَ يَٰٓإِبۡلِيسُ مَا مَنَعَكَ أَن تَسۡجُدَ لِمَا خَلَقۡتُ بِيَدَيَّۖ
أَسۡتَكۡبَرۡتَ أَمۡ كُنتَ مِنَ ٱلۡعَالِينَ ٧٥

God said, 'Iblis, what prevents you from bowing down to the man I have made with My own hands? Are you too high and mighty?' [75] (The Quran, Sad: 75)

Allah tells this story of Iblis' disobedience in seven chapters of the Quran, each time with a different emphasis. In one verse, for example, He says about Iblis (Satan), '… he refused ...' (al-Hijr: 31) and in another, '… [He] refused and gloried in his arrogance …' (al-Baqara: 34).

It is worth mentioning, before proceeding with our reflections on the story, that we highlight that the garden (janna) from which Adam was driven to the earth was not the same eternal Garden of Paradise. Adam peace be upon him was not created for paradise but later was dismissed from it as a punishment because of his disobedience. Rather, Adam was created to be a vicegerent on earth. This is the first information Allah the Most High gives about the creation of Adam: '… I am putting a successor on earth …' (al-Baqara: 30). Thus, Adam was originally created to live on earth. Humankind is two categories: infallible, namely the messengers, and fallible, namely the generality of mankind. Since Adam is the father of all humankind, it was necessary that he should embody the characteristics of both categories. In the beginning, Adam forgot his Lord's Command, so he disobeyed it. Then, Allah the Exalted turned to him with Mercy accepted his repentance and made him an infallible messenger who would teach His guidance to his offspring: humankind. Thus, Adam peace be upon him did not disobey Allah while he was a prophet, but before he was chosen for the mission of prophethood.

This was the purpose of creating Adam, then, as Allah announced to the angels even before creating him. However, out of His Mercy and Justice, Allah did not want to put Adam to the real test once created. He did not want to send him down to the earth and order him to make it prosperous according to His guidance, thus charge him with a huge responsibility for which he was unprepared. This is why Allah put Adam first in that garden that contained all the necessities and luxuries of life he needed. He gave him simple commands to abide by in it so as to prepare and train him for the ultimate mission.

Allah the Almighty permitted Adam to eat from anything in the garden except for one tree, from which he was forbidden even to approach, let alone eat. This was intended to train Adam for the Divine ordinance that necessarily includes obligations and prohibitions. Then, He told Adam that Iblis (Satan) was his sworn enemy and cautioned him against his evil insinuations.

Iblis (Satan) did attempt to lead Adam astray and succeeded in that. Adam ate from the prohibited tree, which was the sin that caused his nakedness to be exposed for the first time. This was meant to symbolise that what causes people to be exposed and their weaknesses to be subject to censure is violation of Allah's Law.

Reflect upon these Words of Allah: '...but do not approach this one tree...' (al-Baqara: 35). Allah did not tell Adam: ‘Do not eat from this one tree’, but He prohibited them from even coming close to it because whoever approaches the forbidden limits is on the brink of trespassing them. This is why when Allah explains to us in the Quran the limits of what He has made permissible for us, He says: '... These are the bounds set by Allah; do not, then, transgress them ...' (al-Baqara: 229). When He explains the limits of what He has forbidden, He says: '... These are the bounds set by Allah: do not, then, approach them ...' (al-Baqara: 187).

In the verse we are reflecting upon, Allah Glorified is He says, addressing Iblis (Satan): '... what prevents you from bowing down ...' (Sad: 75). In the chapter of al-A'raf, He says: '... What has kept you that you do not bow down?...' (al-A'raf: 12) Both structures mean the same. The slight difference between the original two structures in Arabic is that the first is meant to ask Iblis (Satan) why he refused to bow down before Adam. The second means 'did something prevent him from bowing down despite himself?

Allah the Exalted says, describing Adam peace be upon him: '... the man I have made with My own Hands ...' (Sad: 75). This is to honour Adam and show his elevated status before Allah. Let it indeed suffice as an honour to Adam that Allah associates his creation directly with Himself in the aforementioned verse.

Allah Glorified is He continues, addressing Iblis (Satan): '... Are you too high and mighty?' (Sad: 75) The words 'high' and 'mighty' are used in this verse as far less eloquent equivalents to two separate descriptions in the Arabic structure of the verse. The first word, 'too high', denotes 'arrogance'; what this means is whether it was arrogance that prevented Iblis (Satan) from bowing down before Adam in the first place. The second word, 'mighty', is used in this verse as a translation for the Arabic word used in the original structure of the verse: al-'alin.

Scholars have differed concerning the interpretation of the word 'alin. Some of them(1) said it denotes arrogance, so the meaning is the following: 'O, Iblis, has arrogance driven you to reject Allah's Command?' An example of this word being used to denote the meaning of 'arrogant' is found in this verse about Pharaoh: '… for, verily, Pharaoh 'ala (was mighty) on earth ...' (Yunus: 83).

(1) Al-Qurtubi said in his exegesis that al-'alin means those who are too proud that they see themselves above obedience to Allah [8/5871]. Ibn Al-Jawzi said in Zad Al-Masir, it means Satan was too arrogant that he refused to comply with Allah's Command. At-Tabari said in his commentary on the verse, 'It means 'Did you, Satan, deem yourself too great to bow down to Adam, and thus did not bow down before him out of arrogance, even though you were not proud and arrogant before that? Or have you already thought yourself above your Lord even before the creation of Adam?'

Allah the Almighty also says: 'As for that [happy] life in the Hereafter, We grant it [only] to those who do not seek 'uluwwan (exalting themselves on earth)…' (al-Qasas: 83). Both 'ala and 'uluwwan are derived from the same root as 'alin and have the same meaning.

Other scholars said that the word 'alin in the verse we are considering refers to the group of angels who were not included in the command to bow down before Adam peace be upon him. The angels who were ordered to bow down before Adam were those whose duties pertain to the life of humankind. These angels are '… those who regulate the affair' (an-Nazi'at: 5), and those who protect human beings: 'Each person has guardian angels before him and behind, watching over him by Allah's command …' (ar-Ra'd: 11). These are the ones who were ordered to bow down before Adam. As for the 'alin, they are the angels who have no work to do other than glorifying Allah and praising His Name. This is the only mission for which they are created. They have no relation to this universe and know nothing of it.

Thus, when Allah the Exalted asked Iblis (Satan) if what prevented him from bowing down was that he thought himself from al-'alin, the word was meant to refer to the angels who were not included in the command. Considering the word means 'arrogant' is inaccurate, for this meaning is already expressed in the word istakbarta (denoting 'high') that precedes it.

Now, let us review the different opinions(1) of scholars concerning the nature of Iblis (Satan). Some of them said he was an angel, and others said he was a jinni. Those who hold the first opinion seek evidence in the Words of Allah: 'Your Lord said unto the angels, "Behold, indeed, I will create a human being out of clay, and when I have formed him fully and breathed into him of My spirit, fall you down before him in prostration!"' (Sad: 71-72) They say that Iblis (Satan) must therefore be an angel because the order was given to them as the verse shows. Were he not from the angels, he would not have been punished for his rebellion and refusal to bow down before Adam. This view, however, can be decisively refuted. Analogy and reasoning are used to infer rulings in Islam in case there is no clear text in the Quran or Sunnah that directly explains that ruling. In the chapter of al-Kahf, there is an unequivocal textual proof that Iblis was never an angel, for Allah says: 'We said to the angels, "Bow down before Adam," and they all bowed down, but not Iblis; he was one of the jinns, and he disobeyed his Lord's command …' (al-Kahf: 50). How then can we say Iblis was an angel, while Allah explicitly states that he was a jinni?

(1) In his exegesis of verse no. 50 of the chapter of al-Kahf, At-Tabari mentions the various views of scholars concerning the nature of Iblis (Satan). Some hold the view that he was from a tribe known as Al-Jinn; others said that he was one of the gatekeepers of paradise. Other scholars say that he was referred to as a jinn because he was istajann (hidden) from the eyes of humankind.

Some might inquire: 'Why then did Allah punish him for not bowing down before Adam?' To answer this, we need to know that the angels have no free will to choose to obey Allah or defy Him. It is their natural disposition to be totally submissive to Him, as Allah says: '... angels who never disobey Allah's Commands to them, but do as they are ordered' (at-Tahrim: 6). Unlike angels, humankind and jinns are given the freedom of choice between faith and disbelief, obedience and disobedience. Thus, if one of them commits himself to obedience, he is better than the angels, for the angels do not have the power to disobey Allah. As for people and jinn, they can disobey Him, but the devout amongst them choose not to do so.

Allah bestowed upon Iblis (Satan) a distinctive status amongst the angels, for he took it upon himself to obey His Lord by his own will and choice. It was said that he was called 'The Pride of the Angels' because of his virtue over them. Therefore, when Allah gave the angels the command to bow down before Adam, Iblis was also included. Since he had always chosen to be devout to his Lord, which earned him that honourable status amongst the angels, it befitted him then to obey this command of his Lord.

Even considering the view that he was below the angels, a command that was given to his superiors and whom they obeyed must necessarily have included him as well, being inferior to them, and he should have obeyed it, too. Suppose a president of a state entered a room, and his ministers all stood up as a token of respect. It would be then even more incumbent on undersecretaries, being their inferiors, to stand up for the president. No need, therefore, to dispute over this point with no avail.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'Thereupon the angels prostrated themselves, all of them together except Satan. He found glory in his arrogance and [thus] became one of the disbelievers.' (Sad: 73-74) Accordingly, Iblis (Satan) had the free will to choose, and since he chose to disobey Allah, he deserved to be punished.

In the following verse, Allah Glorified is He tells the reason on which basis Iblis disobeyed the command to bow down to Adam:

قَالَ أَنَا۠ خَيْرٌ مِّنْهُ خَلَقْتَنِى مِن نَّارٍ وَخَلَقْتَهُۥ مِن طِينٍ ٧٦

Iblis said, 'I am better than him: You made me from fire, and him from clay' [76] (The Quran, Sad: 76)

Indeed Adam peace be upon him was made from clay and Iblis (Satan) was made from fire, but based on what argument can one claim that clay is inferior to fire? Anything in creation does not derive its worth from its kind or composition, but from its Creator. So one species is not better than another, for Allah has created them all and given each of them a purpose in life. All humankind and jinns are equal before Allah, and superiority is solely on the basis of devoutness. This is what makes believers and disbelievers receive their provisions alike from Allah the Most High. What Allah gives specially to believers is the gift of being His true worshippers, for they have chosen to embrace faith while others have chosen to defy their Lord and Creator. So, when Iblis (Satan) rebelled against Allah's Command, claiming superiority over Adam, Allah told him:

قَالَ فَٱخْرُجْ مِنْهَا فَإِنَّكَ رَجِيمٌ ٧٧ وَإِنَّ عَلَيْكَ لَعْنَتِىٓ إِلَىٰ يَوْمِ ٱلدِّينِ ٧٨

Get out of here! You are rejected [77]
My rejection will follow you till the Day of Judgement! [78] (The Quran, Sad: 77-78)

Since his disobedience stemmed from arrogant defiance of his Lord, Allah punished Iblis (Satan) by eternal expulsion from His Mercy. The verse which says, 'My rejection will follow you till the Day of Judgment!' (Sad: 78) comes as emphasis of the decree issued against Iblis and stated in the preceding verse: '… You are rejected.' (Sad: 77)

Having been turned out of Allah's Mercy, Iblis (Satan) replies:

إِلَىٰ يَوۡمِ ٱلۡوَقۡتِ ٱلۡمَعۡلُومِ ٨١

But Iblis said, 'My Lord, grant me respite until the Day when they are raised from the dead' [79] So He said, 'You have respite [80] till the Appointed Day [81] (The Quran, Sad: 79-81)

In reply to his Lord's decree against him, Iblis entreats Him to delay his death until the Final Day. This proves that he believes everyone has an appointed day when his life in this world must inevitably come to an end. This also exposes his falsehood and malice when he said to Adam peace be upon him trying to tempt him to eat from the forbidden tree: '... shall I show you the tree of immortality and power that never decays?' (Ta Ha: 120) Had there been a tree that could give one eternity, why had he not eaten from it himself, instead of asking his Lord to give him respite till the Final Day? This also shows the heedlessness of Adam, for had he been mindful then of this plain truth, that this life must certainly end, he would not have eaten from the tree.

It is also worthy to note that Iblis (Satan) himself undertook the plot against Adam peace be upon him. He did not leave this task of tempting the father of humankind to any one of his offspring. Scholars say Adam was honoured by his Lord so much that he was granted the ranks of the angels. It was not appropriate, therefore, to assign the job of tempting him to any but the very worst of all devils: Iblis (Satan) himself.

Thus, Allah granted Iblis what he asked and delayed his end till the Day when creatures are resurrected for reckoning. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

قَالَ فَبِعِزَّتِكَ لَأُغۡوِيَنَّهُمۡ أَجۡمَعِينَ ٨٢ إِلَّا عِبَادَكَ مِنۡهُمُ ٱلۡمُخۡلَصِينَ ٨٣

Iblis said, "I swear by Your might! I will tempt all [82] but Your true servants" [83] (The Quran, Sad: 82 - 83)

This verse indicates that the enmity Iblis (Satan) harboured was not against his Lord, but Adam and his offspring. Iblis (Satan) knew how to make an oath, when he said: '... I swear by Your Might ...' (Sad: 82). He knew Allah is the Almighty; he knew He is far Exalted above any need for them, their faith or their worship. Indeed we do not benefit Allah by our worship, do we harm Him by our disobedience. It is own for our own good, so let each do what he likes and bear the consequences then: '…"Now the truth has come from your Lord. Let those who wish to believe in it do so and let those who wish to reject it do so." We have prepared a Fire for the wrongdoers ...' (al-Kahf: 29). Fully mindful of this ultimate truth, Iblis (Satan) has decided to tempt all humankind into sinfulness. Nevertheless, he knows with certainty that he can have no power over those servants of Allah who are truly devoted to Him, so he says: '… I will tempt all but Your true servants' (Sad: 82-83). Iblis (Satan) knows Allah is Independent of any need of His servants or their worship, so he decided to avenge on the offspring of Adam by leading them astray.

Allah Glorified is He says afterwards:

قَالَ فَٱلۡحَقُّ وَٱلۡحَقَّ أَقُولُ (٨٤)
لَأَمۡلَأَنَّ جَهَنَّمَ مِنكَ وَمِمَّن تَبِعَكَ مِنۡهُمۡ أَجۡمَعِينَ (٨٥)

Allah said, "This is the truth – I speak only the truth [84] I will fill Hell with you and all those that follow you" [85] (The Quran, Sad: 84 - 85)

Allah the Exalted speaks only the truth and whatever He does is done with truth, so He tells Iblis (Satan) that what He has done to him, the punishment He inflicted on him, has certainly been done with truth, for He is the Lord of truth. Allah declares that He will fill hellfire with Iblis and whoever follows his way of people and jinns, his offspring and Adam's offspring. This is a deserved punishment. Allah the Almighty is never unjust to any creature.

Some would wonder if this declaration Allah makes to Iblis bear proof that He has already preordained Hell or Paradise for whomever He wills of His servants. Does it mean they have no choice, and Allah has already decided their destinies even before they were created? To answer this, we must know that there is no compulsion in the case. The truth is that Allah, Who is the Creator of all humankind and jinn, knows well what He has created. His omnipotent Knowledge has already encompassed all about the choices His servants would make. Based on that Knowledge, he has decided the final destiny of each. He does not force anyone to make a certain choice or another. To Allah belongs the Highest Similitude, yet there is no harm of using comparisons for the purpose of illustration. A teacher, based on expert knowledge of his students, can well predict their results. He would tell who would pass, who would fail and who would excel. Does he exercise any interference, let alone compulsion, with his students? No, but he can pass judgements based on his knowledge of them, and each student certainly has full power and freedom to study or not and write whatever they choose in their exams.

Allah Glorified is He concludes the chapter with the following verses:

إِنْ هُوَ إِلَّا ذِكْرٌ لِّلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٨٧﴾ وَلَتَعْلَمُنَّ نَبَأَهُۥ بَعْدَ حِينٍۭ ﴿٨٨﴾

[Prophet], say, 'I ask no reward from you for this, nor do I claim to be what I am not [86] This is only a warning for all people [87] In time you will certainly come to know its truth' [88] (The Quran, Sad: 86 - 88)

The first verse begins with an order to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The original Arabic text of the verse literally translates as the following: '… I do not ask any reward from you. …' The use of 'any' is for the sake of emphasis. Were it, '… I do not ask reward from you …', without using 'any', it would be correct and would convey the same meaning. Still, the emphasis added to the structure is meant to tell that Prophet Muhammad does not seek by his call anything that can possibly be called 'reward', not even the most trifling thing that can be given by way of reward. Is it exactly the same to say, 'I do not have money,' or 'I do not have any money'? The latter structure adds more emphasis to the meaning. It means the speaker does not have even a penny.

In this verse, Allah orders Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to tell his people that he was after no reward from them. This bears a message that what the Prophet was sent with is for the good of people in everything pertaining to this worldly life and the Afterlife. Therefore, he certainly deserves a reward, but he never asked people for it, for no human being could ever pay him his due for the service he has rendered to humanity by guiding them to the true religion. Only Allah the Most High can reward him for that; He alone is Capable of recompensing His Messenger for the great good he has done. It is not that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not want a reward at all. Rather, he wanted to have it from the One Who has sent him with the Message.

All the messengers of Allah have said as such to their people. They all declared that even though they reserved to be rewarded they wanted no reward from their people. The only exceptions from this were Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) and Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon them. Why is this so? Scholars say that the first person Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) called to faith was his uncle Azar, and it would not have been appropriate to ask an uncle for a reward. Likewise, the first Prophet Musa (Moses) called to faith was Pharaoh who had brought him up and been good to him, so it would not have been fitting for him to mention anything about a reward to a person who acted like a father to him.

Allah Glorified is He then commands Prophet Muhammad to say: '…nor do I claim to be what I am not' (Sad: 86). The Arabic word used in the original structure of the verse is mutakallif which denotes pretence or affecting what is beyond one's capacity. This word can be found in the following Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, 'Do not tatakallafu (overburden yourselves by showing too much hospitality) to your guests such that you end up disliking to receive guests.'(1) It means do not offer more than you can afford. Some would borrow money to buy foods and refreshments for their guests. Guests leave and debts remain. This may lead one to hate to receive guests and find it odious that a guest should ever enter his house. Be natural and host your guests according to your means. Do not claim to have what you do not.

(1) This Hadith is cited by Abu Hamid Al-Ghazali in his Ihya' 'Ulum Ad-Din [2/12]. Al-Hafizh Al-`Iraqi said about it, ‘It was narrated by Abu Bakr ibn Lal in Makarim Al-Akhlaq on the authority of Salman, saying, "Let none of you take upon himself more than he is able to for the sake of his guest."' In the chain of narrators, there is Mohammad ibn Al-Faraj Al-Azraq concerning whose authenticity doubts have been raised amongst the scholars of Hadith. Adh-Dhahabi said about him in Mizan Al-I'tidal [8051], ‘He is well known and truthful.' Al-Hakim expressed doubts concerning him only because he accompanied Al-Hussayn Al-Karabisi, and that was rather scrupulous. Al-Khatib Al-Baghdadi said about him [3/159], ‘His narrations are authentic. I know nothing blameworthy about him.’

When Prophet Muhammad said, as Allah commanded him, '… nor do I claim to be what I am not' (Sad: 86), he meant that he did not need to resort to pretence to confer importance upon the Message he has come with. What he has come with does not require excessive persuasion, for it already accords with the natural disposition of humankind. Anyone who examines the rulings of Islam would find that they are in perfect harmony with nature. Islam forbids lying and cheating. Are they not truly harmful behaviours that should be stopped? Islam forbids drinking alcohol. Do we not all agree that it corrupts the mind, the very special gift with which Allah has honoured humankind? The answers are clear and do not require excessive persuasion for one to be satisfied with them, for they are in harmony with human disposition.

Allah says in the following verse: 'This is only a dhikr (reminder; warning) for all people.' (Sad: 87) The Quran does not bring to people anything new to them, but it is only a reminder. The purpose of a reminder is to bring back to mind what has been forgotten. The Quran is meant to remind us of the first covenant we made with Allah when we were still in the realm of the Unseen, still only seeds in the loins of our father, Adam, and have not yet been brought to existence. Back then, Allah Glorified is He asked us all: '... Am I not your Lord? ...' (al-A'raf: 172) We all concurred: '... Yes, indeed ...' (al-A'raf: 172). Then Allah the Exalted told everyone to remember this covenant: '... [Of this We remind you,] lest you say on the Day of Resurrection, "Verily, we were unaware of this." Or lest you say, "Verily, it was but our forefathers who, in times gone by, began to ascribe divinity to other beings beside Allah, and we were but their late offspring ...' (al-A'raf: 172-173). Thus, Allah the Most High has not compelled us to make this covenant upon us, but we have made it willingly. We have accepted responsibility while we were but seeds in the loins of our father Adam peace be upon him when we did not have any desires or caprices yet to drag us into falsehood.

Therefore, what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him teaches is not something new. The doctrine of monotheism and the obligations that faith entails are an ancient message that all humankind have already known and accepted, and the Quran is only a reminder of that first covenant.

Allah Glorified is He concludes the chapter by the verse: 'In time you will certainly come to know its truth.' (Sad: 88) Those who deny the Quran will come to know the results of their denial. They will know that its revelations were true. Scholars say that, 'In time …' in this verse refers to the time when Islam becomes victorious over disbelief, which started from the Battle of Badr until the time when it was said, ‘It is astounding how that unlettered man conquered half the world in half a century!’ It was indeed amazing, and it still is until today. Those who denied Islam witnessed its victory and the collapse of disbelief in the face of the true religion. They witnessed the retreat of the borders of the territories of disbelief and the expansion of the territories of Islam. Allah the Almighty refers to this in the verse: 'Do they not see how We come to [their] land and shrink its borders?...' (ar-Ra‘d: 41) Despite that, they did not heed the lesson.

Other scholars said that 'In time…' (Sad: 88) may also refer to the Day of Judgment when disbelievers enter hellfire. Then they will know the truth of the revelations Allah had sent down in the Quran.

The word naba’ used in the Arabic text of the verse to refer to the message of the Quran denotes 'important news', as Allah says: 'Say, "It is a notable tiding from which you are veering away."' (Sad: 67-68) What do you think of a message that Allah described as mighty? The importance of any news is determined by the amount of good that it brings to one. The news of passing an admission test to school or college is not like that of being nominated a minister, for example. How, then, about the news that determines your destiny and happiness both in this life and the Hereafter? Such happiness can only be attained by heeding the Message of Allah and fulfilling one's duty to Him. What news can have more importance or greatness than the news brought from the Lord in His Glorious Book? May Allah make us of the believers who will find the truth of what has been told in the Quran on the Day of Judgment! Amen!

the chapter of

az-Zumar

In the Name of God,(1) the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of az-Zumar(2):

تَنزِيلُ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ ٱلۡعَزِيزِ ٱلۡحَكِيمِ ١

This Scripture is sent down from God the Mighty, the Wise [1] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 1)

Several words in the Arabic language denote 'sending down'. One of them is nuzul which denotes bringing something from somewhere high to somewhere down. Another is inzal which denotes that the one who sent the stated thing down is higher in status than the one to whom it is sent. There is also tanzil, the one used in the verse we are considering, which denotes sending something down in parts over a period of time according to circumstance.

(1) The Islamic conception of 'Allah' is not the same as the Christian and Jewish conception of 'God'. However, the word 'Allah' does not refer to a tribal god or God of only Muslims, it refers to the Creator of the whole world, the One God (Who has no son). We prefer, however, to use 'Allah' rather than 'God' as it has a unique character: it cannot be used to refer to any false gods and does not have any derivatives like goddess, gods, etc. It is a unique word used solely to describe the One God of this universe.

(2) The chapter of az-Zumar is the 39th in the order of the chapters in the Glorious Quran. It contains 75 verses and is said to be a Meccan chapter (revealed in Mecca before the Immigration of Prophet Muhammad) according to the view of Al-Hasan, 'Ikrima, 'Ata' and Jabir ibn Zayd. Ibn Abbas said, 'It is Meccan except for two verses which were revealed in Medina, one of which is 'Allah has sent down the most beautiful of all teachings...' (az-Zumar: 23), and the other verse is 'Say, [Allah says], "My servants who have harmed themselves by your own excess…"' (az-Zumar: 53). [See Quran Exegesis of Al-Qurtubi (8/5875).] The chapter of az-Zumar is also called the chapter of al-Ghuraf because Allah says in one of its verses: 'But those who are mindful of their Lord will have lofty ghuraf [dwellings] built for them, one above the other, graced with flowing streams …' (az-Zumar: 20).

For example, Allah says: 'We anzalnahu (sent it down) on the Night of Glory' (al-Qadr: 1). This refers to the act of sending down the Quran all at once from the Preserved Tablet at the beginning of Prophet Muhammad's prophethood. Then, it was sent down to the Prophet in parts on different occasions

Allah Glorified is He also says: 'We anzalnahu (sent down the Quran) with the truth, and with the truth it nazal (has come down) …' (al-Isra': 105). Allah sent it down with the truth at the beginning, and it remained upon the truth. No one was able to alter it or twist its words because it is the truth.

The root of these words, nazala, nazzala and anzala, denotes the highness of the one who sends down the stated thing and the lower status of the one to whom it is sent. The value of what is sent down is determined by the status of the sender. Sending down Divine guidance proves that Allah the Most High wants to honour His servants and guide them to the Straight Path. So, inzal indicates the high status of the one who sends down as well as the honour of what is sent. It is also an honour to those Allah has chosen for receiving that greater good. This is why Allah says about Muslims: 'You are indeed the best community that has ever been brought forth for [the good of] mankind…' (Al-'Imran: 110).

When we track the derivatives of the root nazala in the Glorious Quran, we find that every time they are used, they denote bringing something from on high, except in a small number of verses, as the following one in the chapter of al-Hadid where Allah Glorified is He says: '… We also anzalna (sent) iron, with its mighty strength and many uses for mankind…' (al-Hadid: 25). Iron has not been sent down from on high, but it is extracted from under the ground, so why does Allah use the word anzalna in the aforementioned verse? Some say that even though iron is extracted from the earth, Allah is the Creator Who made it and put it there. Thus, it is a bestowal granted to humankind from the One in Heaven, hence the use of the word anzalna which denotes 'sending down'. Thus, this word does not necessarily refer to the direction of sending; rather, it refers to status of the sender.

It may be worthy of mentioning that sending iron has indeed been a necessary part of the mission assigned to messengers and those who believed with them. This is why Allah the Exalted says in the same verse immediately after mentioning iron: '... so that Allah could mark out those who would help

Him and His Messengers …' (al-Hadid: 25). It is from iron that weapons have been made to fight against disbelievers in the cause of Allah.

Another verse where one of the aforementioned derivatives is mentioned yet does not denote 'sending down' is this one: '... He anzala (gave you) four kinds of livestock in pairs …' (az-Zumar: 6). The same can be also found in the verse: 'Children of Adam, We have anzalna (given) you garments to cover your nakedness and as adornment for you ...' (al-A'raf: 26).

We notice a beautiful stylistic gesture employed by the Glorious Quran with respect to the preposition it uses before the indirect object of the verb anzala and how the prepositions used with it correspond perfectly to the meaning intended in every instance. For example, when Allah addresses Prophet Muhammad, He says: 'Step by step, He nazzala (has sent) the Scripture 'alayka [down to you (Prophet)] with the Truth...' (Al-'Imran: 3). Allah the Almighty addresses His Messenger using the singular second person pronoun 'you' despite the fact that the Quran has been sent down to all people: 'This is a blessed Scripture which We sent down to you [Muhammad], for people to think about its messages …' (Sad: 29). Nevertheless, Allah addresses the one who directly receives His revelations. When Allah speaks about the blessings that He grants to humankind directly without any intermediaries, He uses the plural second person pronoun. Thus, He uses the singular form 'alayka in addressing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and in the following verse, He uses the plural lakum when He addresses all people: '...He anzala lakum (gave you) four kinds of livestock in pairs …' (az-Zumar: 6). Let us also consider the preposition used with the pronoun in each case. In the verse about garments, Allah the Exalted says: 'We have anzalna 'alaykum (given you) garments to cover your nakedness...' (al-A'raf: 26). The preposition 'ala denotes 'putting something above or on another', so it is used with garments that are put on the body to cover it. In the verse about livestock, Allah the Most High says: '... He anzala lakum (gave you) four kinds of livestock in pairs…' (az-Zumar: 6). The preposition l denotes 'giving something to someone', hence its usage with livestock.

Allah the Almighty is the One Who has created all being and bestows His blessings upon them. He has created Adam and His offspring and sent down to them His guidance to set their lives aright. Some scholars hold the view that Allah has made Adam peace be upon him His vicegerent on the earth in the sense that he is the one whom He has entrusted to carry out His Will on it. Allah the Exalted has placed man on the earth and created the means and resources required to preserve his life. Still, and even though everything belongs originally to Allah, He respects property rights of His servants. This is why He says, encouraging the wealthy to give charity to the poor: 'Who will give Allah a good loan, which He will increase for him many times over?...' (al-Baqara: 245) He the Exalted calls charity a 'loan' despite the fact that He is the Giver of that wealth. Since Allah is the Creator Who has brought humankind into existence and guaranteed their provisions, He considered wealth to be the right of His servants, who own it, hence His calling charity a 'loan' they give to Him when they offer it to the poor. Let me use an example to illustrate this. Suppose a man who gave his child pocket money suddenly found himself in need of that money. He borrowed the money from his child who saved it and promised to pay the child back. Even though the money originally belonged to the father, he respected the property rights of his child, and to Allah belongs the Highest Similitude.

Back to the verse we are considering; Allah Glorified is He says: 'This kitab (Scripture) is sent down from Allah …' (az-Zumar: 1). When the word kitab is used with a definite article and without any modification that describes it, it refers to the Glorious Quran. The Arabic words kitab and Quran are both used to refer to the Glorious Book of Allah. The former means 'something which is written down', while the latter means 'something which is read'. Both are true of the Glorious Quran: it is recorded in books, preserved in the hearts and will forever be recited. Allah the Almighty has made it so to make it as evidence against those who have been addressed by it.

The companions of Prophet Muhammad have demonstrated exemplary caution when they started compiling the Glorious Quran in a book. They did not write down a single verse unless they heard it from at least two of those who memorised the Quran. Then, they would only write it down when at least two others of those who memorised the Quran bore witness to its authenticity. Such were the men Allah entrusted with His Book, for He says in it: 'We have sent down the Quran Ourself, and We Ourself will guard it' (al-Hijr: 9).

Thus, the Quran was sent down '…from Allah…' (az-Zumar: 1). Allah does not say, for example, '…from the Lord…'. This takes us to the difference between the words Allah and Rab (Lord) in the Arabic language. The word Rab is derived from a stem that denotes 'increase', so it refers to material bestowals. Thus, He is the Rab in the sense that He has created all beings and provides for everyone, be they believers or disbelievers. Thus, when it comes to material gifts offered by the Rab (the Lord), all people are equal. The word Allah, on the other hand, is derived from a stem that means 'deity'. Therefore, when it comes to speaking about issues related to faith and worship, the word Allah is used. This is why when Allah speaks about the Quran, He says: '…from Allah…' (az-Zumar: 1), not '… from the Rab (Lord) …'.

The word Allah is a name used uniquely to describe Him, the True God, the Lord and Creator of all things. Allah the Exalted has Names and Attributes that belong to Him as He says: 'The Most Excellent Names belong to Allah…' (al-A'raf: 180). Allah has commanded us to use those Names to call upon Him, yet by calling Him with His unique Name, Allah, it is as if we called Him by His Names all at once, for this Name encompasses all of them. This is why we should begin work with saying, ‘In the Name of Allah’, for when one says so, he has thus called upon Allah by all His Attributes that one needs to accomplish his work. He has thus called upon Him by His Might, Knowledge, Wisdom, and so on. Instead of saying, ‘In the Name of the Almighty One, the All Knowing, the All-Wise, etc., it suffices to say, 'In the Name of Allah’. This Majestic Name of God encompasses all of His Attributes of Perfection, both those that have been revealed to us and those that He has confined to His Knowledge. Even if you are disobedient, do not be ashamed of your Lord or too embarrassed to start any job in His Name. Do not think it impossible that Allah the Almighty would still grant you His aid despite your sins, for your Lord is the All-Merciful, and He commands His servants to remember His Name and use it to call upon Him.

Allah the Exalted concludes the verse by these Attributes of Him: '… Al-'Aziz (the Mighty), Al-Hakim (the Wise)' (az-Zumar: 1). The word Al-Aziz means He Who has no need whatsoever of His creation—neither does their obedience benefit Him, nor does their disobedience harm Him. Allah mentions this Attribute after mentioning the Book He has sent down to us with His guidance for a reason. Allah the Almighty wants to tell us that it is a favour from Him that He has sent down to us His guidance. He is in no need of our obedience, but He has showed us the Straight Path for us to be prosperous both in this worldly life and in the Afterlife.

Since Allah is in no need of us, He does not accept worship unless it is solely devoted to Him, the One Who has no partners. He says: 'Allah does not forgive the joining of partners with Him; anything less than that He forgives to whoever He wills …' (an-Nisa': 48). He also says in a Qudsi Hadith: 'I am absolutely in no need of partners or partnerships. If anyone does a deed in which he associates others with Me, I leave him to those he associated with Me [to reward him for it].'(1) Why should Allah the Exalted accept to have partners falsely ascribed to Him? Does He have any need for our worship to compromise?! Exalted is He above every need! It is not Allah Who benefits from His servants' obedience, but the entire benefit goes back to them. Thus, your Lord has created you and sent down to you that which is for your own good. If you obey Him, He will reward you. Whoever believes in Allah and acts in accordance with his comprehension of and faith in His Most Excellent Names and Attributes will be rewarded by Him, out of His Bounty and Mercy.

The meaning of Allah's Name Al-'Aziz is also expressed in this Qudsi Hadith: 'My servants, the earliest and latest, humankind and jinns, were to all have hearts as mindful of Allah as that of the most devout one amongst you, that would not increase My kingdom one iota. Were the earliest and latest humankind and jinns, to have hearts as evil as that of the most wicked one amongst you, that would not decrease My kingdom one iota. My servants, were they the earliest and latest humankind and jinns, to all come together in a single place and each make a supplication to Me, and were I to give each what he has asked, that would not decrease what I have one bit, not even so much as a needle would decrease the sea when it is dipped into it. This is because I am the Generous and the Magnificent Who has the Power to bring anything into existence. Just by a word from Me, I can bestow blessings and inflict punishments. When I want something, I only say to it, "Be!" and it is.'(1)

(1) This Hadith is cited by Muslim in his Sahih (2985) and Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (4202), and this narration is that of Muslim, narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him

Allah is the Mighty God Who is free of any need of His servants. He has Power over all things, and none has any power over Him. He confers of His Attributes on those who believe in Him, so believers who have might possess as such out of the Might of Allah. As for disbelievers, they seek might and sovereignty through their arrogant defiance of Allah, and how far they are from attaining what they aspire to! The hypocrites at the time of Prophet Muhammad said, as the Quran mentions them saying: '… "Once we return to Medina the powerful will drive out the weak"…' (al-Munafiqun: 8). Indeed, they have spoken the truth, for the powerful will drive out the weak, but who are the powerful and who are the weak? Allah the Exalted responds to this by saying: '… power belongs to Allah, to His Messenger and to the believers …' (al-Munafiqun: 8). Allah bestows of His Power on His Messenger and the believers; thus, the weak party that would be driven out of Medina were the hypocrites, and so were they.

Besides being Al-'Aziz (the Mighty) Who is free of all need, Allah is also Al-Hakim (the Wise) Who puts everything in place. One of the countless manifestations of this Wisdom is that He has not made the natural disposition of the believers moulded into one fixed mode of character. He has not created in them mercy only or severity only. Rather, He has made them capable of demonstrating both characteristics based on the occasion. Allah Glorified is He says describing believers: 'Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah. Those who follow him are harsh towards disbelievers and compassionate towards each other ...' (al-Fath: 29). He also says about them: '... humble towards believers, hard on disbelievers …' (al-Ma'ida: 54). Allah has created this variation in the natural disposition of His servants and meanwhile guided them to the fundamentals based on which they can choose to demonstrate the right characteristic on the right occasion. Thus, a believer should show mercy where the situation so requires and severity where the need arises. This is one of the manifestations of the Wisdom of Allah Who has made every bit of creation exactly corresponding to the mission and role assigned to each one of them.

(1) This Hadith is cited by Ahmad in his Musnad (5/104 & 177) on the authority of Abu Dharr Allah be pleased with him. At-Tirmidhi cited it in his Sunnan (2495) and classified it as hasan (literally 'good': or authentic but less in degree than Hadiths classified as sahih (literally 'sound' or 'authentic'). Ibn Majah also cited it in his Sunnan (4275).

It may be worth mentioning that the word hikma (wisdom) is derived from hakama which refers to a ‘bit’ that is placed in a horse’s mouth. Just as a bit is a tool by which a horse is controlled, hikma (wisdom) is the characteristic by which life is governed, and its affairs are managed.

Allah Glorified is He says afterwards:

إِنَّآ أَنزَلۡنَآ إِلَيۡكَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ بِٱلۡحَقِّ فَٱعۡبُدِ ٱللَّهَ مُخۡلِصٗا لَّهُ ٱلدِّينَ ﴿٢﴾ أَلَا لِلَّهِ ٱلدِّينُ ٱلۡخَالِصُۚ
بَيۡنَهُمۡ فِي مَا هُمۡ فِيهِ يَخۡتَلِفُونَۗ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يَهۡدِي مَنۡ هُوَ كَٰذِبٞ كَفَّارٞ ﴿٣﴾

It is We who sent down the Scripture to you [Prophet] with the Truth, so worship God with your total devotion. [2] True devotion is due to God alone. [As for] those who choose other protectors beside Him, saying, ‘We only worship them because they bring us nearer to God,’ God Himself will judge between them regarding their differences. God does not guide any ungrateful liar [3] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 2-3)

Truth means a fixed matter that is not affected or abrogated by the changes of life or passage of time. Since the truth is so firm, we should not be deceived by how high falsehood can seem to reach at certain times, for the prevalence of falsehood paves the way for the truth to shine. When falsehood gains predominance, it brings misery and torment upon people, so they look out for the truth and long for its victory. This way, falsehood is actually one of the servants of truth, and disbelief is one of the servants of faith. Allah the Exalted never abandons the truth, but He allows falsehood to prevail over it for some time to test people's eagerness for the truth and readiness to defend it. If they turn out to be careless about the truth and reluctant to support it, Allah takes it upon Himself to support it and make it victorious.

Since Allah the Most High has sent down the Book, the Quran, with truth, we must take heed then. We must abide by the commands and prohibitions revealed in it and undertake the responsibilities we are assigned by Him. Obedience necessarily entails that we believe in the One Who commands us to obey Him.

When a complicated matter twists your mind, you seek consultation and assistance of someone you know to possess knowledge and sound judgment, someone who can help you make a decision. One entrusts his affairs and issues with those he trusts to have wisdom. Such are the ones from whom we take advice. Faith is the most important of one's affairs in life. Therefore, we must believe in and trust the One Who has revealed faith to us so we can willingly commit ourselves to His ordinance. Belief has to come before action. Islam is about firm faith ingrained in the heart and manifested through action. Faith without action is only a claim, and action without faith is fruitless, for Allah the Almighty rewards those who devote their deeds and worship solely to Him. He says: 'The desert Arabs say, "We have faith." [O, Prophet] tell them, "You do not have faith. What you should say instead is, 'We have submitted', for faith has not yet entered your hearts."…' (al-Hujurat: 14)

In the verse we are considering, Allah Glorified is He says: '...worship Allah with your total devotion' (az-Zumar: 2). Total devotion to Allah means sincerity; this is the prerequisite based on which worship is accepted or otherwise. What is the meaning of worship? It is a servant's obedience to the ordinance of his Lord. It is to commit oneself to His Commands and Prohibitions. This definition for worship shows the pointlessness of worshipping anything other than Allah, for those who worship the sun, the moon, the stars, trees, rocks, etc. offer their devotion to false deities that have sent no guidance to them nor made incumbent upon them any duties. Claiming that such things are gods and are worthy of worship is a flagrant mistake, for what guidance have those so-called gods revealed to their worshippers? What do they command or forbid? What reward have they promised the obedient or punishment for the disobedient? Since the answer for all those questions is 'None', on what grounds are they claimed to be gods, then?

As for those who alleged, 'We only worship them since they bring us nearer to Allah…' (az-Zumar: 3), Allah refutes their allegation; He has willed that no intermediaries should interfere between Him and His servants respecting faith and devotion.

Furthermore, Allah calls us to ponder the magnificence of creation. The universe is full of endless wonders that bear testimony to the Majesty of the Creator. With what perfect precision has everything been made and managed! Look at life and how every bit of it is governed with Absolute Wisdom. Who but Allah has made all that? Has anyone else claimed to be the Creator of this mighty universe? Despite the fact that countless people reject faith and deny the existence of Allah, no such claim has ever been made by anyone. This absence of any rivals or opponents is itself evidence of the truth that Allah is the One God and Creator of everything. So long as Allah alone is the Lord and Creator, He is the only One Who is worthy of worship. There is no God but Him Glorified is He. This is why Allah Glorified is He says, addressing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'Say, "If there were other gods along with Him, as they say there are, then they would have tried to find a way to the Lord of the Throne"' (al-Isra': 42). Were there gods besides Allah, they would go to Him and dispute with Him for claiming creation to be entirely His own work.

So, Allah Glorified is He commands us: '... worship Allah with your total devotion' (az-Zumar: 2). Direct your intention to pleasing Allah alone and do not seek by your good deeds to gain people's praise or admiration. Allowing people a share in your good deeds makes them entirely fruitless, for Allah would not accept those deeds, nor can people ever reward you for them. Those who give to charity only to be called 'generous' actually waste their money, for they give it away to others who benefit from it and meanwhile receive no reward for such action from Allah.

The Arabic for 'sincerity' is ikhlas. Amongst the derivatives of this word are mukhlis, which is mentioned in the verse we are reflecting on, and mukhlas. The latter denotes 'purified' or 'chosen', so it refers to those Allah has chosen for His worship and sincere devotion to Him, like the messengers. Thus, their righteousness is the result of Allah's choice of them. As for the other derivative mukhlis, it means he who exerts himself in sincere devotion to Allah, so Allah the Exalted accepts him and makes him of the righteous. Thus, Allah's acceptance of him is the result of his sincere devotion. They persevere in worship and constantly knock the door of Allah until it is opened for them.

An example comes to mind of those Allah has chosen for His path purely out of His favour upon them. This example is Al-Qadi ‘Iyad(1) who was a highwayman. One day, he went out as normal to practise his job of robbing travellers, and he heard them say, ‘Do not go that way, for ‘Iyad would find us.’ Those words hit ‘Iyad like a thunderbolt as if he had never before realised how much people must have been afraid of him. Guilt pricked his conscience, and he made a firm intention to repent, ‘My Lord, forgive me and let those people feel safe.’ Allah the Almighty forgave him and made him of the devout.(2) Seeing how he changed from a robber to a devout Islamic scholar, people asked 'Iyad about the secret that restored him to the Straight Path. He replied, ‘I certainly know the reason for that. One day, I passed by a watermelon market. I think it was in Baghdad. I found a paper torn out of a Quran book. It was thrown on the ground and trampled underfoot by passers-by. I picked it up, cleaned all the dirt from it and used my last dirham to buy some perfume and adorn that paper with its scent. Then I placed it into a high crevice.’ ‘Iyad continued, ‘I swear by the One Who holds my soul in His Hand that, after doing this, I heard a voice call out, "I will make your name amongst the pure just as you purified and perfumed [the paper that contained] My Name."'(3)

(1) This is ‘Iyad ibn Musa Abul-Fadl, the renowned Islamic scholar of Morocco and the imam of the scholars of Hadith at his time. He was born in Ceuta in the year 476 AH and died from poison in Marrakech in the year 544 AH at the age of 68. He was appointed as a judge in Ceuta and later in Granada. He wrote many books, the most famous of which is Ash-Shifa fi Ta‘rif Huquq Al-Mustafa. [Al-A‘lam by Az-Zirikli (5/99)]

(2) Ibn Khalkan mentioned it in Wafiyyat Al-A'yan in his biography of ‘Iyad. He said, ‘He was a highwayman who robbed people on the road between Abyurd and Sarakhs. Prior to his conversion, he was in love with a woman. As he was climbing up a wall to reach for her, he heard someone reciting Allah’s Words: "Is it not time for believers to humble their hearts to the remembrance of Allah ..." (al-Hadid: 16). 'Iyad was moved, so he said, "O, my Lord, the time has come!" So he wandered under the cover of darkness until he arrived at some ruins. There he saw a company of people and heard some of them say, "Let us leave now" and others say, "No, let us wait till morning, for 'Iyad will be on the road, stopping travellers and robbing them." It was then that 'Iyad decided to repent. He left them in safety.'

(3) This story is said to belong to Bishr Al Hafi, not Al-Qadi 'Iyad, as mentioned in the following books: Wafiyyat Al-A'yan by Ibn Khalkan, Al-Wafi bil-Wafiyyat by As-Safadi, Tabaqat Al-'Awliya' by Ibn Al-Mulaqqen and Mer'at Al-Jenan by Al-Yafi'i. However, we must point out that 'Iyad was a companion of Bishr at the time.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has been narrated as saying, 'Allah hides three things in three: He hides His Good Pleasure in His servant's obedience to Him...', so do not ever look on any act of obedience as trivial or unworthy. Know that Allah the Exalted forgave a man simply because he gave water to a dog that was gasping from thirst.(1) This act indicates the man's love of obedience to his Lord, or what would a man gain from quenching a dog's thirst? Is it possible that he was showing off? Needless to say, there was no room whatever for that. That good deed could only have been out of his love to obey Allah.

The Hadith continues, '… and He hides His Wrath in His servant's disobedience to Him …', so do not ever take any act of disobedience lightly. A woman entered Hellfire because of a cat which she locked up since she neither gave it any food or water nor allowed it to eat from the earth's insects.(2)

The third thing is '… and He hides His secrets in His creation', such as the secret that did its work in 'Iyad and changed him from a transgressor into a devout servant of Allah.

After addressing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with the command: '…so worship Allah with your total devotion…' (az-Zumar: 2), Allah the Exalted alerts people's hearts and minds to this fundamental fact: 'True devotion is due to Allah alone…' (az-Zumar: 3). The original Arabic text of this verse starts with the particle 'ala that is used to call attention. A speaker would use such particles to alert his addressee to what he would say is worth listening.

(1) Abu Hurayra narrated Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as saying, 'A man was walking along a road and became overcome with thirst. He found a well and stopped to drink from it. He did, then, see a dog that was gasping and almost eating the earth's soil due to intense thirst. The man said, "This dog is suffering intense thirst as that which was afflicting me!" He went back to the well, filled his leather sock with water and made the dog drink from it. Allah appreciated what he did and forgave him his sins.' [Cited by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (6009)]

(2) This Hadith is cited by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih, The Book of The Beginning of Creation, the chapter of The Description of Hellfire– Hadith no. (3140), narrated on the authority of Ibn 'Umar. It is also cited by Muslim in his Sahih, The Book of Repentance- Chapter of Encouraging Repentance– Hadith no. (2619), narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

It is also worthy to note that the prepositional phrase '…to Allah …' that is part of the predicate comes in the Arabic text of the verse at the beginning of the sentence, so it literally translates: 'To Allah alone true devotion is due…' (az-Zumar: 3). This reversal of the subject and predicate in the Arabic style is meant to add more emphasis to the point that this predicate is strictly confined to the subject with which it is associated. Thus, the verse means that true devotion is solely and strictly due to Allah alone.

Now, why is true devotion due to Allah alone? What are the grounds based on which Allah is the One God and the only One Worthy of being worshipped? Religion is the Law of Allah which He has ordained for us. This guidance is from Him, and both reward and punishment are in His Hands alone. Who else then has any claim to be worshipped by that Law and that guidance? Allah the Most High has guided us to the Straight Path for our prosperity in this life and the Hereafter. Therefore, none is worthy of our devotion but Him the Exlated.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He mentions the polar opposite of sincere worship of Allah by saying: '[As for] those who choose other protectors beside Him...' (az-Zumar: 3); they say—in order to justify their position when you make it clear to them that worshipping other than Allah is a lie, when you, O, Muhammad, tell them that those gods cannot see or hear nor benefit or harm and when you tighten the grip around them—they say: '…'We only worship them because they bring us nearer to Allah' (az-Zumar: 3).

If you want to get close to Allah, you should do so through His Law which He approved for you and to which the false gods which you worship besides Him the Almighty do not belong. Rather, they are made by you, carved using your own hands. If the wind knocks it over, you put it up again in its place, and if its arms are broken, you yourselves repair them.

So, your worship of them is futile and pointless, and it is actually a lie: '...Allah Himself will judge between them regarding their differences …' (az-Zumar: 3). The word 'judgment', when it belongs to Allah the Almighty is alarming since His judgment is the truth that shows no favouritism to anyone. However, when a believer hears this, he feels peace of heart because a day will come when the judgment will be only Allah's as Allah Glorified is He says: '... judgment is only Allah's ...' (al-An'am: 57); this means that it will be only His and no one else's. This is why you do not say to your opponent, 'May Allah judge between us!' unless you are absolutely certain that you are in the right.

For this reason, some people become angry if you say to them, 'Allah is the Best Disposer of affairs (between us).' If he were in the right, he would have no fear of anything and would say, 'I am content with His making the decision, and I accept it.' Getting angry when you try to suggest Allah as a judge between the two of you indicates that he is frightened of that judgment because he is in the wrong. Then, there is the fact that Allah's judgment will come at a time when there is no other judgment but His: '... judgment is only Allah's ...' (al-An'am: 57).

Then, the True Lord the Most High says: '… Allah does not guide any ungrateful liar.' (az-Zumar: 3) Yes, indeed. Allah the Almighty does not guide an ungrateful liar because he is unworthy of being given the gift of guidance. Another reason for this is that Allah guides everyone in the sense of pointing out to them the right way to go. Then, if anyone amongst them believes, He increases him by giving him the guidance of success and support, for Allah Glorified is He says: 'Allah has increased the guidance of those who follow the right path and given them their awareness [of Him].' (Muhammad: 17)

A good example to illustrate this is one we previously had given when we said to take a traffic policeman who stands at an intersection directing traffic and pointing out to people the way to go. If you ask him the way to Alexandria, for example, he says to you, 'It is that way' and you turn in the direction he points out to you. Then, before you leave him, you say, 'May Allah reward you! I almost got lost. I would have gone some other way if Allah had not facilitated things so that I had met you!' He replies, 'By Allah, you are a good man and deserve every good that comes your way, but there is a dangerous region through which this road passes. So, I will ride with you to help you pass by it safely.' Thus, when you obeyed him by accepting the first guidance that he gave you, he increased that by offering you aid and assistance. The same is true of the True Lord the Most High if anyone accepts the first level of guidance by which Allah points out the right path to him and believes in that, He will increase the level of guidance, along with granting him the guidance of success and support. An ungrateful liar is the one whose ingratitude is so strong that he does not benefit at all from guidance or from the right way being pointed out to him.

Then, the True Lord the Most High says:

لَّوۡ أَرَادَ ٱللَّهُ أَن يَتَّخِذَ وَلَدٗا لَّٱصۡطَفَىٰ مِمَّا يَخۡلُقُ مَا يَشَآءُۚ
سُبۡحَٰنَهُۥۖ هُوَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلۡوَٰحِدُ ٱلۡقَهَّارُ (٤)

God could have chosen any of His creation He willed for offspring, but He is far above this! He is the One,
the Almighty [4] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 4)

This verse informs us of another type of shirk (associating others with Allah). These people did not worship idols, nor worship the sun or the moon. Instead, they chose other things that they deemed connected to Allah. They thought that this was somehow better and more reasonable than worshipping idols.

These people were like those who said that Ezra peace be upon him is the son of Allah, or those who said that the Messiah peace be upon him is the son of Allah or those who said the angels were the daughters of Allah, etc. Allah Glorified is He answers them with His Words: ‘If Allah had willed for offspring, He could have chosen any of His creation ...’ (az-Zumar: 4); this also means that this is a matter of which you have no say and about which you have no choice. It is not for you to choose a son for Allah. If—supposedly—Allah the Almighty had wanted that, He would have chosen whomsoever He willed from His creation, and it would not have been for you to make the choice for Him.

Therefore, the True Lord the Most High addresses His Prophet, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with the Words, ‘Say [O, Prophet], "If the Lord of Mercy [truly] had offspring …"’ (az-Zukhruf: 81), which means ‘that Allah had chosen and whom He had informed us about "... I would be the first to worship [them] …"’ (az-Zukhruf: 81); this also means ‘I would be the first to affirm him and believe in him, and I would do so gladly.’ However, this is not something which Allah informed us of but was something of which He Himself disapproved.

It has been mentioned in a Hadith: ‘All creatures are dependants of Allah, and the most beloved of creatures to Allah is the one who is best to his dependants.’(1) Thus, filiation does not extend to Allah the Exalted even when it comes to the filiation to messengers peace be upon them. Allah Glorified is He did not make it filiation of blood nor bodies; rather, He made it filiation of religion. The clearest example of this is the story of our master, Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him and his son.

When Nuh's (Noah’s) son refused to go and disobeyed the command of his father, Nuh (Noah) knew, for certain, that he would be amongst those destroyed. He, then, called on Allah Glorified is He: ‘… Nuh (Noah) called out to his Lord, saying, "My Lord, my son was one of my family, though your promise is true, and You are the most just of all judges."’ (Hud: 45) However, the True Lord the Most High set him straight regarding filiation by saying: ‘Allah said, "Nuh (Noah), he was not one of your family. What he did was not right."...’ (Hud: 46) Our master, Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him thought that filiation is that of blood, but in reality, filiation to prophets is a filiation that is based on accepting their call and following them.

The particle law in Allah’s Words, ‘If Allah had willed for offspring …’ (az-Zumar: 4) is a conditional particle that introduces imtina’a li imtina’a (impossibility for impossibility) because either the impossibility of the condition causes the impossibility of the consequence or the impossibility of the consequence causes the impossibility of the condition. Allah the Exalted did not take a son because He did not want to. If He had wanted to, what He willed would have come to pass.

Elsewhere in the Quran, Allah Glorified is He argues with those who propagate this lie, using the voice of logic: ‘... How could He have children when He has no spouse? ...’ (al-An‘am: 101) Why is offspring produced? It is to carry on the name of the father and keep it alive after his death. The True Lord the Most High is the Self-Sufficient and Exalted in Might and above any need of His creation, and He is the Eternal and the Everlasting. Then, why would he have offspring? Those who ascribe a son to Allah Glorified is He in the latter stages of the history of religion, such as those who say that the Messiah peace be upon him was His son, do they think that He has been without a son since the time that He created creation until ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him came to take him as a son?

(1) Abu Ya’la narrated it in his Musnad 6/ Hadith 3315 from Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him with the wording, ‘All of creation are Allah's dependants, and those who are most beloved to him are those who bring the most benefit to their own dependants.’ Likewise, Al-Khatib Al-Baghdadi in Tarikh Al-Baghdad 6/332 from ‘Abdullah Ibn Mas'ud Allah be pleased with him with another wording, ‘All of creation are Allah’s dependants, and those people who are most beloved to him are those who act best towards their own dependants.’

Then, what about when the time came after He took ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him out of existence, did Allah remain thus, as we say in Egypt, ‘conquered and cut off from the tree’ (lonely) by being without a son? How can this claim make sense to you? This is a matter that can never be the case with respect to Allah the Almighty for He does not have any need for someone to carry on His Name, nor does He need the support of a son. This is due to the fact that He created the entire creation, from the first one to the last. He created them all with His perfect Power and by His Attributes of perfection. They (creation) have not increased one bit nor have they given Him a single attribute that He had not had before.

Therefore, some of the people who went far with their interpretation of the Quran said that this verse, ‘If Allah had willed for offspring, He could have chosen any of His creation ...’ (az-Zumar: 4) means ‘If the All-Merciful were to have a son, I would have more right to be that son since I am the first of His worshippers.’

Then, Allah Glorified is He concludes this verse with what declares Him to be above such lies: ‘…Glory be to Him! He is Allah, the One and the Almighty.’ (az-Zumar: 4); this means to glorify Him and declare Him to be transcendent and exalted above a matter such as this since it does not befit Him. Moreover, declare Him transcendent above resembling any of His creation, even if you were to come upon a matter that your intellect could not comprehend, still say ‘Glory be to Allah!’, just as He says: ‘Limitless in His glory is He Who has created opposites...’ (Ya Sin: 36). He also says: ‘Therefore, glorify Allah when you enter upon the time of the evening and when you enter upon the time of the morning.’ (ar-Rum: 17) He also says: ‘Glory be to Him Who made His servant to go on a night ...’ (al-Isra’: 1).

Allah the Almighty teaches us that, in matters such as this, we should disassociate Him from them and declare Him exalted above them. This is because the intellect is totally bewildered when it comes upon events such as these. The events here are attributed to Allah the Exalted so there is nothing astonishing about them since the time an event takes place has an inverse relationship to the power that brought it about: the greater the power, the less time it takes. Thus, if you attribute the action to the Power of all powers, you will find that it takes no time at all.

Therefore, disassociate anyone in worship with Allah and declare Him exalted above having a son since '...He is Allah...' (az-Zumar: 4) Who has all of the Attributes of Perfection, '...the One...' (az-Zumar: 4), and the One with Whom there is no one else: '...the Almighty.' That is to say that He is the One Who has no need of anyone to carry on His Name or of anyone to help Him.

خَلَقَ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضَ بِٱلۡحَقِّۖ يُكَوِّرُ ٱلَّيۡلَ عَلَى ٱلنَّهَارِ وَيُكَوِّرُ ٱلنَّهَارَ عَلَى ٱلَّيۡلِۖ
وَسَخَّرَ ٱلشَّمۡسَ وَٱلۡقَمَرَۖ كُلّٞ يَجۡرِي لِأَجَلٖ مُّسَمًّىۗ أَلَا هُوَ ٱلۡعَزِيزُ ٱلۡغَفَّٰرُ ٥

He created the heavens and earth for a true purpose; He wraps the night around the day and the day around the night; He has subjected the sun and moon to run their courses for an appointed time; He is truly the Mighty, the Forgiving [5] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 5)

Allah Glorified is He says: 'He created the heavens and earth for a true purpose ...' (az-Zumar: 5); this means that He did not create them frivolously; rather, He created them bil haqq (for a true purpose). As we said before, Al-haqq (truth) is that fixed matter that does not change, as the True Lord the Most High said in another verse: 'When We created the heavens and earth and everything in between, We were not playing a pointless game.' (ad-Dukhan: 38) On the contrary, Allah Glorified is He created them with truth, wisdom, precise calculation, and marvellous construction to perform the task that He, the Creator, wanted from them. The proof of this is that they still perform their task and have done so from the moment they were created without any disorder or any of their components working against each other.

As for Allah’s Words ‘... He wraps the night around the day and the day around the night ...’ (az-Zumar: 5), I say that kawwaratu al-immama (a man's headdress of cotton or silk wound round the head) means that I have wrapped my turban around my head, for it has become round like a ball. When a turban is wrapped around, each layer is covered in turn by the layer that comes after it. The same is true of the night and day—a part of the night covers a part of the day, and the night increases until it prevails, or a part of the day covers a part of the night, and the day increases until it prevails.

This is the reality of the night and day. However, do the night and day divide up the twenty-four hours between themselves equally, with each of them being twelve hours long? No! Instead, the night becomes longer, and the day becomes shorter in winter, while the night becomes shorter, and the day becomes longer in summer. This indicates that the cosmos is not governed by rigid mechanical laws as scientists claim but is governed by the Power and the Wisdom of the Creator.

If you were to reflect on how long the night is in winter and how short it is in summer, you would find that things in creation do not happen in a random and haphazard manner; rather, there is wisdom behind every single movement. When the day is short in wintertime, workers must work harder to finish their work in the shorter amount of time available to them, and so they exhaust themselves.

Out of Allah’s Wisdom, He gives them a longer period of time to rest from the exhaustions of their day. It is necessary that the period of rest correspond to the period of effort exerted.

As for summertime, the day is long and so the work can be distributed over this greater period of time. So, a person can fulfil his task with less effort, add to this the fact that he can even rest siesta little during the day. So, he does not need a long night to rest. This is why summer nights are short. Thus, the True Lord the Most High makes the night wrap around the day, and the day wrap around the night, for a wisdom connected to the activities of day-to-day life.

This meaning is expressed in another place in the Quran when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘He makes the night merge into the day and the day into the night ...' (Fatir: 13); this means that He makes each go into the other, and this is why the night and the day are not equal in length except for a very short period in the year that is made necessary by the interchangeable move.

Another thing we understand from the word yukawwiru which Allah uses in this verse is that the earth is a ball since the night and day are phenomena that appear on the surface of the earth. Indeed, scientists have proven this fact by the photographs that they have taken of the earth from space. Allah Glorified is He speaks, truthfully when He says: 'We shall show them Our signs in every region of the earth and in themselves until it becomes clear to them that this is the Truth ...' (Fussilat: 53).

In Allah's words in this verse,'... He has subjected the sun and moon to run their courses for an appointed time ...' (az-Zumar: 5), the word Al-ajal, (appointed time) means the Day of Judgment. The True Lord the Most High is reassuring people that the sun and moon are both signs from Allah, and they will remain for as long as this world remains. Furthermore, they will come to an end along with it. In spite of this, each of them is self-sustaining, powered by the Power of the Creator and having no need of 'fuel', 'maintenance' or 'spare parts', etc.

As for Allah's Words, '...He is truly the Mighty, the Forgiving.' (az-Zumar: 5), we have said that ala is an introductory particle whose function is to alert the listener to what comes after. It is as if Allah Glorified is He were saying, 'I have created this perfect marvellous creation for you and have provided for you the basic ingredients of life. I am the One Who has no need of you, the Mighty Who overcomes and cannot be overcome and has no need of anyone.' However, why is 'the Forgiving' mentioned in the verse at hand?

Scholars said that it is used because Allah the Almighty has graciously bestowed these signs—the sun and the moon, and the night and the day—upon His creation and given them the basic ingredients they need for life. Despite this, He does not look at their wrong deeds or the fact that they fall short with respect to what is His due since He is the Forgiving and pardons much.

This particular point is made clear by Allah elsewhere, and when we reflect upon what He says, we find it amazing. This is when Allah Glorified is He says: '... If you tried to count Allah's favours, you could never calculate them...' (Ibrahim: 34). The beginning of this statement appears identically in two verses in the Quran, though the second part is different. For in One place, Allah Glorified is He says: '... If you tried to count Allah's favours, you could never calculate them. Man is truly unjust and ungrateful.' (Ibrahim: 34) In another place, He says: 'If you tried to count Allah's favours, you could never calculate them. He is truly Most Forgiving and Most Merciful.' (an-Nahl: 18)

First, we notice, in these verses, concerning the counting of the favours of Allah the Exalted the use of the particle in (if), which indicates doubt. This is due to the fact that the counting of the favours of Allah is something that will never happen since one only takes it upon himself to count something when he has the ability to do so. Concerning the favours of Allah, despite the advances made in the field of statistics and despite its being used in many different disciplines, the blessings of Allah are still so numerous that man would not even dream of trying to count them, just as he would not think of counting the number of grains of sand in the desert. The Words '... If you tried to count ...' (Ibrahim: 34) mean that suppose you were to attempt to count them: '... you could never calculate them …' (Ibrahim: 34).

Second, we notice that the verse uses the singular form of the word ni'ma (favour), even though it is only things that are in the plural and can be divided into parts that can be counted; for example, you can say, 'one, two, three, four,' etc. Then, how can a single favour be counted? Scholars said that indeed, it is a seemingly single blessing, but when you reflect on it, you will see that there are many other blessings included within it. Take an apple, for example. On the surface, it seems to be a single blessing, but when you analyse it, you will find that it has colour, shape, taste, elements from which it is made, along with many other nutritional qualities. Each of those things is a favour from Allah.

Third, when you reflect on the concluding part of the two verses—and it is about that we wish to speak—you will find the first verse saying: '…man is truly unjust and ungrateful' (Ibrahim: 34); what this means is that he rejects and denies the favours of Allah and is heedless of them, failing to show due gratitude for receiving them. Thus, it talks about the state of those who receive the favours with respect to the Bestower of the favours and how they accept them with ingratitude. If the Bestower of favours had recompensed them in the way that they deserved, He would have withheld His favours from them. However, the concluding part of the other verse says: '... He is truly most forgiving and most merciful.' (an-Nahl: 18) This means that He forgives you for your ingratitude and denial of His favour. Then, after forgiveness, He shows you mercy.

Allah Glorified is He says:

خَلَقَكُم مِّن نَّفۡسٖ وَٰحِدَةٖ ثُمَّ جَعَلَ مِنۡهَا زَوۡجَهَا وَأَنزَلَ لَكُم مِّنَ ٱلۡأَنۡعَٰمِ
ثَمَٰنِيَةَ أَزۡوَٰجٖۚ يَخۡلُقُكُمۡ فِي بُطُونِ أُمَّهَٰتِكُمۡ خَلۡقٗا مِّنۢ بَعۡدِ خَلۡقٖ فِي ظُلُمَٰتٖ
ثَلَٰثٖۚ ذَٰلِكُمُ ٱللَّهُ رَبُّكُمۡ لَهُ ٱلۡمُلۡكُۖ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَۖ فَأَنَّىٰ تُصۡرَفُونَ ٦

He created you all from a single being, from which He made its mate; He gave you four kinds of livestock in pairs; He creates you in your mothers' wombs, in one stage after another, in threefold depths of darkness. Such is God, your Lord; He holds control, there is no god but Him. How can you turn away? [6] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 6)

The verse makes clear the nature of the human being whom Allah the Almighty wanted to be His vicegerent upon the earth, for He says: 'He created you all from a single being…' (az-Zumar: 6); this is referring to Adam peace be upon him '... from which He made his mate…' (az-Zumar: 6) which is Hawwa (Eve) Allah be pleased with her. From both of them came the offspring, and thus, reproduction started.

Given the fact that Allah the Exalted created this being to be a vicegerent who builds the earth and harnesses its resources, it is incumbent that all vicegerents be from the same species so that they can live in intimacy and harmony with one another and can be joined together by the rigours of everyday life.

If it were not so and were these vicegerents from many different species, a group made up, for example, of a man, a jinn and an animal, life would not have been right, and their day-to-day living would not have been of help to one another. By contrast, a single species has within its members the intimacy, love and harmonious relationships that are needed. This is because each species has its own rules, system, and laws of interaction and social interplay. Were the vicegerents to be made of lots of different species, it would prove almost impossible for them to unite, work together, or live together.

The True Lord the Most High also created mankind from a single species so that everybody could come into life on an equal footing, with no one starting out with an advantage over anyone else due to his being created from a higher species. The only basis for one person being superior to another is how closely they follow Allah's Way. This matter is one that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him made abundantly clear in the Hadith: 'There is no virtue of an Arab over a foreigner, and nor a foreigner over an Arab except by taqwa (being mindful of Allah).'(1) Allah Glorified is He says: '... In Allah's eyes, the most honoured of you are the ones most mindful of Him ...' (al-Hujurat: 13); another way of saying this is 'None of you can claim superiority to any other except if it be on the basis of how well he acts with respect to what he has received from His Lord.'

The different colours and shapes that people have are to match the different environments in which they live. So, people who live in hot environments tend to be darker, while people who live in cold environments tend to be lighter. The languages that people speak also vary according to their environments. However, in terms of our origin, we all go back to Adam peace be upon him and Adam peace be upon him was created from clay, and his descendants after him were created through procreation.

Even when it comes to the Message, Allah Glorified is He says: 'A messenger has come to you from amongst yourselves ...' (at-Tawba: 128); in other words, he is not alien to you, nor is he from another species. He was not an angel, for example, for although that is a higher form of species, an angelic messenger would not be someone whose example people could follow, nor was he Persian or Roman or spoke a language that was different to your own; rather, he was an Arab from the noblest of you and the greatest of your tribes.

(1) In the midst of the days of tashriq (the days immediately following Eid Al-Adha), the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him delivered a khutba (sermon) to the people, saying, 'People, your Lord is One, and your forefather is one. No Arab is superior to any non-Arab, nor any non-Arab superior to any Arab. No white man is superior to any black man, nor any black man superior to any white man, except on the basis of taqwa.' The Hadith is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad 5/411 from one who heard it from the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. In Hilyat Al-Awliya' 3/100, it is mentioned that the man was Jabir ibn 'Abdullah Allah be pleased with him.

Thus, the entire human race comes from a single being, and that being is Adam peace be upon him. Allah the Exalted has made it clear to us how He created Adam peace be upon him in his known form by saying: ‘When I have fashioned him and breathed My spirit into him, bow down before him’ (al-Hijr: 29).

However, He does not mention anything about how Hawwa (Eve) was created. Some of the people of knowledge, however, have said that He created her in the same way as Adam peace be upon him while others said that He created her from one of Adam’s ribs, so she was embedded within Adam peace be upon him when he was created. This indicates that women are subsequent to men, concealed within them, even when it comes to how they were created.

Those who hold this opinion rely upon the meaning of the words: ‘... from which He made his mate (wa ja’ala minha) …’ (az-Zumar: 6). For in them, minha means from a part of him or from his species. This is because the verb ja’ala contains no indication of being of a different race as in Allah’s Words: ‘He gave you hearing, sight, and minds. How seldom you are grateful (wa ja’ala lakum)’ (as-Sajda: 9); what this means is that from a piece of us is formed our hearing, from a piece of us is formed our sight and from another is formed our hearts.

Similarly, when the Quran talks about action, the woman is kept concealed within the man, for Allah Glorified is He says: ‘By the declining day, man is [deep] in loss, except for those who believe, do good deeds, exhort one another to the truth and exhort one another to steadfastness.’ (al-’Asr: 1-3) In many places, He says: ‘O, you who believe, be mindful of Allah...’ (al-Ma‘ida: 35); He does not address women directly except when the matter is one that relates specifically to them.

Then, the True Lord the Most High says, enumerating some of the favours He has bestowed upon His creation: ‘... and He produced for you from the grazing livestock eight mates ...’ (az-Zumar: 6). We previously mentioned at the beginning of this chapter that when it comes to the word inzal (sending down), one does not just look to its being sent down from on high, as in the sending down of the Divine Program and values, but also to the One Who sends down. Inzal has the meaning of ‘bringing into existence’. Grazing livestock is amongst the favours that are existent on the earth, but who brought them into existence? It is Allah Glorified is He. So, it is as if He sent them down. The inzal, in this case requires the use of the corresponding preposition in lakum (for you) and not alaykum (upon you) since cattle are something that is separate from man.

These eight types of cattle are detailed more fully in the chapter of al-An’am. Despite the fact that Allah’s favours granted to us are plentiful in number, He singles out cattle because they are the species that are most closely related to human beings in terms of their physical make-up. Then comes plants and finally comes the inanimate minerals. Some people claim that the word zawj means two together, but this is a mistake, for zawj actually means one that has another like it with it. An example of this is found in His Words: ‘and We created pairs of all things so that you [people] might take note…’ (adh-Dhariyat: 49). Another word that is just like zawj (one of a pair) is taw’am (twin).

As for the Words, 'He creates you in your mothers’ wombs, a creation after a creation, in threefold depths of darkness...’ (az-Zumar: 6), He specifically mentions, ‘...a creation after a creation...’ (az-Zumar: 6) which is a clarification of the different stages of creation through what an embryo passes while it is inside its mother. First, it wriggles around inside her, surrounded by base fluid; then, it settles as a drop in her womb. Then, it becomes a clot, then a lump, then its bones are formed and then those bones are clothed (covered) in flesh. These are the stages of creation to which Allah Glorified is He is referring when He says: ‘... a creation after a creation ...’ (az-Zumar: 6).

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘We created man from an essence of clay, then We placed him as a drop of fluid in a safe place, then We made that drop into a clinging form, and We made that form into a lump of flesh, and We made that lump into bones, and We clothed those bones with flesh, and later We made him into other forms. Glory be to Allah, the best of creators!’ (al-Mu’minun: 12-14)

These are the stages through which the human being passes after arriving at the womb of his mother. This means that there must be a stage that comes before these stages. This is the particular stage at which the male element encounters the female element, or, to put it another way, when the sperm encounters the egg and impregnates it, for the only thing that reaches the womb is the impregnated egg into which the male microbe has entered.

In the chapter of al-Hajj, The True Lord the Most High makes it clear that a mudghah (embryonic lump) can be either mukhallaqa (shaped) or ghayr mukhallaqa (unshaped): ‘People, [remember,] if you doubt the Resurrection, that We created you from dust, then a drop of fluid, then a clinging form, then a lump of flesh, both shaped and unshaped, We mean to make Our Power clear to you. Whatever We choose We cause to remain in the womb for an appointed time ...’ (al-Hajj: 5).

A mudgha mukhallaqa is that lump from which the limbs and organs are created, while a mudgha ghayr mukhallaqa is the lump which settles into the body without having a form, so it remains as reserve for the body. It is as if it were a reserve or a pharmacy for preservation. So, if anything goes wrong in the body, that unformed lump is what repairs it, just as we see when it comes to wounds, for after a time wounds heal up, tissues are rebuilt, and skin goes back to how it formerly was. Where do these tissues come from? They come from the unshaped lump.

What is really amazing is that when you leave the body to its own devices and do not interfere with it by placing chemical substances over the wound, it heals itself and goes back to how it was, leaving no mark or scar. It is only when we interfere by using remedies and introducing chemical substances that of a necessity affect the cells and tissues of the body, thus, a mark or scar is left.

This is why science has been able to prove that there are two stores of nutrients within a human body: one store contains one's daily nutrients, while another is kept in reserve from which he takes nutrients when those in the first store run out. This is because a person eats in proportion to the energy his body requires. Then, he eats a bit more. This additional amount that he eats is transformed into fat in the body. Then, when a person starves or suffers from acute thirst, he extracts the nutrients he needs from the fat that exists in his body. It is quite astonishing that that fat transforms into whatever substance the body requires.

Because of the existence of this storehouse of nutrients in the human body, we see men who are able to survive without food for a whole month, while at the same time not being able to survive without water for more than ten days. Why is this? Because when someone starves and can find no food to eat, food is extracted from the reserves stored in his body.

As for Allah's Words,'…He creates you in your mothers' wombs...' (az-Zumar: 6), they refer to the second creation, for the first creation was the creation of Adam peace be upon him from clay. This particular creation was one that Allah the Exalted tells us about, for none of us was there to see it, as He Himself makes clear:

'I did not make them witnesses to the creation of the heavens and earth, nor to their own creation; I do not take as My supporters those who lead others astray.' (al-Kahf: 51)

If someone appears amongst us who thinks that humans were originated from apes that evolved into human beings, we know that he is one of those people Allah Glorified is He tells us about in the verse above, who lead men astray. Know for sure that he is a liar. It is easy to refute such nonsense, for if humans really had evolved from apes, why did all the other apes not also evolve? Why, over the course of all the centuries we have been here, have we not seen a single ape evolve into something resembling a human being?

Thus, it is no more than falsehood and lies, for the Creator created all species and made each of them in pairs so that they could procreate, propagate and be sorted. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And We created pairs of all things so that you [people] might take note.' (adh-Dhariyat: 49)

Concerning His Words, '...in threefold depths of darkness...' (az-Zumar: 6), they are to clarify the secure receptacle into which a human being settles inside the womb of his mother. Allah the Almighty says: 'Which We housed in a safe lodging for a determined period?' (al-Mursalat: 21-22) Makin means settled into a place. So, a mother's womb is the place, and the embryo is securely settled inside of it.

When the people of knowledge speak about what is meant by these three types of darkness, they say that they are the darkness of the abdomen, the darkness of the womb and the darkness of the placenta. There are a number of things that can be understood from the word dhulmah (darkness):

Firstly, darkness means lack of light, and that is inextricably linked with the night.

Secondly, the night is cooler than the day since during the day there is heat generated by the sun, and heat generated by the fast breathing that stems from movement and hard work. As for people's breathing at night, it is slow and measured since its only purpose is to ensure the preservation of life, and it does not stem from hard work or expended effort.

Thirdly, there is calm and stillness in darkness and that is not available in the day.

So, in darkness there is coolness, stillness and a lack of light—and these three things are essential for an embryo to grow, for its limbs and organs to form while it is in its mother's womb. This is because, while it is in the womb, its constitution is weak, and its limbs and organs are incomplete. Moreover, it is unable to cope with heat, light or disturbing sounds. Therefore, the Creator has created insulators to protect it from those things, which is why He says: '... in threefold depths of darkness ...' (az-Zumar: 6).

However, the most correct view is that these three types of darkness are all in the womb, and the darkness of the abdomen is not included in them since the True Lord the Most High is informing us in this verse of the secure receptacle that is specific to the embryo. As for His Words, '... in your mothers' wombs (fi butun ummahatikum) …' (az-Zumar: 6), they simply clarify to us that the general receptacle, botun (literally abdomen) is that in which the specific receptacle (the womb) lies. The abdomen is a large receptacle which contains the womb, the intestines, the stomach, the liver, the kidneys, the pancreas, etc. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He describes the receptacle that is specific to the embryo immediately afterwards by saying: '...in threefold depths of darkness ...' (az-Zumar: 6). Thus, '… the threefold depths of darkness …' (az-Zumar: 6) is simply a way of describing the three levels of insulation that surround and protect the child—and all three of them are inside of the womb. When a man is grown up and fully mature, he can be bothered and disturbed by sounds, and such sounds can even cause his eardrum to burst. Very bright lights can cause him harm, so that sometimes he cannot even look directly at them. Then, how could a child whose organs have not yet fully developed be expected to cope with such things?

It is well known that children are born with skin that is so delicate it cannot bear heat and that they are born with some organs and limbs that are not yet fully formed. The nervous system, for example, does not become fully developed until after a number of years; the mental faculty does not fully mature until after puberty, while the eye does not become capable of seeing properly until after three days.

Thus, the embryo is in dire need of protection and that Allah the Almighty caused it to be inside an enveloping layer inside an enveloping layer inside an enveloping layer. It is similar, for example, to when you put your most important document inside a file, that file is put inside a safe, and that safe is inside a strong room. The preposition fi (in) proves the great care that is taken over this creation and indicates that it has been provided with the enveloping layers that suit it best.

Concerning His Words, '...Such is Allah, your Lord; to Him belongs dominion...' (az-Zumar: 6), the word dhalikum is a compound of the demonstrative pronoun dha and the second person plural pronoun. The demonstrative pronoun points to the True Lord. If you were addressing a single person, you would say dhalika; if you were addressing two, you would say dhalikuma as in His Words: '... this is part of what my Lord has taught me ...' (Yusuf: 37); if you were addressing a group of males, you would say dhalikum, and if you were addressing a group of females, you would say dhalikunna, as in the following: '... This is the one you blamed me for ...' (Yusuf: 32).

This demonstrative pronoun pointing to Allah the Exalted comes immediately after He talks about some of His secrets relating to the creation of the human being and about the three levels of darkness in the mother's womb. All these things relate to creation, rearing and initial shaping of human beings. Such matters relate most closely to Allah's attribute of Lordship through which He attends to rearing and creation, for the Lord is the Creator and the One Who rears and raises. As for the word,'… Allah …' (az-Zumar: 6), it is related to His Divinity. Divinity is holding man responsible of performing religious duties. This is because the word 'Allah' means the One Who is worshipped by His Commands being obeyed and His prohibitions being avoided. An embryo in the belly of its mother is far removed from having any responsibility for its actions, so why does the True Lord choose in this verse concerning this particular matter to use the word indicating Divinity, when He says, '... Such is Allah, your Lord...' (az-Zumar: 6) and does not say, 'Such is your Lord, Allah' as some of the orientalists say?

Scholars said He does that in order for us to understand that Allah does not create us and raise us up for us to be like cattle; instead, He creates us and raises us up for a purpose: to follow His Way in which one is held responsible for his actions. This is so that we get on intimate terms with the word 'Allah' before the word 'Lord'. Moreover, there is an indication in that this is the goal behind us being made responsible for what we do, for it is for the wellness of society and in order for us to become righteous. The True Lord the Most High did not create us on a whim and did not leave us to our own devices, lost and wandering around aimlessly.

Therefore, Allah the Exalted makes it clear to us in the beginning of the chapter of ar-Rahman that the Way was taught before creation was formed and that creation may only be considered a blessing when it is completed in the shade of the Way of the Creator, for a craftsman must always define what it is he wants to make before making it. He says: 'It is the Lord of Mercy Who taught the Quran. He created man and taught him to communicate.' (ar-Rahman: 1-4)

Concerning His Words,'... to Him belongs dominion ...' (az-Zumar: 6), they stem from the root letters malaka in whichh the words mulk, milk and malakut are derived: milk is what you own or possess, even if it is but something small, while mulk is to possess or own those who own. Both, these two, mulk and milk, apply to the Seen World, but as for malakut, it is that of Allah's dominion that we do not see. The only ones to whom Allah Glorified is He shows His malakut are those He has chosen from amongst His Prophets, Messengers and righteous people of obedience whose nature and belief are pure and to whom He has granted the right type of receptors that can receive from Allah. Such are the people to whom Allah the Almighty reveals some of His malakut. This is why Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him when he fulfilled his duty and complied fully with the Command of his Lord, Allah showed him this malakut: 'In this way We showed Ibrahim (Abraham) [Allah's] mighty dominion over the heavens and the earth ...' (al-An'am: 75).

Just like mulk and malakut, we say rahma and rahamut, and rahba and rahabut.

'... to Him belongs dominion ...' (az-Zumar: 6) means 'if you have seen an expansive kingdom before you, know that it belongs to the One Who created you.' It is amazing that this kingdom is created for you, humans, and Allah the Exalted created it for you even before creating you. This is clearly the case, for the first human being came upon a world ready to receive him and equipped with all the necessary ingredients for life from the very first moment he stepped upon it, such as the earth, the sky, the sun, the moon, the stars, right down to the very smallest things in existence.

What follows are Allah's Words, '...there is no deity but He…' (az-Zumar: 6), which mean that this amazing creation belongs solely to Allah, and there is no one else there to lay claim to it. Since no one else claims it for himself, no one else may claim to have set up a programme showing mankind how to live in the world, for the One Who created is the One Who sets up the programme, and the One Who makes something is the One Who makes up the rules by which His making is maintained.

Then, there are the Words: '... How can you turn away?' (az-Zumar: 6) They mean, 'How did you turn from worshipping Allah, the Creator, to worshipping others apart from Him who played no part whatsoever in creation? How did you turn aside from a Lord who created you and taught you and still does so, not leaving you alone for a moment; neither does He hand over any part of the creation process to anyone else, nor is He ready to ever hand it over to anyone else.

إِن تَكۡفُرُواْ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ غَنِيٌّ عَنكُمۡۖ وَلَا يَرۡضَىٰ لِعِبَادِهِ ٱلۡكُفۡرَۖ وَإِن تَشۡكُرُواْ
فَيُنَبِّئُكُم بِمَا كُنتُمۡ تَعۡمَلُونَۚ إِنَّهُۥ عَلِيمُۢ بِذَاتِ ٱلصُّدُورِ ﴿٧﴾

If you are ungrateful, remember God has no need of you, yet He is not pleased by ingratitude in His servants; if you are grateful, He is pleased [to see] it in you. No soul will bear another's burden. You will return to your Lord in the end and He will inform you of what you have done: He knows well what is in the depths of [your] hearts[7] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 7)

After showing His compassion for His creation, He mentions the Lordship by means of which He created, taught and commanded, and He mentions the Divinity by which the well-being of the land and the servants is guaranteed. Allah Glorified is He then makes it clear that He is the One Who is totally without need of His creation by saying: 'If you are ungrateful, remember Allah has no need of you ...' (az-Zumar: 7); this means that He has no need of your belief and does not benefit from you obeying Him.

He set the obligations for our own good, not so He can derive some benefit from them. You are His creation and of His making, and He, in His role as Creator, wants to see what he has created in the best possible state. He wants to see believing servants living in believing societies in which people work together and not against each other, living in harmony and not in conflict. Allah the Exalted does not want to see His creation in conflict: one building, while the other destroys.

So, this is the purpose of creation and the purpose of the Divine Programme. Thus, by the Attributes of Perfection that He possesses, Allah created the creation, and yet that creation did not increase Him by so much as a single attribute that He did not already have. He has no need of you. You are of His making, and for whom He wishes good. This is why when Allah the Almighty offered the trust to the heavens, the earth, and the mountains, they refused to bear it because they were afraid of it. Yet man took it up, for, verily, he has always been unjust and ignorant.

The refusal of the heavens, earth, and mountains was not a refusal of Allah nor was it an act of opposition against Him; rather, it was an act of submission, for Allah the Almighty had given them the choice, and they chose not to have free will.

However, man accepted it, and so He described them as being unjust and ignorant. How can someone who accepts the Words of Allah be unjust and ignorant?

Scholars said that he is described as such because he wronged himself and was ignorant of the consequences of his decision, for the fact that he has been granted free choice means that he is free to believe and free to disbelieve, free to obey and free to disobey. When the trust was offered to him, he accepted it because it was Allah the Most High Who had given him that choice, and he felt confident in himself that he would be able to carry out what would be required of him. Actually, he was ignorant of the incidents that would befall him and the whims and desires that would overtake him. Thus, he wronged himself by taking on that burden. He was also ignorant of the time when he would have to pay it back. He hurried to take it on at the time of accepting it, but he should have reckoned on the cost of carrying it out and paying it back.

With respect to the trust, there is a difference between taking it on and giving it back. This is because entrusting something to someone depends basically on his consciousness. However, if a receipt is written for it or there are witnesses, then it is not called a trust. When people take on a trust, they generally have the intention of holding on to it and giving it back, such as, for example, when you give a friend of yours a sum of money to look after for you until you get back from your travels, and he welcomes it and accepts it. However, circumstances may arise whereby your friend finds himself in need of that money and so helps himself to it. So, when you come back from your travels, you do not find your money; rather, you find yourself greeted by either denial or temporising.

So, man wronged himself, was ignorant of the time of giving the trust back, and was ignorant of the fact that he is subject to vicissitudes, so much so that even his heart is subject to change. As for the heavens, earth and mountains, when they were given the choice, they chose to not have free will, having nothing whatsoever to do with the matter, or in essence, wiping their hands free from it.

The meaning of Allah's Words 'If you are ungrateful, remember Allah has no need of you ...' (az-Zumar: 7) is clearly expressed in a Qudsi Hadith 'O My servants, were the first of you and the last of you, the human of you and the jinn of you to be as pious as the most pious heart of any one man of you, that would not increase My kingdom in anything, and were the first of you and the last of you, the human of you and the jinn of you to be as wicked as the most wicked heart of any one man of you, that would not decrease My kingdom in anything. O My servants, were the first of you and the last of you, the human of you and the jinn of you to rise up in one place and make a request of Me, and were I to give everyone what he requested, that would not decrease what I have, any more than a needle decreases the sea if put into it. This is because I am the Most Generous, Majestic. I give with a word. When I will something, all I do is say to it "Be!" – and it is.'(1)

His Words, '...He is not pleased by ingratitude in His servants…' (az-Zumar: 7) act as evidence of His Love for His creation. It is as if Allah Glorified is He is saying, 'I have no need of you, but still I do not like for you to be ungrateful since I want to boast of you to those angels of Mine who said about you: "...Will You place upon it one who causes corruption therein and sheds blood? …"' (al-Baqara: 30)

It has been narrated that the True Lord the Most High said to His angels, 'Do you know that My servants obeyed Me?' Thus, they replied, 'They obeyed You for the blessings You had bestowed upon them.' The True Lord the Most High said, 'Even if I were to take My blessings away, they would have obeyed Me still.'

This is why He makes them ill, and they obey Him; He makes them poor, and they obey Him; He causes them to be defeated, and they obey Him; He grants them victory, and they obey Him. So, 'My slaves obey Me because of

(1) It is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad 5/154 & 177; At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan 2495; and Ibn Majah in his Sunnan 4275 in a Hadith from Abu Dharr Allah be pleased with him. And At-Tirmidhi said, 'This is a hasan Hadith.'

Who I am and because I deserve to be loved and obeyed regardless of whether I bestow blessings upon them or not.'

Allah the Exalted says, rebuking those of His creation who worship Him out of fear of the Hellfire or desire for Paradise, 'If I had not created Heaven and Hell, would I not have been worthy of being worshipped?'

A good example of this is the one we gave of a man who had a servant who worked for him and served him in exchange for a hundred pounds every month. Then, one month, the man's circumstances became so constrained that he found himself unable to pay the servant that amount, so he said to him, 'By Allah, I am no longer able to pay you this amount. I can give you no more than fifty pounds, so take care of yourself and go and see if you can find another job.' In spite of this, the servant replies, 'I agree to work for fifty pounds.' Then, the man's circumstances continued to get worse until he is no longer able to pay the servant more than twenty pounds. Yet, the servant was content with that. Then, it went down to ten, but the servant was content and even said to him, 'By Allah, the way you treat me makes you worthy of being served, even if that were to be for no wage whatsoever.' This is how Allah wants us to be connected to Him.

Thus, the True Lord the Most High is not pleased with ingratitude in His servants because they are His creation, and He desires only what is best for them; He desires for them to be believers so that their affairs can be set in order and so that His favours can extend from being given to them in this world to also being given to them in the Hereafter. Just as He bestows temporal favours upon them in this world, He also wants to bestow favours upon them in the Hereafter. The favours of the Hereafter are eternal and lasting.

Therefore, it has been narrated in a Qudsi Hadith: 'The earth keeps saying, "My Lord, grant me permission to swallow up the sons of Adam, for they have eaten from your good and have neglected to thank You." Also, the sky keeps saying, "My Lord, grant me permission to make the sky fall upon the sons of Adam in lumps, for they have eaten the good things You have given them and have neglected to thank You." Thus, the True Lord says to those things in creation that express their zealous concern for their Lord, "Leave Me and My creation be! If you were to have created them, you would have shown them mercy. If they repent and come back to Me, I am their beloved, and if they do not repent, then I am their doctor."'(1)

Allah says '... if you are grateful, He is pleased [to see] it in you ...' (az-Zumar: 7); this means that if you are thankful, He will be content with that thankfulness of yours, for He is pleased with you for it. He loves to find it in you and rewards you for it with good. The only reason that it pleases Him to find gratitude in you is due to the fact that gratitude is the cause of your being happy in this world and the Hereafter as He says: '...If you are thankful, I will give you more...' (Ibrahim: 7). Thus, being thankful for a favour actually gives us more of that blessing—we thank Him for it, and He gives us more. By means of this, the gratitude remains forever, and the favour remains forever.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '... No soul will bear another's burden ...' (az-Zumar: 7); in other words, it is like He is saying, 'No wrong-acting soul will carry the burden of another's wrong action.' Or in other words, 'I will be just by not burdening anyone with another's wrong actions. Everyone will be held accountable for their own actions.'

A number of orientalists have raised objections to this verse, saying that there is a contradiction between this verse and Allah's Words: 'They will bear their own burdens and others besides ...' (al-'Ankabut: 13). Yes, it is true that the two verses seemingly contradict each other, but they have not understood the reason behind the wrong action.

The general rule is that no one carries the burden of another's sins; these people carry their own sins and those of other people because the verse is talking about the chiefs of misguidance, the leaders of disbelief, who were misguided in themselves, and at the same time misguided others. So, the first sin is the sin of them being misguided, while the other sins are those of the people whom they misguided, led astray and made misguidance seem fine to them. Thus, the meaning of this verse is different.

(1) It is transmitted by Imam Al-Ghazali in Ihya' Ulum Ad-Din 4/52 as a statement of one of the men of the right-acting early generations with the wording, Whenever any slave disobeys Me, his place on the earth seeks permission from Me to swallow him up while the portion of the sky that is immediately above him seeks permission from Me to fall down upon him in lumps. So, Allah Glorified is He says to the earth and sky, 'Keep away from My slaves and give them respite, for it was not you who created them. If you had created them, then you would have shown them mercy. It is possible that he will repent and come to back to Me so that I can forgive him, and it is possible that he will do a right action in exchange, so that I can change it into good actions.'

Allah the Almighty says: '...You will return to your Lord in the end ...' (az-Zumar: 7); this is like He is saying, 'If I have started My creation of you by honouring you, and you have met My honouring of you with rejection and not given it its due by believing in Me and following My Way, then know that you will come back to Me in the end and will not escape My grasp.' '... and He will inform you of what you have done…' (az-Zumar: 7); this means He will inform you of all that you have done. '... He knows well what is in the depths of [your] hearts.' (az-Zumar: 7); what this means is that always remember this matter and take yourself to account before it is too late.

This verse is a warning to us from the True Lord and a clarification of the issue of punishment in order to deter people from doing wrong action, in which case punishment does not happen at all. This is out of the Mercy of the Creator towards His creation, for He wants only good for them and wants them to enjoy His favours in the Hereafter, just as they enjoy His favours in this world.

وَإِذَا مَسَّ ٱلْإِنسَٰنَ ضُرٌّ دَعَا رَبَّهُۥ مُنِيبًا إِلَيْهِ ثُمَّ إِذَا خَوَّلَهُۥ نِعْمَةً مِّنْهُ
نَسِىَ مَا كَانَ يَدْعُوٓا۟ إِلَيْهِ مِن قَبْلُ وَجَعَلَ لِلَّهِ أَندَادًا لِّيُضِلَّ عَن سَبِيلِهِۦ ۚ
قُلْ تَمَتَّعْ بِكُفْرِكَ قَلِيلًا ۖ إِنَّكَ مِنْ أَصْحَٰبِ ٱلنَّارِ ﴿٨﴾

When man suffers some affliction, he prays to his Lord and turns to Him, but once he has been granted a favour from God, he forgets the One he had been praying to and sets up rivals to God, to make others stray from His path. Say, 'Enjoy your ingratitude for a little while: you will be one of the inhabitants of the Fire' [8] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 8)

'Affliction' (durr) is the harm that undermines safety and security of a person, his family or property. When harm afflicts man, it reduces extremely his feeling of pride and arrogance ('antaza); this is so because man knows that he cannot relieve himself nor removes that harm simply by himself; rather, he needs Allah's help. So, he seeks Allah's support and stops deceiving himself.

We have made this matter abundantly clear by making reference to the barber-surgeon who once lived in our village and who used to have a similar role amongst us as that of a doctor. Then, when education became more widespread and a few doctors began to graduate from the college of medicine, this man became frightened about his livelihood, fearing that one of those doctors would pull the rug from under his feet. Thus, the barber began to belittle the doctor who had been appointed to our village by saying, ‘He (the physician) does not know anything whatsoever!’ He said this wanting to prevent people from going to see him. However when his own son became ill, what did he do? Did he deceive himself as well? No, rather, that barber wrapped his son up in a piece of cloth at night and took him to the doctor about whom he had been speaking disparagingly for so long by telling people how inept he was. Yet, now, because the ill person was his own son, he comes back to the truth and stops deceiving himself.

Similarly, when man is touched by harm and things become difficult for him, he takes refuge in none but his Lord. This is after losing the basis of arrogance as revealed in the verse: 'Nay, verily, man becomes grossly overweening whenever he believes himself to be self-sufficient.' (al-‘Alaq: 6-7) This is after his mask of superiority and self-importance has fallen away.

We have said this is something that it is possible for each one of us to notice in himself; for you might, for example, give your son his daily allowance every day before he goes to school, but then one day you forget to give it to him. What would he do? He would present himself to you and try to pass backwards and forwards in front of you, as if he were trying to remind you of what you had forgotten. Then, he would greet you or say something like, ‘I am off to school, Dad!’ However, if you were to give him his allowance once a month, he would not behave in such a manner throughout the other twenty-nine days. Yes, indeed, it is true: 'Nay! [It is not at all as these people think;] this human being does indeed indulge in transgression because he thinks himself to be independent [of Allah].' (al-‘Alaq: 6-7)

When men are afflicted by harm and know that no one can remove it except for Allah, the Creator of the heavens and the earth, they will not turn to anyone but Him because they unconsciously believe that Allah is the only

One capable of taking that harm away. Even though a person does not believe in Allah, but when he is afflicted by harm, he seeks salvation from Him, and he calls out, ‘O, my Lord, save me!’ Strangely enough is that Allah responds and helps them and does not ignore them: '... Who is it that responds to the distressed when he calls out to Him and Who removes the ill [that caused the distress] …' (an-Naml: 62).

Is it not enough that you can find no one to help you but Allah? Furthermore, you cannot help saying, ‘O, my Allah!’ Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: 'and whenever danger befalls you at sea, all those [powers] that you are wont to invoke forsake you, [and nothing remains for you] save Him ...' (al-Isra’: 67); that is if you call on anyone other than Allah, he will not be able to reach you and will get lost on the way. The only One Who will respond to you is Allah.

The meaning of '... turning unto Him [for help] …' (az-Zumar: 8) is coming back to Him. '... but as soon as He has bestowed upon him a boon by His Grace ...' (az-Zumar: 8) means that as soon as He the Most High has given welfare to the human being: '... he forgets that which he invoked before …' (az-Zumar: 8). Scholars have raised a great controversy about the relative pronoun ma (which) that is used in this verse; they said that, assuming ma is referring to Allah, why did He not say, ‘he forgets the One Whom...’, using the relative pronoun man (whom)? For in Arabic, man is the relative pronoun that is used for beings who possess the ability to reason, while ma is the one that is used for beings that do not possess the ability to reason, including the non-living.’

Our answer is that the Quran has a different point of view. You can read the holy verses: 'Say: "O, you who deny the truth! I do not worship that which you worship, and neither do you worship that which I worship."' (al-Kafirun: 1-3) In these verses, ma refers to Allah. So, ma is used in its correct sense here, even if the wisdom behind that is hidden to you. Yes, it is true that man is used for those with intellects, while ma is for those without intellects; however, the True Lord the Most High does not describe Himself as having intellect. Rather, intellect is one of your attributes, so the True Lord describes Himself in a way that does prohibit the non-existence of intellect. If the True Lord Glorified is He were to have said man, He would have been including Himself amongst those who have intellects, and He does not describe Himself as being intellectual but as being knowledgeable and All Knowing.

It is also possible to avoid this problem completely by interpreting ma in a different way so that the verse means ‘he forgets the harm that was the cause of him turning back to Allah’ instead of meaning ‘he forgets the One Who saved him and took the harm away’. If we interpret it this way, then ma can be used in its ordinary linguistic sense of referring to something non-sentient

As for Allah’s Words, '… claims that there are other powers that could rival Allah and thus leads [others] astray from His Path ...' (az-Zumar: 8), andad (rival powers) is the plural of the word nid, which means a peer, equal or counterpart. These disbelievers ascribed rival powers to Allah despite them knowing that He is the True deity, Allah, and despite them knowing that all those who call on other than He are astray. They did so in order to gratify the natural stirrings of belief present in themselves, for they desired to have a deity to worship, but a deity that suits their own whims and desires, a deity who did not obligate them to do anything and whose worship did not entail any difficulty. They wanted a deity that had no programme, one that did not tell them what to do and what not to do.

Allah Glorified is He says: '... and thus leads [others] astray from His Path...' (az-Zumar: 8); some reciters recited it yadilla with a fatha(1) on the ya'; that is the phrase 'leads [others] astray' is read 'leads [himself] astray'. However, we say that a person would not lead others astray unless he is already astray himself. Thus, it is more appropriate to recite it yudilla with a damma on the ya' which means 'leads others astray'.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '... Say ...' (az-Zumar: 8); this means for Muhammad to respond to them and say: '… enjoy yourself for a while in this your denial of the truth. [Yet,] verily, you are of those who are destined for the Fire!' (az-Zumar: 8) Truly, where can enjoyment be found in disbelief? We said that their enjoyment lies in worshipping a deity who has no system and does not demand anything from them, a deity who does not prevent them from drinking alcohol and does not put a leash on their appetites, a deity who does not order them to be truthful nor to be trustworthy, etc., but who instead leaves them to go about the earth and enjoy themselves in any way they wish.

(1) This recitation of a fatha on the ya' is the narration of Ad-Duri from Abu ‘Amr. As for the narration of Hafs from ‘Asim, it has a damma on the ya'.

He says, '... for a while ...' (az-Zumar: 8) because the enjoyment of this world is temporary and lasts only as long as we remain in it. We also said that this world lasts, in relation to any particular human being, for only as long as he remains in it. The rest of the time it has been here, from the creation of Adam to the coming of the Hour, is totally irrelevant to him.

Allah Glorified is He says: '... of those who are destined for the Fire!' (az-Zumar: 8) The phrase 'destined for the fire' is the translation for the phrase 'ashab an-nar', which literally means ‘companions of the fire’; it bears an indication of acquaintance and intimacy between hellfire and its inhabitants. This is why Allah Glorified is He says, when addressing the Fire: 'On that Day We will ask Hell, "Are you filled?" And it will answer, "[Nay,] is there yet more [for me]?"' (Qaf: 30); it is as if the fire says, ‘Bring me my lovers and companions. I want more of them!’

Then, Allah Glorified is He says (1):

أَمَّنۡ هُوَ قَٰنِتٌ ءَانَآءَ ٱلَّيۡلِ سَاجِدٗا وَقَآئِمٗا يَحۡذَرُ ٱلۡأٓخِرَةَ وَيَرۡجُواْ رَحۡمَةَ رَبِّهِۦۗ قُلۡ
هَلۡ يَسۡتَوِي ٱلَّذِينَ يَعۡلَمُونَ وَٱلَّذِينَ لَا يَعۡلَمُونَۗ إِنَّمَا يَتَذَكَّرُ أُوْلُواْ ٱلۡأَلۡبَٰبِ ٩

What about someone who worships devoutly during the night, bowing down, standing in prayer, ever mindful of the life to come, hoping for his Lord’s mercy? Say, ‘How can those who know be equal to those who do not know?’ Only those who have understanding will take heed [9] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 9)

The word amm (or) indicates that there is a choice between two things. You say, ‘This or (amm) that.’ The word indicates that there must be a counterpart to the choice presented to us; so what is counterpart of 'one who devoutly worships [Allah] throughout the night ...' (az-Zumar: 9)? The bad equivalent is mentioned in in Allah's Words immediately before it: 'Now [thus it is] when affliction befalls man, he is likely to cry out to his Lord, turning unto Him [for help], but as soon as He has bestowed upon him a boon by His Grace, he forgets Him Whom he invoked before, claims that there are other powers that could rival Allah and thus leads [others] astray from His Path ...' (az-Zumar: 8).

(1) Al-Wahidi An-Nisaburi says in Asbab An-Nuzul (p.210), ‘Ibn ‘Abbas Allah be pleased with him said according to the narration of ‘Ata’, ‘This verse was revealed about Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him.’ Also, Ibn ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him said, ‘It was revealed about ’Uthman ibn ‘Affan Allah be pleased with him.’ Furthermore, Muqatil said, ‘It was revealed about ʿAmmar ibn Yasir Allah be pleased with him.’ As-Suyuti mentioned this in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (7/214) with a number of different narrations.

Thus, the meaning is 'Which is better: one who entreats Allah when he is afflicted by harm but then ascribes partners to Him once the harm is removed, or one who spends the night hours in prayer, prostrating and standing, mindful of the Hereafter and hoping for the Mercy of his Lord?'

'…One who devoutly worships …' is the translation for Arabic word qanit, meaning a person who is constant in his humility to and worship of Allah. The Arabic word ana' (throughout) is the plural of inw, like himl, (singular for load) and its plural ahmal. The word inw means a portion of night, and its plural, morphologically-speaking, would be a'naw, but the hamza is changed to a long vowel, and the waw is changed to a hamza because it comes immediately after an additional alif, so the word becomes ana'.

As for '... ever-mindful of the life to come ...' (az-Zumar: 9), this means a believer who is fearful of the Hereafter, along with implying the constraint he may be subjected to in order to get there. '... and hoping for his Lord's Grace...' (az-Zumar: 9) means His mercy precedes His anger, for He does not say here 'feeling safe about receiving his Lord's Grace', which would have been the opposite of being 'ever-mindful of'. Instead, He first mentioned the frightening things of the Hereafter that await people if they disobey; what is meant in this verse is 'being wary of the fire in the hereafter'. Then, Allah talks directly about His Mercy by saying, '... and hoping for his Lord's Grace...', and not saying, 'hoping for paradise'.

When a believer places his hopes in his Lord, he does not reckon upon his deeds and actions in this world; instead, he hopes for and awaits the Mercy of Allah. This is because it is not a believer's actions that save them; indeed, every person, when called to account meticulously for his actions in this life, will inevitably be found guilty.

So, the first and utmost bail and means of salvation for us all is the Mercy of Allah; this is mentioned in the Noble Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘There is not one of you who will enter paradise by his actions.’ They (his companions) asked, ‘Not even you, Messenger of Allah?’ He peace and blessing be upon him replied, ‘Not even me, except if Allah encompasses me with His Mercy.’(1)

Therefore, you should take care not to be filled with self-conceit concerning your actions; all the religious assignments (takaleef) primarily benefit you, and they are no favour to Allah. When He rewards you for such deeds in the Hereafter, it is from His Grace and Bounty.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '... Say: "Can they who know and they who do not know be deemed equal?"…' (az-Zumar: 9) After having made a comparison between a person who calls on his Lord and turns back to Him when he is afflicted by harm but then forgets Allah's favour when he is granted a blessing by Him, and a person who spends the night hours in prayer, prostrating and standing, both being mindful of the Hereafter and hoping for the Mercy of his Lord. Allah the Almighty wants to emphasise this point and makes it clear to us that those who have real knowledge are not the same as those who have false information: '...Say: "Can they who know and they who do not know be deemed equal?" …' (az-Zumar: 9). So, the one who returns to disbelief after Allah has removed the harm from him is lacking real knowledge; if he had real knowledge, he would not have returned to disbelief. Furthermore, had he weighed fairly the duties required from them in this world against the reward prepared for them in the Hereafter, surely he would see these duties such a less and slight work.

However, as for the one who spends the night hours in prayer, prostrating, and standing, being mindful of the Hereafter and hoping for the Mercy of his Lord, he does have real knowledge. Most certainly, spending the night hours in prayer has many benefits. First, it keeps a worshipper far removed from showing off or gaining fame. Second, it means that all limbs and organs of a worshipper are devoted to the meeting of his Lord; the eye, for example, in the darkness of night is relieved from having to look at all those things that distract man's attention in the daytime. The reason for this is that everything appears to your eyes takes a portion of your thinking. You note it to yourself when someone goes out, someone comes in or someone says something, etc.

(1) An agreed upon prophetic Hadith (saying) that is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (6463) and Muslim in his Sahih (2816) from Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

However, at night, there is stillness and nothing to distract you; so all the limbs and organs are directed purely towards Allah, free of the distractions of extraneous sights and sounds. This type of atmosphere allows you to stand before your Lord in true sincerity and humility.

When you stand for a long time in prayer, you leave behind sleep and deny yourself its rest in order to stand before your Lord and prostrate to Him. This is why a poet says:

I dedicated myself to My Lord and felt rapture on account of my closeness to Him
And felt so light that it was as if I had no body.
There I recited the Book of Allah, O, what a wondrous thing,
I have been given in exchange for the blessing of sleep!
I wished that my night could grow longer so that I could reach
The sin of wa'n-nas and connect it to the ba' of bi-smi.

This is the state of the people of devoted worship who spend their nights in intimate conversation with their Lord. This is the state of those who make their journey through the Book of Allah; no sooner do they reach, in their recitation of the Quran, the letter sin of the word wa'n-nas which is the last in order of the Quran verses, than they resume recitation right back to bi-smi-llahi'r-rahmani'r-rahim, which is the beginning of the Holy Book. We said previously that the Quran in its entirety is based upon connected recitation, and not upon stopping.

Is the person who experiences such a state equal to one who disbelieves in Allah? The former has gained knowledge and turned it into action, while the latter has no knowledge at all or he has knowledge but does not use it in a way that benefits him. Then, there is the fact that when a person puts his knowledge into action, Allah the Exalted elevates his level of perception to the level of unveiling (mukashafa) and the emanation of knowledge (faid) as an act of Mercy and Grace from Him. We see an example of that in the story of the righteous man whom Musa (Moses) peace be upon him accompanied and about whom Allah Glorified is He says: '... on whom We had bestowed Grace from Ourselves and unto whom We had imparted knowledge [issuing] from Ourselves.' (al-Kahf: 65) Likewise, the Grace mentioned in Allah’s Words, '...and hoping for his Lord’s Grace ...' (az-Zumar: 9), refers to the special emanations from Allah to those who dedicate themselves to Him. A clear example of this in our life is when you have a friend who accompanies you everywhere; you inevitably single him out for special favour and treatment. So, how do you think it must be for one who always stays close to his Lord? Would Allah the Almighty reward him without singling him out for any special favour? Would He treat you the same as someone who only does the obligatory acts and nothing else?

Therefore, Allah says in a Qudsi Hadith: 'The best devotion My servant submits to Me is performing the obligatory duties I decreed for him. My servant continues to get closer to me by means of supererogatory acts until I love him. When I love him, I become the hearing with which he hears, his seeing with which he sees, his hand with which he strikes, and his legs with which he walks, and if he were to ask anything of Me, I would give it to him.'(1)

Thus, a dedicated believer enters into the state of being a devoted man of Allah such that he is granted the ability which says to something ‘Be!’ and it will be. This is one of the emanations that are granted to those who keep prostrating and praying to Allah, fearing the Hereafter and hoping for the Mercy of their Lord. They worship Allah without simulation or seeking reputation and deny themselves sleep and rest because they have become intimate with their Lord; they find rest in being near to Him.

Allah’s Words, '..."Can they who know and they who do not know be deemed equal?"…' (az-Zumar: 9) prove that there is a type of knowledge called the knowledge of unveiling which Allah the Exalted grants to those whom He wills from amongst His righteous slaves, those who are deserving of such a position. Thus, a pious man who was a companion of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him worshipped Allah according to the Way brought by Musa (Moses), and he was not a messenger. However, despite that, he, in some aspect excelled a messenger because Musa (Moses) guided him to his Lord, and he became closer and closer to him until he became one of the people of unveiling, achieved a direct connection to Allah and was shown things by Him that He had not even shown His Prophet Musa (Moses).

(1) It is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (6502); and Abu Nu‘aym in Hilyat Al-Awliya’ (1/4) in a hadith from Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him. The beginning of the Hadith proceeds as follows: 'Allah says, "If anyone shows enmity to one of a devoted worshipper of Mine, I will declare war on him (the aggressor) ...’ It has also been narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (6/256) in a Hadith from 'Aisha Allah be pleased with her and in her version it begins, ‘If anyone humiliates one of My devoted worshippers, it becomes lawful for Me to wage war upon him ...’

Therefore, at the end of the period he spent with Musa (Moses), this pious man said, '... And I did not do [any of] this of my own accord ...' (al-Kahf: 82). So, the task of a messenger is to connect creation with the Creator. Then, when they do connect with Allah, the line that links them to Him becomes more direct; each worshipper is rewarded according to the degree of his devotion to Allah.

Then Allah Glorified is He says: '... [But] only they who are endowed with insight keep this in mind!' (az-Zumar: 9) This means that those who have thinking intellects that examine the world around them and reflect on Allah's signs know this truth. In other words, people have senses by means of which they perceive and an intellect by means of which they weigh their perceptions up and make choices. They use hearing in processing sounds, sight for visions and nose for smells, etc.; then they put those things before their intellect which examines them to weigh advantages and disadvantages. If the intellect is sound, then it falls on the side of what is good and chooses what is the most useful and most beneficial.

حَسَنَةٌ ۗ وَأَرْضُ ٱللَّهِ وَٰسِعَةٌ ۗ إِنَّمَا يُوَفَّى ٱلصَّٰبِرُونَ أَجْرَهُم بِغَيْرِ حِسَابٍ ﴿١٠﴾

Say, '[God says], believing servants, be mindful of your Lord! Those who do good in this world will have a good reward – God's earth is wide — and those who persevere patiently will be given a full and unstinting reward'[10]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 10)

Being conscious of Allah (taqwa) is guarding oneself against doing acts of disobedience, putting a barrier between yourself and Allah's Attributes of Majesty. Allah is the Compelling, the Subjugating, and the Vengeful; so, put a barrier between yourself and those Attributes as a form of protection.

'… who have attained to faith' (az-Zumar: 10) refers to those who believe in the Doctrines of Faith; '... Be conscious of your Lord!’ (az-Zumar: 10) This is in reference to the assignments, or orders, He requires from you. '...Ultimate good awaits those who persevere in doing the good in this world...' (az-Zumar: 10) means the good in the Hereafter awaits them, for Allah the Almighty does not say, ‘Good in this world awaits those who preserve in doing good'. This is because even disbelievers enjoy a great many good things in this world such as wealth, fame, information, etc.

If we interpreted the word ‘good’ as meaning ‘bliss’, that bliss that causes a person to turn away from his Lord cannot be considered a good thing but must instead be considered a bad thing. Thus, the good that is referred to in this verse must be that which awaits us in the Hereafter. '... And [remember] wide is Allah’s earth …' (az-Zumar: 10). However, what is the connection between '... And [remember] wide is Allah’s earth …' and '... Be conscious of your Lord', which precedes it?

Scholars say that if you encounter hardships regarding your devotion to Allah in the land where you live, Allah’s earth is wide, so search for the means to protect yourself and your faith in a different land; Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: 'And he who forsakes the domain of evil for the sake of Allah shall find on earth many a lonely road, as well as life abundant ...' (an-Nisa’: 100).

In the same respect, He also says: 'Behold, those whom the angels gather in death while they are still sinning against themselves, [the angels] will ask, "What was wrong with you?" They will answer, "We were too weak on earth." [The angels] will say, "Was, then, Allah’s earth not wide enough for you to forsake the domain of evil?"…' (an-Nisa’: 97).

So, when you feel caged and extremely oppressed in your own land, go and look for another land in which you can feel safe regarding yourself and your religion, and with respect to putting Allah’s programme into practice without anyone objecting.

If you were to have paid full notice to a verse in the chapter of ar-Rahman, you would have found in it the solution to all the problems of the modern world. This verse is the following, 'And the earth has He spread out for all living beings' (ar-Rahman: 10) which means that Allah the Almighty has placed the earth, that is to say the entire earth without restriction, at the disposal of all living beings, again without restriction. Thus, every human being has a share in Allah's earth. Therefore, if one place becomes too narrow for a person, he has the right to go elsewhere. However, the laws and interests of the human race has changed this picture, putting obstacles, impediments and complicated procedures in the way, which block the path of this freedom that the True Lord the Most High guarantees us of being able to move about the earth.

Furthermore, this is why we find that the world's big economic problem is the existence of large swathes of land without people and many people without land. If we were to leave the land to Allah in the way that He created it for His slaves and if we were to place the whole of the earth at the disposal of all living beings, we would bring an end to the problems of this world.

Look, for example, at Sudan, our neighbour to the south; it is a country that contains millions of acres that no one benefits from, while we here in Egypt have millions of idle labour force. If it were not for the borders that we ourselves put in place, Sudan alone could have solved the problem of food for the entire Arab world. Instead, we make things even more wretched and bitter for ourselves by disputing and jostling amongst ourselves concerning where those borders should fall, even if it is by as much as a single inch. Indeed, this matter has been the cause of great crises and even led to the outbreak of wars between different nations. Thus, this is the natural result of going against the Command of Allah and His order in creation.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '[and] verily, they who are patient in adversity will be given their reward in full, beyond all reckoning!' (az-Zumar: 10) The fact that Allah the Exalted encourages us to have patience after saying, '…And [remember] wide is Allah's earth, [and] verily, they who are patient in adversity will be given their reward in full, beyond all reckoning!' (az-Zumar: 10), indicates that there must be difficulties, problems and hardships that demand our patience. A poet once said:

By your life, no land has ever become too narrow for its people,

Rather, it is the manners of its men that have become too narrow for it.(1)

The True Lord the Most High wants us to take on the burden of Allah's Way and put it into practice in order to bring ourselves happiness, and then to practice sublimation in our faith in order to bring happiness to others. This is the way to make welfare prevail evenly in society. This is why the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him says: 'May Allah illuminate the man who hears my speech and pays heed to it, and then conveys it to someone else who did not hear it, for it is possible that the one who is told of it will pay more heed to it than the one who heard it.'

Thus, passing on good to others is also useful for you, and it will bring you benefit since if you concealed the knowledge of what is good from someone else, you would leave that person embroiled in evil. Furthermore, that evil would inevitably have impacted upon you and worn you down. So, it is in your best interests that good things spread to others, enabling others to become good people, and not being ones stealing, cursing, cheating, or infringing upon the rights of others. Thus, the actual act of passing on knowledge of what is good is a source of benefit to the one who passes it on since at the very least it stops evil people from harming him.

A patient person (sabir) is the one who is patient and steadfast in the face of those trials and hardships that negatively impact his health, wealth, or family. This patient person is the one who is confident of the fact that the pain and harm he suffers will be the source of more good for him than the comfort and bliss he enjoyed before that pain and harm arrived since Allah says: '[and] verily, they who are patient in adversity will be given their reward in full, beyond all reckoning!' (az-Zumar: 10)

Allah the Almighty has designated certain amounts of rewards for performance of all the obligations that which He charges us; for the prayer, we will be rewarded with a certain amount of blessings and the same is true for zakat, etc. Concerning patience, it is something whose reward is not accounted for. In other words, its reward is unknown. Some have even said that when people are shown their stations in paradise, there will be some who are not known to have done a great deal of right action but still have lofty stations in paradise. When people ask who they are, they will be told that they are those who had patience in times of difficulty, trial and adversity; therefore, they obtained those lofty stations as a result of such.

(1) The line is from a poem written by Ibn Ar-Rumi and is in the (tawil) metre and is composed of four lines. Ibn Ar-Rumi is 'Ali ibn Al-'Abbas ibn Jurayj, a major poet from the same generation as Bashshar ibn Bard and Al-Mutanabbi. He was born in Baghdad in the year 221 AH; he grew up and died there, killed by poison in the year 283 AH at the age of 62.

Patience means negation of doubt in the Mercy of Allah, as well as not objecting to His Judgment and Decree. However, this is not the case with certain people whom, for example, we see at the time of Hajj presenting their lesions and woes to others. Some of these people go to perform Hajj, and then they reveal their tribulations to society at large by showing people a crippled leg or a crippled arm, for example, and as a result, begging them on account of their injury. It is as if they were complaining about the Creator to creation. However, if they were to conceal their tribulation instead, along with being content with Allah's Decree, boon of Allah would come to their doors, and He would give them what they needed without any effort on their behalf.

This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said: 'If you are tested, then conceal it.'(1) If a person reveals his complaint to creation, it is as if exposing the Creator and saying to people: 'Look at what Allah did to me.'

In the stories that are related about the Companions of Prophet Muhammad and the first generations of this ummah (followers of Islam), we are told about a woman who did not find it acceptable for her husband to complain of poverty to Prophet Muhammad, despite the fact all they only owned a single garment that was used by the two of them. The man put the garment on and then goes to the mosque to perform the prayer with Prophet Muhammad at the beginning of pray time. Then, as soon as the prayer finished, he would hurry back home so that his wife could put the garment on and offer her own prayer.

(1) It is narrated by Al-'Ajluni in Kashf Al-Khafa' (Hadith) 211 with this wording, and Al-Hakim narrated in Al-Mustadrak (4/244) from Ibn 'Umar Allah be pleased with him that the Messenger of Allah after stoning Al-Aslama and said, 'Keep away from this filth from which Allah prohibits you. If you do any of them, however, then keep them hidden with the veil of Allah and make repentance to Allah. For if anyone reveals their page to us, we will implement (the punishment decreed in) the Book of Allah upon him.' Furthermore, he said that the Hadith was correct (sahih) according to the preconditions of the two sheikhs, although neither of them narrated it.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him noticed(1) the fact that the man always came at the beginning of the prayer but did not see him afterwards. The Prophet waited for the prayer to end and then quickly turned in the direction of the man, only to see him in the process of leaving the mosque. So, he called out to that man, saying, ‘I always see you at the beginning of the prayer but then never see you afterwards. Is it that you do not like sitting with us?’ He replied, ‘No, Messenger of Allah, it is simply that my wife is waiting for this cloak of mine in order to offer her prayer in it.’ So, Prophet Muhammad asked Allah for good for the man.

Then, when the man went home, his wife said to him, ‘You are late by the amount of a single set of prayer beads’, for that was how they measured time. He replied, ‘The Messenger of Allah stopped me and asked me about my affair, and I was compelled to tell him that I had a wife at home waiting for this cloak of mine to pray in.’ So, she said, ‘What is the matter with you! Do you complain about your Lord to Muhammad?’ This was the level to which the Companions demonstrated patience, patience free of anxiety, complaint, or objection to the Decree of Allah.

Therefore, knowing the reward that the patient will receive in the Hereafter, some of the righteous people say, ‘If people were to know the reward that the people of patience receive, they would wish that they could come back to this world and have their bodies cut so that they could obtain that position.’

قُلْ إِنِّيٓ أُمِرْتُ أَنْ أَعْبُدَ ٱللَّهَ مُخْلِصًا لَّهُ ٱلدِّينَ ﴿١١﴾ وَأُمِرْتُ لِأَنْ أَكُونَ أَوَّلَ ٱلْمُسْلِمِينَ ﴿١٢﴾

Say, ‘I have been commanded to serve God, dedicating my worship entirely to Him [11] and I am bidden to be foremost amongst those who surrender themselves unto God [12]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 11-12)

We notice in these two verses that the verb umirtu (I am bidden) is repeated. This indicates that we are being given two commands; each of them is separate and independent from the other. The first command is 'Say [O Muhammad]: "Behold, I am bidden to worship Allah, making my faith sincerely to Him alone, and I am bidden to be foremost amongst those who surrender themselves unto Allah."' (az-Zumar: 11-12) This is a command to have certainty in our faith and certainty in our worship, meaning that we do them solely and sincerely for the sake of Allah.

(1) The story of the woman who told her husband, 'Do you complain to the Prophet Muhammad from poverty?'

There are different degrees of true sincerity to Allah; a person may worship Allah in expectation of a reward and out of a desire for paradise, another may worship Him out of fear of the fire and a third one might worship Allah for they believe He deserves to be worshipped and loved.

Therefore, the True Lord the Most High says at the end of the chapter of al-Kahf: '... whoever looks forward [with hope and awe] to meeting his Lord [on Judgment Day] …' (al-Kahf: 110); this does not mean the paradise of his Lord or His reward; it means that he only wants to meet Him and be close to Him. His heart is not preoccupied with the blessings. Rather, it is only preoccupied with being in close proximity to the Bestower of blessings: '... let him do righteous deeds, and let him not ascribe unto anyone or anything a share in the worship due to his Lord!' (al-Kahf: 110) Paradise is one of those things.

Thus, the first command is specifically to belief. As for the second command, 'and I am bidden to be foremost amongst those who surrender themselves unto Allah.' (az-Zumar: 12) It is related to the Islamic assignments and the duties Allah commands us to do and not to do. Therefore, how come Prophet Muhammad says: 'and I am bidden to be foremost amongst those who surrender themselves unto Allah' (az-Zumar: 12)? Is he not already the foremost amongst them? He says as such because the first time anything was made obligatory in Islam was when the revelation was first sent down to him, and that was before he had conveyed any part of it to his Companions. So, there was a period of time when he was the first to surrender to Allah and the first to submit fully to the Order of Allah, before he conveyed that order to anyone else. That is it, referring to first, or 'foremost', in the true literal sense of the word.

However, there is also another interpretation for first, or 'foremost', in this verse; it is that Muhammad is the first to put the rulings of Allah into practice in front of the people after having conveyed the Divine Order to them. He did this so that they can know that the Message was simply not something to corroborate messengers; rather, it was to make those messengers the perfect examples for people to follow. Thus, by putting the Order of Allah into action, messengers taught all of mankind that that order was good for them. This is proven by the fact that they imposed its implementation upon themselves before they imposed it on anyone else and, thus, realising the saying, ‘I will not command you to do anything that I do not do myself.’

Another thing is that Allah denies the Messenger and his family something that He grants to the rest of the Muslims. When a person dies, his family inherits from him. However, when it came to Prophet Muhammad, none of his family was permitted to inherit from him. Moreover, the poor amongst the Muslims may receive charity and zakat, but the poor amongst the family of the Prophet are not allowed to receive charity or zakat.

Therefore, Prophet Muhammad endured great hardship in delivering the Message and was not coddled or granted a comfortable life on account of it. Furthermore, his family also endured a degree of the same hardship alongside him. If it had not been for their being certain about Allah's reward which gave them trust and hope of paradise, a certainty of trust that made it seem to them as if they were actually physically looking upon the people of paradise being blessed and the people of the fire being punished, if it had not been for that, they would not have been able to endure hardships and difficulties with such patience.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He addresses the wives of Prophet Muhammad by saying: 'O, wives of the Prophet! You are not like any of the [other] women...' (al-Ahzab: 32). This is due to them being the wives of Prophet Muhammad, and so they must be the first ones to put his order into practice so that they can become living examples of it. This way, people can come to know that the Messenger did not come as a tyrant, commanding them to do things while not doing them himself, and forbidding them to do things while doing them himself. On the contrary, he was the first amongst them to put the Divine Orders into practice. He and his family led the way so that people might learn from their example. Thus, he really was the first of Muslims.

Scholars have deeply examined the issue of 'being the first of Muslims' because the Quran also mentions Musa (Moses) peace be upon him saying the same phrase: '... and I shall [always] be foremost amongst those who surrender themselves unto Him.' (al-An'am: 163); this means that he was the first of Muslims of his time, but as for Prophet Muhammad, he was the first of Muslims during his time and the times of others. In order to make this matter more comprehensible, we say, that first, or 'foremost' is a first, or 'foremost', in the sense of surpassing everyone else and being superior. This superiority can be relative like when we say that so-and-so was the first in the College of Law this year. In this instance, his superiority is specifically linked to the year in reference, but in other years there be other students who surpass him and get even higher grades. Furthermore, superiority can be universal like when we say that so-and-so is first in the College of Law from the day it was established until today.

Thus, there is a first, or 'foremost', that relates to a specific period, and there is another first, or 'foremost', based on comparison between different time periods with each other. If one of the messengers said, ‘I am the first of Muslims’, he meant the first of Muslims during his time period, but when Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said, ‘I am the first of Muslims’, he meant the first of all Muslims, from the time of Adam until the coming of the Day of Judgment. This is despite the fact that Muhammad came at the end of time, and he was the first in terms of the rank at the time of receiving assignment of the mission. Each of the other messengers were sent to a specific place at a specific time, but Muhammad has been sent to entire mankind, wherever and whenever they live. Then, there is the fact that he is the Seal of Messengers, for no Message will come after his, and no messenger will come after him. These are all factors as to why Prophet Muhammad is the first, and they are factors that are patently true, and that none can deny.

Therefore, we find this first is always repeated on the tongue of Prophet Muhammad as in the verse: 'Say [O, Prophet]: "If the Most Gracious [truly] had a son, I would be the first to worship him!"' (az-Zukhruf: 81) This means that I will be the first to affirm that.

Allah Glorified is He says:

قُلْ إِنِّىٓ أَخَافُ إِنْ عَصَيْتُ رَبِّى عَذَابَ يَوْمٍ عَظِيمٍ ﴿١٣﴾ قُلِ ٱللَّهَ أَعْبُدُ مُخْلِصًا لَّهُۥ
دِينِى ﴿١٤﴾ فَٱعْبُدُوا۟ مَا شِئْتُم مِّن دُونِهِۦ ۗ قُلْ إِنَّ ٱلْخَـٰسِرِينَ ٱلَّذِينَ خَسِرُوٓا۟
أَنفُسَهُمْ وَأَهْلِيهِمْ يَوْمَ ٱلْقِيَـٰمَةِ ۗ أَلَا ذَٰلِكَ هُوَ ٱلْخُسْرَانُ ٱلْمُبِينُ ﴿١٥﴾

Say, ‘I fear the torment of a terrible Day if I disobey my Lord.’ [13] Say: Say, ‘It is God I serve, dedicating my worship entirely to Him [14] you may serve whatever you please beside Him.’ Say, ‘The true losers are the ones who will lose themselves and their people on the Day of Resurrection: that is the most obvious loss [15] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 13-15)

Is it not strange that Prophet Muhammad said, '..."Behold, I would dread, were I to rebel against my Lord, the suffering [which would befall me] on that awesome Day [of Judgment]"' (az-Zumar: 13)? It is as if he were saying, ‘I have not attained to this station simply because I am an honoured prophet. On the contrary, I am just like the rest of you. If I disobey my Lord, I will also be subjected to punishment. The fact that Allah has made me the first and chosen me above everyone else will not mean anything if I commit acts of disobedience.’

Then, Allah Glorified is He says, addressing His Messenger: 'Say: "Allah alone do I worship, making my faith sincerely to Him alone' (az-Zumar: 14). This verse is also related to faith and the certainty of belief. Previously, Allah said, 'Say [O, Muhammad]: "Behold, I am bidden to worship Allah, making my faith sincerely to Him alone,"' (az-Zumar: 11) whereas in this verse He says: 'Say: "Allah alone do I worship ..."' (az-Zumar: 14). What is the difference between ‘Allah alone do I worship’ and ‘I am bidden to worship Allah’?

'I am bidden to worship Allah' is in the normal structure for sentences in Arabic: verb, followed by the subject, followed by an object. When a sentence follows this order, however, it presents no impediment to another object being conjoined to the first. For example, if you were to say, ‘Obey So-and-so’, there is nothing to prevent you from adding ‘… and So-and-so’. However, if we were to place the object in front of the verb, as in 'Say: "Allah alone do I worship ..."', that act of placing the object before the verb gives us the sense of confinement and restriction. In other words, the word order restricts worship to Allah alone, such as when you say, ‘To Allah, I complain’ meaning you complain only to Him and no one else.

The first verse follows the normal order for sentences, while the second verse makes use of the linguistic device of confinement. It is as if he is saying, ‘I do not worship any other than Allah. But you, you worship whatever you want: '… "and [it is up to you, O sinners, to] worship whatever you please instead of Him!"' (az-Zumar: 15)

Then Allah Glorified is He makes clear to us what the outcome of associating others with Him is when He says: '... Say: "Behold, the [true] losers will be they who shall have lost their own selves and their kith and kin on Resurrection Day, for is not this the [most] obvious loss"' (az-Zumar: 15).

We understand from this that idolaters will have lost themselves on the Day of Judgment, and that is due to them wronging themselves by not believing in Allah and associating others with Him. However, how come they also lose their families? Scholars say that their families mean their children and descendants, and these children either become believers or remain in disbelief just like their ancestors. If they remain in disbelief, they are losers just like their ancestors, but if they believe, they will not be with those ancestors and will be prevented from seeing them since they will be in paradise while those others will be in the fire. So, whatever the case with their ancestors, they will be in loss.

Allah Glorified is He emphasises the word ‘loss’ by making use of the cognate accusative maf‘ul mutlaq: '... for is not this the [most] obvious loss?' (az-Zumar: 15) Then, He describes that loss as being obvious which means that it is clear and all encompassing, for when is a trader considered to be a loser? He is considered a loser when his capital is returned to him without any profit, for in such an instance he is a loser because all the effort and hard work he put into trading was for nothing or when the loss also eats into his capital, so he loses because all the effort and hard work he put in came to nothing and he loses a portion of his capital. This latter type of loss is the obvious loss, or in other words, the comprehensive loss. Thus, Allah’s Words, '... for is not this the [most] obvious loss?' (az-Zumar: 15) mean the comprehensive loss that encompasses his family, wealth and efforts.

Allah Glorified is He says:

لَهُم مِّن فَوۡقِهِمۡ ظُلَلٞ مِّنَ ٱلنَّارِ وَمِن تَحۡتِهِمۡ ظُلَلٞۚ ذَٰلِكَ
يُخَوِّفُ ٱللَّهُ بِهِۦ عِبَادَهُۥۚ يَٰعِبَادِ فَٱتَّقُونِ ﴿١٦﴾

They will have layers of Fire above them and below.' This is how God puts fear into His servants: My servants, beware of Me [16] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 16)

In this verse, Allah the Almighty makes clear to us what the outcome will be for disbelievers when He says: 'Clouds of fire will they have above them and [similar] clouds beneath them ...' (az-Zumar: 16). The word thulal (clouds) is the plural of thulla, which literally means a canopy or sunshade that provides a person with shade and protects him from the heat of the sun. Normally, it is in shade that a person looks for rest and fresh air. However, as for these people, they have clouds above them, not just a cloud but clouds that are made of fire. Indeed, fire can never provide shade.

So, this is an irony by which Allah is mocking disbelievers. Even more, these clouds will not afflict them from one direction but from above and beneath. Usually, when something bad approaches from one direction, people get away from it by going in the opposite direction, In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Hell will be their resting place and their covering as well(1)…' (al-A'raf: 41).

Then, the fire surrounds them on all sides, and they have no way of escaping from it. '... In this way Allah imbues His servants with fear. O, you, servants of Mine! Be, then, conscious of Me.' (az-Zumar: 16) Reflect on the Mercy Allah shows His slaves, even in those situations where He mentions punishment and hellfire. For the fire is not there to punish creation, but it is there to frighten and rebuke them so that they do not adopt such a position or open themselves up to such a punishment. One only warns those whom they love, such as when you make your son afraid of failing his exams, you make it clear to him what the outcome of neglecting his studies will be; you warn him of the humiliation, scorn, and disdain to which he will be exposed if he fails his course.

(1) As-Suyuti said in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (3/457), 'Ibn Al-Mundhir narrated that Ibn 'Abbas Allah be pleased with him said about the Words, 'Hell will be their resting place...' (al-A'raf: 41), 'a carpet ', and about the Words, '... and their covering as well...' (al-A'raf: 41) 'a shroud'. Similar has also been narrated by Hannad, Ibn Jarir and Abu Ash-Sheikh from Muhammad ibn Ka'b Al-Qurazi.

Thus, Allah’s purpose in mentioning the fire is to put fear in people’s hearts so that they avoid doing any of those things that lead to it. A prudent person takes heed of warning, and he is deterred when rebuked. Therefore, the act of frightening must be considered one of Allah’s greatest blessings.

This matter is made clear in the chapter of ar-Rahman. Those who try to emend the Words of Allah say: ‘It is consistent that verses mentioning blessings conclude with Allah’s Words: "Which, then, of your Lord’s powers can you disavow?" (ar-Rahman: 13) This is the case in the verses: "He has created man out of sounding clay, like pottery, whereas the invisible beings He has created out of a confusing flame of fire. Which, then, of your Lord’s powers can you disavow?" (ar-Rahman: 14-16) However, where is the blessing that we should not deny in Allah’s Words: 'A flash of fire and smoke will be let loose upon you, and you will be left without aid" (ar-Rahman: 35)?

Scholars reply that this torture is not actually taking place, but it is only mentioned to make us afraid. It means, ‘If you do such-and-such, then Allah will let loose upon you a flash of fire and smoke, and you will be left without aid.'

By terrifying us and making us afraid of the punishment before it takes place, Allah the Almighty creates a barrier that prevents us from doing such things that will bring that punishment upon us, and as a result, this causes us to be fearful and conscious of Him. This is why Allah the Exalted says after that: '... O, you, servants of Mine! Be, then, conscious of Me' (az-Zumar: 16); this means to consider this frightening a mercy, not a cause for terror. If a person weighs things carefully and compares the state of the inhabitants of paradise with that of the inhabitants of the fire, he would almost certainly be deterred and return to the straight path, at which he would become worthy of the Mercy and Forgiveness of Allah. Thus, it is one of Allah’s blessings to us that He frightens us and warns about evil before it happens. If He had not warned us, then He would have taken us unawares or left us in heedlessness.

ٱلَّذِينَ يَسۡتَمِعُونَ ٱلۡقَوۡلَ فَيَتَّبِعُونَ أَحۡسَنَهُۥٓۚ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ ٱلَّذِينَ هَدَىٰهُمُ ٱللَّهُۖ

There is good news for those who shun the worship of false gods and turn to God, so [Prophet] give good news to My servants [17] who listen to what is said and follow what is best. These are the ones God has guided; these are the people of understanding [18] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 17-18)

'The powers of evil' is the translation for the Arabic word taghut, which is the hyperbolic form of the word taghin. A taghut is a tyrant who increases in tyranny the more respect people show him, and increases in arrogance and conceit the more they fear him. Taghut must have a directive order and an aspect of supremacy.

Therefore, idols are not called taghut; they do not have a supreme characteristic or a directive order. Rather, such stone idols gain supremacy from the people worshipping them. So, it is only human beings who can be taghut, even if they were simply governors. Otherwise, how do idols become tyrannical? Idols can neither speak nor oppress.

There is a proverb that people say in the countryside, and it goes as follows: ‘O, Pharaoh, what has made you Pharaonic (tyrannical)?’ He replied, ‘I never met anyone who stopped me.’ In other words, if people had challenged his claim of divinity when he made himself a deity, he would have stopped.

May Allah have mercy on Ahmad Az-Zayn(1)(2); when Egypt was still a monarchy, they wanted a national union that brought all the various parties and factions together to meet with the king to think about a way of resolving all of the country’s problems. One of those who was invited was Mustafa

(1) Ahmad Az-Zayn was an Egyptian poet who was blind. He was called the ‘narrator’ because of the huge amount of things he had memorised. He was born in the 1900 AD, studied in the Azhar and took a job as a lawyer. Then he worked as an employee of the Dar Al-Kutub for around twenty years. He has a work of poetry called Al-Qutuf Ad-Daniya and a work done in the rajaz meter called Qala’id Al-Hikma. He died in 1947 at the age of 47. (Al-A‘lam 1/129) He wrote 84 poems comprising a total of 2292 lines.

(2) The story of Ahmad Az-Zayn with Mustafa An-Nahaas and the king

An-Nahaas,(1) but he did not attend. When his followers asked him why he did not go to the meeting, he replied, ‘Because I will be in the minority there’; this refers to the large amount of people who would have been there. Ahmad Az-Zayn took this position and wrote a poem about it, mocking the king. He said (2):

All of them glorify their religion with personal whim,
A thousand issuing legal opinions while Malik is in Medina!
How many presidents, if not for the laws protecting... his ignorance, would be exiled by his own laws.
He is insane, and is even more insane... to think that any rational person would follow his madness.

A Taghut only ever becomes a Taghut because people fear him and are not prepared to reject his oppression and stand up against him. Instead, they act like sycophants and voice their agreement of everything he does.

Some scholars think that Taghut refers to everything that is worshipped other than Allah, but a Taghut is not just that but also one who is content to be worshipped. So, based on that definition, not idols, ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him nor the saints of Allah cannot be considered to be Taghut as some people have claimed. This is due to the fact that people have been wrongly affected by them, and no blame can be attached to the idols, ‘Isa (Jesus) or the saints for that.

(1) Mustafa An-Nahaas was an Egyptian leader and was born in Samanud in 1879 AD. He studied there and in Cairo; he graduated from the School of Law in 1900 AD. He worked as a lawyer until he was appointed as a judge, and he affiliated himself with the delegation of Sa‘d Zaghlul, and was one of the leading members of the ’Youth for Independence’ movement. He was arrested alongside Sa‘d. He took up the office of prime minister on five occasions and was placed under house arrest after the revolution of 1952 AD until he died in 1965 AD at the age of 86 (Al-A‘lam of Az-Zirikli, volume 7).

(2) These lines are taken from a poem of Ahmad Az-Zayn composed in the khafif meter; the total length of which was 51 lines. The first line of the poem goes as follows:
All of them embellish their religion with personal whim,
A thousand issuing legal opinions while Malik is in Medina!
As for the final two lines quoted here, they are, according to Al-Mawsu‘a Ash-Shi‘riyya, lines 44 and 45 of the poem.

'... and turn unto Allah instead ...' (az-Zumar: 17); what is meant is ‘go back to worshipping Him alone without partners'. '... there is the glad tiding [of happiness in the life to come]…' (az-Zumar: 17); what this means is the promise to live in paradise because of the fact that they challenged tyranny and refused to accept oppression, Allah the Almighty wants a Muslim society to stand up in the face of every tyrant and despot, correct the behaviour of every deviant, and isolate the corrupt few, cut them from society and stop them interacting with the general populace.

An example of that is a bully who carries weapons and threatens people’s lives, possessions, and dignity. He even dares to challenge law, state order, and powers. He would never have reached such a level if society had not abandoned its job of opposing the people who turn to evil and putting them right.

Before I start today’s lecture,(1) I want to mention that I received a letter today from one of the brothers, asking me first about the poem that was written about praying in the night. I will not say who it was who wrote it. Instead, I will refer the asker to a man who is an authority on matters of this sort. This man is Doctor Muhammad ‘Abd Al-Mun‘im Khafaja, the former dean of the College of the Arabic language and the foremost authority on literature in the whole of Egypt. He also asked me about the disagreement of scientists with respect to defining the limits of the day and night, some excluding some of the night from the day and others excluding some of the day from the night. I will say, in response, and all success comes from Allah, ‘The difference of opinion that exists with respect to the day and the night is one that rages between jurists and astronomers, for jurists consider the night to begin at sunset and finish at dawn, while astronomers consider the night to begin at sunset and finish at sunrise.’

Thus, there is a period of time over which they differ, namely the time between dawn and sunrise. Those who consider it not to be part of the night are the jurists, for they want to take precautions when it comes to fasting and make sure the correct time limit of the night is preserved and no part of the day is included within it. This is why they take precautions to ensure that does not happen.

(1) The story of the man who sent a letter to Sheikh Ash-Sha‘rawi Allah rest his soul to ask him about the late night prayer.

The jurists' precaution is based on seeing the light that is visible in the sky at dawn and not considering the cause of that light, which is the sun. We see light before the sun rises.

As for astronomers, they consider presence of light and say that the light in question is a sign of the night. However, jurists responded that this is not right for there is a difference between light appearance and the source of light; since the light that exists between dawn and sunrise is a light where we cannot see the sun, that light is connected to the setting and the rising of the sun. It is normally said of the night to be 'dark night', or laylun alyalu, or a laylatun layla' that means that it is a very dark one where the moon is in a period of waning. Laylatun layla' can also mean a night of great hardship and difficulty.

Lovers often make the night something that is mentioned in their poetry, for when they are with their lovers, they want it to go on for a long time, and when they are separated from their lovers, they want it to be over quickly.

An example of that are the words of a poet (1):

We have gone long into the night and I have not slept, for slumber has been denied me by a visiting spectre.(2)

Another poet said when he was reunited with the one he loved:

O, night, go on and on! O, sleep, go away!
O, dawn, stay where you are and do not appear!

Yet, another combines both states; I think it was Al-Buhturi(3) when he said:

---

(1) The poet is Bashar ibn Barad Al-‘Uqayli Abu Mu‘adh, the most poetic man born without exception. He was born in 95 AH and was originally from Takharistan on the banks of the river Jayhun. He was blind, grew up in Basra and moved to Baghdad. His life coincided with both the Umayyad and the Abbasid eras. He was accused of heresy and died from the whipping he received. He was buried in Basra in the year 167 AH at the age of 72.

(2) This line is from a poem of seven lines composed in the ramal meter. In Al-Mawsu‘a Ash-Shi‘riyya the line appears in the following form:
My night was not long, but still I did not sleep, for slumber was denied me by a visiting spectre.

(3) Rather, he is Ibn Zaydun Ahmad Ibn ‘Abdullah Al-Andalusi Abu Al-Walid. He was born in 394 AH and was a vizier, a writer, a poet and one of the people of Cordoba.=

A lover bade goodbye to patience, and it bade goodbye to you,
Divulging the secrets which were entrusted to you,
Grinding his teeth that he did not spend longer
Taking footsteps in your company.
O, sister of the moon in brightness and splendour,
May Allah protect the time that gives rise to you.
If ever a night went on for a long time after you, how often
I spent those nights complaining of the shortness of my nights with you.(1)

The night finds its opposite in the day, and this is why Allah says: 'Say: "Have you ever considered [this]: If Allah had willed that there should always be night about you, without break, until the Day of Resurrection, is there any deity other than Allah that could bring you light? Will you not, then, listen [to the truth]?" Say: "Have you ever considered [this]. If Allah had willed that there should always be daylight about you, without break, until the Day of Resurrection, is there any deity other than Allah that could bring you [the darkness of] night, wherein you might rest? Will you not, then, see [the truth]?"' (al-Qasas: 71-72)

So, He makes the night the opposite of the day. You will notice here the precision and fineness of the expression used by the Quran, for the one doing the speaking here is the Lord and the linguistic expression is a Divine one. Also, this is shown by the fact that when He speaks about the night, he concludes what He says with the Words: '...Will you not, then, listen [to the truth]?' When He speaks about the day, He concludes what He says with the Words: '...Will you not, then, see [the truth]?' Hearing is the means by which one perceives at night since you cannot see anything, while during the day it is seeing.

= There are some who have nicknamed him Al-Buhturi of the West. He devoted much of his poetry to Ibn Juhur, one of the kings of one of the city-states of Al-Andalus. He has letters that he wrote to him to win his friendship, and he wrote a story about the birth of Bint Al-Mustakfi. He died in 463 AH at the age of 69.

(1) This is a poem of Ibn Zaydun composed of four lines written in the ramal meter (Al-Mawsu'a Ash-shi'riyya).

Some of the people of knowledge had to research the relationship of the word yawm (day) to layl (night) and nahar (daytime), and said, ‘The True Lord says: ‘... Travel safely in this [land], by night or by day!’ (Saba’: 18); Allah makes yawm the equivalent of nahar. However, astronomers consider the day to be something else; they consider it to be measured as the period between one time and the equivalent time of the following day. Thus, if you begin at ‘Asr, you will have completed a day when you reach ‘Asr on the following day. Likewise, when they talk about time, they say ‘in the morning’ and ‘in the evening’. So, if I were to have woken up for my pre-dawn meal two hours after midnight, I would say that I had eaten my pre-dawn meal at two o’clock in the morning, despite the fact that I was still experiencing nighttime. Furthermore, the opposite is the case in the daytime, for I would say, ‘five o’clock in the evening’, despite the fact that I was still experiencing daytime. These are all examples of the way the jurists differ from astronomers.

Yet, yawm (the day) does refer to many different things in many different places in the Quran, for the True Lord says in His Book, ‘This day (Al-yawm) I have perfected for you your religion and completed My favor upon you and have approved for you Islam as religion’ (al-Ma‘ida: 3), and uses yawm to refer to any moment in time.

Also, the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘... and remind them of the Days of Allah!’ (Ibrahim: 5) The ‘Days of Allah’ are those days upon which events are attributed, regardless of whether these events are blessings or disasters. We would say, for example, ‘The day of Badr’, for Badr was a blessing for the believers and a disaster for the disbelievers. Thus, with that we end our answer to the question the brother posed to me.

Therefore, let us now return to the verse that we were in the process of discussing: Allah’s Words: ‘seeing that for those who shun the powers of evil lest they [be tempted to] worship them ...’ (az-Zumar: 17). We have said that the taghut is the one who tyrannises and whose tyranny is sanctioned by the people since they are not standing up against it. The word taghut is in the feminine form in this verse, as is proven by the feminine pronoun hiya (her) in Allah’s Words: ‘... lest they [be tempted to] worship them [in Arabic "her" (hiya)]...’ (az-Zumar: 17). However, the word comes in the masculine form in another place of the Quran in Allah’s Words: ‘[and yet] are willing to defer to the rule of the powers of evil – although they were bidden to deny it ["him" in Arabic] …’ (an-Nisa’: 60).

The word Taghut is one of those words that can be used to refer to singular, dual or plural and masculine or feminine. So, we would say, ‘This man is a Taghut’, ‘this woman is a Taghut’, ‘these two are Taghut’ and ‘These are Taghut.’ In this verse, it is being used to refer to the plural as is proven by Allah’s Words: ‘... lest they [be tempted to] worship them ...’ (az-Zumar: 17).

A Taghut, as we said, must be one who issues instructions. This is why the word is ever used for only tyrants from amongst mankind or from amongst jinns. As for angels, they do not approve of being worshipped instead of Allah. In the same respect, unjust oppressors are called Taghut.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘... and turn unto Allah instead...’ (az-Zumar: 17) which means ‘go back to Him’. We understand from these Words that they were with Allah in the first place, but then turned away. How can that be? This can be due to it being said that every single human being in their original natural state was a believer when Allah the Exalted made His covenant with all of mankind, saying to them: ‘... Am I not your Lord?’ (al-A‘raf: 172) Then, some of them kept to their covenant and remained in their natural state, while others deviated and forgot their covenant.

Also, this is why the Quran always says, ‘Remind’, which means for them to remember that first covenant. Therefore, ‘...and turn unto Allah instead...’ means ‘they returned back to the natural state of belief and the first covenant they made’, or it means ‘they returned back to Allah for account on the Day of Rising’.

Concerning Allah’s Words, ‘... there is the glad tiding (bushra) [of happiness in the life to come] …’ (az-Zumar: 17), a bushra is a happy piece of news we tell others of something that has yet to happen. There are two types of glad tidings: one that tells of some injury or pain being removed and one that tells of some aim or objective being realised. Both of these things await those who shun the powers of evil, refusing to worship them and return back to Allah, for first they are kept out of the fire and not subjected to its torments, and second their aim of entering paradise is realised, just as Allah says:

‘...whereupon he who shall be drawn away from the Fire and brought into Paradise will indeed have gained a triumph ...’ (Al-‘Imran: 185). This is why He says after that, ‘... Give, then, this glad tiding to [those of] My servants’ (az-Zumar: 17); this means ‘Give this good news to My slaves’ "who listen [closely] to all that is said, and follow the best of it…"’ (az-Zumar: 18). If there is something said, then there must be someone who says it. Thus, when they hear someone saying things, they follow the best of what is said; the best things are said by the best speaker, and the best speaker is none other than Allah the Almighty So, when Allah issues a judgment and commands us to obey it, they follow it because Allah’s Words are the best of Words, and Allah’s command is the most beneficial of commands.

The True Lord the Most High does not benefit from the commands to you, nor is he harmed by your disobedience; rather, it is you who benefits from that programme and gains from putting it into action.

Then, there is the fact that you are His living beings created by Him, and He does not like to see these living beings deviate and be punished as a result.

Then, there is the fact that Allah the Exalted wants His programme for you and His Laws to be the means for bestowing His gifts upon you on a continual basis and for the blessings of this world to be resumed in the Hereafter. Furthermore, this is why He says in a Qudsi Hadith: 'If you were to have created them, you would have shown them mercy.'(1)

The best of what is said may also refer to Islam. For when Islam came, it found people of all kinds: disbelievers who did not believe in any deity or Allah, idolaters who believed in other deities alongside Allah and followers of other religions that had Divine Scriptures and to whom previous messengers were sent, such as Jews and Christians. Those who lived contemporaneously with Islam listened to words that were spoken, either from this group or from that. They listened to the disbelievers, the atheists, the idolaters, and the people of previous Books.

It is as if Allah the Almighty were saying, 'Use your intellect to examine all that is said by all the various groups, and then choose the best of them. Furthermore, do not cling fanatically to what one group says without first researching what others say and comparing them. If you do that, while being objective, then you will find that the best things are said by Islam, and that it is the most worthy of being followed, for it is the religion that gathers people to all that is good and distances them from all that is evil.

It is the religion that confirms and has authority over the religions that came before it, and its Book is the book that confirms and having authority over the Books that came before it. Islam is the universal religion that came for everyone, at every time and at every place. This is why it is the final religion after which no other religions will come; it came with the final Book after which no Books will come, and the final messenger after which no messengers will come.

Such a religion must also fulfil all of the preconditions of perfection as Allah Glorified is He says: '...Today have I perfected your religious law for you, have bestowed upon you the full measure of My blessings and willed that self-surrender unto Me shall be your religion...' (al-Ma'ida: 3). Therefore, Islam is the best of religions; it says the best things and is the best thing we can follow.

Then, the verses continue their description of believers who shun the worship of Taghut, who return back to Allah, who listen to what is said and who follow the best of it by saying: '...[for] it is they whom Allah has graced with His guidance (hadahum), and it is they who are [truly] endowed with insight!' (az-Zumar: 18) By hadahum, Allah the Exalted means point out the way to them and guides them towards it. When they follow such directions and have no objection to doing so in their hearts, He then grants them the guidance of success and belief, leading to their believing in Him.

We have said before that guidance is of two types: the guidance of pointing out the way and the guidance of providing aid and assistance. Thus, we clarified what this meant before by using the example of the traffic policeman whom you find at a crossroads giving people directions. If he points out the way to you, and you follow his directions and thank him for the service he has done for you, he does even more for you by accompanying you so that you are not harmed by any of the obstacles along the way. He did as such because he found you worthy of being helped, and so he helped you.

In the same respect, it is Allah Who is the highest example. The True Lord gives His slaves the guidance of pointing out the right way, giving that guidance to believers and disbelievers alike. Then, whoever follows the first form of guidance will be granted the second, which is the guidance of aid and assistance. This will only be given to believers and not disbelievers. It is as if Allah the Exalted says to His believing slave, 'You have believed in Me, heard My Words and obeyed Me, so I will help you to obey and make it easier for you to do so, and I will make disobedience hard for you.'

It is one of the greatest blessings Allah bestows upon His slave that He makes obedience easy for him and helps him overcome its difficulties, while at the same time locking the doors to disobedience and the things that lead to it. Likewise, this is the meaning of Allah's Words: 'just as for those who are [willing to be] guided, He increases their [ability to follow His] guidance and causes their piety to grow.' (Muhammad: 17) 'He causes their piety to grow' means 'He assists them in belief'.

Allah Glorified is He says: '... and it is they who are [truly] endowed with insight!' (az-Zumar: 18); this means that those who possess intellects capable of reflection and discernment are the ones who spread out all of the different things that are said in front of them, then weigh them out, compare and choose the best one which will bring about happiness and welfare for them, along with bringing harmony to their lives and their everyday routines. Indeed, acting in a way that is straight, along with cooperating and supporting others, keeps people's hearts pure of rancour, spite, and envy and prevents them from taking the path of deviation, whether the means be through stealing, cheating, bribing, usurpation, etc.

Who would oppose a programme such as this? Who would refuse to live by it? It is the straight way to which no healthy intellect could fail to submit and the path that none could fail to follow. Therefore, this is why Allah calls ones who choose this way those '...who are [truly] endowed with insight!' (az-Zumar: 18) This means those who possess intellects. Furthermore, the role of intellect is to keep one's thoughts tied down so that they do not stray; instead, one's intellect looks over the different options and choosing the one that best fits him. However, the bane of thought is caprice, for it is caprice that turns you from what is said by the intellect to what is said by one's whims, opinions, and desires.

There is another view of what is meant by Allah's Words: 'who listen [closely] to all that is said, and follow the best of it…' (az-Zumar: 18); this refers specifically to those who listen to the different things Islam has to say and then follows the best of them. This is why Allah the Almighty makes use of the comparative form ahsan (better): it is as if Islam says things that are good as well as things that are better. So, this opinion does not consider the verse to have a general meaning but considers it to be limited to what Islam has to say. Everything that Islam says is good, but some of what it says is good, and some of what it says is better. Those with discerning intellects choose what is better.

A good example of this is that Islam legislates for a person to take the life of a killer as a form of retribution, but it also legislates for him to take blood money instead or to pardon the killer entirely. Allah Glorified is He says: '...And if something [of his guilt] is remitted to a guilty person by his brother, this [remission] shall be adhered to with fairness, and restitution to his fellow-man shall be made in a goodly manner ...' (al-Baqara: 178). Thus, those who take the option of retribution or blood money take the position that is good, while those who rise above that and pardon him take the position that is better.

Similarly, Allah Glorified is He says: 'If you do deeds of charity openly, it is well, but if you bestow it upon the needy in secret, it will be even better for you…' (al-Baqara: 271). By giving charity openly you are not perpetrating a wrong; rather, you are doing something good, but it is better to give it secretly.

Another example is found in Allah's Words: 'But [remember that an attempt at] requiting evil may, too, become an evil. Hence, whoever pardons [his foe] and makes peace, his reward rests with Allah, for verily, He does not love evildoers.' (ash-Shura: 40)

In each of these places, we find the True Lord encouraging His slaves to take the path of pardoning and forgiveness. However, pardoning is only an option on those matters for which you alone bear the price, and if they result in harm, then that harm affects you alone. If it is matter which brings harm upon a community and society at large, then pardon is not an option.

The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him has taught us this lesson, for he never once became angry on his own account but only became angry when one of the commands of Allah was violated. Thus, pardon when a matter is one that is connected to you, but if a matter is one that is connected to Muslims in general, no one has the right to pardon.

The True Lord the Most High directs our attention to the fact that choosing the best option is always the thing that is best for us personally, for in the story of the slander against 'A'isha Allah be pleased with her, Allah Glorified is He says: '... [For] do you not desire that Allah should forgive you your sins?...' (an-Nur: 22) What this means is 'Do not be sad that you have forgiven those who do you wrong, for Allah will treat you in the same way and forgive you if you do wrong, and who does not want for Allah to forgive him?' Therefore, as long as you want to be forgiven yourself, you should forgive your companions but only on the condition that it does not bring harm or trouble to society.

أَفَمَنۡ حَقَّ عَلَيۡهِ كَلِمَةُ ٱلۡعَذَابِ أَفَأَنتَ تُنقِذُ مَن فِي ٱلنَّارِ ﴿١٩﴾

What about the one who has been sentenced to punishment?
Can you [Prophet] rescue those already in the Fire? [19]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 19)

The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him loved his people and was determined upon guiding them and taking them by the hand. As a result, this caused him great pain to see even a single one of them not following the right path or actively oppose it. The Quran states that on more than one occasion, for Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of ash-Shu'ara': 'Would you, perhaps, torment yourself to death [with grief] because they [who live around you] refuse to believe [in it]?' (ash-Shu'ara': 3) Also, Allah says in the chapter of al-Kahf: 'But would you, perhaps, torment yourself to death with grief over them if they are not willing to believe in this message?' (al-Kahf: 6)

Furthermore, Allah says in the chapter of Fatir: '... Hence, do not waste yourself in sorrowing over them …' (Fatir: 8). So, the True Lord the Most High reassures His Messenger and consoles him by saying, 'O, Muhammad, do not be sad on account of these people, for they fully deserve their punishment, and Allah has passed judgment that they will be punished: 'could one on whom [Allah's] sentence of suffering has been passed (haqqa)…' (az-Zumar: 19). Haqqa in this verse means 'to be established with Allah' as in Allah's Words: '... that word of Mine has come true: "Most certainly will I fill Hell with jinns as well as with humans, all together!"' (as-Sajda: 13)

Thus, given the fact that their punishment is something that is firmly established with Allah, why are you sad: '...Could you, perchance, save one who is [already, as it were,] in the Fire?' However, the fact that Allah's decree of punishment will come to pass does not mean that He compels His slaves to take that course of action; rather, He knows that they will do so. Allah the Almighty knows everything that they are going to do and has written it down in their accounts. This truth is not a necessary truth of existence willed by Allah but simply means that He knew beforehand the options they were going to choose.

We previously dealt with this issue when we discussed Allah's Words: 'Doomed are the hands of Abu Lahab, and doomed is he! What will his wealth avail him and all what he has gained? [In the life to come] he shall have to endure a fire fiercely glowing.' (al-Masad: 1-3) This is Allah passing judgment on Abu Lahab that he will be burnt in the fire. This judgment was revealed to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and he conveyed it to the people. Furthermore, Abu Lahab heard it while he was yet alive. But could Muhammad feel safe that Abu Lahab would not stand up in an assembly of people and say, 'I bear witness that there is no deity but Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah'? Could he be sure that he would not utter those words, even without sincerity, pretending to be a believer when he was with them and thereby showing Allah's Words to be untrue?

Abu Lahab was a disbeliever, in the same way that Khalid, 'Amr and 'Ikrimah were, and it was possible for him to become a believer just as they did, but Allah Glorified is He knew that he would never believe, even after being told of his fate in a miraculous Quran that is memorised by those who read it and will be recited until the Day of Rising. Therefore, this verse proves that Allah knew beforehand that he would not believe and did not compel him to disbelieve.

Allah the Exalted says to His Messenger that he should not to waste himself in sorrowing over them because He has judged them based on the knowledge He has of what they are going to do. He knows that they will be people of the fire. Therefore, how can you save someone over whom Allah has passed a judgment such as that?

You will notice when you look at the construction of the verse ‘On the other hand, could one on whom [Allah’s] sentence of suffering has been passed ...’ that the verb haqqa does not have the female ending attached to the end of it despite the fact that its subject, kalimah (word) is feminine. This is because, they say, the female ending pertaining to this particular use of the word is not actual feminine, and so it is permissible to leave off the female ending from the verb.

The question that is asked by the Words, ‘... could one on whom [Allah’s] sentence of suffering has been passed...’ requires an answering clause with the implied meaning being, ‘As for those upon whom Allah’s decree of punishment has been passed, do you want to save them or protect them from it by begging them to believe? Do you want to save them from the fire when Allah has passed judgment that they will be amongst its inhabitants?’

Allah Glorified is He says:

لَٰكِنِ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱتَّقَوۡاْ رَبَّهُمۡ لَهُمۡ غُرَفٞ مِّن فَوۡقِهَا غُرَفٞ مَّبۡنِيَّةٞ تَجۡرِي
مِن تَحۡتِهَا ٱلۡأَنۡهَٰرُۖ وَعۡدَ ٱللَّهِۖ لَا يُخۡلِفُ ٱللَّهُ ٱلۡمِيعَادَ ﴿٢٠﴾

But those who are mindful of their Lord will have lofty dwellings built for them, one above the other, graced with flowing streams. This is a promise from God: God does not break His promise [20] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 20)

We have said that one of the characteristics of the linguistic style of the Quran is that it often mentions opposites side by side, for something’s excellence is often indicated by its opposite. An example of this is found in Allah's Words: 'Behold, [in the life to come] the truly virtuous will indeed be in bliss, whereas, behold, the wicked will indeed be in a blazing fire.' (al-Infitar: 13-14)

Therefore, after mentioning the disbelievers upon whom Allah's decree of punishment has been passed, the True Lord then mentions their opposite, the God-fearing people of piety (taqwa): 'But for those who take their Lord as a shield, there awaits them lofty mansions, storey upon storey with streams running beneath them.' (az-Zumar: 20) This combination of opposites puts the self in a better state of readiness to be able to see how horrible the bad side is and how beautiful the good side is.

*Ghuraf (*mansions) is the plural of the word *ghurfa (*mansion) which means a stand-alone private space within a house, but it is derived from a word meaning a scoop of water. '...there awaits them lofty mansions, storey upon storey ...'. Then, he describes those that are above as being mabniyya (built), for it is usual when building to take special care of the lower rooms and their foundations since it is they that will have to bear the weight of all the other floors. Thus, Allah the Almighty wants to draw our attention to the fact that the upper levels have had as much care devoted to them and that they are just as well built. They do not lack any of the features of the lower rooms. Each room, whether it be on the lower levels or the upper levels, is as distinguished as any other.

Then, you must reflect on the miraculous nature of Allah's Words: '…with streams running beneath them ...' for which of them do they flow beneath? They flow beneath both of them, the upper, and the lower rooms. If you were to ask, 'How?', we would reply, 'Read what the Prophet says when describing paradise': 'It contains what no eye has ever seen and no ear has ever heard. What is in it has never even crossed the mind of any human being.'(1)

In another part of the Quran, Allah Glorified is He says: '... beneath which running waters flow...' (at-Tawba: 100). There is a difference between saying

(1) It is narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (2824); Ahmad in his Musnad (2/466); and Abu Nu'aym in Al-Hilya (2/263) in a (Hadith) from Abu Hurayra. The complete version says, 'I have set aside for My slaves what no eye has seen nor ear has heard, and what has never even crossed the mind of any human being.'

tahtaha, (beneath it) and min tahtiha (from beneath it), for if we were to say that rivers flowed under it, that would mean that those rivers came from somewhere else and passed by it; in such circumstances, it would be possible for those who lived on the higher ground to block the water from reaching those on the lower ground.

However, as for when they flow from under it as in Allah’s Words, ‘...with streams running beneath them ...’, that means that springs from which the water comes flow beneath those rooms, meaning that their waters are an intrinsic part of them and is not something that is provided to them from outside. Their waters are self-produced.

You are amazed by this because you measure things according to your own capacity for engineering, but your Lord’s capacity for engineering is something entirely different, something you are not even able to imagine since it is something no eye has seen nor ear has heard, nor has the thought of it even crossed the mind of any human being. No words exist in any language to indicate it, for the concept and sense of what something is must be there before any words can be coined describing that thing. If the concept does not exist, then from where can we get the words to describe it?

Today, for example, we know the word ‘television’, and we know what it is, but before it was invented, did any of us know what it was or even the name for it? Of course not, and this is why I said before that when people say that Allah is non-existent – may Allah protect us from saying that. We say to them in response,

‘What you have said is refuted by your own words, for the word ‘Allah’ is the subject of the sentence you uttered and ‘non-existent’ is its predicate. So, how could you have known to use the word ‘Allah’ if Allah were non-existent? Thus, the fact that you said, ‘Allah is non-existent’ proves that He does exist, for things that do not exist do not have words to describe them. Things that no eye has seen, no ear has heard of and no mind has dreamt about do not have names.’

This is why our Lord says when He describes paradise to us: ‘[And can] the parable of the Paradise which the God-conscious are promised...’

(Muhammad: 15); what this means is that He does not describe it to us but only its likeness. The reason for this is because our language does not possess the words necessary to give expression to what truly lies within paradise. However, despite that, even when He merely describes its likeness to us, He describes things in it that go against what we know of those things in this world. For example, when He Glorified is He describes the wine of the Hereafter, He says: 'no headiness will be in it, and they will not get drunk thereon.' (as-Saffat: 47) This means that it will not affect the intellect nor cover it up in the manner that the wine of this world does. Every human being possesses a gland that is responsible for maintaining his equilibrium, but when he drinks alcohol, that alcohol overpowers that gland, causing him to lose his equilibrium, along with interfering with his intellect causing him to sway backwards and forwards and speak words that are garbled and meaningless.

However, the wine of the Hereafter is not like that. The wine of the Hereafter gives you happiness and pleasure without affecting the intellect: '...and they will not get drunk thereon (Yanzifun).' (as-Saffat: 47) Nazf and nazh both have the same meaning; you would say, 'I did the action of naz to the well' which means that you took the water that was in it out of it, while nazf is taking what is inside something out. When a person is of a healthy and sound constitution, his body performs a process that is called excretion, whereby it excretes substances such as earwax, sweat and urine. Also, it is by this excretion that the health and soundness of the human body is maintained.

Yet, there are other kinds of excretion that is not healthy for it, such as, for example, when you eat something and then vomit up what you have eaten. Likewise, sometimes, one even vomits up blood from internal wounds—may Allah protect us from that. Furthermore, sometimes urine can come out of the body on a constant basis, such as when someone suffers from incontinence. Yet, another example of that is the nazf (excretion) that happens to the drunk person when he regurgitates the contents of his belly.

Similarly, there is water in this world and water in the Hereafter, and there is milk in this world and milk in the Hereafter, but there is a great difference between the water of this world and that of the Hereafter, and the milk of this world and that of the Hereafter. Allah says in clarification: '[And can] the parable of Paradise which the God-conscious are promised—[a Paradise] wherein there are rivers of water which time does not corrupt, rivers of milk the taste whereof never alters, rivers of wine delightful to those who drink it, rivers of honey of all impurity cleansed and the enjoyment of all the fruits…' (Muhammad: 15).

One of the amazing things about these rivers are that they are rivers without banks and flow alongside each other with their contents of water, milk, wine and honey and yet never mix with each other. This is something so amazing that we must place under the category of those things that no eye has seen nor ear has heard nor has it passed through the mind of any human being.

So, when The True Lord Glorified is He gives us a simile for the Garden, He takes some of those things that are in this world and negates the harms that affect it in this world. The curse of water in this world is that it becomes brackish, meaning that it changes in such a way that makes it no longer fit to drink. However, as for the water of the Hereafter, it never changes because it is water that flows in a river, and when water is flowing, it is protected from ever becoming brackish, and the same with the milk. As for the honey, it is described as being purified because the honey of this world is never free of contaminants.

As for the wine of the Hereafter, it is a delight for those who drink it. It is so pleasurable to drink that those who drink it sip it slowly because of how amazing it tastes. As for the wine in this world—and May Allah protect us from it—people drink glasses of it in a single gulp since it tastes and smells horrible.

Another example of that is when Allah describes the comforts and blessings of paradise by saying: '[They, too, will find themselves] amidst thornless fruit-laden lote-trees …' (al-Waqi'a: 28). The lote tree is a tree that is well known amongst Arabs, and its fruits were considered by them to be one of the most precious commodities around, but the problem with them was that their thorns harmed those who tried to eat them. Therefore, the True Lord the Most High removes that problem from the fruits of that tree in the Hereafter by saying: '[They, too, will find themselves] amidst thornless fruit-laden lote-trees' (al-Waqi'a: 28); this means with its thorns cut off or plucked out so that they are no longer there to harm those who partake of its fruits.

So, the True Lord, when He describes paradise, says: ‘But for those who take their Lord as a shield, there awaits them lofty mansions, storey upon storey with streams running beneath them. [This is] the promise of Allah; [and] Allah will never fail in [His] promise.’ (az-Zumar: 20) So, do not be astonished by how rooms can have other rooms built on them with water flowing underneath, for Allah is able to engineer things in special ways that no eye has seen nor ear has heard nor human being has even dreamt of. They are things that our languages do not even have the words to describe.

However, there are other things that are no different, such as the jugs, cups, glasses, cushions, rugs, and couches. These are all blessings bestowed to us by Allah in paradise that also exist in this world, but there is one vital difference; the ones in this life are fashioned by man for man, while the ones in the Hereafter are fashioned by the Creator of man for man.

This is why, when we went to San Francisco, saw a magnificent hotel there built on the top of a hill and found inside of it all manner of devices for our comfort and convenience, capturing the hearts of all who entered it, we said to them, ‘If you are amazed by this, something that man has created for man, then what do you think of what the True Lord has created for His creation?!’

Things such as this turn our attention and direct it towards the blessings of the Hereafter. So, when you see the blessings of this world and see something splendid and beautiful, do not feel envy or spite towards the one who owns it but, instead, remember the blessings that Allah has set aside for His slaves in the Hereafter. It is as if Allah the Almighty were using the blessings of this world to encourage us to seek the blessings of the Hereafter.

Furthermore, what we have mentioned in this verse concerning the reward awaiting the God-fearing people of (taqwa): ‘...[This is] the promise (wa'd) of Allah; [and] Allah will never fail in [His] promise (wa'd).’ (az-Zumar: 20). A wa‘d (promise) is giving someone some happy joyous news of something that is yet to happen. Furthermore, by telling of something good before its time, you motivate and encourage people to do the things that lead to that promise coming true. The opposite of wa‘d (promise) is wa‘id (threat) which is threatening of something bad or painful that is yet to happen, aiming at warning people against doing any of things that lead to that coming true. Therefore, the True Lord the Most High makes promises and threats to fill His creation with longing for the rewards, warn them about the punishments and make wrong actions and the punishments that await those who do them seem so horrible that we do not do them.

Allah never breaks a promise; His Promise is true and will come to pass because He has all the means of fulfilling it. No one can stand against Him nor prevent Him from fulfilling His Promise. This is because those who break promises are exposed to things that take away their capacity to fulfil them. Humans are fickle beings, constantly changing, and things often happen to man that prevent him from fulfilling what he has promised to do. However, as for Allah Glorified is He He is the Truth that never changes, and nothing is difficult for Him. He is capable of doing anything and has Absolute Power.

The True Lord shows us how His promises in this world always come true so that we can acknowledge the truth of what He promises us in the Hereafter. For example, Allah has made a promise to the believers by saying: ‘and that, verily, Our hosts, they indeed, would [in the end] be victorious!’ (as-Saffat: 173)

He also says: ‘... And Allah will most certainly succour him who succours His cause …’ (al-Hajj: 40). Thus, Allah’s Promise to the believers came true, and they were victorious, even though they had been persecuted and oppressed in the beginning of the affair. Furthermore, the fact that this promise came true makes even more confident and certain about the promise of the Hereafter whose time is yet to come.

This is why, when ‘Umar heard Allah’s Words, ‘[Yet] the hosts [of those who deny the truth] shall be routed, and they shall turn their backs [in flight]!’ (al-Qamar: 45), he said, ‘Which host is that? We are scarcely able to defend ourselves!’ Then, when Badr came and the Muslims proved victorious, he said, ‘Allah has spoken the truth: "[Yet] the hosts [of those who deny the truth] shall be routed, and they shall turn their backs [in flight]!"' (al-Qamar: 45)

So, The True Lord has fulfilled His promises whose times became due so that we can be more confident that His promises whose times have yet to come will also come true. Another example of that is what Allah says about disbelievers: ‘Have they not seen that We set upon the land, reducing it from its borders? And Allah decides; there is no adjuster of His decision. And He is swift in account.’ (ar-Ra‘d: 41); in other words, it is like Allah is saying, ‘O disbelievers of Quraysh! O, you who stubbornly oppose Muhammad and stand against him! Have you not seen that your broad stretch of earth is getting smaller gradually and that Islam is taking a bit more of it from you every single day?’ So, the meaning is that We are decreasing the size of the lands of disbelief and increasing the size of the lands of Islam. We have got to say that Allah has spoken truly with respect to the first promise, so He must also be speaking truly with respect to the second promise, namely the Day of Rising.

This is why Allah the Exalted teaches us to always make our promises conditioned by the Will of Allah. In other words, we must say, ‘If Allah wills’ when we promise something: ‘And never say about anything, "Behold, I shall do this tomorrow, without [adding], "If Allah so wills."… ’ (al-Kahf: 23-24) For if it proves impossible for you to fulfil what you promised, you can say, ‘I willed it, but Allah the Exalted did not will it.’ It is as if Allah releases you from this burden and says, ‘The slave willed it, but I did not will it.’ In this way, Allah Glorified is He spares you from finding yourself in an embarrassing situation and protects you from being a liar. The True Lord assumes our burdens just as He assumed the burdens of His Messenger when He says to him, ‘We do know that what such people say grieves you indeed…’ (al-An‘am: 33) which means when they say that you are a magician or a soothsayer or a liar or a madman.'... yet, behold, it is not you to whom they give the lie ...’ (al-An‘am: 33) because you have always been truthful and trustworthy in their eyes: ‘...but Allah’s Messages do these evildoers deny.’ (al-An‘am: 33)

Therefore, He made the whole matter to do with Him and took upon Himself the burdens of His Messenger.

Allah Glorified is He says:

أَلَمْ تَرَ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ أَنزَلَ مِنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ مَآءً فَسَلَكَهُۥ يَنَٰبِيعَ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ ثُمَّ
يُخْرِجُ بِهِۦ زَرْعًا مُّخْتَلِفًا أَلْوَٰنُهُۥ ثُمَّ يَهِيجُ فَتَرَىٰهُ مُصْفَرًّا ثُمَّ يَجْعَلُهُۥ
حُطَٰمًا ۚ إِنَّ فِى ذَٰلِكَ لَذِكْرَىٰ لِأُو۟لِى ٱلْأَلْبَٰبِ ﴿٢١﴾

Have you not considered that God sends water down from the sky, guides it along to form springs in the earth, and then, with it, brings forth vegetation of various colours, which later withers, turns yellow before your eyes, and is crumbled to dust at His command? There is truly a reminder in this for those who have understanding [21]

When Allah the Almighty tells us of the good things with which He provides us, whether such good things are connected to the basic needs of life in this world or the blessings that are set aside for us in the Hereafter, He always speaks of them as being sent down. This word anzala (sent down) indicates coming down from high and that these gifts come from someone higher, even if they come from inside of the earth as is in Allah’s Words: ‘... and We bestowed [upon you] from on high iron, in which there is awesome power as well as [a source of] benefits for man …’ (al-Hadid: 25).

So, a blessing comes from one who is higher than you not one who is your equal. In the course of your life or the course of your work when you come upon an issue that you are not physically or mentally capable of resolving on your own, you go to someone who is higher up than you in your field, one whom you trust and whose counsel you value, and ask him to help you resolve it. Furthermore, you do so willingly since you have handed your affair to one in whose abilities you trust.

So, when the True Lord the Most High says anzala, He means, ‘Take My judgements on the basis that they come down from one higher than you and are the best thing for you, for they come from your Creator who knows what is best for you.’

Allah Glorified is He says in this verse: ‘Do you not see that it is Allah Who sends down water from the skies, and then causes it to travel through the earth in the shape of springs? …’ (az-Zumar: 21)

When Allah says, ‘from the skies’, He means from the direction of the sky, for the storehouses of water are all on earth: in seas and oceans. This water is prepared chemically in such a way that preserves water and prevents it from changing, becoming brackish or becoming a breeding-ground for bacteria.

This is why we find the percentage of salt in seas protects and preserves it. Thus, when dead bodies and other contaminants are thrown into it, the waves expel them out and the water remains clean. It is the water of the seas that is taken up by the process of evaporation to form the clouds, which then release rain that provides water to human beings, animals, and plants.

Rainwater is the purest form of water that exists. The process of evaporation is very much like the process of distillation that we carry out in our laboratories in order to obtain purified water. Reflect on how much it costs to distil a single bottle of water, so how much do you think it would be for all the rain that pours from the sky?

This is why Allah, out of His wisdom, has made water three quarters of the earth and only one quarter as land, so that the area from which water may be evaporated can be as extensive as possible so that there can be enough rain to provide the earth with all the fresh water it needs. Previously, we clarified the difference between water that is deep with a small surface area and water that is shallow with a large surface area, for the amount that can be evaporated depends upon the extent of the surface area of water—the greater the area is, the more water evaporates. Likewise, the example we gave was a glass of water. If you were to leave that glass of water and then come back to it a month later, you would find it nearly as it was, with the amount of water in it only having decreased by a tiny amount. However, if you were to have poured that water on the floor of the room, it would have dried out and evaporated almost before you stepped out the door.

The True Lord wants the salt water to evaporate in order for it to be purified of its saltiness, and then to come back down to earth as fresh water that is good to drink. This process of evaporation happens without any of us noticing that. It is one of the signs of Allah and one of the greatest blessings He has bestowed upon us.

When water comes down from the sky, it does not come down everywhere but only falls in places that are cold.(1) The evaporated water that is gathered together in the form of clouds thickens and becomes condensed when it passes over an area that is cold in the same way that we condense distilled water. Take the water that comes to Egypt in the form of the river Nile: where does the water that forms it fall? It falls on the mountains of Abyssinia, and is carried to us by the rivers, while some of it leaks inside the earth where Allah creates passages for it flow along.

This is the meaning of Allah's Words: '... and then causes it to travel through the earth in the shape of springs' (az-Zumar: 21). Thus, He creates special passageways for it to travel along so that it does not mix with the salt water. It is possible, for example, for there to be a fresh water spring in the midst of an area of salt water, but despite that it still does not become intermingled with it. It is as if the fresh water were flowing along special pipes similar to the arteries and veins of a human body.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'Do you not see ...'. As long as a matter is one that Allah has granted you the possibility of seeing, if you do see it, you will know that His Words are true, like when I see rain falling from the sky. Likewise, if you do not see it, you must affirm what Allah tells you just as you would affirm what you see with your own two eyes, for Allah's Words are truer than anything your eyes can see.

An example of that is what Allah says, addressing His Messenger: 'Do you not see how your Lord dealt with the Army of the Elephant?' (al-Fil: 1) It is well-known that our master, the Messenger of Allah, was born in the year of the Elephant, meaning that he did not actually see that event. Thus, it is the meaning of 'Do you not see' or 'Do you not know by means of a knowledge from Me that is superior to the knowledge obtained by seeing it with your own eyes?'

Then He Glorified is He says: '... And then He brings forth thereby plants (zar') of various hues …' (az-Zumar: 21). Zar' (plants) is what is grown in a single plot of earth and watered by a single source of water. Yet, despite that, fruits come from it in all different colours, shapes, and flavours.

(1) Inaccurate information. From linguist: This information is according to the knowledge and belief of Sheikh Ash-Sha'rawi may Allah rest his soul, and it was stated by him to further clarify certain points, but it does not necessarily conform to the scientific facts and information proven true.

When people of knowledge talk about this matter, they say that plants have a peculiar property known as 'selective absorption', whereby these plants use their roots to absorb the necessary elements and nutrients they need from the soil. However, if we were to bring a container full of water, put a variety of colours into it, and then put in the narrow hair-like pipes by means of which water flows upwards on account of this property, we would find such pipes sucking up the water in a general way, not differentiating one colour from another.

However, that is not how plants absorb the necessary elements and nutrients from the soil, for they only suck up the substances that they need and that correspond to their nature. The hair-like follicles in their roots absorb purposefully, taking one element from the soil and leaving another. The soil is the same, and the water is the same, but despite that, the plants that grow in it have different flavours, shapes, colours, and smells.

Thus, this is not the selection to which the scientists refer; rather, it is a divine selection based upon the natural capacity that Allah places in the seeds from which plants grow. If you were, for example, to grow chilli peppers next to sugar cane and next to pomegranate, you would find the one to be hot, the other to be sweet, and the other to be sweet and sour.

Then, plants move into a different stage, which the True Lord describes with His Words: '... and then it withers. You can see it turn yellow, and in the end He causes it to crumble to dust ...' (az-Zumar: 21). The word yahij means to dry out, break apart, and crumble into pieces. In other words, it does not remain green and ripe forever. It is as if Allah were using what happens to these plants as a way of teaching mankind an important lesson. For plants are living things, just like human beings, thus, human beings will pass through that stage where they wither up and crumble to pieces in exactly the same way as they.

Allah the Almighty strikes this metaphor for us so that we do not become deceived by our own bodies, along with the strength, intelligence, and thinking we find therein, nor by the power, wealth or fame we acquire. Our Lord encourages us to look at our mother, the earth, and the crops that come out of it; what is it that happens to them in the end? Well, the same will happen to you, for you are also subject to change, so do not fall prey to self-delusion.

This is why they say, ‘Do not get angry or sad if your circumstances change, for you are subject to change. Hence, what do you expect to happen when you get to the top of the mountain? Do you really expect to stay there? How could you when you are given to change?’ No, it is inevitable that you will come back down. So, when you receive a blessing, always be ready for it to be taken away. It is just as a poet said:

When something reaches completion, its diminishment begins,
So expect its removal when people say it is complete!(1)

Therefore, if you see yourself as being well-endowed with knowledge, strength or any other manifestation of Allah’s blessing, know that tomorrow you will become older and weaker, until you eventually become like a child, crawling along the ground and needing others to assist and support you, just as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... just as many a one of you is reduced in old age to a most abject state, ceasing to know anything of what he once knew so well...’ (al-Hajj: 5). Therefore, learn this lesson well, both from what you see in your mother, the earth, and what you see in yourself.

‘... Verily, in [all] this...’ means what you yourself have witnessed of all the things we have mentioned in this verse; ‘...there is indeed a reminder...’ means a reminder and a lesson ‘... to those who are endowed with insight!’ (az-Zumar: 21), or to those who have discerning intellects capable of reflection.

(1) This line was composed by ‘Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him as is mentioned in Al-Mawsu‘a Ash-Shi‘riyya and is taken from a poem written in the mutarib meter, containing eleven lines. The wording of the line is as follows:
When a matter reaches completion, its diminishment begins,
So long for its removal when people say it is complete.

أَفَمَن شَرَحَ ٱللَّهُ صَدْرَهُۥ لِلْإِسْلَٰمِ فَهُوَ عَلَىٰ نُورٍ مِّن رَّبِّهِۦ ۚ فَوَيْلٌ لِّلْقَٰسِيَةِ
قُلُوبُهُم مِّن ذِكْرِ ٱللَّهِ ۚ أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ فِى ضَلَٰلٍ مُّبِينٍ ﴿٢٢﴾

What about the one whose heart God has opened in devotion to Him, so that he walks in light from his Lord? Alas for those whose hearts harden at the mention of God! They have clearly lost their way [22] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 22)

The implied meaning in this verse is ‘Could, then, one whose bosom Allah has opened wide with willingness towards self-surrenders unto Him ...’ be like those whose breasts have been tightened up so that Islam cannot get in? So, it is necessary for the opposite to be mentioned since the two are not alike and not the same: ‘...Woe, then, unto those whose hearts are hardened against all remembrance of Allah! …’ Their hearts hardness is a reason for its being tightened up. Thus, when someone’s heart is too constricted to admit Islam, it is because his heart is hardened.

This is much like when Allah says: ‘Or [do you deem yourself equal to] one who devoutly worships [Allah] throughout the night, prostrating himself or standing [in prayer], ever-mindful of the life to come, and hoping for his Lord’s Grace? Say: "Can they who know and they who do not know be deemed equal?"…’ (az-Zumar: 9). The meaning is, in other words, ’Is this person the same as one who does not stand the night in prayer?’ Then it is upon you to answer the question: ‘Is he whose breast is opened to Islam and who therefore is illuminated by his Lord like he whose heart is hardened and whose breast is too constricted to let in Allah’s guidance and religion?’

The meaning of ‘... whose bosom Allah has opened wide ...’ is ‘has made wide what was narrow’. You might say to a companion of yours, ‘Open your heart ’, which means ‘Make it wide enough to encompass all the sides of the argument’. Another meaning of opening the heart is not filling it with idle tales nor packing it will lies and falsehoods till it becomes accustomed to. Therefore, when it is filled with such idle garbage, that idle garbage forces out the truth as we said previously when we talked about a single space. For a single space can contain no more than one single thing at one time. Water, for example, displaces and expels the air from a bottle when that bottle is filled with water.

One consequence of one’s breast being opened and expanded is that it allows you to be fair and impartial when you choose between different alternatives. First, you must purify your heart and expel from it all that preoccupies and distracts it, and then consider carefully all of the options presented before you. Then, you must put whatever you find suitable into your heart so that it takes root and becomes a firm doctrine of belief that cannot be argued about ever again.

Thus, this is because Allah the Almighty has created for us senses by means of which we perceive, such as the eyes that see, the ears that hear and the tongue that speaks.

Therefore it is by means of these senses that we gather information. Then, we present that information to the intellect so that it can look into it and choose between it. Then, whatever the intellect finds wholesome and sound, it sends it down to the heart. That, in turn, becomes a belief that takes root in the heart not to be analysed again. This is why you must beware of the rust that forms around the heart until it closes it off completely and leaves no place for the truth to enter. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him gave us some indication of this matter in a Hadith of Abu Dharr. He mentioned that the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Tribulations come over the heart like a reed mat, reed by reed (in another version, it reads ‘we seek Allah's protection from them'). Any heart that takes them in starts to develop a black spot, and any heart that rejects them starts to develop a white spot. Thus, this continues until they develop into two separate hearts: one that is white like a smooth polished rock and will not be harmed by tribulation for as long as the heavens and earth shall remain and the other which is black and clouded over with ash, and to whom Allah refers when He says: "Nay, but their hearts are corroded by all [the evil] that they were wont to do!" (al-Mutaffifin: 14) It is like an upturned cup, not recognising what is right and not rejecting what is wrong.'(1)

The tribulations he refers to in this prophetic saying (Hadith) are doubtful matters with which people are presented in Islam. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him compares them with a reed mat, a mat that is made by tying one reed next to another reed next to another reed until enough of them are tied together to form the mats upon which we sit. Or he said 'awdhan, which means 'We seek refuge in Allah from these tribulations', or 'awdan which means time after time.

(1) It is narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (144); and Ahmad in his Musnad (5/386 & 405) in a Hadith from Hudhayfa ibn Al-Yaman.

Therefore, if you want to look into the matters of belief first expand your breast and open your heart so that you can expel from it all the (false) beliefs that clog it up. This is the reason why Allah Glorified is He says: 'Could, then, one whose bosom Allah has opened wide with willingness towards self-surrender unto Him so that he is illumined by a light [that flows] from his Lord, [be likened to the blind and deaf of heart]? …' (az-Zumar: 22) Light has a number of different sources: it can be physical, such as the light that comes from the sun, moon, and stars, besides the light sources that man has discovered in recent times. Or it can be metaphysical, which is the type of light that is being referred to in this verse. Thus, by that, we mean the light of values and the light of the Divine Programme '... so that he is illumined by a light [that flows] from his Lord...' (az-Zumar: 22); this means the light of guidance which the Noble Quran has in mind when it says: 'In the houses [of worship] which Allah has allowed to be raised so that His name be remembered in them, there [are such as] extol His limitless Glory at morn and evening. People whom neither [worldly] commerce nor striving after gain can divert from the remembrance of Allah …' (an-Nur: 36-37).

In these houses in which Allah Glorified is He is mentioned and in which Allah is glorified is a place where one can receive outpourings of light directly from Allah and where His blessings and mercies descend. That is proven by the fact that the verses that immediately preceded these ones were talking about the light of Allah and provided a metaphor for the way He illuminates the heavens and the earth: 'Allah is the Light of the heavens and the earth. The example of His light is like a niche within which is a lamp, the lamp is within glass, the glass as if it were a pearly [white] star lit from [the oil of] a blessed olive tree, neither of the east nor of the west, whose oil would almost glow even if untouched by fire. Light upon light.' (an-Nur: 35)

Allah Glorified is He does not strike a metaphor for us of His Light, but rather strikes a metaphor of the way He illuminates: 'Allah is the Light of the heavens and the earth,' (an-Nur: 35) i.e. He is The One Who illuminated the heavens and the earth by creating them. A niche is a limited source of energy that does not penetrate through walls. It is limited in size and narrow, and does not go all the way through, which is why light is collected in it and is not dispersed. This means that there is no space left for darkness within that niche.

And then there is the fact that the lamp is not a normal one, but rather one that is encased in glass for there are lamps that are not encased in glass and which we ourselves call 'torches'. Such lamps have blackened flames because of the fact that the wind and the air tickle it from every side and direction. But when there is glass, it cleans and purifies the flame since it stops any air reaching it except for the amount necessary to keep the flame alight. This allows the flame to be pure and smokeless, which is the first step of its purification.

Then there is the fact that the glass itself is not an ordinary type of glass, but rather is one that is so clear, 'as if it were a pearly [white] star' (an-Nur: 35), reflecting light in every direction.

Then there is the fact that this lamp is not fuelled by ordinary oil, but rather, it is: 'lit from [the oil of] a blessed olive tree, neither of the east nor of the west, whose oil would almost glow even if untouched by fire.' (an-Nur: 35) It is an oil that has special characteristics and that has been blended in a perfect way.

It is by means of something like this that Allah Glorified is He sends light to the heavens and the earth. So, the metaphor is of how He illuminates, not of His Light. This light to which Allah is referring is a physical form of light. It is only when you read these verses that you find what He really means by 'light' in His Words: '[Such niches are] in mosques which Allah has ordered to be raised and that His name be mentioned therein.' (an-Nur: 36) It is that light to which He refers to as: ' … and he is upon a light from his Lord." (az-Zumar: 22)

So Allah Glorified is He has sent down upon you physical light that helps you in carrying out your day-to-day tasks so that people can see where their feet are treading and not to bump into things or crush them. Likewise, He has illuminated your souls and values by (moral) light.

When Allah Glorified is He strikes this metaphor for us and shows us that the lamp does not ever leave any darkness whatsoever in the niche, He gives us an indication that His metaphysical light also does not come into contact with any flaw or imperfection except that it fixes it. Light comes to you to guide you and save you.

When Allah says: ‘Then woe to those whose hearts are hardened against the remembrance of Allah. Those are in manifest error,’ (az-Zumar: 22) He means that there is woe for them because of the hardness of their hearts, which has created a barrier between them and belief. The woe comes to them in the moment they learn that they do have a Lord whom they rejected, and that reality that they denied for so long will come as a surprise to them.

The Noble Qurann tackles this matter when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘The example of those who disbelieve in their Lord is [that] their deeds are like ashes which the wind blows forcefully on a stormy day; they are unable [to keep] from what they earned a [single] thing.’ (Ibrahim: 18)

The meaning is that all their deeds will turn to nothing and all their efforts will be met with failure.

Allah also says: ‘But those who disbelieved - their deeds are like a mirage in a lowland which a thirsty one thinks is water until, when he comes to it, he finds it is nothing but finds Allah before Him, and He will pay him in full his due; and Allah is swift in account.’ (an-Nur: 39)

The woe comes upon them in the moment they learn that they had rejected Allah and that their hearts had been constricted and closed in such a way that the light of belief could find no way to enter. The woe had come upon them before the punishment arrived.

In another verse, Allah says: ‘Those are in manifest error,’ (az-Zumar: 22) i.e. clear and plain. That error (wandering) is the lack of guidance to find a clear path to travel along, like a traveller in the desert who strays from the path. His wandering started by him deviating from the right path, even if he only deviated from it by mere centimetres for even that will end up causing you to stray away from the path.

Have you seen railway semaphores and how they switch a train going, for example, to Port Said, Ismailiyya or Ṭanṭa and direct it elsewhere? Simply by moving a rail point a matter of millimetres, the train is redirected from going from one place to another a long way away from it. So the meaning of: ‘Those are in manifest error,’ (az-Zumar: 22) is that they will never be guided to anything.

ٱللَّهُ نَزَّلَ أَحۡسَنَ ٱلۡحَدِيثِ كِتَٰبٗا مُّتَشَٰبِهٗا مَّثَانِيَ تَقۡشَعِرُّ مِنۡهُ جُلُودُ ٱلَّذِينَ
يَخۡشَوۡنَ رَبَّهُمۡ ثُمَّ تَلِينُ جُلُودُهُمۡ وَقُلُوبُهُمۡ إِلَىٰ ذِكۡرِ ٱللَّهِۚ ذَٰلِكَ هُدَى
ٱللَّهِ يَهۡدِى بِهِۦ مَن يَشَآءُۚ وَمَن يُضۡلِلِ ٱللَّهُ فَمَا لَهُۥ مِنۡ هَادٍ ﴿٢٣﴾

God has sent down the most beautiful of all teachings: a Scripture that is consistent and draws comparisons; that causes the skins of those in awe of their Lord to shiver. Then their skins and their hearts soften at the mention of God: such is God’s guidance. He guides with it whoever He will; no one can guide those God leaves to stray [23]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 23)

Allah Glorified is He means to say that since you have decided to follow and choose what is best, I will reveal the best speech to you. Indeed, it is the best of speech because it is the speech of Allah, and His speech is one of His attributes, perfect, complete, and absolute. Allah made it a miracle and took it upon Himself to preserve, not leaving that task to creation.

It is part of human nature that people only memorise and preserve things when they are a proof for them, not a proof against them. Whereas Allah Glorified is He preserves the Quran, which is a proof for His creation against Him. This is because everything that is mentioned in the Quran, Allah guarantees that it will come to pass in exactly the way He says it will as He is the One Who sends it down and preserves it.

So, what is meant by the best of speech is the Noble Quran? As for: ‘…a consistent Book…’ (az-Zumar: 23 it means different parts of it are like each other in terms of the beauty and eloquence of their composition and in terms of their subject matter. So, beware of saying that this verse is more eloquent than that one, since every verse deals with its subject matter in the most eloquent way.

If we were to take, for example, being similar in terms of subject matter, we would read in one place concerning the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him: ‘And the family of Pharaoh picked him up [out of the river] so that he would become to them an enemy and a [cause of] grief,’(1) (al-Qasas: 8) and we would read in another place: ‘[Saying], “Cast him into the chest and cast it into the river, and the river will throw it onto the bank; there will take him an enemy to Me and an enemy to him.” And I bestowed upon you love from Me that you would be brought up under My eye.’ (Ta Ha: 39)

Some might think that this was repetition, but anyone who reflects deeply on the respective meanings of the two verses will find that each verse tells us things that the other does not. For example, in: ‘…so that he would become to them an enemy and a [cause of] grief,’ (al-Qasas: 8) it is Musa (Moses) peace be upon him who is to display enmity to Pharaoh’s household, whereas in: ‘…there will take him an enemy to Me and an enemy to him,’ (Ta Ha: 39) it is Pharaoh who is to show enmity to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. No battle is fought fiercely when there is only enmity from one side, for the other side might pardon the other, or surrender to it. But when there is enmity on both sides, the battle gets brutal.

We said previously that the orientalists raised an objection to Allah’s words in the following verses: ‘…and be patient over what befalls you. Indeed, [all] that is of the matters [requiring] determination.’ (Luqman: 17) And in‘…indeed, that is of the matters [requiring] determination,’ (ash-Shura: 43) saying, ‘Which of these two is more eloquent than the other? And if one is eloquent, then the other one is not’.

(1) In his Zad Al-Masir, Ibn Al-Jawzi, while commenting on the saying of Allah the Almighty: ‘And Pharaoh’s family took him up that he might be an enemy and a grief for them…’ (al-Qasas: 8) said that Allah the Almighty caused the family of Pharaoh to take Prophet Moses so that this result of being an enemy and grief for them would be eventually achieved. This meaning is deduced from the use of the Arabic particle Lam Al-‘Aqibah, which tells about the consequences of an act. As for the other exegetes of the Quran, some of them believe that the meaning is that (the family of Pharaoh, by the Will of Allah, took Moses) so that the goal of being an enemy to their religion and a grief for them will be obtained; while others opine that the meaning is that Moses will be their enemy who will cause their men to be drowned, and that Moses peace be upon him will be a grief for their men and women by enslaving them.’

Misconceptions of this sort result from a lack of understanding of the linguistic style of the Quran, and a lack of linguistic ability on their part. Every verse is eloquent in its own context and in a manner that best befits the meaning that is expressed within it. In this regard, the first verse talks about afflictions that strike no one else but you, and in such instances it is easy to be patient.

It is perfectly normal, for example, for you to endure illness with patience since there is no rival against you in such circumstances. But if the affliction is caused by another party, that other party makes you angry, and sets light to the fire of malice, and makes you seek revenge. So, it is fitting for the lam of emphasis meaning ‘indeed’ to be used in the other verse: ‘…indeed, that is of the matters [requiring] determination.’ (ash-Shura: 43)

The orientalists also raised objections to Allah’s words: ‘We will provide for you and them’ (al-An‘am: 151), and His Words: ‘We provide for them and for you,’ (al-Isra’: 31) saying, ‘What is the difference between the two verses?’ We say, ‘If you were to look at the beginning of each of the two verses, you would find that the endings fit perfectly with them, as there are two reasons people kill their children for: the first of those is poverty, for a poor person is needy and not even able to provide for himself, let alone his children. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘… and do not kill your children out of poverty (1)’ (al-An‘am: 151). Because poverty is already there, ‘We will provide for you and them,’ (al-An‘am: 151) and He mentions the parents before the children because the first thing they are preoccupied with is providing for themselves.

The second cause is when someone has enough for himself but fears that poverty would strike if he were to have children. To these people, Allah says: ‘And do not kill your children for fear of poverty. We provide for them and for you,’ (al-Isra’: 31) and mentions the children before the parents. In other words, Allah Glorified is He will provide sustenance for those children on whose account you fear poverty before He provides for you. So each verse is completed with the words that fit it best.

(1) "The Arabic word Imlaq means ‘to turn from richness to poverty.’ Arabs use the expression ‘Amlaqa Ar-Rajulu’ to indicate that he turned poor after being rich. The verbal noun Imlaq originally means ‘to unwisely squander money to the extent that the person becomes poor as a result.’ See Ibn Manthur, Lisan Al-‘Arab, the root M-a-l-q.

Similarly, we talked about the matter of hearing and seeing when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Say, “Have you considered: if Allah should make for you the night continuous until the Day of Resurrection, what deity other than Allah could bring you light? Then will you not hear?”’ (al-Qasas: 71) Here, Allah mentions hearing because it is the means of meeting in the darkness of the night, and it is by it that a man is summoned when he is sleeping.

But as for the verse that deals with the day, Allah says: ‘Say, “Have you considered: if Allah should make for you the day continuous until the Day of Resurrection, what deity other than Allah could bring you a night in which you may rest? Then will you not see?”’ (al-Qasas: 72) Seeing cannot happen except in the light of day.

And as for: ‘reiteration,’ (az-Zumar: 23) i.e. once, twice or three times, or it means to do something twice in the prayer, for we recite the chapter of al-Fatiha (The Opener) and a short verse in the first rak‘a(1), and then recite the same in the second.

When Allah says: ‘The skins shiver therefrom of those who fear their Lord,’ (az-Zumar: 23) it is a description of the slave who fears his Lord, watches out for Him and takes into account the fact that He sees him. This is because he places his behaviour before his Lord and then if he sees that it goes against His teachings, he goes back to what He says and remembers His threat. His skin then starts to shiver as a result of his fear of his Lord, and that shivering to which we refer to is when the skin dries up and rattles and the body starts to shiver as a result of his fear of punishment and Allah’s displeasure. Then he comes back and remembers the mercy of his Lord that precedes His anger, and His pardon that comes before His punishment, and so he goes back to his initial state: ‘…then their skins and their hearts relax at the remembrance of Allah.’ (az-Zumar: 23)

So, a believer combines both fear and hope, and his heart fluctuates between these two states. When he recalls the punishment that results from going against Allah’s Commands, his skin shivers with fear, and when he recalls

(1) Rak’a consists of the prescribed movements and words followed by Muslims while offering prayers to God. It also refers to a single unit of Islamic prayers.

Allah’s mercy, his skin becomes soft and his heart becomes calm. And why should it not be so when His Lord has said: ‘Say, “O My servants who have transgressed against themselves [by sinning], do not despair of the mercy of Allah. Indeed, Allah forgives all sins. Indeed, it is He who is the Forgiving, the Merciful.”’ (az-Zumar: 53)

‘That is’ (az-Zumar: 23) – and this is what happens to believers –‘… the guidance of Allah by which He guides whom He wills. And one whom Allah leaves astray - for him there is no guide.’ (az-Zumar: 23)

Many have raised objections to this verse, saying, ‘If Allah is the one who leads people astray, then why does He punish those who go astray?’ We say that: ‘And one whom Allah leaves astray…’ (az-Zumar: 23) means that Allah Glorified is He knows them to be astray, and knows that they will not listen to His Words nor follow His way. Allah created us with free will, able to believe or disbelieve if we so wanted. So, non-believers are not forced by Allah to disbelieve nor does Allah approve of them doing that.

As to: ‘…for him there is no guide,’ (az-Zumar: 23) it means, ‘Beware of seeking to emend Allah’s words by human laws that are created for you by intellects that are too proud to follow Allah's orders. As long as something is said by Allah, it is, and you cannot by any means oppose it, since it is not possible for anyone to find guidance better than Allah’s guidance.

It is necessary at the very least to understand that one who legislates laws with the purpose of governing people’s affairs must himself derive no benefit from those laws, so that he can be impartial and objective. This is because if he were to derive benefit from those laws, it is inevitable that his heart would incline towards doing that and he would make the laws that bring the most benefit to him.

For example, if workers were to make the laws, they would choose socialism, and if capitalists were to make the laws, they would choose capitalism. This is why it is a precondition for those who make the laws that they do not benefit from the laws themselves. And that condition can only truly be fulfilled when the One who makes the laws is Allah Glorified is He.

And that is why Allah causes certain cases to arise in existence–even among those who disbelieve in Him–that prove that Allah’s Law is the best.

People often come across problems for which they can find no solution to in their own laws, so they are forced to resort to Allah’s religious laws. They do not do that because they believe in Him, but rather because some problems they come across in their lives can only be resolved this way.

أَفَمَن يَتَّقِي بِوَجۡهِهِۦ سُوٓءَ ٱلۡعَذَابِ يَوۡمَ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِۚ
وَقِيلَ لِلظَّٰلِمِينَ ذُوقُواْ مَا كُنتُمۡ تَكۡسِبُونَ ﴿٢٤﴾

What about the one who will only have his bare face to protect him from his terrible suffering on the Day of Resurrection? It will be said to the evildoers, ‘Taste what you have earned’ [24] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 24)

The question that is asked in: ‘Then is he who…’ (az-Zumar: 24) is much like the one asked prior to it in: ‘so is one whose breast Allah has expanded to [accept] Islam…’ (az-Zumar: 22), so it is necessary here as well to understand the contrast in meaning. Thus, the meaning in: ‘Then is he who will shield with his face the worst of the punishment on the Day of Resurrection…’ (az-Zumar: 24) is like the one who will not be punished. Or we could say, ‘like the one who is blessed.’ That is for you to decide.

Consider also the meaning in: ‘the worst of the punishment,’ (az-Zumar: 24) where Allah means the severe and terrible punishment. And reflect on: ‘… is he who will shield with his face the worst of the punishment.’ (az-Zumar: 24) It is well known that the face is the noblest part of the human body, and it is by it that a person’s mood and expressions can be identified. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...their marks are on their faces...’ (al-Fath: 29).

If it were not for facial features, all the bodies would appear alike, and it would not be possible to tell them apart. This is why people take great care of their faces by protecting them first before any other part of their body. For example, imagine there was a man walking along the road when a car passed by him and splattered him with mud; what is the first thing from which he seeks to clean and remove the muck? The first thing he wipes is, of course, his face. Then and only then does he move on to his clothes, and the reason why is that the face is the noblest and most noteworthy part of the body, and the one that is protected first before all the other parts.

So, how bad do you think a punishment has to be for a human being to find nothing to protect himself from but his face?! Yes, he wards it off with his face because his hands are shackled and his feet are manacled. There is no escape from the punishment and no deliverance. He has no alternative but to use the most valuable thing he possesses to ward it off and protect himself. He has no alternative but to use the noblest part of his body: his face.

'And it will be said to the wrongdoers, "Taste what you used to earn."' (az-Zumar: 24) Allah tells them to 'Taste' the punishment in order to mock them, and for that purpose He chooses 'taste' which is the function of the tongue, one of the organs of the human body that carries out a specific task just like the eyes and the ears. The only reason He specifically chooses taste is because it is the sense that is inseparable from a human being. It is the sense by means of which he maintains his life, for it is by the sense of taste that we put food and drink into our bodies, enjoying a pleasure that supersedes all other pleasures.

As for the eyes and ears, by means of them you might see or hear something you do not like, whereas with taste, you choose what you like and what gives you pleasure. Here, Allah Glorified is He wants to indicate that the action of tasting encompasses the entire body. In other words, the whole body tastes punishment.

We have previously mentioned that the tongue is the organ of taste in all stages and that the area surrounding it tastes and distinguishes between flavours.

So unless food goes beyond that area, one will not be able to taste anything. Consequently, the manufacturers of medicine coat their bitter medicines in a substance that is palatable and easy to swallow, in order to help the medicine pass by the area of taste without us sensing its bitterness.

If you were to look at all the organs, you would find that they have some connection to others. For example, I can hear, see, touch or feel others as well as parts of myself. Whereas taste's connection is to the person himself, for no one can taste anyone else. This is why Allah chose this organ to show us the severity and painfulness of the punishment, saying: 'Taste' (az-Zumar: 24) once in the plural form and 'Taste' (ad-Dukhan: 49) in the singular form. He does not use sight, hearing, smell or touch, but rather uses taste, the sense that relates solely to the individual who has it. So, it is as if every one of us is going to have a sense of taste that corresponds to the punishment he will receive.

If taste had a specific area in the body, it would be the tongue in all its aspects and the area surrounding it. In other words, it will not be just the area of taste that tastes the punishment, but rather the entire body. This is proven when Allah says: 'Every time their skins are roasted through We will replace them with other skins so they may taste the punishment.' (an-Nisa': 56) So, their capacity to taste spreads beyond the area of tasting to encompass the entire body.

If we were to look in this regard at the town that was secure and at ease but still refused to show gratitude for Allah's blessings, about whom Allah says: 'So Allah made it taste the envelopment of hunger and fear…' (an-Nahl: 112), it is as if the tasting encloses and surrounds them from every side.

Poets usually exaggerate a thing by causing it to go beyond the usual area for sensation until it encompasses every area. And it is customary for poets to talk about the heart and its being the place where love resides. An example of this is what the poet(1) said:

A caller called out when we were in the area of Mina, and caused the griefs of the heart to well up, and what would you know, he called out to another using the name of Layla, and it was as if,
'Layla' woke up a bird that resided in my chest.(2)

And another (3):

It is as if the heart were a night,

(1) The poet is Mohammad ibn 'Abdullah ibn Namir Ath-Thaqafi An-Namiri, a love poet who ranked among the poets of the Umayyad age. He was born, brought up and died in At-Ta'if. He died in 90 AH and has a collection of poetry that is published.

(2) These two lines are from a poem of an-Namiri made up of seven lines and composed in the tawil metre. In (Al-Mawsu'a ash-Shi'riyya), it has 'anguishes of the heart' instead of, 'griefs of the heart'. An-Numiri Used to write love poetry about the sister of Al-Hajjaj ibn Yasuf Ath-Thaqafi, but Al-Hajjaj threatened him and so he fled to Yemen where he lived for a number of years in Aden (Al-Mawsu'a Ash-Shi'riyya).

(3) The poet is Tawbah ibn Al-Humayr Al-Khafiji Abu Harb, a well-known great Arab love poet. He used to love Layla Al-Akhiliyya and asked for her hand in marriage. But her father rejected him and so he married another. And so he used to rhapsodise and celebrate her in verse. He was killed by the Banu 'Awf ibn 'Aqil in the year 85 AH (Al-Mawsu'a Ash-Shi'riyya).

told to come and go at the mention of Layla Al-‘Amiriyya a sandgrouse caught in a trap so it spends the night, struggling with its wing having become caught up in it.(1)

But as for the poet who wanted to exaggerate this matter, he said(2):

The passing thoughts that recall you to me stir up my love, and I feel as if it were flowing out of my heart, leaving no part of my body except that it fills it, as if all my limbs and organs were made of hearts.(3)

So, for him, love went beyond its area until it came to encompass all of his limbs and organs. In the same way, taste goes beyond the area of tasting to encompass the entire body.

And this is why when Allah says: ‘Every time their skins are roasted through We will replace them with other skins so they may taste the punishment,’ (an-Nisa’: 56) it must be considered one of the greatest scientific miracles in the Noble Quran, to say nothing of the miraculous nature of its language, eloquence and literary style. That is a miracle only Arab-speakers can appreciate. So, for non-Arabs, Allah provides another miracle that befits them, telling them of matters and scientific facts that had not even occurred to people at the time the Quran was revealed and was not known to science for centuries after that.

Today, after more than 14 centuries have passed since the Quran was revealed, contemporary science has proven what Allah told us about in the

(1) The two verses are from a poem made up of four lines and composed in the wafir metre. In the encyclopaedia, it has, ‘fumbling around’ instead of ‘struggling’. The wording, ‘struggling’ is transmitted by Al-Asfahani in ‘(Al-Aghani)’, as well as by Abu‘Ali Al-Qali in his Amali and Abu Hilal Al-‘Askari in ‘(Diwan Al-Ma‘ani)’.

(3) These verses are mentioned by Salah Ad-Din As-Safadi in ‘(Al-Wafi ibn Al-wafiyat)’, and by Ibn Shakir Al-Kutabi in ‘(Fawat Al-wafiyat)’. As for Ibn Khalkan in ‘(Wafiyat Al-A‘yan)’, he attributed the two verses to Prince Shams Al-Ma‘ali Abu Al-Hasan Qabus ibn Abu Tahir.

Quran to be true, and that He knows what choices will be made by His slaves in the universe He created.

We have mentioned that when the First World War came to an end and Germany was defeated, one of their economic experts, a man called Schacht, came with the aim of putting his country back on its feet and helping it to recover after its defeat. As he was not able to serve in the army because he was cripple, he put his intellect to use in the service of his country, and promoted scientific research with such success that it was their scientists who invented the cylinder for splitting the single molecule, the thing that philosophers had called the indivisible part, by which they meant the atom.

As soon as they succeeded in splitting the atom and dividing it into smaller parts, some of the enemies of Islam took that as an opportunity to cast aspersions on the truthfulness of the Noble Quran, saying, ‘Allah used the example of the atom when He said: “So whoever does an atom’s weight of good will see it.” (az-Zalzala: 7) “And whoever does an atom's weight of evil will see it.” (az-Zalzala: 8) and yet here we find that science has discovered something smaller than the atom!’

But the people of sound knowledge quickly refute the words of these scientists and tell them to slow down and read the whole Quran before making such comments and not to take from it what appears to back up their attack on it. For Allah says in another verse: ‘And not absent(1) from your Lord is any [part] of an atom’s weight (2) within the earth or within the heaven or [anything] smaller than that or greater but that it is in a clear register.’ (Yunus: 61) So, the Quran makes provision for this matter and does not say, ‘small,’ but rather says, ‘smaller than small’ regardless of the number of times they split it, the Quran has made provision for that.

In such a manner is the miraculous nature of the Quran for non-Arabs–the way it describes these scientific phenomena before mankind discovered them.

(1) Absent: When something becomes absent, it is away and not present. Absent from means went away. Allah has made him absent means he made him go away. [Lisan Al-‘Arab (The language of Arabs)]

(2) An atom’s weight: The way the Quran uses the word ‘atom’ synonymous with ‘weight’ is indeed one of its miracles. This is accurately used in the chemical expression ‘atomic mass’.

Another example is the sensory loci in the body. First they said that the brain was the sensory locus. Then others said that it was the spinal cord, proven by the fact that human beings can feel things even without touching their bodies, such as when you put your finger in front of someone’s eye and an automatic reflex causes him to close his eye.

Then, when they reflected on the needle or injection that is given to someone who is ill, they noticed that he felt no pain except in the moment that the needle penetrated the skin, and so they said that the skin was the sensory locus of the body. This is proven in the Quran when Allah says: ‘Every time their skins are roasted through We will replace them with other skins so they may taste the punishment.’ (an-Nisa’: 56)

Allah says: ‘…what you used to earn.’ (az-Zumar: 24) The root kasaba (gained), as we have said before, appears in the Noble Quran in two distinct forms: kasaba (gained) and iktasaba (earned), and Allah makes it clear to what each of them refers to when He says: ‘It will have [the consequence of] what [good] it has gained, and it will bear [the consequence of] what [evil] it has earned.’ (al-Baqara: 286) So, (kasaba) is used for good and (iktasaba) is used for evil, and this is because (kasaba) has the form fa‘ala (did) and good is something that a person does naturally, without affection or artifice. As for (iktasaba), it has the form ifta‘ala (made) which suggests the presence of falseness and artifice, and artifice is only present in evil. For when you do good, you have no need to use artifice or fabrication, but rather, unlike evil, it comes to you naturally. This matter is clearly shown by the fact that when a man sits with his wife and daughters, he looks upon their beauty naturally, without caution or fear of the consequences. However, if that same man were to look at a beautiful woman in the street, he would do so stealthily and surreptitiously. This is what we mean by artifice.

The Noble Quran itself goes against this rule in a number of places, including this verse we are currently discussing: ‘And it will be said to the wrongdoers, “Taste what you used to earn.”’ (az-Zumar: 24) It does not say taktasibun (to earn) as might be expected. Instead, it uses (kasaba) for evil. And it does the same in another place when Allah says: ‘Yes, whoever earns evil and his sin has encompassed him - those are the companions of the Fire; they will abide therein eternally.’ (al-Baqara: 81)

Why does the Quran turn aside from using iktasaba and use kasaba instead? Because, they say, a person can become accustomed to doing acts of disobedience and going against the commands of Allah that it becomes second nature for him and so natural almost as if he were doing an act of obedience. We call such people unscrupulous and totally lacking in morals because of the fact that they have become so accustomed to committing wrong actions and taking such delight in it. The Quran uses the word (kasaba) that is normally used for good, and moves (iktasaba) to the place that is normally reserved for (kasaba). This is why the Quran differentiates between those who premeditate wrong actions and do them intentionally and those who fall into wrong actions without prior planning or preparation in the following verses: ‘The repentance accepted by Allah is only for those who do wrong in ignorance [or carelessness] and then repent soon after. It is those to whom Allah will turn in forgiveness, and Allah is ever Knowing and Wise,’ (an-Nisa’: 17) ‘But repentance is not [accepted] of those who [continue to] do evil deeds up until, when death comes to one of them, he says, “Indeed, I have repented now,” or of those who die while they are disbelievers. For them We have prepared a painful punishment.’ (an-Nisa’: 18) The meaning of: ‘…in ignorance…’ (an-Nisa’: 17) is without intention, preparation or forethought. And if they do a wrong action, they do not delight in it, but instead experience pain and regret. As for the other type of people, they do wrong actions intentionally and are not bothered in the slightest. In fact, they might even take delight in them and boast about them.

فَأَذَاقَهُمُ ٱللَّهُ ٱلْخِزْىَ فِى ٱلْحَيَوٰةِ ٱلدُّنْيَا ۖ وَلَعَذَابُ ٱلْـَٔاخِرَةِ أَكْبَرُ ۚ لَوْ كَانُوا۟ يَعْلَمُونَ ٢٦

Others before them also disbelieved, and the punishment fell on them unawares [25] God gave them the punishment of disgrace in this world to taste; the punishment will be even harder in the Hereafter, if only they knew [26] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 25-26)

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Those before them denied…’ (az-Zumar: 25), i.e. from previous peoples: ‘… and punishment came upon them,’ (az-Zumar: 25) i.e. their suffering and punishment in this world by them being defeated and the religion they had fought against and opposed being victorious. And that is also what happened to the non-believers when Allah gave victory to Islam and made its principles and rulings win out over those of disbelief. And that is, in itself, a type of punishment in this world. So, when they return to Allah in the Hereafter, there is another punishment awaiting them, one that is more painful and severe. They closely resemble those who came before them from among the rejecters, and this is why Allah Glorified is He says elsewhere: ‘[Theirs is] like the custom of the people of Pharaoh…’ (Al-‘Imran: 11).

And so in the following verses: ‘Those before them denied…’ (az-Zumar: 25) and: ‘[Theirs is] like the custom of the people of Pharaoh…’ (Al-‘Imran: 11), the Quran highlights for us something important, i.e. preservation and memorisation of the Quran should not be in the hands of the scholars, especially those whose speciality is language and rhetoric. And the reason why is that when a scholar is stopped by a word or phrase, it is possible that he might make use of his linguistic knowledge and complete his recitation. As such, when he recites: ‘O you who have believed, if there comes to you a disobedient one with information, investigate…’ (al-Hujurat: 6), he might say tathabbatu (get proof) or tahaqqaqu (to verify) instead of tabayyanu (investigate). It is possible that the meaning might be correct, but Allah intends to use a specific word to give a specific meaning, and it is not permissible for us to substitute it for another. Whereas, those who specialise in the memorisation of the Quran without having that level of linguistic ability, when they stop in their recitation or forget what comes next, they stop completely. In other words, they are not able to go on by substituting something similar in meaning. That is exactly what is required of memorisers of the Quran, and that is an example of its grandeur.

And that is why we have said that the perfection of the Quran does not extend beyond it. How so? If we were to ask a person to improve his linguistic style and strengthen his creativity, we would advise him to read the great works of literature, such as those of Al-Minfaluti, Ar-Rafi‘i and others. Then after he has read a great deal of those works, we begin to notice an improvement in his style and composition.

But if you were to ask someone who had memorised the Quran well to write an essay, you would find that he would not be able to write it eloquently. Why is that? This is because the perfection of the Quran does not extend beyond it, but rather it is only the eloquence of people that can extend to other people.

Consider also the meaning in: ‘and punishment came upon them from where they did not perceive,’ (az-Zumar: 25) i.e. it comes from where they do not expect. In other words, they are seized by a punishment that they did not expect and that did not cross their mind, like when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…but finds Allah before Him, and He will pay him in full his due; and Allah is swift in account,’ (an-Nur: 39) i.e. they were taken by surprise by it, for they had reckoned something else. And that is because they rejected the resurrection and the reckoning in this world, and so they are now surprised to find the Reckoning that they rejected happening to them.

Then Allah says: ‘So Allah made them taste disgrace in worldly life.’ (az-Zumar: 26) Here, He takes the word ‘taste’ away from its original physical sense and uses it in a metaphorical sense. Ignominy and humiliation are forms of punishment, and the pain they cause is worse than physical pain. There are people who are not pained by being hit but are pained by harsh words that detract from their honour and good name.

But why does Allah make them taste ignominy in this world before the punishment of the Hereafter? He makes them taste ignominy because they acted haughtily and arrogantly against the truth, came with all their strength and might to the Battle of Badr to fight Islam, and thought that they were courageous heroes and that it was their fight. Thus, the meaning is that the heads of Quraysh and the leaders of disbelief, like ‘Utba, Shayba, Al-Walid and others, came well prepared and in large numbers, while the Muslims only went out to raid the caravan. Despite that, Allah strengthened His army and humiliated His enemy, so that those of them who were killed were killed and those of them who were captured were captured and humiliated. For these people, humiliation was a worse fate than death.

So, they had humiliation in this world while in the Hereafter, they will have another punishment there: ‘But the punishment of the Hereafter is greater, if they only knew.’ (az-Zumar: 26) Yes, the punishment of the Hereafter is greater and more severe than the ignominy of this world. ‘… if they only knew’ (az-Zumar: 26) because those who did know that reality, stopped what they were doing and became believers, while the others obstinately opposed it, denied it and rejected it.

وَلَقَدۡ ضَرَبۡنَا لِلنَّاسِ فِى هَٰذَا ٱلۡقُرۡءَانِ مِن كُلِّ مَثَلٖ لَّعَلَّهُمۡ يَتَذَكَّرُونَ ﴿٢٧﴾
قُرۡءَانًا عَرَبِيًّا غَيۡرَ ذِى عِوَجٖ لَّعَلَّهُمۡ يَتَّقُونَ ﴿٢٨﴾

In this Quran, We have put forward all kinds of illustration for people, so that they may take heed [27] an Arabic Quran, free from any distortion – so that people may be mindful [28]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 27-28)

When we analyse the way the root madhala (humiliation) is used in the Noble Quran, we find that sometimes it comes in the form of mithl (like), which is used to draw a comparison between one thing and another, such as when you say, ‘In terms of his courage, Zayd is like a lion’, or ‘In terms of generosity, the man is like rain.’ An example of that is found in the following verse: ‘… then produce a surah the like thereof.’ (al-Baqara: 23)

As for mathal (the example of), it is used to compare an image made up of a number of separate elements with another image made up of a number of elements. In other words, it compares one state with another. An example of this sort of comparison in the Noble Quran is the example that Allah draws of this world when He Glorified Is He says: ‘And present to them the example of the life of this world, [its being] like rain which We send down from the sky, and the vegetation of the earth mingles with it and [then] it becomes dry remnants, scattered by the winds. And Allah is ever, over all things, Perfect in Ability.’ (al-Kahf: 45)

The life of this world does not resemble water alone, but rather resembles the process by which water falls from the sky, mixes with the soil, from which grows plants, which all too quickly wither, turn yellow, dry out and disintegrate so that they turn into dry stubble which is blown here and there by the wind. That is the life of every person in this world; his life blossoms and thrives but then ultimately ends up in death. This image is one that compares a number of elements with a number of other elements. As long as this world is like this, you must beware of it, not rely on it and not be deceived by it.

Other similes involving the comparison of one image made up of a number of elements with another include what Allah says about who were given the Torah to bear, but did not themselves benefit from it: ‘The example of those who were entrusted with the Torah and then did not take it on is like that of a donkey who carries volumes [of books].’ (al-Jumu‘a: 5) These people are not like donkeys alone, but rather like donkeys that carry books on their back without understanding their contents. It is not the task of donkeys to understand, however, their task is to carry. As for these people, they are asked to both carry and understand what they carry - that is how they distinguish themselves from donkeys.

Another example of this type of simile is found in: ‘Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah; and those with him are forceful against the disbelievers, merciful among themselves. You see them bowing and prostrating [in prayer], seeking bounty from Allah, and [His] pleasure. Their mark is on their faces from the trace of prostration. That is their description in the Torah. And their description in the Gospel is as a plant which produces its offshoots and strengthens them so they grow firm and stand upon their stalks, delighting the sowers - so that Allah may enrage by them the disbelievers. Allah has promised those who believe and do righteous deeds among them forgiveness and a great reward.’ (al-Fath: 29)

Reflect upon this simile and you will find that Allah compares Muhammad and his Companions to something spiritual and metaphysical in the Torah because the Jewish mindset is dominated by materialism, and He compares them to something material in the Gospel because the Gospel only talks of spiritual matters. So, because the Jews have gone to excess in materialism, He provides them with a metaphysical metaphor, and because the Christians have gone to excess in spiritual matters, He provides them with a material metaphor. Because of this, it was essential that Islam strike a balance between materialism and spiritualism.

Similarly, Allah says: ‘And We have certainly presented…’ (az-Zumar: 27). The word darb (to hit), as we have said, is bringing something down upon something else with strength and force so that it leaves a mark. An example of this is incurring darb upon the earth, meaning, ploughing it and taking care of it in such a way that it gives forth what is good in it. As for setting an example (darb) of a parable, we use the word because on the surface it is something strange, so we say, ‘Do not be astonished by this for it is like such-and-such.’ So the statement becomes clear and surprise is removed. A simile compares something that is disagreed upon with something that is agreed upon, as in the previously mentioned simile: ‘Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah; and those with him.’ (al-Fath: 29)

The root mathala (example) appears 41 times in the Quran in the form mathal (the example of), 22 times in the form mathalan (for example) and 3 times in the form mathaluhum (their example is of).

A very fine example of an extended metaphor is the description a poet gives of a hunchbacked man, creating a mental image of him for you as if you could see him with your own eyes:

Short of neck with skull sunken as if he were expecting to be slapped.

And it was as if he had been already slapped on the nape once, and was expecting a second slap so he scrunched his neck down.(1)

Allah’s words: ‘…from every [kind of] example… (az-Zumar: 27) indicate that the meaning is general. In other words, ‘We have drawn these parables for them to make the principles of Islam clear to them by means of the material things they see about them: ‘…that they might remember.’ (az-Zumar: 27) In other words, so that they might reflect upon these parables and place each parable opposite those like it so that they might find in what they see in the Seen world a proof for the Unseen, and in what is agreed upon a proof upon which is disagreed

Then Allah says: ‘[It is] an Arabic Quran…’ (az-Zumar: 28). That is, these parables came in the form of a clear explanatory Arabic Quran with no distortion in it. It is a book that is read, written, and recited repeatedly in acts of worship. And it is preserved so that its words can never be perverted or altered. The One Who preserves it is the One Who spoke its words. In this way, these parables will remain so long as the Quran remains, and since it will last forever, they will last forever. They will remain there before you so that you will always be able to benefit from them, and every time you find yourself confronted by a problem in your lives, you will find its solution there.

(1) These two verses are mentioned by ‘Abd Ar-Rahim Al-‘Abbasi in ‘Ma‘ahid At-tansis’ and by Shihabu-Din in ‘Rayhanat Al-Alba’ as being from a poem written by ‘Abdullah Ibn An-Nattah. Al-‘Imad Al-Asfahani named him in ‘Kharida Al-qasr’ (Abu Muhammad ‘Abdullah Ibn At-Tabbakh Al-Katib), and in it, it says, 'It was as if he had tasted the first slap'.

As for His words: '…without any deviance...' (az-Zumar: 28), they mean that this Book is not biased, does not prefer something to another, but rather follows the Straight Path. This is because the true legislation comes from Allah Who does not side with anyone or favour anyone, not even His Messengers. As proof of that, read the verse with which Allah addresses His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the best of His Messengers: 'Then [if you had], We would have made you taste double [punishment in] life and double [after] death. Then you would not find for yourself against Us a helper.' (al-Isra': 75) And in the chapter of al-Kahf (The Cave), Allah describes the Quran, saying: '[All] praise is [due] to Allah, who has sent down upon His Servant the Book and has not made therein any deviance. [He has made it] straight…' (al-Kahf: 1-2).

The phrase '… that they might become righteous' (az-Zumar: 28) means so that they might guard themselves against Allah's Attributes of Majesty and the various types of punishment that might come about as a result.

هَلْ يَسْتَوِيَانِ مَثَلًا ۚ ٱلْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ ۚ بَلْ أَكْثَرُهُمْ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٢٩﴾

God puts forward this illustration: can a man who has for his masters several partners at odds with each other be considered equal to a man devoted wholly to one master? All praise belongs to God, though most of them do not know[29]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 29)

This is a metaphor that Allah sets forth in order to bring clarity to the matter of His Oneness, i.e. monotheism. Through it, Allah Glorified is He aims to clarify the difference between the slave who has a single master and the slave who has many masters. The image in this metaphor is composed of a number of elements. The man is owned by several partners, who are in disagreement with one another, with each one commanding him to do something different. So, if he satisfies one, he enrages another, and if he obeys one, he disobeys another. How can he divide himself up? And how can he rest when he is always in a state of confusion regarding what he should do?

As for the other, he is slave to one master and he receives his commands from one source. He is inextricably linked to his master and he serves him alone.

'...Are they equal in comparison?' (az-Zumar: 29) Allah asks the question and leaves it up to you to answer. When He says: '...are they equal in comparison?' (az-Zumar: 29) we have no alternative but to reply that they are not and can never be equal; we have no option but to affirm this reality. So Allah's intention in posing this question is that we ourselves affirm it, instead of Him telling us directly. What we have said here is what any sane person would say and what no sane person could deny.

The slave who is owned by a single master is like someone who believes in Allah and devotes his worship to Him alone, while the slave who is shared by many partners, who are at variance with one another, is like the slave who associates others with Allah when he worships Him, so take heed.

When Allah says: 'Praise be to Allah!' (az-Zumar: 29) He means praise is due to Him for setting forth parables for us and making things clear for us by allowing us to grasp metaphysical matters through seeing material things. So the one who worships Allah alone without a partner lives with an untroubled mind, a peaceful soul and a tranquil heart, unlike the one who worships numerous gods. This is because he has a troubled mind and an unsettled soul, since if he were to obey one master, he would anger another. He does not have the necessary strength to help him satisfy everyone. He is most like the servant who says, 'Woe, should I cut myself?'

Praise be to Allah who sends down the Quran in Arabic with no distortion in it! Praise be to Allah who clarifies parables that make matters, which normally baffle the mind, accessible by comparing them with matters that are easy to understand!

‘But most of them do not know,’ (az-Zumar: 29) i.e. they do not know this thing. They do not know that believing in the One True Lord and worshipping Him alone with sincerity is the path to true happiness and tranquillity, or that worshipping various gods is the path to misery and weariness. They do not know this reality because they did not put proper research into the matter of believing in Lordship, but instead took it without reflecting on it at all. The most important thing for them is for the god they worship to not have any commands or prohibitions, for the god they worship to not have a doctrine and to not have any demands. What kind of a god is it that satisfies your ego, whims and desires?!

Allah’s words: ‘But most of them do not know’ (az-Zumar: 29) set the hearts of the people of true belief and Oneness of Allah at rest. Despite the fact that they were few in number, they were still there, and the world will never be without good, no matter how little of it remains, as indicated by Allah: ‘A [large] company of the former peoples’, ‘And a few of the later peoples …’ (al-Waqi‘a: 13-14).

He says about the people of the right(1) in another verse: ‘A company of the former peoples’, ‘And a company of the later peoples’ (al-Waqi‘a: 39-40), so there will always be good in this community.

إِنَّكَ مَيِّتٌ وَإِنَّهُم مَّيِّتُونَ ﴿٣٠﴾ ثُمَّ إِنَّكُمۡ يَوۡمَ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ عِندَ رَبِّكُمۡ تَخۡتَصِمُونَ ﴿٣١﴾

You [Prophet] will certainly die, and so will they [30] and, on the Day of Resurrection, you will dispute with one another in the presence of your Lord [31] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 30 - 31)

Whenever something bad happened to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or he was afflicted by illness or hardship, like what happened to him at the Battle of Uhud, the non-believers of Mecca would rejoice. So how do you think it would have been if the Messenger of Allah had died? That is why the Quran affirms this reality for the Messenger of Allah: ‘Indeed, you are to die, and indeed, they are to die.’ (az-Zumar: 30) So what are they rejoicing about when that will be everyone's fate? As Allah indicates in another place in the Quran: 'And We did not grant to any man before you eternity [on earth]; so if you die - would they be eternal?' (al-Anbiya': 34)

But the affair does not end there, for after death there is another life, during which there is reckoning, recompense, and standing in front of Allah. During that time, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him will enjoy the highest station. But as for you, you will occupy the station of those who are opposed to Allah, so what are you going to say when you are there? This is the meaning of Allah's words: 'Then indeed you, on the Day of Resurrection, before your Lord, will dispute.' (az-Zumar: 31)

In: 'Indeed, you are to die,' (az-Zumar: 30) the word mayyit (dead) appears here with the shadda(1) on the ya' and means, moving towards death and ending up dead. There is a difference between mayyit with a shadda on the ya' and mayt with a sukun (2) on the ya'. Mayyit means (is going to die) or (is going to end up dead), and can be used to describe someone even when they are still alive. This is proven by the fact that Allah addresses His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with the word when he was still living. As for mayt, it describes one who is already dead.

An example of this is found in the words of the poet:

All of God's creatures will sooner or later die,

Whereas the dead is simply the one who is carried to the grave.

Allah's words: 'Indeed, you are to die, and indeed, they are to die' (az-Zumar: 30) reassure and comfort the Messenger of Allah Muhammad just like when He addresses him with: ‘And whether We show you some of what We have promised them or We take you in death, it is to Us they will be returned.’ (Ghafir: 77)

---

(1) Shadda: The Arabic script has numerous diacritics, including i'jam (i'jam, consonant pointing), and tashkil (tashkil, supplementary diacritics). The latter include the harakat (vowel marks; singular: harakah). The Arabic script is an impure abjad, where short consonants and long vowels are represented by letters, but short vowels and consonant length are not generally indicated in writing. Tashkil is optional to represent missing vowels and consonant length. The shadda or shaddah, or (tashdid), is a diacritic shaped like a small written Latin "w."
It is used to indicate gemination (consonant doubling or extra length), which is phonemic in Arabic. It is written above the consonant which is to be doubled.

(2) The sukun is a circle-shaped diacritic placed above a letter. It indicates that the consonant to which it is attached is not followed by a vowel. It is a necessary symbol for writing consonant-vowel-consonant syllables, which are very common in Arabic.

As for here, He says: ‘Then indeed you, on the Day of Resurrection, before your Lord, will dispute,’ (az-Zumar: 31) which means either you will see Allah wreak His vengeance upon them in this world, or it will happen in the Hereafter. So, it is in your best interests to move to the highest level so we can compress the distances and you can see with your own eyes the places in which the obstinate disbelievers will meet their ends. You will not be weakened or humiliated because you are going to end up with Allah, from whom you will receive your recompense and they too will receive theirs.

When Allah Glorified is He talks about death in the chapter of al-Mulk (The Sovereignty), He says: ‘Blessed is He in whose hand is dominion, and He is over all things competent - [He] who created death and life…’ (al-Mulk: 1-2) Reflect on the words: ‘...created death and life...’ (al-Mulk: 2) and how He places death first despite the fact that it comes after life. He does that because life will cause you to become self-deluded when you see your limbs and organs responding to your commands as well as the means of your subsistence. Also, because of the fact that this world gives you on demand, you inevitably fall prey to delusion. Allah Glorified is He however, wants us to not meet this world with delusion, but rather with an awareness of the reality that is the very opposite of life, namely death.

The rational person is the one who understands that he is heading towards death, and spends his life’s journey remembering that this will be his ultimate fate.

Then He says: ‘Then indeed you, on the Day of Resurrection, before your Lord, will dispute.’ (az-Zumar: 31) The first dispute that will arise between the Prophets and those who rejected them will be as to whether they conveyed their message. The Prophets will bear witness that they conveyed The Message of Allah to their people, whereupon they will make their excuses, saying, ‘We thought it was magic!’, ‘We thought it was lies!’, ‘We thought it was fantasy!’ But they did not realise that Allah had emphasised that with His words: ‘And thus we have made you a just community that you will be witnesses over the people and the Messenger will be a witness over you.’ (al-Baqara: 143)

So, Allah the Exlated favoured the people of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by allowing them to also carry the Message of their messenger, something that had never happened with any of the messages of the previous messengers. And that is why He the Exlated says: '…you are indeed the best community that has ever been brought forth for [the good of] mankind...' (Al-'Imran: 110). The proof that this community carries this Message is that no messenger came after the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. It is as if Allah the Exlated trusted the nation of Muhammad to carry His Message. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him bears witness that He the Exlated conveyed it to his nation, and they must bear witness that they conveyed to the rest of the people.

This is one of the meanings of the middle way about which Allah the Exlated says: 'And thus have We willed you to be a community of the middle way,' (al-Baqara: 143) even if they sometimes extend to other things, and that is because they take the middle way in everything. We have seen those among other peoples who denied Allah the Exlated completely and others who believed in numerous gods, both of which are extreme beliefs. So Islam came and called on people to worship a single God the Exlated and not to ascribe any partners to Him, thereby choosing the middle way and resolving that dispute.

That is why our Lord addresses us with the words: 'And thus have We willed you to be a community of the middle way…' (al-Baqara: 143), i.e. you choose the path of balance and moderation. So, if you hear one person calling for communism and another calling for capitalism, or see someone else holding fanatically to his madhhab (doctrine), say to them, 'We are a middlemost community, and have left capitalism to profit from its endeavour and aspiration, for not everyone has that endeavour. And when capitalism profits from its endeavour, it inevitably comes to serve society. See how many workers are working and how many homes are being built.

'And just like communism, we assign the part of their wealth that they do not spend to those who are unable to work. So we have taken the best part of one and the best part of the other, as is proven by the fact that the wickedness of the two systems that have had control over the world during recent times has begun to lessen. For the capitalists have started to take the edge off of capitalism, and have started to take the workers into consideration and give them rights, benefits, trade unions and so on. And similarly the communists say, "There must be a class of people in society who are able to balance things up in society by means of their endeavours, and give the works the opportunities to work in them." But in the end, communism came to an end. Praise be to Allah the Exlated that it did.' So, the Muslim community is a community in the middle that takes the best of both systems.

We say that in the Hereafter, the first dispute will be the Prophets and those who rejected them, but there will also be a dispute between the heads of the unbelievers and those who followed them, having been misguided and led astray by them, between those people who left their mark on the foolish and caused them to follow them in unbelief.

The Quran paints us a picture of the dispute they have in that place when it says: '[On that Day] it will come to pass that those who had been [falsely] adored shall disown their followers, and the latter shall see the suffering [that awaits them], with all their hopes cut to pieces! [166] And then those followers shall say: "Would that we had a second chance [in life], so that we could disown them as they have disowned us!"' Thus will Allah show them their works [in a manner that will cause them] bitter regrets; but they will not come out of the fire. [167]' (al-Baqara: 166-167) And that is why the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'On that Day, [erstwhile] friends will be foes unto one another – [all] save the Allah-conscious.' (az-Zukhruf: 67)

So, it is inevitable that they will differ with one another on that day, curse each other and claim that they were simply following the others. That is why Allah the Exlated says: '…and halt them [there]! [And then,] behold, they shall be asked, "How is it that [now] you cannot succour one another?" Nay, but on that Day they would willingly surrender [to Allah]; but [since it will be too late,] they will turn upon one another, demanding of each other [to relieve them of the burden of their past sins]. Some [of them] will say: "Behold; you were wont to approach us [deceptively] from the right!" [To which] the others will reply: "Nay, you yourselves were bereft of all faith!"' (as-Saffat: 24-29)

In this way, the followers and those who are followed argue with one another and split apart, no longer aiding one another in the way they aided one another to unbelief in this world.

The Quran also paints another picture of the unbelievers describing how their leaders are taken to the fire first, and how their followers come and find that their leaders have preceded them: Allah the Exlated says: ‘All this [for the righteous]: but, verily, the most evil of all goals awaits those who are wont to transgress the bounds of what is right: hell will they have to endure – and how vile a resting-place! This, [then, for them –] so let them taste it: burning despair and ice-cold darkness and, coupled with it, further [suffering] of a similar nature. [And they will say to one another: Do you see] this crowd of people who rushed headlong [into sin] with you? No welcome to them! Verily, they [too] shall have to endure the fire! [And] they [who had been seduced] will exclaim: “Nay, but it is you! No welcome to you! It is you who have prepared this for us: and how vile a state to abide in!”’ (Sad: 55-60)

The fact that the leaders precede their followers to the fire indicates that their wrong action is worse than that of their followers, since they were themselves misguided but also led others astray. But it also dashes the hopes of the followers that they will be saved or freed from the fire, for they see those that they thought would save them, their leaders and bosses, having preceded them to it.

On the other hand, Allah the Exlated lays out the conversation that takes place between the believers while they reside in paradise: ‘One of them speaks thus: “Behold, I had [on earth] a close companion.”’ (as-Saffat: 51) That is, I had a companion who was an unbeliever: ‘…who was wont to ask [me], “Why – are you really one of those who believe it to be true [that] after we have died and become mere dust and bones we shall, forsooth, be brought to judgment?” [And] he adds: “Would you like to look [and see him]?” and then he looks and sees that [companion of his] in the midst of the blazing fire,’ (as-Saffat: 52-55) i.e. he looks over the wall and lo, there is his companion in the midst of the blazing fire, i.e. in the middle of it, so he says: ‘… “By Allah! Verily, you have almost destroyed me [too, O my erstwhile companion],”’ (as-Saffat: 56] i.e. destroyed me with you: ‘…for had it not been for my Lord's favour, I would surely be [now] among those who are given over to suffering!' (as-Saffat: 57)

The conversation might also occur without any element of dispute, as in Allah's words: 'On the Day when their faces shall be tossed about in the fire, they will exclaim, "Oh, would that we had paid heed unto Allah, and paid heed unto the Apostle!" And they will say: "O our Lord! Behold, we paid heed unto our leaders and our great men, and it is they who have led us astray from the right path! O our Lord! Give them double suffering, and banish them utterly from your grace!"' (al-Ahzab: 66-68) Allah then says:

فِى جَهَنَّمَ مَثْوًى لِّلْكَٰفِرِينَ ﴿٣٢﴾ وَٱلَّذِى جَآءَ بِٱلصِّدْقِ وَصَدَّقَ بِهِۦٓ ۙ
أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلْمُتَّقُونَ ﴿٣٣﴾

So who could be more wrong than the person who invents a lie about God and rejects the truth when it comes to him? Is there not ample punishment for the disbelievers in Hell? [32] It is the one who brings the truth and the one who accepts it as true who are mindful of God [33] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 32-33)

The question that is asked in: 'And who could be more wicked...' (az-Zumar: 32) is a question whose purpose is to indicate astonishment and disapproval. Its meaning is, 'There is no one who is wicked more than this person who invents lies about Allah!' If he were to have invented lies about someone other than Allah the Exlated that would have been reprehensible, so how much worse must it be to invent lies about Allah the Exlated, who knows everything that happens in the heavens and on the earth and knows the true reality of things, both what they keep secret and what they reveal openly? So, lying against Allah the Exlated is doomed to failure. If you must lie, then lie against another human being like yourself, for he is also predisposed to lying.

(1) Were it not for Allah's favour to me, I would have been like you in the midst of the fire, undergoing the punishment with you. But He, exalted is He, favoured me and granted me mercy, and so guided me to believing in Him and affirming His Oneness. (Tafsir of Ibn-Kathir: Surat as-Saffat)

And that is why the phrase: '...more wicked...' (az-Zumar: 32) appears in the superlative form (af'al), for the worst and most serious type of wrong-doing is to tell lies against Allah the Exlated. But who has he wronged? Has he wronged the one he has lied against or has he wronged himself? The answer is that it is himself that he has wronged.

But that was not the end of the matter as far as that person is concerned, for him also: '...gives the lie to the truth as soon as it has been placed before him...' (az-Zumar: 32) for declaring what is true to be a lie flips matters on their head. A true statement is one that cannot be met with the response, 'You have lied', for it is simply giving the news of actual events that are confirmed by what really happens. We said previously that if what is referenced in speech corresponds to reality, then that speech is truthful, but if it differs from reality, then it is a lie.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He asks a question that He the Exlated knows the answer to: '...Is hell not the [proper] abode for all who deny the truth?' (az-Zumar: 32) meaning 'What do those who tell lies against Allah the Exlated and declare what is true to be a lie think is going to happen? Do they not know this reality–that hell is the abode for all unbelievers who deny the truth?' If they had taken this reality into account, they would not have dared to lie against Allah the Exlated. But instead they are liars who say what conflicts with reality and do not believe in Him.

After that He the Exlated moves on to a description of the quality of the truthful one, saying: 'But he who brings the truth…' (az-Zumar: 33). That truthful one is Muhammad who received the message from his Lord and conveyed it to his people. The True Lord Glorified is He has emphasised the truthfulness of His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him in many places, including the time when He the Exlated says: 'Now if he [whom We have entrusted with it] had dared to attribute some [of his own] sayings unto Us, We would indeed have seized him by his right hand, and would indeed have cut his life-vein, and none of you could have saved him!' (al-Haqqa: 44-47)

So, the matter of lying against Allah the Exlated is one that Allah the Exlated does not approve of in anyone, not even His Messengers. And that is why what the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him transmitted from Allah the Exlated was so precise. He did not convey the sense of what Allah the Exlated said but rather conveyed what He the Exlated said word for word. Read Allah's words: 'Say: "He is The One Allah"' (al-Ikhlas: 1): It was well within his capacity to say to his people, 'He is One Allah', and if he had done that he would have conveyed the sense of the verse, but instead he conveyed it exactly as it had come down to him from his Lord: 'Say: "He is The One Allah"' (al-Ikhlas: 1) mentioning the command: 'Say'.

It is astonishing that there has appeared amongst us those who say that this word, 'Say', should be omitted, taking as their proof the fact that [they say] it adds nothing new to the meaning. We say in response, 'This is not the speech of a human being, but rather is the speech of Allah the Exlated and His Quran. And Allah the Exlated has Himself preserved it. And His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him conveyed it to us in exactly the way he peace and blessings be upon him received it from his Lord.'

Suppose you were to send your son to convey a message from you to someone else, saying to him, 'Go to so-and-so and say such-and-such to him.' It is possible for your son to convey the sense of that message, but when he says, 'My father said to me, "Go to so-and-so and say such-and-such to him', that means that he is emphasising the message and taking care to pass on the message exactly as he received it. So, if the word 'Say' were to be omitted, a word of the Quran would have been omitted, not some word that was additional to it.

As for the words: '...and he who wholeheartedly accepts it as true...' (az-Zumar: 33), they mean, 'he affirms the truth that he brought'. In other words, he affirmed it first and did not wait for any of us to affirm it or bear witness to its being true. The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him took it from his Lord that He the Exlated was one God, without a partner, and bore witness to that and affirmed that first.

In the same way, the True Lord Glorified is He does not wait for His slaves to bear witness to His Oneness, but rather first bears witness to that Himself when He the Exlated says: 'Allah [Himself] proffers evidence – and [so do] the angels and all who are endowed with knowledge – that there is no deity save Him...' (Al-'Imran: 18). After Allah the Exlated bore witness Himself to His Oneness, it also became necessary for the Messenger to bear witness that Muhammad is the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. So he brought the true Word and himself affirmed it. And he said about himself, ‘I bear witness that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah.’ Similarly, the angels bore witness to this Oneness. And those who are endowed with knowledge bore witness to it with their testimony based on the proofs and evidences in front of them.

Some say (1) that: ‘But he who brings the truth…’ (az-Zumar: 33) is the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him while: ‘...and he who wholeheartedly accepts it as true...’ (az-Zumar: 33) refers to those who affirmed as true the first message the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him conveyed from his Lord, regardless of whether it was Abu-Bakr may Allah be pleased with him or Khadija may Allah be pleased with her. For there is a difference of opinion as to whether the first person to believe was Abu-Bakr may Allah be pleased with him or Khadija may Allah be pleased with her. But it is not necessary for there to be a dispute about this, for if someone were to ask you who the first man to become Muslim was, you would say Abu-Bakr may Allah be pleased with him and if someone were to ask you who the first woman to become Muslim was, you would say Khadija may Allah be pleased with her.

The reality is that Khadija may Allah be pleased with her believed in the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and affirmed the truth of what he brought right in the beginning of the affair, and perhaps even before Abu-Bakr may Allah be pleased with him had been told about it. You know the stance she took towards the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when the revelation came to him, and that she took him to see her cousin,

(1) The people of tafsir differ with one another with regard to who the one who brings the truth and who the one who wholeheartedly accepts it as true is. There are a number of different opinions: (1) The one who brings the truth is the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the one who accepts it as true is Abu-Bakr, may Allah be pleased with him. This is what ‘Ali ibn Abu Talib, may Allah honour him, said; (2) The one who brings the truth is the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the one who accepts it as true is ‘Ali. This is what Mujahid said; (3) The one who brings the truth is Gabriel peace be upon him and the one who accepts it as true is Muhammad peace be upon him. This is what As-Suddi said; and (4) The one who brings the truth is the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and the one who accepts it as true are the believers. This is what Ibn Zayd, Muqatil and Qatada said. You can see all of these opinions in the Tafsir of Al-Qurtubi (8/5901).

Waraqa ibn-Nawfal(1), who said, 'He is the Prophet of this community.' And, in order to emphasise this for her, he said, 'And if your day comes when I am still alive, I will give you my most vigorous support. If only I might live to see the day your people cast you out!' Muhammad peace be upon him asked, 'Are they going to cast me out then?' He replied, 'No one has ever brought the like of what you have brought without being subjected to harm and abuse. You will be cast out!'(2)

As for Abu Bakr As-Siddiq may Allah be pleased with him when they told him, 'Your companion claims that he is a Messenger', he replied, 'If he has said that then he is telling the truth.'(3) How could Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him affirm the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he had never seen any miracle from him proving his Message?

They reply, 'Miracles are not something that people cannot believe without. Rather, they are only there for those who stubbornly refuse to affirm and believe. And that is why the miracle of the Quran came as a challenge to the unbelievers and obstinate rejecters. As for those who believed in the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from the beginning, they had no need of a miracle, for what miracle could have caused Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him to affirm the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so quickly?

(1) He is Waraqa ibn-Nawfal ibn-Asad from the tribe of Quraysh, a pre-Islamic wise man. He kept away from idols before Islam, refusing to eat what was sacrificed to them, and became Christian. He used to write the Arabic language in Hebrew script. He was the cousin of the mother of the believers, Khadija may Allah be pleased with her. He died in the year 12 BH.

(2) Al-Bayhaqi narrated it in Dala'il An-Nubuwwa (2/139 & 140) in a (Hadith) from Muhammad ibn an-Nu'man ibn Al-Bashir, and Ibn-Hisham narrated it in as-Sira an-Nabawiyya (1/256), and in his version Waraqa says, 'By the One who holds my soul in His hand, you are the Prophet of this community. The great Namus that came to Moses peace be upon him has come to you. You will most certainly be rejected, abused, cast out and fought against. If I am still living on that day, I will support Allah the Exalted with a support He knows.'

(3) Al-Qurtubi mentioned this in his Tafsir (5/4012) and they go on to say, 'Do you believe him before you even hear it from him?' He replied, 'Where are your brains? I believe what he tells me as coming from heaven, so how can I not believe what he tells about Jerusalem? Heaven is much further away.'

It was because, they said, he had never ever heard the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him tell a lie. And if he was truthful when it came to matters relating to people, then why would he tell lies against Allah the Exlated? So, Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him took his miracle from his prior history with and experience of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. And the same was true of Khadija may Allah be pleased with her as is proven by the fact that it was she who encouraged him and supported him and said, ‘By Allah, Allah will never humiliate you, for you maintain your ties of kinship, receive your guests with hospitality, take on others’ burdens and help those afflicted by calamity.’(1) So the miracle of Muhammad for those who believed in him from the beginning was their history with him and their experience of him.

You know the (Hadith)(2) of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about Khuzayma(3) may Allah be pleased with him in which he said, ‘That Khuzayma bears witness for someone is enough for him.’(4) The number of witnesses required to give testimony is well-known, so how could the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him make Khuzayma may Allah be pleased with him equal that number on his own? And what was it that made him merit such a station?

Because, they say, he obtained that level of worthiness by affirming the truthfulness of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him borrowed a sum of money from a Jew and then paid it back to him at the appointed time. But that

---

(1) It is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (3) and in six other places in the Sahih. It is also transmitted by Muslim in his Sahih (160) in a (Hadith) from 'Aisha may Allah be pleased with her.

(2) The story of the testimony of Khuzayma in favour of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

(3) He is Khuzayma Ibn Thabit Ibn Al-Fakih ibn Tha‘laba Al-Ansari, Abu-‘Amara, a Companion and one of the noblemen of Aws in the time of ignorance before Islam and in the time of Islam. He lived until the Caliphate of ‘Ali ibn Abu Taleb, may Allah honour him, and was present at the battle of Siffin, where he was killed in the year 37 AH. (Al-A‘lam of Az-Zirikli)

(4) It is narrated by Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak (2/18); and At-Tabarani in his Al-Mu‘jam Al-Kabir (4/101) in a (Hadith) from Khuzayma Ibn-Thabit. And Al-Haythami said in Al-Mujma’ (9/320), ‘All of its narrators are trustworthy.’

Jew came forward claiming that he had not received the money he had lent to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and went to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said in front of the people, ‘O Muhammad’ - or he said, ‘O Abu Al-Qasim! Give me the money I lent you back.’ the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, ‘I have already given it to you,’ so the Jew said, ‘Who will bear witness to that?’ So Khuzayma may Allah be pleased with him got up and said, ‘Messenger of Allah, I will testify that you have given him the money back.’

And so, because of the fact that the Jew’s claim was a lie, he believed Khuzayma’s testimony to be true and said to himself, ‘Perhaps he was present at the transaction and I did not see him.’ And that was because the Jew took the money he had loaned the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him back from him when no one else was present. So the Jew withdrew and left, whereupon the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him summoned Khuzayma may Allah be pleased with him and said to him, ‘Khuzayma, no one was with me when I gave him his due, so how could you bear witness that you saw me give it to him?’ Khuzayma may Allah be pleased with him laughed and said, ‘O Messenger of Allah, should I believe you when you transmit revelation from Heaven and not believe you concerning a few dirhams?’ Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was pleased with Khuzayma’s reasoning, considered it to be a fine use of judgement and so said about him, {That Khuzayma bears witness for someone is enough for him.}

The matter had nothing to do with the dirhams of the Jew, but rather had another reality altogether. For when they wanted to gather together the Quran, they took the greatest levels of care possible. So, the compilers did not write a single word into the master copy until they saw it written down somewhere and had heard two witnesses testify to it. They did that so that they could be sure of its truth, both in the hearts of men and the lines they had written down. This continued until the scribe came upon a verse that was written down but had only been testified to by a single witness, so he held back. But as soon as he saw that that witness was Khuzayma may Allah be pleased with him he remembered the statement of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘That Khuzayma bears witness for someone is enough for him,’ and so he wrote it down.

Another of the occasions marked by affirmation of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was what Abu Bakr As-Siddiq may Allah be pleased with him said when they told him about the Night Journey and Ascent of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. When they said to him, ‘Your companion claims that he went to Jerusalem and was taken up to Heaven in a single night,’ he did not research the matter or dispute what they said, but instead affirmed it as true from the very first. He said, ‘If he said that then he has spoken the truth.’ For him, the real measure of truth was simply whether it had been said by the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or not.

Then Allah the Exlated says: ‘...it is they who are [truly] conscious of Him!’ (az-Zumar: 33) That is, those who take the small things into consideration and place a barrier between themselves and Allah’s Attributes of Majesty.

أَسۡوَأَ ٱلَّذِى عَمِلُواْ وَيَجۡزِيَهُمۡ أَجۡرَهُم بِأَحۡسَنِ ٱلَّذِى كَانُواْ يَعۡمَلُونَ (٣٥)

They will have everything they wish for with their Lord.
Such is the reward of those who do good. [34] God will absolve them even of their worst deeds and will reward them according to their best [35] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 34 - 35)

Allah the Exlated says: ‘All that they have ever yearned for awaits them...’ (az-Zumar: 34) i.e. ‘Everything they want will be provided in ample amounts for them and awaits them.’ But with whom? ‘...with their Lord…’ (az-Zumar: 34) when there is no one left to be with except for Allah the Exlated. It is this ‘withness’ that is meant by Allah’s words: ‘...With whom will sovereignty rest on that Day?’ (Ghafir: 16)

This ‘withness’, this being at someone’s place can be used for people in this world. For example, we say, ‘This is an employee at this person’s company’ or ‘this is a servant at that person’s house.’ But as for the Hereafter, the only One at whose place people will be is with Allah the Exlated. And through this ‘withness’, believers obtain in the Hereafter what they desired but were never able to get in this world, for Allah the Exlated says: ‘All that they have ever yearned for awaits them with their Lord…’ (az-Zumar: 34), and does not say, ‘They will have all that they yearn for’, but rather, ‘They will have all that they yearn when they are with Me.’ In other words, they will get it directly and not through any outside mediums or secondary causes, for secondary causes only exist in this world. And those things that you want in this world through those secondary causes may or may not come about for you, even when you hold them in your hand. And that is because Allah the Exlated brings His sovereignty about through the medium of His viceregents upon the earth, making one the cause of provision for the other, with the one helping the other. But those causes might fail to materialise. As for the Hereafter, there are no secondary causes. Rather, everything is given by Allah the Exlated directly without cause.

In the life stories of many of the great Messengers, there are events that clarify for us this ‘being with Allah’. When our master Abraham peace be upon him first came to call people to Allah the Exlated he called on his uncle Azar and entered into a debate with him regarding the worship of idols. Then when he saw that he was going to persist in his obstinate rejection, he said to him: ‘…Peace be upon you!…’ (Maryam: 47)

The word (salam) here is not the (salam) of peace and security nor the (salam) of greeting, but rather is the (salam) of saying goodbye. And that is because they had totally different viewpoints, and there can be no arguing with someone who is so obstinate and stubborn. All arguing for longer would do is to create more enmity and make things even more complicated. In such situations, it is better for the person in the right to withdraw and not let the fire of disagreement flare up even more. It is like when you say to your companion in situations of this sort, ‘Uncle, peace be upon you!’, thus bringing the matter to a close. So, ‘Peace be upon you!’ here means, ‘If I were not to have left this situation with you, there would never have been peace.’ Indeed, the message of peace can be conveyed by people who are not able to ensure that that peace will be implemented.

And that is why true peace only comes from Allah the Exlated as in Allah’s words: ‘Peace and fulfilment through the word of a Lord who dispenses all grace.’ (Ya Sin: 58)

The evidence here points to the fact that Prophet Abraham peace be upon him wanted to ask forgiveness for his paternal uncle, but Allah the Exlated did not answer that request. He wanted something in this world but Allah the Exlated did not want it. Similarly, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wanted to ask forgiveness for his paternal uncle, Abu Taleb, after having called him to Islam and after him having not accepted. Instead, he remained upon the religion of his forefathers. So when the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked for forgiveness for him, Allah the Exlated revealed the following verse to him: ‘It does not behove the Prophet and those who have attained to faith to pray that they who ascribed divinity to aught beside Allah be forgiven [by Him] – even though they happened to be [their] near of kin...’ (at-Tawba: 113).

Muhammad wanted forgiveness for his paternal uncle, but Allah the Exlated did not grant him that. And that was because what he wanted was something in this world, not with Allah the Exlated but what he desired with Allah the Exlated in the Hereafter will be answered and will come to pass. That is the meaning of: ‘All that they have ever yearned for awaits them with their Lord…’ (az-Zumar: 34).

And even if believers do have desires that are not fulfilled in this world, they will be stored for him in the Hereafter, when they are with their Lord. Those desires which do not come about here are covered by one thing, and that is that the noblest thing you can desire from Allah the Exlated is that Allah the Exlated grant victory to His religion, and that desire has been fulfilled.

So, the desires that are not fulfilled are those which relate solely to yourself. As for those desires that conform to belief in Allah’s programme, they will most definitely come about, just as they came about, for example, at Badr.

The True Lord Glorified is He wants us who believe in Him and affirm His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to not yearn for things outside of Islam, since it is possible for those things that one wishes for outside of Islam to be in the hands of other people, meaning that those wishes will not be fulfilled. It is possible also that a believer will die before seeing the fulfilment of his wish that Allah’s religion be victorious. If that happens, then that wish will be stored up for him in the Hereafter.

So, the important thing is for his wish to be solely for the victory of Allah’s religion over those who deny and oppose it, for such a wish will come true, as is proven by Allah's words: '…and that, verily, Our hosts – they indeed – would [in the end] be victorious!' (as-Saffat: 173)

As for Allah's words: '...such will be the reward of the doers of good' (az-Zumar: 34), it is the case that there is action and there is bounteous grace. And the fact that we are recompensed and rewarded for our actions is part of that grace since whenever our Lord rewards me for something that itself already brought me benefit, that reward is considered a bonus, for it would have been perfectly within His rights for Him to say, 'You have already taken your reward in the form of the benefit you derived from the work you did.' For your Creator has given you all the means as well as the limbs and organs to make use of them. He the Exlated has given you land, money, air, water and food, so if He the Exlated rewards you for your work as well, that is part of His grace and bounty.

The (muhsin), 'the doer of good', is at a higher level above the believer, for the believer takes the things Allah the Exlated has made obligatory for him and puts them into practice without doing anything extra. But as for the (muhsin), he puts into practice all that Allah the Exlated has made obligatory for him as well as doing extra actions of the same type as those things that Allah the Exlated made obligatory on him.

So, for example, he prays the five prayers and, on top of them, does extra supererogatory such as the night prayer, as Allah the Exlated himself says about the (muhsinin): 'They would lie asleep during but a small part of the night, and would pray for forgiveness from their innermost hearts; and [would assign] in all that they possessed a due share unto such as might ask [for help] and such as might suffer privation.' (adh-Dhariyat: 17-19)

Allah the Exlated does not say here, 'a known due share' because the known due share is zakat. But in the case referred to here, the believer pays the zakat on his wealth and then, in addition to that, gives as much voluntary alms and charity as he wills. Those additional alms are not demanded of you by your Lord; rather, you only give them out of love for Him and in order to draw nearer to Him.

So, the word (ihsan) has the same meaning when it is related to Allah the Exlated as it does when it is related to people. You say, 'I act with (ihsan) towards so-and-so' when you give with more than is his due. And so, when Allah the Exlated rewards a (muhsin), He the Exlated gives that reward for his (ihsan). If a servant acts with (ihsan), Allah the Exlated is more generous and more worthy of doing the same.

The True Lord Glorified is He gives us a physical example of how this (ihsan) works by means of the earth and the fruits that it gives forth. You might, for example, plant a seed of wheat in it, and that seed then gives you in exchange 70 seeds. If that is what is given by the earth that is created by Allah the Exlated then what do you think will be given by its Creator? So, the reason: 'All that they have ever yearned for awaits them with their Lord…' (az-Zumar: 34) is because they were (muhsinin), and that is the reward for (ihsan). As for the Words: 'And to this end, Allah will efface from their record the worst that they ever did...' (az-Zumar: 35), they also indicate part of the reward that is specific to the station of (ihsan).

The word 'worst' is in the superlative form, so the word 'bad' is lesser than it. You can have a bad action and one that is worse than it. There is no doubt that 'bad action' refers to minor wrong actions, while 'worse' refers to major wrong actions. So, it is as if those who have arrived at the station of (ihsan) have been given the guarantee that that station of (ihsan) defrays the costs of those wrong actions and causes them to be removed. And it does not just do that to the minor wrong actions, but also to the major wrong actions since if the worst of their wrong actions are effaced, then so too will their actions which are merely bad. And all of that because you have placed yourself in a station that was not required of you - it was only love of Him that caused you to enter it.

And there is even a gift awaiting you that is even greater than that, for the matter does not end with your sins and wrong actions being effaced. Rather, they are also transformed into good actions, just as Allah the Exlated Himself says: '...for it is they whose [erstwhile] bad deeds Allah will transform into good ones...' (al-Furqan: 70).

Reflect on the various degrees of gifts that Allah the Exlated bestows upon us! True profit can only be obtained by engaging in trade with Him! And by the same generosity, bounty and favour, Allah the Exlated rewards the (muhsinin) for their good actions: '...and give them their reward in accordance with the best that they were doing [in life].' (az-Zumar: 35) Just as He the Exlated forgives them for the worst they have done, He the Exlated also rewards them for the best they have done, that is to say, for the best actions they did. These gifts from Allah the Exlated this generosity and favour that He the Exlated showers on His servants, encourage those who have strayed from belief to return to the embrace of belief. For, as long as the door to repentance remains open, there is no barrier between him and his Lord and there are no stumbling blocks in the way, no matter how numerous his wrong actions.

When the True Lord Glorified is He prescribed repentance for disobedient wrongdoers, He the Exlated legislated it to save them from the wickedness of disobedience. For if we were to tell the disobedient that there was no way to repent, what would they then do? They would lose all their scruples. When we say, 'So-and-so is unscrupulous,' we mean that he has despaired of ever reforming, and so he persists in wrongdoing and slips further and further astray. But the True Lord Glorified is He does not want that for His slaves, and so He the Exlated opens up to them the door of repentance so that their passion for Allah's religion can return and so that disobedience and deviancy do not increase and become more widespread in society.

After the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told his people about this divine program for rewarding people, the obstinate rejecters said to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'We are afraid for you, Muhammad. We are afraid that our gods are going to visit some harm upon you because you have angered them.' It is quite astonishing that they would say this, given that they knew that their gods were stones that could neither bring benefit nor harm. And so whenever they were touched by harm, they could find no one to take any refuge in except for Allah the Exlated. That is why Allah the Exlated reveals the verses:

أَلَيْسَ ٱللَّهُ بِكَافٍ عَبْدَهُۥ ۖ وَيُخَوِّفُونَكَ بِٱلَّذِينَ مِن دُونِهِۦ ۚ وَمَن يُضْلِلِ ٱللَّهُ فَمَا
لَهُۥ مِنْ هَادٍ ﴿٣٦﴾ وَمَن يَهْدِ ٱللَّهُ فَمَا لَهُۥ مِن مُّضِلٍّ ۗ أَلَيْسَ ٱللَّهُ بِعَزِيزٍ ذِى ٱنتِقَامٍ ﴿٣٧﴾

Is God not enough for His servant? Yet they threaten you [Prophet] with those they worship other than Him. If God allows someone to stray he has no one to guide him [36] if God guides some- one no one can lead him astray. Is God not mighty and capable of retribution? [37] (The Quran? az-Zumar: 36 - 37)

This means, ‘O Muhammad, do not worry about this meaningless prattle, for Allah the Exlated is enough for you and will suffice you.’ And that is proven by the fact that some of the believers used to guard him for fear that the idolaters might do some harm to him. But they were surprised one day by the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him coming out to them and releasing them from duties, forbidding them from guarding him and dismissing them from their posts.

If the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had not been certain that the One Who commanded him to dismiss his guards was Himself going to guarantee his safety and protection, he would not have done that to himself. And that is why a Danish woman, when she read in the account of the life of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that he was the greatest of all those people who have left their mark on history and when she came upon this event and read: ‘Is Allah not enough for His servant?…’ (az-Zumar: 36) and: ‘...Allah will protect you from [unbelieving] men…’ (al-Ma‘ida: 67) she said, ‘By Allah, Muhammad would not have done that unless he had absolute certainty in the fact that his Lord would protect him. Even were he to have deceived everyone, he could not have deceived himself.’ And so, on account of that one thing, she became a believer.

It pleases some people to say that the meaning of: ‘Is Allah not enough for His servant?…’ (az-Zumar: 36) is simply, ‘Is Allah not enough for His servant?’ considering the (ba’) to be superfluous, but that is not correct for there are no superfluous letters in the Speech of Allah the Exlated. As for the (hamza) here, it is indicative of a denying question, and denial indicates negation. And after that, the word (laysa) also indicates negation, and a double negative indicates a positive. So the meaning is, 'We deny that Allah the Exlated is not enough for His slave', and if we deny that Allah the Exlated is not enough for His servant, we are saying as a result that Allah the Exlated is enough for His servants.

The True Lord Glorified is He has a name which is 'Allah' and has attributes which we know as 'The Beautiful Names'. One of those Beautiful Names is (al-Kafi), 'The One Who is Enough'. So the meaning is then, 'Does Allah the Exlated not have the attribute of being Enough for His servant?' So how can we then say that the (ba') is superfluous? Saying that the (ba') is superfluous here is contrary to the eloquent nature of the Quran. It is not correct for us to say that there is a superfluous letter in the Quran. Some display courtesy towards the Quran and said that it is a letter of connection, while others say that it is a letter whose purpose is to link to existence. But the truth is that we have no need of any of these interpretations.

And we made this matter perfectly clear earlier. If I were to say, for example, 'I do not have money,' the word (ma) negates the existence of a significant amount of money, but does not deny the existence of money altogether - it does not deny me from having a pound or two. But if I were to say, 'I do not have any money', and use the preposition (min) before the word for money, that would mean that I did not have anything that could be called money, not even a single penny. Thus, the preposition that is used here is not superfluous at all, but rather is essential to the meaning. As for those who say that the (ba') is superfluous in: '...enough for...' (az-Zumar: 36), they consider (laysa) to be one of the sister verbs of (kana), a category of verb that makes the subject (marfu') and makes the predicate (mansub). So the majestic name, its subject, is (marfu') and (kafin) 'enough' is its predicate. So the implied wording is, 'Is Allah not (kafiyan) His slave.' However, this interpretation runs contrary to the majesty and eloquence of the Quran.

Then Allah the Exlated says: '...And yet, they would frighten you with those [imaginary divine powers which they worship] beside Him!…' (az-Zumar: 36) i.e. with their idols: '...But he whom Allah lets go astray can never find any guide,' (az-Zumar: 36) meaning, 'Let them say what they say, for Allah has led them astray, so who is there that can guide them?' '…whereas he whom Allah guides aright can never be led astray...' (az-Zumar: 37). This is the opposite case - if Allah the Exlated guides us to the path, then no one will be able to lead us astray. '...Is Allah Almighty, not an avenger of evil?' (az-Zumar: 37) means, 'Is Allah the Exlated not described with might?' The (ba') here is like the one that came in the previous verse.

The Almighty is the One Who overcomes and is not overcome. And since Allah the Exlated is the One Who overcomes and is not overcome, you must beware of His vengeance, since He the Exlated is also: '...an avenger of evil' (az-Zumar: 37). So no matter how much evil forethought, planning and plotting you do, you will never overcome Him.

It is amazing that the unbelievers sought to frighten the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with idols when they themselves knew their true nature. And as for their statement: '…We worship them for no other reason than that they bring us nearer to Allah…' (az-Zumar: 3), it is totally false linguistically since worship is the worshipper obeying the worshipped in all his commands and prohibitions, and what commands or prohibitions come from inanimate idols? So their statement is totally nonsensical and baseless. And that is why Khalid ibn Al-Walid may Allah be pleased with him said(1), after Allah the Exlated had softened his heart to Islam and the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him sent him to destroy al-'Uzza, and after he had gone up to the idol with his axe in his hand to break it:

O 'Uzza, may you be profaned and not glorified, for certainly I see that Allah has abased you.

If it was truly a god then it would have frightened him and protected itself.

Some of the orientalists have raised an objection to Allah's words: '...And yet, they would frighten you with those [imaginary divine powers which they worship] beside Him,' (az-Zumar: 36) saying, 'This refers to the idols, and those idols– al-Lat, al-'Uzza and Manat–all have feminine names. So how is it that the Quran uses the masculine word (al-ladhina) to refer to them and not the feminine word (al-lati)?' We reply, 'There is a difference between the name that is used for an idol and the thing that it names. In other words, it is a (s*anam*), an 'idol', and that idol is then named either al-Lat or al-'Uzza. So, if we take into account the fact that it is a (s*anam*), its plural is going to be masculine, whereas if we take into account the name it has been given, its plural is going to be feminine. So, (al-ladhina) takes into account what they are, i.e. the fact that they are idols, and (al-lati) takes into account the names they have been given.'

(1) This is narrated by Al-Marzuqi in his book, Al-Azmina wa Al-Amkina, in chapter 60. It is also narrated by Al-Kalbi in the book, Al-Asnam, and by Al-Jahiz in the book, Al-Hayawan, in the section entitled, 'the Fire of Artifice'.

We shall stop here to look at this opposite pairing in Allah's words: '...But he whom Allah lets go astray can never find any guide, whereas he whom Allah guides aright can never be led astray. Is Allah Almighty, not an avenger of evil?' (az-Zumar: 36-37): A (dall) is one who is not guided towards his goal, like someone who loses his way and does not know in which direction to go. He is one who is astray without intending to be astray, since he simply does not know the way.

The word (dall) can also be used to mean hesitant and bewildered, such as when Allah the Exlated addresses His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying: 'And found you lost on your way, and guided you?' (ad-Duha: 7) And that came about because the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saw his people doing things that he did not like, but at the time he still did not know the correct things they should be doing. So, it means that he did not know the truth, not that he knew but still turned aside from it, for there is a great difference between the two states. So, the (dalal), the 'misguidedness', here is something that was not intended. The word (dalal) can also be used to convey the meaning of forgetting, as in Allah's words: '...so that if one of them should make a mistake, the other could remind her...' (al-Baqara: 282).

And another aspect of that (dalal) is our forgetting that ancient natural covenant that Allah the Exlated made with us and which is referred to in His Words: 'And whenever your Lord brings forth their offspring from the loins of the children of Adam, He [thus] calls upon them to bear witness about themselves: 'Am I not your Lord?' – to which they answer: "Yea, indeed, we do bear witness thereto!"…' (al-A'raf: 172)

The opposite of (dalal) is (hidayah), 'guidance', a word that also has a number of different meanings. But those who seek to raise objections to the Word of Allah the Exlated and damage its credibility take it to only have one meaning, applying that meaning to the word wherever they find it in the Quran. But that is not correct.

The word (hidayah) refers to guidance of pointing out the way in an absolute sense. In other words, He the Exlated guides you and then you are free to either follow that guidance or ignore it. The example we gave of this was that of a traffic policeman who guides you and points out the way to you, after which you are free to either take the path he has pointed to you or not to take it. If you do take the path he pointed out to you and thank him for the good turn he has done you, saying to him, ‘May Allah increase you in goodness! If it were not for you, I would have lost my way,’ he looks at you again and sees that you are worthy of being given even more good. So he says to you, ‘By Allah, you are a good man, so I will travel with you until you pass out of this area, for it is full of danger!’ This is called assistance. So the one who believes in The One Who guides is worthy of being assisted and being granted the success of having a greater level of guidance.

This is the meaning of Allah’s words: ‘…just as for those who are [willing to be] guided, He increases their [ability to follow His] guidance and causes them to grow in God-consciousness,’ (Muhammad: 17) meaning, ‘He increases them by granting them aid and assistance, lightening for them the burden and hardship of obedience and turning aside from them the things that lead to evil. So, the first type of (hidayah) is guidance in the absolute sense of pointing out the way, while the second type of (hidayah) is guidance in the providing assistance and success.

The True Lord Glorified is He clarifies these two types of (hidayah) when He the Exlated addresses His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: He the Exlated says about the first: ‘...and, verily, [on the strength thereof] you, too, shall guide [men] onto the straight way,’ (ash-Shura: 52) and He the Exlated says about the second: ‘Verily, you cannot guide aright everyone whom you love: but it is Allah Who guides him that wills [to be guided]…’ (al-Qasas: 56). How can Allah the Exlated affirm the act of guidance to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in one verse and yet negate it from him in another, for the words used in both verses are the same and the subject of the verb in both verses is the same? They say, in each of the places the word is being used in a different sense: the guidance that is negated is not the same as the guidance that is affirmed. The True Lord Glorified is He is saying to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘You are but a guide who conveys My Message, not one who lays the way and makes the Law.'

You do not have the power necessary to force people to believe. Your only task is to convey, for it is by means of that conveying that Allah the Exlated guides people. It is not your job to insert belief into people’s hearts.

This is similar to what Allah the Exlated says in a single verse: ‘...but most people know [it] not: they know but the outer surface of this world’s life…’ (ar-Rum: 6-7). Thus, He the Exlated affirms knowledge to them and negates it in the same verse. Why? Because they refer to different things: the knowledge that is affirmed is not the same as the knowledge that is negated.

Allah the Exlated says: ‘...But he whom Allah lets go astray can never find any guide.’ (az-Zumar: 36) When Allah the Exlated says (yudlil), He the Exlated is ascribing misguidance to them, saying, ‘This one is misguided,’ meaning that he is not on the path that I laid out for him. And anyone whom Allah the Exlated has described as being astray, no right-thinking person can then describe him as being right-guided, since as soon as he compares that person’s actions with what Allah the Exlated actually requires of him, his intellect will naturally cause him to conclude that he is astray and not guided.

The True Lord Glorified is He for example, tells us to tell the truth and not tell lies. What does the right-thinking person say when he compares truthfulness and lying? It is inevitable that he will say that truthfulness is guidance and lying is misguidance, for it is not possible for him to say anything else. And that is especially true if he were to apply the matter to himself and say, ‘Would you like people to tell you the truth or to lie to you?’

So, if Allah the Exlated misguides someone and rules him as being astray after having first clearly shown him the right path, no one can then come along and describe that person as being guided. And that is because Allah’s guidance is something upon which all healthy natural minds agree, especially when you yourself are affected by some negative consequence of that misguidance and burned by its flames. That is why you find that liars love those who are truthful and evil men loves those who are noble and good. The story of the three adolescent young men that we have previously mentioned is a case in point. These three persons followed their own evil whims and desires. They remained as such for a long period of time until one of them showed repentance to Allah, which is why the other two bitterly mocked him and stigmatized him with the worst characteristics. But the question to be asked now is: ‘If one of these two men had a sister, would he allow her to get married to his companion who repented or to the one who was still committing evil?!’ It is thus clear that even though evil may entice people, the good eventually will prevail and win a point which is proved by the saying of Allah, the Almighty: ‘...Is Allah Almighty, not an avenger of evil?’ (az-Zumar: 37)

وَلَئِن سَأَلۡتَهُم مَّنۡ خَلَقَ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضَ لَيَقُولُنَّ ٱللَّهُۚ قُلۡ أَفَرَءَيۡتُم مَّا تَدۡعُونَ مِن
مُمۡسِكَٰتُ رَحۡمَتِهِۦۚ قُلۡ حَسۡبِيَ ٱللَّهُۖ عَلَيۡهِ يَتَوَكَّلُ ٱلۡمُتَوَكِّلُونَ ﴿٣٨﴾

If you [Prophet] ask them, ‘Who created the heavens and earth?’ they are sure to answer, ‘God,’ so say, ‘Consider those you invoke beside Him: if God wished to harm me, could they undo that harm? If God wished to show me mercy, could they withhold that mercy?’ Say, ‘God is enough for me: all those who trust should put their trust in Him’ [38] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 38)

The True Lord Glorified is He wants to show them how foolish it is to worship idols, and He wants to give them the evidence and proof that such worship is totally futile. And He the Exlated wants them to admit that proof, not simply for him to inform them of it. And as we have said before, a ruling is established either by a statement from you or a confession from your opponent. And confession, as we said before, is ‘the lord of all proofs’. And you do not leave it to your opponent to make the ruling unless you are absolutely sure that he is going to say what you want him to say. It is just like when you say to someone who shows no gratitude for a good turn you did him, ‘Did I not do such-and-such for you on such-and-such a day?’ And you only say it because you are sure that he will not be able to deny that fact.

And that is why the True Lord Glorified is He asks them here about the main support of existence in creation and the highest and widest envelope that contains all created beings, that is to say, the heavens and earth. The universe was created for man before man was ever created, so he came upon an earth already containing crops, plants, water, air and wholesome earth, and he came upon a sky already containing plants, stars, and a sun and a moon.

So Allah the Exlated says: '…and thus it is [with most people]: if you ask them, 'Who is it that has created the heavens and the earth?' – They will surely answer, 'Allah.' (az-Zumar: 38) And they had no option but to say, 'Allah' and 'Allah alone', for when they turned their thoughts to the matter, they could not find anyone else who claimed that this was his creation. Indeed, it has never even occurred to any of the unbelievers, opponents or deniers of Allah's existence to make such a claim.

If we were to track the creation of man from the time of Adam peace be upon him and his immediate descendants, we would find that they came upon this world with its heavens and earth already in place. So if we were to have asked him, 'Did you create the heavens and earth', he would not be able to say, 'Yes, I did create them.'

So, Muhammad, ask them that question: '... "Who is it that has created the heavens and the earth?"…' (az-Zumar: 38) and they will have no option but to say, 'Allah', since no being has ever spent a single moment of existence without the heavens and earth being present so that he could say that he was creating them for those yet to come. Rather, everybody came to find the heavens and the earth already there.

This is exactly like Allah's words: 'Now if you ask those [who worship any being other than Allah] as to who it is that has created them, they are sure to answer, 'Allah'…' (az-Zukhruf: 87) since no one can say to the first being to be created and brought into existence, 'I created you', nor can he himself say, 'I created myself.'

The fact that they said, 'Allah' in response directs our attention to another matter. And that is that the word, 'Allah' is one that everyone uses and one that everyone understands to whom it refers. If that were not the case, then they would not use it. And that is because the first thing that comes into existence is a meaning or a concept and then a word is coined to denote it. A good example of that is the television, for before it was invented we did not know such a word. It was not until after it had been brought into existence that we assigned this name. So, how did the word ‘Allah’ come into the language of man?

So, the majestic name must have something or someone to which it refers. That someone is the True Lord Glorified is He who existed before this word came into existence. And that is why we say to those who deny the existence of Allah the Exlated ‘That is a contradiction in terms. Saying, ‘Allah is non-existent’ does not make any sense, for the word ‘Allah’ is a subject which you are passing judgment on, while ‘non-existent’ is the predicate with which you are passing judgment. So, how can you say He the Exlated is non-existent when the concept exists before the word used to denote it?

The word ‘Allah’ could not exist in language unless He Himself existed. He the Exlated must have existed before the name did and we could not have known of the name without its owner having told us it. And that is because the job of the intellect, when it comes to belief, is to show us that this creation must have had a Creator to bring it into being. But what is that power? And what does that power want from creation? It is not the job of the intellect to answer questions such as these, for the intellect could never arrive at an answer. The only way we can know the answers to these questions is by being told them by that Creator Himself.

You will remember the example we gave to illustrate this: We said, ‘Let us say we are sitting at home and the doorbell rings. In the moment that the doorbell rings, we all agree that there is someone at the door because for everything that happens there must be someone or something to make it happen, but who is it? And what does he or she want? We cannot know the answer to those questions unless he or she tells us directly, saying, ‘I am so-and-so and I want such-and-such.’

So, the intellect cannot tell us what any of the features or traits of the Highest Existence are; all it can do is believe and know that He the Exlated exists and uncover the proofs of that. As for His Name, attributes, programme and instructions to us, it is Allah the Exlated Himself who transmits and conveys them to us. But that transmission must come from a person of consequence for us to accept it as true.

One of the failures of the philosophers, when it comes to investigating matters, is that they want to use the intellect not to just know what is intellectually knowable, but also to imagine the form that that intellectually knowable thing takes. But such conjecture is not the job of the intellect, for you will never be able to imagine the form that that thing takes. You can only know intellectually that it exists. Then you must leave it to that thing to speak for itself. Therefore, we find it odd when these philosophers talk about physical sciences and the science of what lies behind those physical things, which they refer to as metaphysics. However, why is it said that something lies behind physical matters? Because something cannot exist unless there is something from which we know about that thing. If nothing else comes along to set it right, then it establishes it.

Allah Glorified is He tells us that He is the One who created this creation, as this existence could not exist if the Creator did not bring it into existence. In addition, no one objected to what Allah has said, so it is established so long as no one brings forth a counter claim.

Therefore, we said previously that the word of kufr (disbelief) is a proof of belief, since the original meaning of 'kufr' is to cover up, and only things that exist can be covered up. This means that the innate state is that of belief, but kufr (disbelief) emerged thereafter in order to cover it up.

After they acknowledged the first proof that Allah is the Creator of the heavens and earth, He says to them: '... Say, "Then have you considered what you invoke besides Allah"' (az-Zumar: 38) This means that Allah tells them to describe those who they worshipped other than Allah (the idols): '...if Allah intended me harm, are they removers of His harm...' (az-Zumar: 38)? The verse refers to the idols, and the answer to the question is certainly in the negative, as the idols cannot hear the beseeching of those who supplicate them and cannot realise what the disbelievers ask for, so how can they fulfil people's requests to remove harm from them?

On the other hand: '...if He intended me mercy, are they withholders of His mercy?' (az-Zumar: 38) Their answer is certainly in the negative. Therefore, they acknowledge that Allah is the One Who brings benefit and that their gods are false and useless. If they stammer after that and do not reply because their answer will constitute a proof against them, then: '...Say, "Sufficient for me is Allah…"' (az-Zumar: 38) as He brings into existence beneficial creatures in the heavens and earth, and He is sufficient to ward off any harm

This is the meaning of Allah's saying in the previous verse: 'Is Allah not sufficient for His Servant [Prophet Muhammad]?' (az-Zumar: 36) This means that He bestowed bounties upon His Servant by granting him the bounty of existence, then the bounty of preserving one's life and then the bounty of preserving one's species. In addition, Allah Glorified is He removes harm from His servant when it afflicts him. In fact, whenever a person suffers from an affliction, he never resorts to a false god, as he will not deceive himself or lie to himself. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: '...lost are [all] those you invoke except for Him...' (al-Isra': 67).

Allah's saying: '...all those who trust should put their trust in Him…' (az-Zumar: 38) makes use of the linguistic style of restriction, as trust is restricted to Allah alone. This is true trust and reliance since the one who relies on something strengthens himself via this reliance when his own strength fails. The sensible person only relies on the one who can help him, on one whom when he needs him, he finds him there. As we said before, anyone who relies on someone just like himself will fail since you rely on him and hope that he fulfils your needs, but it occurs that you read his obituary in the newspapers a few days later. Thus, our Lord teaches us how and upon whom we should place our trust, saying: 'Rely upon the Ever-Living who does not die...' (al-Furqan: 58).

There is a difference between the Arabic words 'tawakkul' and 'tawakul', as Allah has provided the living beings with the means for their survival and the means for the preservation of their life, such as food and drink. In addition, He has provided them with the means for the preservation of species by mating.

As Allah has provided us with all these means, He has also assigned us a role. For example, the earth that lies beneath us, the sun that shines on the earth, the wind that blows over it and the rain that brings water to it. People should exploit and take advantage of these means by tilling it, planting the seeds, and taking care of them. You do not just stay at home and expect those means to bring you your food while doing nothing. No, your Lord has created you and has given you limbs that you can control. You can use your hand to hit someone or to pat the head of an orphan; you can use your tongue to utter the testimony of faith or say things that contradict it.

However, you must remember that those limbs are only subservient to your will in this worldly life, but in the Hereafter, you will not have control over them since they will be under the control of the One Who created them. On this day, Allah Glorified is He will say: '...To whom belongs [all] sovereignty this Day?…' (Ghafir: 16) In addition, your limbs will be freed from your control and will bear witness against you: 'On a Day when their tongues, their hands, and their feet will bear witness against' (an-Nur: 24) them.

Allah created these limbs to make use of them, not to neglect using them. If you are able to work and still ask others to support you, that is called 'tawakul': neglecting the means that Allah has bestowed on you and paying no heed to the talents and abilities that He has placed at your disposal. Allah Glorified is He has given you this honour, so how do you demean yourself by relying on other people? Why do you refuse making use of the bounties which Allah has granted you?

If you take advantage of the means and limbs which Allah has given you, then this is called 'tawakkul', as it means making use of the limbs while putting one's trust in Allah. You should also expect that some trials may afflict you, such as when you work hard and take advantage of the means, but you do not gain anything. For example, when you till the soil and plant your crops, then the crops are destroyed completely. Allah then says:

قُلْ يَٰقَوْمِ ٱعْمَلُوا۟ عَلَىٰ مَكَانَتِكُمْ إِنِّى عَٰمِلٌ ۖ فَسَوْفَ تَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٣٩﴾
مَن يَأْتِيهِ عَذَابٌ يُخْزِيهِ وَيَحِلُّ عَلَيْهِ عَذَابٌ مُّقِيمٌ ﴿٤٠﴾

Say, 'My people, do whatever is in your power – and so will I.
You will find out [39] who will suffer humiliation, and on whom a lasting torment will descend'[40] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 39 - 40)

Reflect on the vocative case in this verse: 'O my people…' (az-Zumar: 39). Even after the people's stubborn rejection of Islam, their insistence on falsehood and their refusal to accept the proofs and evidence presented to them, still Allah Glorified is He treats them kindly and commands His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to address them in such a kind and lovely manner. This vocative form indicates that he was not alien to them, as they were his family and people among whom he lived.

When Messenger Muhammad called them to Islam, they did not respond to his call. In addition, none of the proofs and evidence he brought, showing them the futility of worshipping idols, were successful in convincing them. His Lord commanded him to say to them: ‘O my people do whatever is in your power – and so will I…’ (az-Zumar: 39). This means that Prophet Muhammad told them to do whatever they want with him because he had full trust in his Lord and his Lord was sufficient for him. He did not say these words out of recklessness or arrogance, but because Allah has said: ‘Is Allah not sufficient for His Servant [Prophet Muhammad]?…’ (az-Zumar: 36)

The Arabic word ‘makanatikum’ refers to the space occupied by an object, while the word ‘makin’ refers to the object that occupies a space. Therefore, a glass is the space occupied by an object while the water in it is the object which occupies a space. You have a place that you occupy: if someone persecutes and expels you from your place, he will let you go to another place.

If you become settled in a place to the extent that you have authority over it, this is what is called ‘makanah’. Those with high standing and sovereignty have ‘makanah’. The additional letter ‘ta’’ in the word ‘makanatikum’ is for the sake of exaggeration. When we refer to knowledgeable people, we may say ‘’alim’, ‘’allam’ and ‘’allamah’, the last of which refers to the one who has reached the pinnacle of knowledge and has learnt so much that there is nothing hidden from him.

As for the question: Why does Allah describe Himself ‘’Allam’ and not as ‘’Allamah’? It is because Allah’s knowledge is not divided up into different levels. There are not things He only has general knowledge about and others about which He has partial knowledge. Therefore, Allah cannot be described with this attribute.

The word ‘makanah’ is used in Allah’s saying regarding the story of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph): ‘We established Joseph in the land that We might teach him the interpretation of events…' (Yusuf: 56) Allah did not give him just a 'makan' (place), but He gave him power and authority that enabled him to move wherever he wished. A person can have a place, and then he gains power and influence in that place, as what happened in the story of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph). On the other hand, a person may have a place and he is removed from it, just like when a person is arrested and placed in a cell.

We said previously that there is a 'hamzah' in the Arabic language which is called 'hamzat al-izalah'. When it is prefixed to a verb, it reverses its meaning. For example, the phrase: 'a'jama al-kalam' (a person clarified the meaning of a speech), and the Prophet Muhammad's saying when addressing his Lord, 'I will try to please You until you become content.'(1) The word 'al-'utba' which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the Hadith means 'removing the source of blame.' The whole saying means, 'If I have done something that stirs Your Anger, I will try to remove the source of blame and please you.' Within the context of lovers, ''atb' means blaming for something.

Another example of the word 'makanah' is found in the Arabic text of Allah's saying: 'But if they intend to betray you - then they have already betrayed Allah before, and He empowered [you] over them. And Allah is Knowing and Wise.' (al-Anfal: 71) The words 'amkana minhum' means 'took away their place from them'. The words 'amakana min' means removing authority from someone and having power over them.

The word 'makanah' includes the sovereignty and influence a person has that enables him to obtain what he wants. The word 'makanah' is an exaggerated form of the word 'makan' and the Arabic letter 'ta'' is used for giving emphasis. Term is also used for the sort of high esteem that inspires such awe extending beyond your personal domain. That is why when Malik was killed(1), some people said, ‘Malik used to guard the places where the clouds pass causing rain to fall.’ Malik guarded these places in such a way that no one could encroach upon it because of the status he held amongst his people. Therefore, he was able to guard the places where rain fell outside his own country.

(1) It is narrated by Ibn Hisham in 'As-Sirah An-Nabawiyyah' when he was tackling the trip Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him made to Tai'f to call its people to Islam. However, they acted ignorantly and caused his feet to bleed. When he had taken refuge in one of the orchards there, he raised his hands to heaven and said, 'O Allah, to You I complain of my weakness, lack of artifice and my disgrace at the hands of these people. O Most Merciful of all merciful, you are the Lord of the weak and you are my Lord, to whom do You leave me? To someone distant who frowns at me? Or to an enemy to whom You have given authority over me?...'

Allah’s saying: ‘...and so will I…’ (az-Zumar: 39) is described by Prophet Muhammad when he says, ‘Do whatever you can with regard to obstinate refusal, persecution and abuse, and I will do whatever I can to call you to Islam, offer you advice and guide you. This is my Message and I will never abandon it. I will make greater efforts to promulgate it and I will patiently bear the persecution from which my Companions and I suffer. Nothing will keep me from what I want.’

Then Allah says: ‘...You will find out who will suffer humiliation.’ (az-Zumar: 40) They will suffer this humiliation in the worldly life. ‘...and on whom a lasting torment will descend.’ (az-Zumar: 40) They will suffer this lasting torment in the Hereafter. The word ‘sawfa’ indicates the future; Allah did not say that this is going to happen now because Islam started strange and only spread amongst the weak and slaves who were persecuted, abused, expelled from their wealth and homes, and died in the cause of Truth.

Allah willed to test the believers who supported this Da’wah (calling to Allah), sort out those who had weak faith, and remove from them the weak and hypocrites who are not suitable for supporting this Message. Therefore, the Revelation would come to Messenger Muhammad at intervals bringing with him a new difficult matter. Whenever one of those matters is revealed, some of them were removed from the ranks of the believers until the only people who remained around Messenger Muhammad were people with strong and sound faith.

In this verse, Messenger Muhammad warns the people who denied events which were going to happen. This warning indicates his certainty and trust that the One Who revealed to him this warning is able to make it happen in the way

---

(1) This Hadith is narrated in ‘Al-‘Iqd Al-Farid’ by Ibn ‘Abd Rabbuh, ‘Khizanat Al-Adab’ by ‘Abd Al-Qadir Al-Baghdadi, and 'Nihayat Al-'Irab' by An-Nuwayri. All of them mentioned that it was Kulayb ibn Rabi'a.

He described. If that were not so, then Messenger Muhammad would not say it, since the reality of this warning would be revealed by the passage of time.

The same case applies with respect to the promises that Messenger Muhammad conveyed to the people before they took place. The following is one of them: '[Their] assembly will be defeated, and they will turn their backs [in retreat].' (al-Qamar: 45) This promise was made by Allah to the believers during very tough circumstances, as they were persecuted and were not able to defend themselves. When this verse was revealed, 'Umar Allah be pleased with him said, 'Which assembly we are going to defeat when we are not even able to defend ourselves?' When he saw what happened at the Battle of Badr, he said, 'My Lord spoke the truth and His Messenger spoke the truth!' This promise did not discredit the Da'wah (call to Allah), but it sought to confirm it. It is thus clear that this aforementioned verse of the chapter of al-Qamar clearly indicates that the Divine Promises and Threats will undoubtedly be fulfilled.

We said before that the truthfulness of the Messenger Muhammad with respect to matters relevant to his ummah is different from his truthfulness with respect to matters relevant to himself, as his truthfulness with respect to matters relevant to himself is even more emphatic. We mentioned earlier the story of the woman who converted to Islam when she read the interpretation of Allah's saying to His Messenger: '...Allah will protect you from the people...' (al-Ma'ida: 67) when Allah revealed that He would protect him and people would not be able to assassinate him, so he sent away his guards because of this promise.(1) This woman reflected on the matter rationally and realised that if he were to deceive everyone, he would not deceive himself. Therefore, this verse reveals Messenger Muhammad's trust in Allah's promise.

In Allah's saying: '...You will find out...' (az-Zumar: 39), Allah uses the Arabic word 'ta'lamun' instead of 'tarun' (see) or 'tanzhurun' (observe) because knowledge is more comprehensive than sight, and the events that were going to happen might happen outside the range of your eyesight. They may happen in places where some people will see them while others will not. As for knowledge, it conveys things that your own limbs as well as others' limbs come upon.

(1) At-Tabari narrated in his interpretation of verse 67 of the chapter of Al-Ma'ida from the narration of 'A'isha Allah be pleased with her that Prophet Muhammad used to be guarded until the following verse was revealed: '...Allah will protect you from the people...' (al-Ma'ida: 67) She said, 'So Messenger Muhammad poked his head out of the dome and said, "O people, you may go away as Allah has protected me."' [Hadith no. 9661]

Therefore, by means of knowledge, you can gain access to what others know. When you see something and discern it, you are guided to its ruling by what is pictured in your mind. However, by knowledge, you are able to benefit from that which is discerned and comprehended by others. Therefore, knowledge encompasses more than what is grasped by your intellect, organs and limbs.

Then, Allah says: '...and upon whom long-lasting suffering shall alight [in the life to come]!' (az-Zumar: 40) The word 'muqim' is mentioned in this verse to rebut what they said previously, as their wars used to continue for a very long time, even in some cases for as long as 40 years. Victory was shared by turns among them. Perhaps they thought the torment would only last for a limited period, so Allah emphasises to them the torment will not be temporary, but it will be constant and lasting.

إِنَّآ أَنزَلۡنَا عَلَيۡكَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ لِلنَّاسِ بِٱلۡحَقِّۖ فَمَنِ ٱهۡتَدَىٰ فَلِنَفۡسِهِۦۖ
وَمَن ضَلَّ فَإِنَّمَا يَضِلُّ عَلَيۡهَاۖ وَمَآ أَنتَ عَلَيۡهِم بِوَكِيلٍ ﴿٤١﴾

We have sent the Scripture down to you [Prophet] with the Truth for people. Whoever follows the guidance does so for his own benefit, whoever strays away from it does so at his own peril: you are not in charge of them [41] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 41)

We notice that Allah Glorified is He speaks about Himself sometimes using the plural first person pronoun 'inna', and sometimes with the singular first person pronoun 'inni' or 'innani'. When Allah talks about His Oneness, He uses the singular pronoun, such as His saying to Prophet Musa (Moses): 'Indeed, I am Allah…' (Ta Ha: 14) In this verse, Allah emphasises that He is One God with no partner. When He talks about a matter in which He has a role and His viceregents on earth also have roles, He uses the plural pronoun, as in the following verse: 'We have sent the Scripture down to you [Prophet] with the Truth for people…' (az-Zumar: 41).

Reflect on the prepositions in the Arabic words ''alayka' (to you) and 'linnas' (for people), as prepositions in Arabic have a wide range of meanings.

The word ''alayka' indicates that Allah assigns to His Prophet the responsibility, but the preposition 'lam' in 'linnas' indicates that people will gain benefits. It is like when we say in bookkeeping 'lahu' (credit) and ''alayhi' (debit); 'lahu' (credit) entails benefit while ''alayhi' (debit) entails responsibility.

Allah informs people to whom Muhammad's call is directed that it is for their best interests and brings benefits for them. Allah sent down a heavy burden on him that would tire him and his family out and would subject them to ridicule conspiracy and abuse...etc.

The Book was sent down to Muhammad with its burdens and responsibilities, so Allah wanted him to bear them and be resolute like the resolute Messengers who came before him. They were sent for a limited portion of time and space, but Messenger Muhammad was sent for an unlimited portion of time and space. Therefore, the difficulties he endured in the course of calling people to Islam would be greater than those endured by the other Messengers because of the universality of his Message.

Thus, the goodness and benefits of the call of Islam is for people, while its hardships were born by Messenger Muhammad. Allah's saying: 'We have sent the Scripture down to you [Prophet] with the Truth for people…' (az-Zumar: 41) means that this Message carries benefits for people.

We will reflect on the use of prepositions in the verses. For example, in Allah's saying in the chapter of al-Baqara: 'Those are upon [right] guidance from their Lord.' (al-Baqara: 5)

The believers are ''ala' (upon) guidance. The word ''ala' gives the sense of being above or at the top of something. Therefore, it is as if guidance were a riding beast that carries them, allows them to rest, does not tire them out and helps them to reach their destination. The purpose of guidance is to soothe people and to achieve the people's noblest objectives. Therefore, they should cling to it, as it will not burden them with things they are not able to bear, but it will benefit them.

The word 'bilhaq' (with Truth) indicates that it is something firmly established and does not change. Truth also means putting something in its rightful place. If you moved it from its rightful place, you come upon it in that state; the Truth will inevitably return to its rightful place.

The trials test the soldiers of Allah so that they will become worthy of carrying the call of Islam until the coming of the Final Hour.

Allah Glorified is He teaches us that if falsehood prevails, we should take a lesson from those physical things that happen under your gaze with respect to the source of life: water. Water falls from the sky upon the mountaintops, from which it takes straw, debris and stones that it carries down into the valleys forming a layer of scummy froth atop the water which is of value. When wind blows, it scatters that scum, leaving the surface of the water clear and pure. In the same way, the prevalence of falsehood is temporary, as the truth returns to its rightful place. Allah lets falsehood rise up only to show people the special nature of the Truth. When falsehood causes pain to people, they become fed up with it and long for the Truth. Thus, falsehood is one of the soldiers of Truth.

Allah says: '...Whoever follows the guidance does so for his own benefit...' (az-Zumar: 41). This means that following guidance is in one's best interests because the Lawmaker Who made His Laws, sent Messengers and sent down the Book does not benefit from our obedience and suffers no harm from our disobedience. This is because He brought us into existence by His attributes of Absolute Perfection and brought everything that we need before creating us. It is like when you say, 'So-and-so is a poet; this means that he was a poet before you heard him recite poetry, as he could not compose poetry unless he was already a poet.

Allah does not benefit in any way from people worshipping Him, as only people receive these benefits, as they have been created by Him. The one who makes something wants his product to be well and in the best possible state from its start to its end.

As the Divine Law has come for the benefit of mankind, whoever is guided does so for his own good, and whoever is misguided does so at his own peril: '...Whoever follows the guidance does so for his own benefit, whoever strays away from it does so at his own peril...' (az-Zumar: 41). The prepositions used in this verse 'falinafsih' and ''alayha' indicate that people will gain the benefit of guidance and the harm of disobedience.

Allah says: '...and you are not in charge of them.' (az-Zumar: 41) The word 'wakil', which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse, means the person who is responsible for those over whom he has been appointed, so he can force them to do what he wants.

Allah did not want His Prophet to do this, as He says in another verse: '...and you are not to compel them…' (Qaf: 45). Rather, He wanted him to call to His way with wisdom so that the people would respond to his call out of their own free will. If Allah willed, He would create them like angels and make them obedient by nature.

Therefore, parts of the universe are wise and attentive, as they have been content to follow Allah's Commands without having any choice, as the one who takes a burden upon himself may be able to guarantee doing so when he takes it up, but cannot guarantee doing so at the time of implementation. People are caused to follow different paths in life as they had different levels of perception of their responsibility at the moment they took up the responsibility and the moment of implementation. All corruption that infects people's transactions with one another ultimately stems from this point.

We previously gave an example of a trust a person leaves with you until he returns from his travels and takes it back. However, when he returns and does not find it with you, then some circumstances arose that led you to make use of it. In the following verse, the wisdom of the inanimate elements of creation in refusing to take up the burden of the trust becomes apparent: 'Indeed, we offered the Trust to the heavens and the earth and the mountains, and they declined to bear it and feared it; but man [undertook to] bear it. Indeed, he was unjust and ignorant.' (al-Ahzab: 72)

Allah's saying: '...you are not in charge of them...' (az-Zumar: 41) also reassures and consoles Messenger Muhammad, as He asks Messenger Muhammad not to burden himself in a manner that exceeded his ability. His only duty is to convey the Message. In addition, any harm he suffered would not lessen his standing amongst them, for they considered him to be truthful and trustworthy and knew that he was right. He had a great stature amongst them. Allah instructed him not to be sad because they said about him that he was a poet, a magician and a lunatic: 'We know that you, [O Muhammad], are saddened by what they say. And indeed, they do not call you untruthful, but it is the verses of Allah that the wrongdoers reject.’ (al-An‘am: 33)

Allah freed His Messenger of any responsibility and the wrongdoers rejected him only because they denied His signs.

ٱللَّهُ يَتَوَفَّى ٱلۡأَنفُسَ حِينَ مَوۡتِهَا وَٱلَّتِي لَمۡ تَمُتۡ فِي مَنَامِهَاۖ
فَيُمۡسِكُ ٱلَّتِي قَضَىٰ عَلَيۡهَا ٱلۡمَوۡتَ وَيُرۡسِلُ ٱلۡأُخۡرَىٰٓ إِلَىٰٓ أَجَلٖ
مُّسَمًّىۚ إِنَّ فِي ذَٰلِكَ لَأٓيَٰتٖ لِّقَوۡمٖ يَتَفَكَّرُونَ ﴿٤٢﴾

God takes the souls of the dead and the souls of the living while they sleep – He keeps hold of those whose death He has ordained and sends the others back until their appointed time – there truly are signs in this for those who reflect [42]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 42)

We said previously that no one witnessed the process of creation since the Creator did not seek anyone’s help to do it, as He Glorified is He says: ‘I did not make them witness to the creation of the heavens and the earth or to the creation of themselves, and I would not have taken the misguiders as assistants.’ (al-Kahf: 51)

Therefore, the way that creation was brought into being is not known by anyone, unless the Creator had informed us of it, it would have remained hidden and unknown. If you want to know how creation took place, you must look to the reports of the One Who created the creation. If anyone claims to have knowledge through some means other than that, then they are from among those beings who lead men astray and whom Allah informs us about.

Allah Glorified is He names them misguided even before they came into existence. No misguidance could be greater than saying that man originated from apes that evolved.

Allah gave His created beings the immunisation that protects them from misguided people, as He tells us about them beforehand and warns us about them. In other words, He warns the believers against the misguided people who were in the guise of scientists or philosophers telling lies about how humans are created. Allah instructs the believers not to believe those misguided people because they did not witness the process of creation.

When Allah the Glorified and Exalted presents to us a complicated matter of which our intellects are only capable of grasping certain aspects, He completes our understanding of that matter by means of hearing from elsewhere. However, who do you hear from? From the one in whom you believe with your intellect. Therefore, it is not necessary for your mind to be convinced of everything; certain matters are left that you are convinced by, not by yourself, but rather by hearing about it from one whom you trust.

Therefore, we said at the beginning of the chapter of Ya Sin that matters fall into one of three categories: creeds, spoken matters, or rulings. An element of each of these can be grasped by the intellect, while another element remains unseen. However, the indications for those unseen matters lie in what can be grasped by the intellect.

When Allah tells us how the universe took place, He says man was created from earth mixed with water which then became clay. When clay dried, it became like pottery. Then Allah blew His spirit in him, and life pervaded him and he started to move.

None of us has ever seen these stages of creation about which the Creator informs us, but He brought into existence other physical things which we can perceive and which indicate to us the truth of what He has informed us with respect to these stages. We should derive proofs of the truthfulness of unseen matters from things we perceive.

As the Creator created life, He also created death. When He told us about them, He mentioned death first, saying: ‘[He] who created death and life...’ (al-Mulk: 2) He has mentioned death first so that we would not handle life with arrogance or delusion but would handle it while knowing that each of us will inevitably die. We should know that with respect to each individual human being, the span of this worldly life does not last from the time of Adam until the coming of the Final Hour, but it only lasts for the length of time he himself spends. One is not sure when his life will end, since there are people who are born and die an instant later, while others die after only a month and others die after the passage of many years.

One of the righteous people once said, ‘I have known that my life will end with death, so I have prepared myself for it. I have known that I could not escape Allah’s gaze for even the blinking of an eye, so I felt too embarrassed to disobey Him, and I have known that I will receive a certain provision that I will never miss and which Allah has guaranteed for me, so I feel content with it. This should be our attitude in life, for you will live for a limited time.’ Therefore, knowledgeable people say, ‘Thank the One Who bestows on you bounties permanently, obey the One Whom you cannot do without even for the blinking of an eye, submit to the One Whose kingdom and sovereignty you can never leave. These are basic rules we should live by and principles to which we should all hold firmly. As we said, death is the opposite of life; although we have never seen the stages of creation, we have seen the stages of death. Therefore, take from the later a proof of the former.

You know that the demolition of any building happens in an opposite way to the way it was built. For example, if we want to destroy a ten-storey building, we will start by destroying the tenth storey and finish by destroying the first storey, in the exact opposite manner to the order in which we built it. The same is the case with death; the process starts with the soul leaving the body which is the last stage in the process of creation. Then the body becomes hard and rigid so that it resembles sounding clay, then it rots and decays so that its smell changes, just like dark fetid mud, then it breaks and disintegrates, turning back into clay and dust.

Therefore, even if the process of creation is something unseen and hidden from us, as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘I did not make them witness to the creation of the heavens and the earth or to the creation of themselves…’ (al-Kahf: 51). We have witnessed the process of death.

Allah says: ‘Allah takes the souls of the dead...’ (az-Zumar: 42) The Arabic word ‘anfus’ is the plural of the word ‘nafs’ which is formed when the body combines with the soul and causes different states for the limbs. The physical body only is not called a ‘nafs’ and the soul on its own is not called a ‘nafs’.

The meaning of ‘yatawaffal al-anfus’ is (take the souls) which occurs in two stages: sleep and death. During sleep, a person loses his consciousness and capacity to perceive, but his soul remains in his body to keep its vital functions running and keep him alive. When a person wakes up, his consciousness, awareness, and perception come back. However, as for death, Allah stops a person's consciousness, perception, and the source of life: the combination of body and soul. During sleep, the body does not engage in any action: even the brain, which must constantly remain working, only works every seven seconds.

When the body functions stop, the body's temperature drops and it requires to be warmed. Therefore, people are advised to cover up while sleeping, since the movement that normally keeps the body warm is missing and it is necessary for us to maintain the body's temperature. Some people think that the blanket warms up the sleeper, but the opposite is true, as the heat of the body warms up the blanket. The role of the blanket is to maintain the body's heat and prevent it from dissipating. The proof is that when you first go to bed you find it cold, but when you wake up in the morning you find it warm.

We have said that a person passes through different states in the course of his existence: wakefulness, sleep, death and resurrection, and each of these stages has its own set of rules which should not be mixed up with one another. For example, when one of us is asleep, he loses his consciousness and ability to distinguish things. However, when he wakes up, he still remembers his dreams and the shapes, people, and colours contained in his dreams and can distinguish between them in the same way as if he were awake. How can he perceive these things and distinguish between them when his eyes are closed?

Scientists said that the sleeper has faculties and a form of consciousness different than what he has when he is awake, as he sees but not with his eyes. Therefore, during sleep, a person has another form of consciousness. Some people are astonished that a single grave could contain two bodies, one of which is honoured and the other is punished, although they do not find this astonishing during sleep. When you sleep with another in a single bed, he may dream that he is on an enjoyable journey that includes all bounties, while you dream that you are being beaten or undergoing a painful experience and neither of you knows what the other is seeing.

Allah's saying: '...He keeps hold of those whose death He has ordained...' (az-Zumar: 42) means that the soul does not return to the body. The phrase

‘...sends the others back...’ (az-Zumar: 42) means that during sleep, consciousness and perception come back to you. And ‘... until their appointed time…’ (az-Zumar: 42) means until the time that Allah has decreed for your death and recorded in the Preserved Slate. So, ‘...there truly are signs in this for those who reflect.’ (az-Zumar: 42)

When you find one who tells you something that awakens your faculties of perception, such as the intellect and the abilities to think, remember and reflect, enabling you to distinguish between different statements, be sure that he has good advice for you and is not seeking to deceive you. This is because those who seek to cheat you try to rush you, so that you do not have an opportunity to reflect on matters.

We previously gave the cloth trader as an example. When he is truthful and knows that his goods are of good quality, he tests it for you, taking a tuft of wool, and burning it in front of you so that you can see that it is genuine wool. However, as for the cheating trader, he tries to use every trick he has to deceive you so that you do not discover how poor his goods are. The first trader is certain of the quality of his goods and that whatever you do you will eventually arrive at his desired aim.

When Allah says, ‘Then will you not reason?’, ‘Will you not remember?’ or ‘Will you not think?’ you should know that Allah urges your faculties of research, reflection and selection from different alternatives. He would not do that if He were not confident that were you to use those faculties you could come to no conclusion except for that which He desires of you.

أَمِ ٱتَّخَذُواْ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ شُفَعَآءَۚ قُلۡ أَوَلَوۡ كَانُواْ لَا يَمۡلِكُونَ شَيۡـٔٗا وَلَا يَعۡقِلُونَ ﴿٤٣﴾
قُل لِّلَّهِ ٱلشَّفَٰعَةُ جَمِيعٗاۖ لَّهُۥ مُلۡكُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضِۖ ثُمَّ إِلَيۡهِ تُرۡجَعُونَ ﴿٤٤﴾

Yet they take intercessors besides God! Say, ‘Even though these have no power or understanding?’[43] Say, ‘All intercession belongs to God alone; He holds control of the heavens and the earth; in the end you will all return to Him’[44] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 43 - 44)

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Yet they take intercessors besides Allah…’ (az-Zumar: 43). The style used here expresses disapproval. In other words, it is not right for them to take others as intercessors alongside Allah. Allah rebukes them after they were shown the proofs and pieces of evidence; they take others as intercessors alongside Allah. However, why do they take intercessors besides Allah? Because those who take them imagine that they do so because they are devoutly religious. Religious devotion is part of human nature since Allah made His covenant with them, saying: '…Am I not your Lord?' (al-A'raf: 172)

Messengers came as reminders that remind us of that first promise we made and which we have forgotten about. Read Allah's saying: 'And [mention] when your Lord took from the children of Adam - from their loins - their descendants and made them testify of themselves, [saying to them], "Am I not your Lord?" They said, "Yes, we have testified." [This] - Lest you should say on the day of Resurrection, "Indeed, we were of this unaware." Or [lest] you say, "It was only that our fathers associated [others in worship] with Allah before, and we were but descendants after them. Then would You destroy us for what the falsifiers have done?"' (al-A'raf: 171-173) Allah Glorified is He rebukes them for taking others as intercessors alongside Allah and calls them to leave that sorry matter behind since taking others as intercessors alongside Allah is contradictory, for who will they be interceding with? They would be interceding with Allah, as they themselves said: '…We who sent down the Scripture to you [Prophet] with the Truth…' (az-Zumar: 3). Therefore, they take intercessors to intercede for them with Allah. However, why do they not worship Allah directly without any medium?

In addition, no intercession is accepted unless certain preconditions are met; not all people's intercessions are accepted, as it does not follow one's desires. However, Allah gives permission to the intercessor to intercede, and should be pleased with the one on whose behalf intercession is made, and this person should affirm the Oneness of Allah. Therefore, the intercession they hope for is futile and will not be accepted by Allah.

Why do they not worship Allah directly instead of having an intermediary? Some people said that worshipping Allah requires one to undertake certain responsibilities that are difficult and cumbersome and following Allah's religion requires one to submit to the restrictions of religious commands and prohibitions.

They wanted religiosity without responsibility, and gods who do not enjoin commands. In fact, they worshipped idols according to their whims, but whenever anything bad happened to them or they found themselves in difficult circumstances, they took refuge in Allah, the True Lord. Therefore, return to Allah before the time when returning to Him no longer benefits.

The word 'shafa'a' includes 'shaf'' and 'witr'; the former includes two 'witrs', i.e. a pair.

We have said that the orientalists raised objections to two verses in the Book of Allah with regard to intercession, in an attempt to cast doubt on the level of eloquence of the Quran. Those two verses: 'Fear a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all, or will intercession be accepted from it, nor will compensation be taken from it, nor will they be aided.' (al-Baqara: 48) Allah also says: 'And fear a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all and no compensation will be accepted from it, nor will any intercession benefit it, nor will they be aided.' (al-Baqara: 123)

The orientalists said, 'Which verse is more eloquent than the other? If one of them is eloquent then the other one is not eloquent. What is the wisdom behind bringing some words forward and others backward when they have the same meaning?' All these questions resulted from their misunderstanding of the Arabic language and lack of the necessary faculties to understand Allah's saying properly.

They have disregarded the first parts of the two verses: 'And fear a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all…' (al-Baqara: 48). There are two types of souls: one who seeks to avail the other and intercede, and another for who is availed and interceded. Which of them is the intercessor and which is the one on whose behalf intercession is made? If you want to describe the one on whose behalf intercession is made, he is the one who puts the ransom forward first; if it is not accepted, he asks someone to make intercession for him. Allah says: '...no compensation will be accepted from it...' (al-Baqara: 123).

If you want to describe the intercessor, he is the one who first comes forward with his intercession and if it is not accepted, he puts forward the ransom on behalf of someone. Thus, both verses are equally eloquent, each according to the meaning it seeks.

The following verse: ‘Yet they take intercessors besides Allah …’ (az-Zumar: 43) begins with the word ‘am’ which connects the word that precedes it with the word that follows it. The meaning of the verse is: ‘Was that the case or did they take others as intercessors...?’ The words that precede ‘am’ (yet) are: ‘Allah takes the souls of the dead...’ (az-Zumar: 42). If you lost your life force and your ability to move around and make use of the means, you should know that Allah gives you an example for the death that awaits you in the shape of sleep which you experience daily.

Death is one thing and sleeping is something else; the One Who is able to take away life in the sense of taking away your consciousness and your ability to distinguish and interact with the outside world (i.e. interact with others) is able to take it away completely. This is because sleep takes away your consciousness and ability to distinguish the outside world, even if your body parts are able to move such as the beating of your heart and movement of the lungs and intestines...etc. If Allah is capable of letting you experience this partial death, then He is also capable of letting you experience real death.

This verse means: ‘Are you safe from that? If you are not safe from it, and you are going to die and meet Allah, then why do you take others as intercessors? What has urged you to do that? Did you take intercessors?’

We have said that the word ‘shafi’’ is derived from ‘shaf’’, which is joining one thing to another so that they form a pair after having been solitary. Allah wants to bring an end to this practice and clarifies that it is futile, so He informs them that those whom they call besides Allah do not have the capacity to intercede. Even if they have the capacity to intercede, like calling on the angels, Jesus or ‘Uzayr, they will refuse to intercede on your behalf.

If the intercessors are inanimate things, they are closer to Allah than you are, and have more knowledge of the bases of intercession, and so they will inevitably refuse and despise you if you own them and derive benefit from them. This is because these inanimate things are in perfect harmony with the universe and constantly glorify their Creator. Therefore, they refuse to accept anyone except the one who also glorifies Allah. These inanimate objects submit to your will because Allah has subjected them to you and given you a will by which you control them according to the Will and Command of Allah, just as you control your own limbs. You have controlled your tongue and used it to declare your disbelief, and you have controlled your hands and used them to strike down and tyrannise others...etc.

No one of them will consent to intercede on your behalf because you followed a different way to them. They hate you due to this, so how could they intercede for you? Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: 'And the heavens and the earth wept not for them...' (ad-Dukhan: 29).

He ascribes to the heavens and earth the action of crying. If they will not cry for those who went against them, they will undoubtedly cry for those who shared the same belief and religious instructions. Therefore, the heavens, the earth, and other inanimate objects have the ability to differentiate. If not, they would not weep for obedient people and disobedient people.

There is a literary expression that says, 'The land does not agree with so-and-so' which means that it dislikes him staying on it. This is because he has rebelled against Allah and gone against His path while it glorifies Allah constantly and submits to Him. Therefore, it does not cry for him when he dies, but it is pleased that Allah has relieved it and His slaves from him.

Imam 'Ali explained this matter, saying, 'When a believer dies, two places weep for him: one place in the sky and one place on the earth. The place that weeps for him in the sky is the place where his good acts are raised up, as Allah Glorified is He says: "...and righteous work raises it..." (Fatir: 10). As for the place on the earth, it is the place on which he prays.'(1)

What made them confident and not fear death was the fact that they had taken others as intercessors and thought that those intercessors would defend them. However, their hopes would be dashed because the acceptance of an intercession does not lie in the hands of the intercessor, but it lies in the hands of the one to whom the intercession is made. Allah is the One Who gives permission to the intercessor and becomes pleased with the one on whose behalf the intercession is made. Do those with whom Allah is pleased require intercession?

(1) Ibn Kathir mentioned in his Tafsir (4: 142) on the authority of Ibn Abu Hatim that 'Ubad ibn 'Andullah said that a man asked 'Ali Allah be pleased with him: 'Do the heavens and earth cry for anyone?' 'Ali replied, 'You have asked me something that no one else has ever asked. Every slave has a prayer place on the earth and a place through which his actions rise up in the sky. However, the people of Pharaoh did not have any good actions on the earth nor had they any actions that rose up through the sky.' Then 'Ali recited Allah's saying: 'And the heavens and the earth wept not for them, nor were they reprieved.' (ad-Dukhan: 29)

Some people say that a person may have few good points, but if they fulfil the precondition of sincerity, Allah may let them grow and become more fruitful, and fix one's shortcomings by letting one of those whom He loves to intercede on his behalf. Allah would not legislate such a form of intercession unless He willed to accept it and relieve a person.

Thus, it was said, 'Beware of belittling any good action, no matter how small it may appear, as this action may be the cause of your salvation.'

It was narrated that Messenger Muhammad said, 'Allah conceals three things in three things: He conceals His pleasure in obedience to Him, so do not belittle any act of obedience, as Allah forgave a man who quenched the thirst of a dog that was gasping from thirst when he exerted effort to quench his thirst by taking off his leather sock and filling it with water.'(1) If this man had given water to another human being, we would have said that he had given it to him for a certain motive in mind, or because he had done him a favour. This proves that the action was sincere, for he did not benefit in any way from the dog nor did he expect to benefit. He loved to do favour regardless of the one who was receiving the favour. It was part of the man's nature to do good and not to be concerned with the person for whom the favour was done.

The second: 'Allah conceals His Anger in disobedience to Him. A woman entered the fire for a cat which she confined. She had neither provided the cat with food nor drink, nor set her free so that she might eat the insects of the earth.'(1) Therefore, just as you must not belittle any act of obedience, since it might be the cause of your salvation, you should not belittle any act of disobedience, since it may be the cause of your destruction.

(1) It was narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayra that the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'While a man was walking along the road, he became very thirsty and saw a well to which he went down and drank his fill. Then when he went, he came across a dog which was so thirsty that it was gasping and eating the soil. Thus, the man said to himself, "This dog is as thirsty as I was earlier." So he descended to the well, filled his leather sock with water, took hold of it with his mouth, and gave water to the dog. Thus, Allah was thankful for him and forgave him.' They said, 'O Messenger of Allah, do we get a reward for what we do with animals?' He replied, 'There is a reward for serving any animate.' It is related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (10/438), (Hadith no. 6009); Muslim in his Book on Greetings, chapter on the virtues of giving food and water to animals unlawful to eat (411/ Hadith (153/2244)).

The third: 'He conceals His secrets in His creation, so do not belittle any creature.'

Allah Glorified is He says: '…Even though these have no power or understanding...' (az-Zumar: 43). The word 'these' refers to the intercessors, so how can they ask for their intercession when they are like this? This is because intercession cannot happen except by Allah's permission, as He allows the intercessor to intercede and gets pleased with the one for whom the intercession is made. Intercession belongs to Allah, since: '...He holds control of the heavens and the earth; in the end you will all return to Him.' (az-Zumar: 44) Those who are arrogant and refuse to follow Allah's Path will return to Him.

Then, the True Lord says:

وَإِذَا ذُكِرَ ٱللَّهُ وَحۡدَهُ ٱشۡمَأَزَّتۡ قُلُوبُ ٱلَّذِينَ لَا يُؤۡمِنُونَ بِٱلۡأٓخِرَةِۖ
وَإِذَا ذُكِرَ ٱلَّذِينَ مِن دُونِهِۦٓ إِذَا هُمۡ يَسۡتَبۡشِرُونَ ٤٥

Whenever God is mentioned on His own, the hearts of those who do not believe in the Hereafter shrink with aversion, but they rejoice when gods other than Him are mentioned [45]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 45)

The word ishma'azzat means to recoil and have aversion. When a person hears something he does not like, he yashma'izzu, meaning, that an expression of annoyance appears on his face, and he displays aversion and shudders gloomily, then, he moves away from that thing. This is similar to the state of those whose selves feel aversion when they hear Allah Glorified is He being mentioned alone, and shut themselves off from affirming The Oneness of

Allah Glorified is He. Why is this? Scholars said because you have reminded them of the one whom they are certain has the capacity to bring them harm, or benefit. If that was not the case and they did not have that certainty, then the mentioning of Allah Glorified is He would have had no effect on them whatsoever. So, their hearts recoiled and shuddered because they were afraid of something. In the moment that they heard the mention of Allah Glorified is He they were reminded of His majesty, power, and immensity, and they were reminded that they were heading towards Him and would stand before Him, yet, they had not done anything to prepare themselves for that standing.

The Word: '...alone...' (az-Zumar: 45) indicates their inclination towards assigning Him partners. What this means is this: if those partner gods were to be mentioned, their hearts would not have recoiled in aversion. The recoiling of the heart in aversion is something that cannot be seen but which leaves its mark upon the face; for a pained expression appears upon the face as a result of it. The verse does not mention why their hearts recoiled, and that is one of the things that indicate that the heart is the motor that influences the rest of the limbs of the body and brings about a physical response in them. For example, when you meet one person, you find yourself happy, and when you meet another, you find yourself concerned and recoiling. What causes these responses? It is the heart.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '...but when those besides Him are mentioned...' (az-Zumar: 45), i.e. the partner gods they associate with Him, '...they rejoice.' (az-Zumar: 45), i.e. they are delighted. Why? Because they think that they will intercede on their behalf. In fact, they will be disappointed in both, this life and the Hereafter. Allah then says:

قُلِ ٱللَّهُمَّ فَاطِرَ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ عَٰلِمَ ٱلْغَيْبِ وَٱلشَّهَٰدَةِ أَنتَ
تَحْكُمُ بَيْنَ عِبَادِكَ فِى مَا كَانُوا۟ فِيهِ يَخْتَلِفُونَ ﴿٤٦﴾

Say, 'God! Creator of the heavens and earth! Knower of all that is hidden and all that is open, You will judge between Your servants regarding their differences'[46] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 46)

This is a command from Allah Glorified is He to His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him after mentioning His promise to the people of good and His threat to the people of evil—and indeed both groups received, in full, what had been promised them. Allah Glorified is He says to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, after you have conveyed My promise and threat, there is nothing more for you to do than to take refuge in Allah Glorified is He. He alone is The One Who will judge between you and them, for you have exhausted all the avenues of calling them to Islam in the best way and conveying the message beautifully. As long as they remain insistent upon unbelief, let them be until the Day of Judgement when Allah Glorified is He will judge between you and them.

‘Do not be sad, Muhammad, for Allah Glorified is He judges only according to the truth. You can be certain that He is The One Who chose you for the Message and that He will aid you and give victory to your religion. You will witness that victory in this world before the Hereafter.’ Indeed, the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did see that victory come to pass before his death.

Read Allah’s words: ‘Do they not see how We come to [their] land and shrink its borders,’ (ar-Ra‘d: 41) i.e. ‘We will decrease the size of the land of disbelief.’ A decrease in the land of disbelief means an increase in the size of the land of belief. This was a sign they witnessed with their own eyes for Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Do they not see...’ (ar-Ra‘d: 41)? So they should have paid heed, taken a lesson from it, stopped their stubborn opposition, and known that Allah Glorified is He indeed gives victory to His religion and fulfils His Commands. Every day that passed, the land of belief was expanding and the land of disbelief was shrinking, and the freedmen, slaves, and poor people were all going over to Muhammad. Then, after them came the leaders, notables and nobility.(1)

The True Lord teaches His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and teaches us how to call on Him, saying: ‘Say…’ (az-Zumar: 46)

(1) This is the position adopted by the majority of the commentators of the Quran. Ibn ‘Abbas may Allah be pleased with him said, ‘Have they not seen that We have opened up land after land to Muhammad.’ Ibn Kathir mentioned a number of opinions in his Tafsir 2/520 including a decrease in the land’s inhabitants and its blessing, meaning a decrease in its people and fruits by the land becoming barren, and death, meaning the death of its people of knowledge, jurists and people of good.’ Then he said, ‘The first opinion is the best one, and that is that it refers to Islam overcoming unbelief village by village.’

O Muhammad: 'Allahumma' '…Allah…' (az-Zumar: 46) Sa'id ibn Al-Musayyib(1) said: I have not found a verse in the Quran which gives the one who supplicates more hope than Allah's words: 'Say, "Allah! Creator of the heavens and earth"…' (az-Zumar: 46). Allah Glorified is He would not have taught Him to make that supplication unless He had predetermined that He was going to answer that supplication. So, the True Lord did not leave His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to make supplications using his own words. Rather, He taught him the wording with which to supplicate for He must have ordained the acceptance for those supplications. Similarly, if a man were to give you the key to a place that means that he did not mind your getting into the place.

Here, we should take some time to look and reflect on the magnificence of the rhetorical composition and the immensity of the supplication found in the word Allahumma which basically is the Majestic Name Allah with a doubled mim attached to the end of it, in order to make it vocative. We know that a vocative or a call is in order to request the person addressed to appear in the presence of the speaker, and that there are well-known particles which are used in the vocative according to how near or how far away the person addressed is from the speaker. For example, when the person addressed is close by, we say: 'AMohammed'; when he is far away, we say, 'ya Mohammed'; and when he is very far away, we say, 'Aya Mohammed'...etc.

So, the vocative particle itself defines the place where the one called on is. So, is it then permissible to use these particles when calling on the True Lord, saying, for example, 'ya Allah!' It is good manners with Allah Glorified is He not to call on Him as we call on others since He is closer to us than our jugular veins. It would not be appropriate to say, 'ya Allah!' or 'aya Allah!', for these are degrees of being far away and Allah Glorified is He is close by.

Therefore, you will never find the Quran using these vocative particles in supplications, but instead only using allahumma, to teach us to use it in our supplications. The doubled mim (mm) at the end of allahumma takes the place of the vocative particles that appear before the addressee, meaning that the mim is a substitute for the deleted vocative particle. The doubled mim indicates that it is a vocative and indicates your humbleness while requesting.

(1) What is mentioned in the Tafsir of Al-Qurtubi 8/5910 is that the one who made this statement was Said ibn Jubayr and the wording of it was, 'Truly I know a verse which no one has ever recited and then asked Allah Glorified is He for something except that Allah Glorified is He has answered his request.'

If we make a thorough investigation of the Noble Quran, we find that the word Allah appears 985 times in the marfu' case, and it is not used for supplication except in the form allahumma in five places. Those places are: this verse that we are currently commenting on; then, the verse in which Allah says: 'Say: 'Allahumma, holder of all control. You give control to whoever You will and remove it from whoever You will; You elevate whoever You will and humble whoever You will...' (Al-'Imran: 26). Then, Allah's words: 'Jesus, son of Mary, said, "Allahumma, send down to us a feast from heaven so that we can have a festival—the first and last of us—and a sign from You. Provide for us: You are the best provider.'' (al-Ma'ida: 114) Also in another verse Allah says: 'They also said, "Allahumma, if this really is the truth from You, then rain stones on us from the heavens, or send us some other painful punishment."' (al-Anfal: 32)

And finally, Allah's words: 'Their prayer in them will be, "Glory be to You, Allahumma!" their greeting, "Peace," and the last part of their prayer, "Praise be to Allah, Lord of the worlds."' (Yunus: 10)

By contrast, when He is called upon by His attribute of Lordship, we do say, 'ya rabb' (O Lord!). Thus, there is a difference between calling on Him by means of His majestic name, 'Allah,' and calling on Him by the word indicating Lordship, 'Lord', for Divinity implies responsibility, while Lordship implies giving and withholding. So long as the Lord is the Bestower of blessings, we say when we address Him, 'ya rabb' (O Lord!), since Lordship implies bringing something that does not exist into existence and providing nurturing and aid. You, human, are the beneficiary when it comes to the gifts of Lordship. But as for Divinity, it is making you responsible for doing things by the commands through 'Do' and 'Do not do'.

As for the word Fatir, it means the Creator, Originator, and the Bringer into existence what did not exist in a manner that had never previously been done. In other words, a new and original creation was created. If someone creates something following a previously existing pattern, i.e. creating a replica, then he is not called a Fatir.

As for the words: '...the heavens and the earth…' (az-Zumar: 46), He chose the heavens and the earth since they are things in existence that are not hidden from any human being: the earth bears him and the sky shades him. Both are with him constantly at every moment of his life. There are other blessings that might be hidden from people at various different times, such as water, for example.

In '...Knower of all that is hidden and all that is open…' (az-Zumar: 46), Allah Glorified is He reminds us of His knowledge of the unseen, but how can He remind us of His knowledge of the seen when that is something that is known to all people by sight?

Scholars said: because Allah is ghayb (unseen). We might understand from the word al-ghayb (the unseen) that it is just like what is al-ghayb (the unseen) with respect to us. We can see those who are with us in our homes, but do not see those who are outside. So, what is outside is ghayb to us. By contrast, the True Lord knows the al-ghayb (the unseen), knows those seen things that are unseen by you and knows those things that are seen by you as well as others.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '...You will judge between Your servants regarding their differences.' (az-Zumar: 46) This is a reference to the final court which will settle the dispute between truth and falsehood: the Day of Victory which these people are waiting for and telling you to bring quickly. Indeed, they speak mockingly about it, as is shown by the words the True Lord mentions them saying: '...bring us the punishment you threaten.' (al-A'raf: 70)

They also said: 'And they say, "When will this Decision be, if you are telling the truth?"' (as-Sajda: 28) So the True Lord replies to them, saying: 'Say, "On the Day of Decision it will be no use for the disbelievers to believe; they will be granted no respite,"' (as-Sajda: 29) meaning: 'When that day does come, you will never be able to come back here again to find belief or repent.'

We notice, here, that the Quran uses the word ibad (servants) to refer to both groups: the believers and unbelievers. This word, ibad (servants) is normally only used for those who are obedient and hold firm to Allah's Program, as in Allah's words: 'The servants of the Lord of Mercy are those who walk humbly on the earth, and who, when the foolish address them, reply, "Peace",' (al-Furqan: 63) so can the unbelievers and the disobedient also be called 'servants'?

Scholars said: Yes, because a human being has two sets of positions with respect to his Lord. In one of those he has freedom of choice, i.e. the capacity to choose which Allah Glorified is He created in the human being such that he can do what he wants, even to do what his Lord does not want him to do. In the other, he does not have freedom of choice, and that is in all those things which are compelling and about which the servant has no choice.

If a human being, for example, were to rebel against his Lord's Way, oppose it or deviate from it, we would say to him: 'If it is your custom to rebel, then rebel against everything. Rebel against illness, rebel against death... etc.' However, he will not be able to do so, since those are matters that are compelled upon him and about which he has no choice. In this condition of his, he is controlled by his servant-hood since he is compelled, and he cannot get away from being a servant of Allah Glorified is He even when he is an unbeliever. When we call the unbelievers 'servants,' it is because in one aspect of their conduct they cannot reject Allah's will, owing to their being compelled.

That is why Allah Glorified is He says about them in the Hereafter: '...Was it you [false gods] who led these creatures of mine astray, or did they go astray from the path by themselves?' (al-Furqan: 17)

These words are addressed to those who lead others astray, and in it those who are astray are referred to as 'servants'. Why is that? Because this statement is made in the Hereafter when all are equal, for every single person there is obedient, right acting and a believer. In the Hereafter they are all 'ibad (those who are given the ability to choose and they choose to obey Allah) and 'abid (those who are compelled to accept Allah's will), whereas here, in this world, everyone is 'abid, while only some are 'ibad.

وَلَوْ أَنَّ لِلَّذِينَ ظَلَمُوا۟ مَا فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ جَمِيعًا وَمِثْلَهُۥ مَعَهُۥ لَٱفْتَدَوْا۟ بِهِۦ مِن سُوٓءِ
ٱلْعَذَابِ يَوْمَ ٱلْقِيَـٰمَةِ ۚ وَبَدَا لَهُم مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ مَا لَمْ يَكُونُوا۟ يَحْتَسِبُونَ ﴿٤٧﴾

If the evildoers possessed the earth's assets twice over they would offer them to ransom themselves from the terrible suffering on the Day of Resurrection: God will show them something they had not reckoned with [47] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 47)

You remember that we said—when we were talking about intercession—that wrongdoers who turn aside from their Lord try to pay a ransom so that they will be forgiven, but that ransom is not accepted from them? Then, they bring someone forth to intercede on their behalf, but their intercession is not accepted. Let us suppose that one of these guys possessed the world in its entirety and presented it to Allah Glorified is He as a ransom in exchange for his wrong actions. No, let us suppose that he had even more than that, that he possessed the world with everything in it: '...and the like of it with it...' (az-Zumar: 47). We know that no person will ever have such a thing, but just supposing that a disobedient person did have such a thing and were to put it all forward in order to ransom himself from the punishment of the Day of Judgement, it would not be accepted from him.

Allah's words: '...they would [attempt to] ransom themselves thereby from the terrible punishment on the Day of Resurrection...' (az-Zumar: 47) indicate that before a person seeks to guarantee himself eternal bliss, he first tries to save himself from the punishment – that is the most important thing to him. That is why the conceited man who owned two gardens, mentioned in the chapter of al-Kahf, when he became dazzled by his work and thought it was righteous, said: '...even if I were to be taken back to my Lord, I would certainly find something even better there,' (al-Kahf: 36) meaning, 'He will give me, then, that which is even better than what I had.' That is the very height of vanity, and we take refuge in Allah Glorified is He from that.

Therefore, rich people say when they are afflicted by serious illness—and we seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He from that—'Take everything I own and bring me my good health back!' The first thing he wants to do is rid himself of illness, just like the people of disobedience in the Hereafter.

Allah Glorified is He says: '... from terrible punishment ...' (az-Zumar: 47) meaning from the bad punishment: '... on the Day of Resurrection ...' (az-Zumar: 47). Then, He surprises them with something they had not reckoned on: '...And there will appear to them from Allah that which they had not taken into account' (az-Zumar: 47). The word bada means 'appeared to them', and that is because no matter how broad a person's imagination is in this world, it will never be broad enough to encompass what Allah Glorified is He will bring forth in the Hereafter.

Muhammad ibn Al-Munkadir(1) (a prominent tabi'i and reciter of the Quran, transmitted a number of Hadith) said, 'This verse has filled me with fear because I am afraid that when I die, there will appear to me that which I have not reckoned on.'(2) That is because people often commit wrong actions without being aware that they have done so, or without knowing that they are wrong actions. They might, also, do them and then forget about them, which is what Allah Glorified is He refers to when He says: '...Allah has taken account of it all, though they may have forgotten...' (al-Mujadala: 6).

Satan might embellish your wrong actions and make them seem good to you when there is nothing good about them. All of these are things with which you might be taken by surprise in the Hereafter.

The first thing that surprises the unbelievers on the Day of Rising is that they do not find, there, the gods whom they worshipped apart from Allah Glorified is He and nor will there be anyone to intercede on their behalf. Even their leaders and masters who led them astray will wash their hands of them: 'When those who have been followed disown their followers, when they all see the suffering, when all bonds between them are severed.' (al-Baqara: 166)

(1) He is Abu Abdullah Al-Qurashi Al-Madani Muhammad ibn Al-Munkadir ibn 'Abdullah, one of the well-springs of truthfulness around whom the right-acting people gathered. He was a hafizh and the lord of the reciters, and there was a consensus regarding him being trustworthy and one of the foremost scholars and men of action. He died in the year 130 AH Tadhkirat Al-Hufazh 1/127 & 128.

(2) Al-Qurtubi mentioned this statement in his Tafsir 8/5911 and said that Muhammad ibn Al-Munkadir became very anxious as he was approaching death so that was why he was so anxious. He replied, 'I fear a verse from the Book of Allah Glorified is He: "...for something with which they had not reckoned before will (by then) have been made obvious to them by Allah Glorified is He." (az-Zumar: 47) I am afraid that there will appear to me that which I have not reckoned on.' This was also mentioned by Adh-Dhahabi in Tadhkirat Al-Hufadh 1/127.

More than that, those leaders who led them astray will precede them to the fire, as is mentioned in the Quran: '[It will be said], "Here is another crowd of people rushing headlong to join you." [The response will be], "They are not welcome! They will burn in the Fire."* They will say to them, "You are not welcome! It was you who brought this on us, an evil place to stay,"* adding, "Our Lord, give double punishment to those who brought this upon us."' (Sad: 59-61)

If the follower were to have gone into the fire before his master, his thoughts would immediately have fixed on to him and he would have thought that he was going to come and save him. Instead, he will enter the fire and find that he preceded him there, thereby dashing his hopes and making his sorrow and regret all the more complete.

Then, the True Lord says:

وَبَدَا لَهُمْ سَيِّـَٔاتُ مَا كَسَبُوا۟ وَحَاقَ بِهِم مَّا كَانُوا۟ بِهِۦ يَسْتَهْزِءُونَ ﴿٤٨﴾

The evil of their deeds will become plain to them, and they will be overwhelmed by that at which they used to laugh [48] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 48)

Allah Glorified is He says: '…and there will become plain to them...' (az-Zumar: 48), i.e their sayyi'at (the evil of their deeds) will appear and become clear to them, but is what appears to them in the Hereafter their wrong deeds or the punishment for those deeds?

Scholars said: 'That which they will see in the Hereafter is the consequences and the punishment for their wrong deeds. The True Lord says: '…and there will become plain to them the evil of their deeds…' (az-Zumar: 48) because the punishment they will receive will be of the same kind as their wrong deeds. The punishment will also be in the form of wrong deeds, as Allah Glorified is He Himself says: 'And the retribution for an evil act is an evil one like it...' (ash-Shura: 40) since the meaning of sayyi'ah is any matter which grieves. So, just as he did evil things in this world, We will do what will grieve him in the Hereafter.

As for the words: 'ma iktasabu' (literally: that which they earned), '...their deeds…' (az-Zumar: 48), we previously clarified this matter, saying that the Quran uses the form kasaba for good deeds and iktasaba for bad deeds, since good deeds come naturally to the human being and do not require any artifice or affectation on his part. That' is why the morphological form fa'ala (did) is used. As for evil, it necessitates that the one who does it to engage in artifice, simulation, and covering things up and that is why they use a form for it that expresses fabrication, namely iktasaba upon the morphological form ifta'ala (fabricated).

The example we gave for that was that of a man who looks upon women of his household or unmarriageable kin, who might be really beautiful, yet, when he looks upon them, he looks at them naturally, not seeking to conceal his look and fearing nothing from them. By contrast, if he were to want to look at a beautiful woman outside of his family circle, he would do so surreptitiously, using all his wiles and artifice.

Why then does the Quran use the word kasaba here when it is wrong deeds that are being referred to, and as we clarified earlier, iktasaba is the word that is normally used for them? Another similar usage is found in Allah's words: '…those who do evil and are surrounded by their sins...' (al-Baqara: 81).

Scholars said, 'The Quran uses the word kasaba for wrong deeds when the one who does them has become so accustomed to doing them that they have become second nature to him: they have become a habit and everyday custom. Not just that, but he has become so skilled at them that he boasts about them—and we take refuge in Allah from that. Such people do wrong deeds without constraint and without feeling the need to cover them up. So, for them it is kasb (did) and not iktisab (did by the use of artifice). They are much like the criminals who become so accustomed to crime that it becomes their profession. For them, doing crime is a natural everyday process. When, a wrongdoer does a wrong deed, it is considered a gain by him.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '…and they will be overwhelmed...' (az-Zumar: 48). That is it will descend upon them: '…by that at which they used to laugh.' (az-Zumar: 48) The meaning of this is made clear by the True Lord elsewhere when He says: 'The wicked used to laugh at the believers—they would wink at one another when the believers passed by them, joke about them when they got back to their own people, and say, when they saw them, "These people are misguided," though they were not sent to be their keepers—so today the believers are laughing at the disbelievers as they sit on couches, gazing around. Have the disbelievers [not] been repaid for their deeds?'" (al-Mutaffifin: 29-36)

Yes, we often see and hear the mocking and ridicule that the people of falsehood direct at the people of truth and the jokes they make of them, until in the end they even accuse them of being astray—Glory be to Allah! However, the people of truth take comfort in the fact that this ridicule is something that happens to them in this transient world and that, if they bear it with patience, they will be rewarded, and will return that ridicule and mockery in the everlasting Hereafter. The people of truth will mock the people of falsehood and laugh at them. Even more, the True Lord will address the people of truth to reassure them, saying: 'Have the disbelievers [not] been repaid for their deeds?' (al-Mutaffifin: 36) This means: 'Have We been able to fully recompense them in the manner that they deserve?'

Scholars said that evil people mock and ridicule good people in order to gain revenge for them being good—it is only because they are unable and are incapable of being like them that they ridicule and mock them, with the intention of causing them to leave their goodness behind and come over to evil. Those with intellects understand this matter and know that this ridicule is simply a manifestation of rancour, spite, and envy. So, they bear it with patience, knowing that for every time they are mocked or ridiculed they will attain to a new station with Allah Glorified is He and will be compensated.

وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَهُمْ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٤٩﴾ قَدْ قَالَهَا ٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبْلِهِمْ فَمَآ أَغْنَىٰ عَنْهُم مَّا كَانُوا۟ يَكْسِبُونَ ﴿٥٠﴾

When man suffers some affliction, he cries out to Us, but when We favour him with Our blessing, he says, 'All this has been given to me because of my knowledge'– it is only a test, though most of them do not know it [49] Those who lived before them said the same. What they did was of no use to them [50] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 49 - 50)

We have seen the polytheists, who took others as gods alongside Allah Glorified is He and said: 'We worship them for no other reason than that they bring us closer to Allah...', yet, when something difficult happens to them in their lives and they find themselves unable to cope with it, they do not take refuge in their idols nor in their gods that they worship instead of Allah Glorified is He. Instead, they take refuge in Allah Glorified is He and beg Him to relieve them of their difficulties and take away their afflictions. Why is that? This is due to the fact that this is the wholesome, natural disposition Allah instilled in mankind, and that is the covenant that Allah Glorified is He made with us when we were in the world of atomic potential when Allah Glorified is He said to us: '… "Am I not your Lord?" and they replied, "Yes, we bear witness."…' (al-A'raf: 172). A human being does not deceive himself or give himself up. So when he is beset by evil and hardship that he does not have the means at his disposal to ward off, he says, 'O my Lord!', and for that moment forgets his arrogance, stubborn opposition and rejection of the Messengers. In that moment, he finds no one but his Lord and Creator, the sole Divinity that he worships.

Allah Glorified is He speaks truly when He says: 'When you get into distress at sea, those you pray to besides Him desert you, but when He brings you back safe to land you turn away: man is ever ungrateful.' (al-Isra': 67)

We notice also that when a human being finds himself in a predicament from which he is not able to extricate himself on his own, he calls on those around him to help. Then, if no one responds to his cry for help, he says, 'ya hu', which means, 'ya huwa' 'O He! O the One Who there is no deity but Him!' Of course, by that he means Allah Glorified is He.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '...but when We favor him...' (az-Zumar: 49), i.e. We give him: '...with Our blessing, he says, "All this has been given to me because of my knowledge"…' (az-Zumar: 49), meaning: if We grant him a blessing, after this pain and affliction has befallen him, he will all too quickly forget and return to being conceited and deluded by life. This is because he fears that the removal of the affliction will bring him close to his Lord whom he called upon and that this favour, which caused him to take refuge in his Lord, will bring him back to the Straight Path, and thus propel him to go straight.

Straightness brings with it obligations and responsibilities that he hates, and he does not want to restrict himself in this way, since obligations would entail self-restraint and depriving the self from its vain desires, as well as propel one's self to bear the burdens of obedience. He is afraid that this will captivate him or limit his freedom of indulging his desires. It is for this reason that the True Lord says about prayer: '...this is hard indeed for anyone but the humble.' (al-Baqara: 45)

As for the statement: '…all this has been given to me because of my knowledge…' (az-Zumar: 49), there are two interpretations to it. Either, what he says means: 'It is because I know from Allah that I deserve this blessing for, if not, He would not have given it to me'—this if he believes that Allah is the One Who gives—or what he says means: 'It is because of the knowledge I possess, for I possess the necessary skill and acumen to deal with things, and I have experience and knowledge and I am the kind of person who studies the consequences and results.'

Then, his Lord corrects him saying: '...it is only a test…' (az-Zumar: 49) meaning: 'this blessing is a trial from Allah Glorified is He and is not because of Allah knowing that you deserve it nor because of your own knowledge and skill. It '...is only a test…' (az-Zumar: 49) meaning a test and a trial.' It is just as when Allah Glorified is He says: '...And We test you with evil and with good as trial…' (al-Anbiya': 35) meaning: 'We test with the bad in order to see who has patience, and We test with the good in order to see who will be thankful and who will transgress.

Elsewhere in the Quran, Allah Glorified is He says: '...and We have made some of you a trial for others; will you bear patiently? And your Lord is ever seeing.' (al-Furqan: 20) This means that each group of us is a trial for another: the rich is a test for the poor; the strong is a test for the weak, and the reverse is also true. The True Lord does this in order to test His creation and sees who will endure patiently and who will feel anxiety and despair; who will be grateful and who will be ungrateful; and who will be content and who will feel indignant.

So, every human being should move in his life in whatever condition Allah puts him in for everything that Allah chooses for him is good. So, if you see someone else with a blessing that you do not have, you should know that although Allah Glorified is He has favoured that person over you, still by bearing patiently what Allah Glorified is He has inscribed for you and not holding rancour in your heart towards your brother, you can become even better than him.

The verse is concluded with Allah's words: '...though most of them do not know it,' (az-Zumar: 49) i.e. these realities that are mentioned here are something of which the vast majority are unaware. In other words, only very few people know them.

Then, the True Lord makes it clear that this is not something theoretical, but rather something factual–a thing that has a historical basis and has actually happened to previous peoples: 'Those who lived before them said the same. What they did was of no use to them.' (az-Zumar: 50) Yes, indeed, for Qarun said it: '… "this [wealth] was given to me on account of the knowledge I possess"…' (al-Qasas: 78).

We say: 'As long as you have been given it by virtue of knowledge, regardless of whether that was Allah's knowledge of your being worthy of that blessing, or your own personal knowledge and expertise when it comes to work and handling things, then the blessing lies at your disposal. All you have to do is look after it and preserve it. As we all know, looking after something you already have is easier than bringing it into existence from nothing. Can you preserve it? That is to say: 'We are not speaking theoretically, but rather I am telling you of something that is a fact backed up by history. Qarun, in his self-delusion, said it. Then We caused the earth to swallow him and his dwelling.'

This gives rise to another matter: if you had truly been given on the virtue of your knowledge, then use that knowledge to preserve and hold on to it. If the small matter of holding on to it proves impossible for you, as is the case, then you will have even less capacity to bring it into being.

Yes, indeed! ''Those who lived before them said the same. What they did was of no use to them.' (az-Zumar: 50) Allah Glorified is He caused the earth to swallow Qarun and his dwelling, too. So, it was not just the blessing and wealth that left him, but the vengeance even extended to the place within which he lived, spent his nights, and rested.

فَأَصَابَهُمۡ سَيِّـَٔاتُ مَا كَسَبُواْۚ وَٱلَّذِينَ ظَلَمُواْ مِنۡ هَٰٓؤُلَآءِ
سَيُصِيبُهُمۡ سَيِّـَٔاتُ مَا كَسَبُواْ وَمَا هُم بِمُعۡجِزِينَ ﴿٥١﴾

They suffered its evil effects. Today's wrongdoers will also suffer the evil effects of their deeds: they will not escape [51] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 51)

Allah Glorified is He says: 'They suffered its evil effects...' (az-Zumar: 51), i.e. all those who preceded them in saying these words suffered the evil effects of their wrong deeds. In other words, they brought that upon themselves. We did not wrong them in any way, but rather, it was they who wronged themselves. '...Today's wrongdoers...' (az-Zumar: 51), i.e. contemporaries: '...will also suffer the evil effects of their deeds: they will not escape.' (az-Zumar: 51)

The mu'jiz is one who does something by which he challenges you, and you prove unable of doing something similar. That is why we call any sign—that proves that the Messengers are truly conveying what Allah revealed to them—a mu'jiza, (miracle). It is called mu'jiza because it confounds those who reject the Messengers since they are unable to do the same. As for those who believe simply upon hearing the Message and affirming it as being true there and then, they do not require any miracles. One of the conditions of a miracle is that it be accompanied by a challenge. Why is this? Scholars said: because when you challenge him, and tell him that you are going to do something that he is unable to do, you provoke his talents and faculties to prepare for the confrontation. Only then you can establish a proof against him. By contrast, if you take him by surprise with the challenge, he, then, has the right to say to you: 'By Allah, if I were to contemplate on the matter or give it much attention, I could have been able to do it.' Thus, mu'jiz means that it makes an opponent feel incapable of keeping up with the challenge.

We have said before about a mu'jizah (miracle) that it has to match the field of excellence of those to whom the message was sent, as well as the age in which the challenge is laid down. Surely, if you were to challenge a people to do something which they had no knowledge of or experience in, they could easily respond by saying: 'If we had had knowledge of this matter, we could have done it ourselves.' Otherwise, the challenge would not make any sense.

The Noble Quran gives us a perfect example of how a challenge should be when it challenges the Arabs—a people who excelled in the fine use of language and its rhetorical devices—to produce something like the Quran. When we reflect on this challenge, we find that it lowers the bar bit by bit. Each time it lowers the bar, the degree of miraculousness increases. First, it challenged them to produce something like the Quran. Then, it challenged them to produce ten chapters like it. Finally, it challenged them to produce only a single chapter like it.

It did not end there, for the challenge extended beyond men to the jinn. Despite the fact that the Arabs were a nation of eloquence and fine words, still they attributed an even greater command of language and degree of eloquence to the jinn. Proof of this is evident in their response whenever a poet became prominent or excelled in the profession, for they used to say, 'The jinn have inspired him and revealed those meanings to him.' They believed that those jinn lived in the valley of Abqar.(1)

Therefore, the Quran extends the challenge outside the circle of man to include the circle of jinn, for Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say, "Even if all mankind and jinn came together to produce something like this Quran, they could not produce anything like it, however much they helped each other."' (al-Isra': 88) Zhahiran means: helping and supporting each other.

That is why the miracle of Moses peace be upon him was in the form of magic, since it was in that field that his people excelled. Likewise, the miracle of Jesus peace be upon him was to heal the blind and the leper by the permission of Allah Glorified is He since it was in the field of medicine in which his people excelled.

Allah's words: 'wama hum bimu'jizin' '...they will not escape,' (az-Zumar: 51) mean: 'they will not be able to run away or escape the punishment, since they had done things that merited punishment, and when we take them to be punished, they will not be able to make Us incapable. In other words, they will not be able to escape from Us.’ As a human, when your opponent is in the same place with you and at your disposal, he can still escape from you and go somewhere else. By contrast, when it comes to the True Lord, He is in every place. If that is not so, then show me a place in which the True Lord is not there! Then how can there be any escape from Him? Where can you go? If you stay there with Him, He will not be unable to take you, and if you flee from Him, He will not be unable to bring you to Him.

(1) Ibn Al-Athir said, 'Abqar is, according to what they claimed, a village in which the jinn lived. So whenever they saw someone do something strange or which was very difficult or which required a lot of expertise and precision or something they saw as being incredible, they attributed it to that place and called that person 'Abqari. Then the word came into wider usage and every master or great person came to be called it.' Narrated by Ibn Manzur in Lisan Al-'Arab - subject matter Abqara.

أَوَلَمْ يَعْلَمُوٓا۟ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ يَبْسُطُ ٱلرِّزْقَ لِمَن يَشَآءُ وَيَقْدِرُ ۚ
إِنَّ فِى ذَٰلِكَ لَءَايَٰتٍ لِّقَوْمٍ يُؤْمِنُونَ ﴿٥٢﴾

Do they not know that God provides abundantly for anyone He will and gives sparingly to anyone
He will? There truly are signs in this for those who believe [52] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 52)

Because Qarun was so deluded by his wealth and fame and by the great riches and wealth he had among his people that he said: ‘…this [wealth] was given to me on account of the knowledge I possess.’ (al-Qasas: 78) The True Lord wants to set the picture straight for him and those like him, so He says: ‘Do they not know that Allah extends provision for whom He wills and restricts [it]?’ (az-Zumar: 52) Yabsut means that He gives abundantly to whomsoever He wills, while yaqdur means that He restricts and straitens the provision of whomsoever He wills. It is just as we say, ‘He gives provision to those who are without resources so that those who have resources may be amazed.’ So provision does not come to you on the basis of your expertise or skill at acquiring things, but rather, it is something that has been decreed for you by the Provider Himself.

It has been narrated in a Qudsi Hadith that Allah Glorified is He says, ‘O son of Adam..., O son of Adam! I created you to worship Me. So do not play. I have already set your share of sustenance, so do not make yourself tired (tire your heart with worry). If you are content with what I have allocated for you, I will bring comfort (peace) to your heart and body. And you will be praised by Me. On the other hand, if you are not content with what I have allocated for you, I swear with My Glory and Might I will set the world loose on you, where you will run just like the animals run in the wild. And you will still not get more than what I originally allocated for you, and you will be censured by Me.'(1)

It is the Provider Who assigns provision–no degree of expertise, no superior intellect, nor is good planning required. That is why Abu Al- 'Atahiyya(2) said:

The fool may be given abundant provision,
While you see a smart man impoverished and in difficulty (3)

The True Lord gives provision to man from where he least expects it. Therefore, the story is told of a shepherd who was walking along the road when he tripped over a stone. Under that stone, he found a well. He began to feel around in the well to discover what was in it. He found something that made a rattling noise like the noise of gold or silver moving around it. So, he looked into it and found a sack full of gold and silver, and he took from it as much as would fit into his pockets and as much as he could carry in his arms. He left the rest in a place that he knew well so that he could come back and take from it whenever he had the need.

After a period of time had passed, the sum that he had taken ran out, so he went back to the same place to take more of the money, but found that someone else had come before him and took everything that remained. Then, when he saw him carrying the money on his back, he looked at him. So the man said, 'Allah bestowed on me as provision that which you thought was yours, but in fact it is mine.'

(1) I found something similar to this in the Musnad of Ahmad 5/24, for he transmitted in a Hadith from Arfaja Ibn Asad that Allah Glorified is He tests His slave by means of what He gives to him. If someone is content with what Allah Glorified is He assigns him, then Allah Glorified is He will bless him in his provision and expand it, but if someone is not content, then he will not bless him.

(2) He is Isma'il ibn Al-Qasim Abu Ishaq, better known as Abu Al-'Atahiyya, a prolific, quick-witted poet who displayed great creativity in his poetry. He used to compose 150 lines in a day. He was born in the year 130 AH in 'Ayn At-Tamar near Kufa, and grew up in Kufa. Then he lived in Baghdad. He is considered one of the foremost producers of poetry and was from the same generation as Bishar and Abu Nuwas. He died in Baghdad in the year 211 AH at the age of 81. Al-'A'lam of Az-Zirikli (may Allah honour him) 1/321.

(3) This verse of Abu 'Al-Atahiyya's is from a poem made up of 12 verses composed in the raml metre. The beginning of the poem goes Al-Mawsua' Ash-shi'riyya:
I have not seen anyone whose life, is entirely free of hardship, trouble and pain.
So take full advantage of what you have put forward early, and never put off today's work till the morrow.

We notice that when it comes to provision, many people make the mistake of limiting provision to wealth and money only. Such people think that provision means riches and great wealth, but that is not correct. Rather, we say that provision is everything that is useful and from which you can derive benefit. According to this definition, knowledge is provision, forbearance is provision, trustworthiness is provision, good health is provision...etc.

Therefore, rich people who have been granted huge sums of wealth should always ask themselves when they see someone who is poor, 'I wonder what the provision of this poor person is? In what ways has he been favoured over me?' His provision might lie in his intellect, his fine conduct, his forbearance, in the fine reputation he enjoys among people or in his good health.

We said previously that the total sum of talents that one person has is the same as the total sum of talents possessed by another - one person might have ten out of ten for wealth, but zero out of ten for children not having been blessed with a child, and so on. That is because all of mankind are Allah's dependents, and there is not one of them who is a son of Allah Glorified is He or has any family connection with Him.

So, what is there to make one person favoured over another? We say that provision needs many different directions in which to go. That is why the True Lord distributes the means among people. Life would not be right if all people were rich or all people were intelligent or all people were knowledgeable. That is because a single intellect requires more than one limb to serve its thoughts. When an architect, for example, draws up the plans for a residential building, he is but one architect, but he needs all the builders to do the work and bring those architectural plans to fruition. The simple worker who digs a hole in the ground to place the foundation has certain talents that the architect does not have. In this way, talents are divided up and provision is distributed.

Rizq (provision) can be by an increase in one's income, or, conversely, by a decrease in one's expenditure. We might, for example, find one man whose monthly salary is only 100 pounds. People get amazed that he can live on such an amount, but they forget that the important thing with respect to provision is that it should come via lawful means, and when it comes by lawful means, Allah Glorified is He blesses the small amount so that it takes the place of the large amount. You might find, for example, that when this man's son falls ill, an aspirin tablet proves sufficient along with a cup of tea brewed by the mother, and with the permission of Allah Glorified is He the boy is healed.

On the other hand, another man may be earning many times that amount, but he does not take care to ensure that his earnings are all lawful. When his son falls ill, he goes to the doctor, runs a series of tests, and convinces himself that the illness is serious, and so spends a huge sum of money to save the boy from his illness.

It has been narrated in a Noble Hadith 'Whoever earns money through unlawful means, Allah will make it all go to waste and be spent in unlawful ways.'(1)

Thus, positive provision is when your income increases, while negative provision is when your expenditure decreases. That is why we notice, for example, one employee on a high salary going with a friend who only has a middling salary to the market. When they get there, the former buys turkey or fish that costs 10 pounds for the kilo, while the latter buys a plain kind of fish that costs only 4 pounds for a kilo. Then, both go back to their homes and each of them eats a fish, but the former spent many times more than the latter spent. It might well be that both achieve the same result, for both may be content with what they bought and satisfied with what they ate. This is what we refer to as, 'negative provision'.

A believer should always be thinking about being economical when it comes to his expenditure and should know that 'negative provision' is ampler than 'positive provision', since negative provision protects you against pain, while positive provision might well bring you pain.

Allah's words: '...There truly are signs in this for those who believe,' (az-Zumar: 52) refer to those who believe in the Provider who named Himself the Expander (of provision) and who named Himself the Constrictor (of provision). If the True Lord names Himself with these two names, then there must be beings that are affected and impacted by these attributes. There must be among His creation those whose provision Allah expands and there must be others whose provision He constricts and straitens. Both cases are controlled by Allah's Wisdom and Decree.

(1) Al-'Ajaluni narrated it in Kashf Al-khafa' 2/313, and he attributed it to Al-Qadai from Abu Salama Al-Humsi from the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. But this Abu Salama is weak and was not a Companion. At-Taqi As-Subki said, 'It is not sahih.'

Those people whose provision Allah Glorified is He expands and makes abundant must be grateful and thankful, while those whose provision He constricts and makes little must be patient and content. Moreover, he must make his way through life according to the level and type of provision he has been given, and must never resort to begging. Whoever is content with the amount of wealth that Allah inscribed for him, Allah will give him according to His Worth and Capacity. That is why if you were to look at many of the great people of this world–the influential and famous–if you were to look at them in the early parts of their lives, you would find them to be content with what Allah Glorified is He had decreed for them, and you would have found them living in a way that corresponded with their incomes at the time. Therefore, Allah's words come true, 'Whoever is content with My Decree, I will give him according to My Own worth.'

Then, the True Lord says (1):

(1) The cause of the revelation of the verse: A number of narrations have been passed down regarding the reason for this verse being revealed, including the following:
Ibn 'Abbas may Allah be pleased with him said, 'This verse was sent on account of the people of Mecca who said, 'Muhammad claims that those who worship idols and kill those whose lives Allah Glorified is He has made inviolate will not be forgiven, so how can we emigrate and become Muslims when we have been worshipping others alongside Allah Glorified is He and have killed people whose lives Allah Glorified is He has made inviolate?' So Allah Glorified is He revealed this verse.
Ibn 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him said, 'This verse was sent concerning 'Ayyash ibn Rab'ia, Al-Wali may Allah honour him and ibn Al-Wali (may Allah honour him) and a group of Muslims who had entered into Islam, but then were tortured and tested and were seduced away from Islam. We used to say Allah Glorified is He will never accept any payment or ransom from them for they are a people who became Muslim and then left their religion simply because of being tortured.' So Allah Glorified is He revealed this verse.
And Ibn 'Abbas may Allah be pleased with him and Ata' narrated that it was sent down concerning Wahshi, the killer of Hamza may Allah be pleased with him, since he thought that Allah Glorified is He would never accept Islam from him. Wahshi came to the=

قُلۡ يَٰعِبَادِيَ ٱلَّذِينَ أَسۡرَفُواْ عَلَىٰٓ أَنفُسِهِمۡ لَا تَقۡنَطُواْ مِن رَّحۡمَةِ ٱللَّهِۚ إِنَّ
ٱللَّهَ يَغۡفِرُ ٱلذُّنُوبَ جَمِيعًاۚ إِنَّهُۥ هُوَ ٱلۡغَفُورُ ٱلرَّحِيمُ ٥٣

Say, '[God says], My servants who have harmed yourselves by your own excess, do not despair of God's mercy. God forgives all sins: He is truly the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful [53] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 53)

Israf is exceeding the limits. We say that so-and-so is a musrif when he exceeds the limits by spending money in a manner that does not correspond to his income. The verse says that these people did israf against themselves, not for themselves. The fact that they did it against themselves indicates that israf brought them harm and negative consequences, for it was them exceeding the limits in disobedience and wrong action—and we seek refuge in Allah from that.

We said that israf is exceeding the limits. If those limits are established as the result of a command, then do not exceed them. If those limits are established as the result of a prohibition, then do not even go near them. It is for that reason that Allah Glorified is He says referring to His commands: '...These are the bounds set by Allah: do not overstep them....' (al-Baqara: 229) meaning: 'Stop at them and go no further.' As for the case when He refers to His prohibitions, He says: '...these are the bounds set by Allah, so do not go near them...' (al-Baqara: 187) since being near something entices you to go beyond it, as is made clear in a Noble Hadith: 'Whoever hovers around a private preserve, he is likely to enter into it.'(1)

= Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said, 'O Muhammad, I came to you asking for refuge so grant me refuge so that I can hear the Word of Allah Glorified is He.' So the Messenger of Allah Glorified is He Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'I used to wish to see you from afar.'

(1) Al-Bukhari transmitted in his Sahih 2051 in a Hadith from An-Nu'man ibn Bashir may Allah be pleased with him that the Messenger of Allah Glorified is He Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The halal is clear and the haram is clear. But between the two there are doubtful matters. Someone who does not do an action whose wrongness he is unsure about is more likely not to do those actions that are clearly wrong, whereas someone who risks doing an action whose wrongness he is unsure about is more likely to do an action that is clearly wrong. Acts of disobedience are the private preserve of Allah Glorified is He and anyone who pastures his animals around a private preserve is on the verge of entering it.' It is also narrated by Muslim in his Sahih 1599.

For that very reason, when the True Lord forbade Adam peace be upon him from eating from the tree, He did not say, ‘Do not eat from it’, but rather said: ‘...but do not approach this tree…’ (al-A‘raf: 19).

That is the reason the word ijtinab (eschewal) is stronger than the word tahrim, (prohibition). It is quite amazing that we hear those who transgress against themselves saying, ‘There is no word, in the Book of Allah which indicates the prohibition of wine.’ We reply: ‘How can you say that Allah Glorified is He uses an even stronger word than tahrim, namely ijtinab, when He says: ‘O you who believe! Intoxicants and games of chance and (sacrificing to) stones set up and (dividing by) arrows are only an uncleanness, the Satan’s work; eschew it, that ye may prosper.’ Satan only wants to cause between you animosity and hatred through intoxicants and gambling and to avert you from the remembrance of Allah and from prayer. So will you not desist?’ (al-Ma‘ida: 90-91)

The meaning of: ‘...eschew it…’ (al-Ma‘ida: 90) is: avoid it completely–keep away from the places it is drunk, keep away from those who drink, keep away from those who sell it, keep away from those who transport it...etc.’ This is clearer and more eloquent than forbidding it by saying, ‘Do not drink alcohol’, as is proven by the fact that the Quran also uses the word ijtinab in matters relating to the very pinnacle of belief for Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...therefore avoid the uncleanness of the idols and avoid false words.’ (al-Hajj: 30)

When we consider the israf (wastefulness and extravagance) in relation to spending, we find that the True Lord wants life to go on in the believing society in a balanced, consistent and moderate path, meaning that you know the limits of your income and the provision Allah has brought your way, and to live according to your means. Allah Glorified is He does not want you to keep hold of that provision and not spend it, nor does He want you to spend it all or be wasteful. Rather, He wants you to take the middle path, as He Himself makes clear when He says: ‘They are those who are neither wasteful nor niggardly when they spend, but keep to a just balance.’ (al-Furqan: 67) Wastefulness and niggardliness are both censured and forbidden. Anyone who follows any path other than that of moderation harms both himself and society at large, since by holding on to his money, he reduces the buying power and selling power of the markets and that, in turn, leads to economic and productive stagnation, the ruination of wares and a slump in the markets.

If he spends his money wastefully and extravagantly, spending his entire income, he cannot then find any money to save in order to improve the quality of his life and move up to a higher standard of living. Then, he starts to blame himself when he sees others moving upwards to a higher, more luxurious standard of living and he cannot do the same.

This matter is made abundantly clear by the True Lord when He says: ‘Do not be tight-fisted, or so open-handed that you end up blamed and overwhelmed with regret,’ (al-Isra’: 29) i.e. you will be blamed when you hold back your money and act in a niggardly fashion, and you will be destitute and grieved when you spend everything you have wastefully. This is because he will find the people of moderation living the life of happiness, without blame or grief. The sensible person is the one who makes his expenditure subject to his income, not his income subject to his expenditure. When you make your income subject to your expenditure, you will inevitably be forced to ask other people for loans, and that will wear you out and make things very difficult for you. You will find yourself at wit’s end and people will avoid your company and come to look upon you with disdain. Your life will become one long misery.

So, israf is exceeding the limits by doing things that will bring you pain and harm. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...have harmed yourselves by your own excess...’ (az-Zumar: 53). As for israf that brings you good, it is israf for yourself not against yourself. An example of this is the one who pays zakat as 10% instead of the obligatory 2.5%, because he is certain that the additional amount he pays will be written for him and stored with Allah Glorified is He. So, there is a person who works only for this world, while the other works for both this world and the Hereafter.

Therefore, when Imam ‘Ali may Allah honour him was asked (1), ‘O Imam, I want to know if I am one of the people of this world or one of the people of the Hereafter. (Can you tell me?)’ He replied: ‘I do not have an answer to this question, for it is within you that the answer lies.’ ‘How is that,’ asked the man. Imam ‘Ali may Allah honour him replied: ‘If two people come to you, one bearing a gift and the other wanting help and asking for alms, see which of them you greet with a smile and welcome. If you extend your welcome to the man bearing the gift, then know that you are one of the people of this world, since that indicates that you love what brings you prosperity in this world, and if it is to the other that you extend your welcome, then you are one of the people of the Hereafter, since you love what brings you prosperity in the Hereafter.'

(1) The story of the question of a man to ‘Ali ibn Abu Taleb may Allah honor him: ‘Am I among the dwellers of heaven or hell?’ and the response of Ali ibn Abu Taleb may Allah honor him.

You know the story (1) of the sheep that was given to the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, and which A'isha may Allah be pleased with her gave away as sadaqa (charity) except for one of its shoulders. 'Then when the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked her what happened to the sheep, she replied, 'It has all gone except for its shoulder,' and the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to love the shoulder more than any other part of the sheep. So the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Rather, all of it remains except for its shoulder.'(2)

So, the part that remains is the part that is given as a charity, while the part that is gone is the part we ate ourselves. This is further supported by Prophet Muhammad's peace and blessings be upon him statement, 'O Son of Adam, you have no wealth except for what you have eaten so that it gets used up, worn so that it becomes worn out or given as charity so that it remains.'(3)

But then Allah Glorified is He opens the door of hope to those who have transgressed against themselves, saying to them: '...Do not Despair of Allah's mercy…' (az-Zumar: 53). But how is it they come to despair of the mercy of Allah? Scholars say that this is because they transgressed against themselves, went to excess in disobeying Allah Glorified is He and kept on doing that.

(1) The story of the goat that was offered to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and 'Aisha may Allah be pleased with her gave it away to the poor.

(2) A sahih Hadith… It is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad 6/50; and At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan 2470, who said that it was a sahih Hadith. It is also narrated by Abu Nu'aym in Al-Hilya 5/23, and the wording of the Hadith, as narrated by 'Aisha may Allah be pleased with her is that they slaughtered a sheep. Then the Messenger of Allah Glorified is He Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked, 'What remains of it?' She replied, 'Nothing remains of it except for its shoulder.' So he said, 'All of it remains except for its shoulder.'

(3) It is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (4/24 & 26); Muslim in his Sahih (2958); and At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2342) and he declared it to be Sahih (authentic).

Then, when one of these people returns to the straight and narrow, he blames and rebukes himself and sees the wrong he committed as being great and unforgivable. He does not view himself as being worthy of forgiveness or mercy and so despair takes hold of him. We seek refuge in Allah from that happening to us.

When one reflects on this matter, one finds that this self-blaming and this despair of Allah's Mercy is, from another angle, a sign that a person's belief is good, for the fact that this transgressor sees his wrongs as being serious and does not think himself worthy of mercy indicates that his belief is sound and that he fears his Lord.

Then Allah Glorified is He says: '...behold Allah forgives all sins – for, verily, He alone is much-forgiving, a dispenser of mercy!' (az-Zumar: 53)

Ibn 'Abbas Allah be pleased with him said about this verse that it is the most hope-inducing verse in the Book of Allah Glorified is He since it gives hope to every wrongdoer, no matter how great his wrongs. If it were not for the fact that Allah Glorified is He followed this verse with His saying: 'Hence, turn towards your Sustainer [alone] and surrender yourselves unto Him...,' (az-Zumar: 54) it would have caused people to think little of it and caused people to have such high hopes of Allah's mercy that they would have forgotten His vengeance and punishment. The believer alternates in the course of his life between fear and hope, and he is in need of both of them.

Indeed, your Lord is forgiving and merciful, but in order to be entitled to Allah's mercy and forgiveness, you must return in repentance to Allah Glorified is He. However, you should be honest and truly sincere in your repentance. This is because when one commits sins and then repents, then sins and then repents is like someone who is mocking his Lord. We seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He from ever doing that.

When Ibn 'Abbas Allah be pleased with him said about this verse that it is the most hope-inducing verse in the Book of Allah Glorified is He one of those sitting with him said, 'I am of the opinion that the most hope-inducing verse in the Book of Allah Glorified is He is Allah's saying: '…Now, behold, thy Sustainer is full of forgiveness unto men for all their evildoing…' (ar-Ra'd: 6).

I am critical of those scholars who interpret: '...for all their evildoing…' (ar-Ra'd: 6) as 'despite all their evildoing', for that cannot be its correct meaning when we are saying that the verse is the most hope-inducing verse in the Book of Allah Glorified is He. We notice here that the Arabic word (ma'a) has two letters while ('ala) has three letters, so the meaning conveyed by ('ala) cannot be conveyed by (ma'a). To apply this to this specific verse, we find that this verse refers to forgiveness for wrong action and wrong action requires Allah's attributes of being the Mighty Subduer and Avenger. However, Allah's forgiveness erases the wrong action. In Arabic, that is a meaning that (ma'a) cannot convey.(1)

As they are trying all the time to cast doubt about the Quran, some orientalists argue that there is a contradiction in the Quranic verses as Allah Glorified is He says here: '...God forgives all sins: He is truly the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful,' (az-Zumar: 53) while He Glorified is He says in another Quranic verse: 'Verily, Allah does not forgive the ascribing of divinity to aught beside Him.…' (an-Nisa': 48)

We say to these people, 'It is your ignorance of the Arabic language and its stylistic devices that has caused you to make this mistake, for dhanb means committing an action which Allah Glorified is He has forbidden and for which set a punishment. Accordingly, associating others with Allah Glorified is He is not a (dhanb) since associating others with Allah Glorified is He takes one outside of the religion completely. And so, based on this interpretation, there is no contradiction between the two verses as you claim.'

Some scholars(2) say, 'This verse: 'Say, "[God says], My servants who have harmed yourselves by your own excess, do not despair of Allah's mercy..."'

(1) Among those who said that ('ala) had the meaning of (ma'a) was Ibn Kathir in his Tafsir (2/501). He said, 'This means that He Glorified is He is the One Who effaces, pardons and covers up for people despite the fact that they sin and do wrong day and night.' Ibn Hisham mentioned in 'Mughni Al-labib' (1/126) that ('ala) here has the meaning of accompaniment, and he quoted this verse in support of his opinion.

(2) This was the position of 'Abdullah ibn 'Abbas Allah be pleased with him and 'Ata'. Al-Qurtubi said so in his Tafsir (8/5914), and Al-Wahidi an-Nisaburi said in Asbab An-Nuzul (p. 212), 'It is narrated that the verse came down concerning Wahshi, the killer of Hamza Allah be pleased with him', and he mentioned the narration with its isnad back to Ibn 'Abbas Allah be pleased with him (p. 193).

(az-Zumar: 53) came down concerning Wahshi, the one who killed Hamza Allah be pleased with him at the battle of Uhud and afterwards Hind took the liver of Hamza Allah be pleased with him and chewed on it.

We say, ‘Hamza Allah be pleased with him was killed at Uhud and Wahshi did not become Muslim immediately afterwards, but rather after a long period of time had passed. Trying to reconcile the different statements in this regard, some scholars say, ‘Perhaps when Wahshi killed Hamza Allah be pleased with him and then remembered his standing in Islam and that he was the Lion of Allah Glorified is He he despaired of the Mercy of Allah Glorified is He and that despair could have led him to greater levels of evil and iniquity. Then a righteous person met him and told him, ‘Do not despair of the Mercy of Allah Glorified is He for Allah Glorified is He has said: ‘Say, “[God says], My servants who have harmed yourselves by your own excess, do not despair of Allah’s mercy. God forgives all sins: He is truly the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful.”’ (az-Zumar: 53)

When Wahshi heard these words, he became Muslim, for the only thing that had stopped him from becoming Muslim before that was the fear he felt on account of what he had done. But if Allah’s forgiveness was like this and his Lord had guaranteed to him that he would be forgiven, then why should he not become Muslim? The verse had been revealed prior to this story, so it was not sent down specifically about him, but rather was sent down beforehand. But it was quoted to him and recited to him, so it was the cause of his becoming Muslim.

Allah’s saying: ‘...He is truly the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful.’ (az-Zumar: 53) confines the giving of mercy and forgiveness to Allah Glorified is He since every sin that is committed infringes one of Allah’s rights and as long as they are Allah’s rights that are being infringed, He Glorified is He alone possesses the right to forgive and have mercy on the guilty party, and He Glorified is He alone has the right to take him to task and punish him. That is because Allah’s power is absolute and there is no other god alongside Him to oppose Him.

This meaning is clear in the story of Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him as related in the Quranic verses: ‘And [beware the Day] when Allah will say, “O Jesus, Son of Mary, did you say to the people, ‘Take me and my mother as deities besides Allah?’ He will say, ‘Exalted are You! It was not for me to say that to which I have no right. If I had said it, You would have known it. You know what is within myself, and I do not know what is within Yourself. Indeed, it is You who is Knower of the unseen. “I said not to them except what You commanded me - to worship Allah, my Lord and your Lord. And I was a witness over them as long as I was among them; but when You took me up, You were the Observer over them, and You are, over all things, Witness. If You should punish them - indeed they are Your servants; but if You forgive them - indeed it is You who is the Exalted in Might, the Wise.””' (al-Ma‘ida: 116-118)

We notice here that He Glorified is He does not say at the conclusion of this verse, ‘indeed it is You who is the All-Forgiving, Most Merciful,’ which would seem to correspond more closely with forgiveness, but instead He says: ‘...indeed it is You who is the Exalted in Might, the Wise.’ (al-Ma‘ida: 118) The fact that Jesus peace be upon him said: ‘the Exalted in Might, the Wise,’ indicates that he personally thought that they ought to be recompensed and punished for the lie they had told, but Allah Glorified is He is The One Who has the Absolute Power to decide whether He Glorified is He wants to punish or forgive them. If Allah Glorified is He had a partner with whom He Glorified is He shared power, then Jesus peace be upon him would not have said that. Allah Glorified is He is the Almighty, All Wise, and no one can change anything that He Glorified is He has done. He Glorified is He forgives them in this case, not out of His capacity as the All-Forgiving, Most Merciful Allah, but out of His capacity as ‘the Exalted in Might, the Wise’, for they fully deserve to be punished.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَأَنِيبُوٓا۟ إِلَىٰ رَبِّكُمْ وَأَسْلِمُوا۟ لَهُۥ مِن قَبْلِ أَن يَأْتِيَكُمُ ٱلْعَذَابُ ثُمَّ لَا تُنصَرُونَ ﴿٥٤﴾

Turn to your Lord. Submit to Him before the punishment overtakes you and you can no longer be helped [54]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 54)

The Arabic word (Inaba) means repenting and going back to believing in Allah Glorified is He as the Only One God with no partner, while Islam is putting into practice what Allah Glorified is He demands of you, obeying His commands and abstaining from His prohibitions.

Accordingly, does this (inaba) mean that they were with Allah Glorified is He in the first place and then left him and went over to unbelief, so that then it could be demanded of them to return to belief once again? We say, ‘No, that is not the intended meaning here. Rather, (inaba) here refers to them going back to that first covenant that Allah Glorified is He made with all His slaves when they were still in the realm of atomic potential and were still in the loins of Adam peace be upon him. About this covenant, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And [mention] when your Lord took from the children of Adam - from their loins - their descendants and made them testify of themselves, [saying to them], “Am I not your Lord?” They said, “Yes, we have testified.” [This] - Lest you should say on the day of Resurrection, “Indeed, we were of this unaware.” (al-A‘raf: 172)

So the meaning of: ‘Turn to your Lord,’ (az-Zumar: 54) is: ‘Go back to believing in Him with that natural belief that He Glorified is He made a covenant with you about.’ This natural belief is a person’s constant companion and it is what makes his conscience wake up after he has done an act of disobedience causing him to repent, or after disbelieving, causing him to believe. This natural belief that resides in the depths of the human soul is that which brings him back to his senses after he has been heedless and forgetful. It was this belief that roused Khalid ibn Al-Walid Allah be pleased with him ‘Amr ibn Al-‘As Allah be pleased with him and others from their slumber of disbelief, and they all became believers after having gone back to the first covenant and rediscovered the natural belief that lay within them.

Allah says, ‘...before the punishment overtakes you and you can no longer be helped.’ (az-Zumar: 54) Then, what does Al-Nusra (help) mean here in this context of talking about the Hereafter? It means that the people of falsehood will not be able to offer any help or succour to each other or defend themselves in any way, regardless of whether they be followers or those who are followed, as Allah Glorified is He Himself says in another Quranic verse: ‘How is it that [now] you cannot succour one another?’ Nay, but on that Day they would willingly surrender [to Allah]; but [since it will be too late,] they will turn upon one another, demanding of each other [to relieve them of the burden of their past sins]. Some [of them] will say: ‘Behold; you were wont to approach us [deceptively] from the right!’ [To which] the others will reply: ‘Nay, you yourselves were bereft of all faith! Moreover, we had no power at all over you: nay, you were people filled with overweening arrogance!’ (as-Saffat: 25-30)

Yes, they will not be able to provide one another succour because the situation they will be in will be one of blame and dispute, since each of them will seek to lay the responsibility for his predicament at the door of the other and each of them will declare himself innocent of the other. That is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘On that Day, [erstwhile] friends will be foes unto one another – [all] save the Allah-conscious.’ (az-Zukhruf: 67)

Allah then says:

وَٱتَّبِعُوٓا۟ أَحْسَنَ مَآ أُنزِلَ إِلَيْكُم مِّن رَّبِّكُم مِّن قَبْلِ أَن
يَأْتِيَكُمُ ٱلْعَذَابُ بَغْتَةً وَأَنتُمْ لَا تَشْعُرُونَ ﴿٥٥﴾

Follow the best teaching sent down to you from your Lord, before the punishment suddenly takes you, unawares [55]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 55)

The Arabic word (ahsan) is in the superlative form (af‘al) that indicates exaggerated levels of good. From this, we understand that a lesser amount of goodness is hasan (good). We say, ‘This is good and that is better than it.’ The command that is given here is to follow what is best. For example, Allah Glorified is He sends down certain rulings that gratify the human self so that it does not feel anger or hatred towards other people, as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Hence, if you have to respond to an attack [in argument], respond only to the extent of the attack levelled against you...’ (an-Nahl: 126) This is a warning to us: ‘If you want to retaliate, and then beware of doing so in a manner worse than what was done to you. If you are capable of responding in a like manner, then that is good. But it would be better for you to pardon and forgive, as Allah Glorified is He indicates: ‘...And if something [of his guilt] is remitted to a guilty person by his brother, this [remission] shall be adhered to with fairness, and restitution to his fellow man shall be made in a goodly manner...' (al-Baqara: 178), and when He Glorified is He says: 'But if one is patient in adversity and forgives – this, behold, is indeed something to set one's heart upon!' (ash-Shura: 43) This is the best settlement of affairs in this regard.

Another example of this is found in Allah's words concerning adoption: '[As for your adopted children,] call them by their [real] fathers' names: this is more equitable in the sight of Allah...' (al-Ahzab: 5). You know the story of Prophet Muhammad's adoption of Zayd ibn Haritha Allah be pleased with him and that when Zayd Allah be pleased with him was given a choice between his family and the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him he chose to remain with the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him saying, 'I would never choose anyone over the Messenger of Allah!' For that reason, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him rewarded him by ascribing paternity to himself, calling him Zayd ibn Muhammad.(1)

When Allah Glorified is He wanted to forbid adoption and sent down the verse: '[As for your adopted children,] call them by their [real] fathers' names…' (al-Ahzab: 5) He Glorified is He treated Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him justly and declared what he had done to be good, but what Allah Glorified is He wanted was better; what the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him did was just and equitable, but what Allah Glorified is He chose was more just: '...this is more equitable in the sight of Allah...' (al-Ahzab: 5). The wisdom behind: '[As for your adopted children,] call them by their [real] fathers' names…' (al-Ahzab: 5) is so that people do not come to view the immediate cause of their existence, i.e. their fathers, as being unimportant. And that is because viewing the immediate cause of your existence as being unimportant encourages you to deny The Highest Cause of Existence.

We can also say that the meaning of: 'Follow the best teaching sent down to you from your Lord' (az-Zumar: 55) is that at the time when the Quran was revealed, there were two religions practised by the people: Judaism with its

(1) It is narrated by At-Tirmidhi (3815) that Jabala ibn Haritha, the brother of Zayd said, 'I came to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and said to him, 'Messenger of Allah, send my brother Zayd with me.' He replied, 'He is yours. If he wants to go with you, I will not prevent him.' Zayd Allah be pleased with him said, 'Messenger of Allah, by Allah, I will never choose anyone over you.' [Jabala] said, 'I saw that my brother's opinion was better than my own.' At-Tirmidhi classified this as a (hasan gharib Hadith).

Book, the Torah; and Christianity with its Book, the Bible. When these Books and others were revealed, there were people who believed in them and others who rejected them and associated partners with Allah Glorified are He. Moreover, there were even atheist people.

The command 'Follow' is directed to everyone. It is as if Allah is saying, 'O you who believe in Moses peace be upon him and O you who believe in Jesus peace be upon him the religion you are following was good in its own time, but now Islam, the final religion that supersedes all others, has come, and it is the best religion that you shall follow.

Sometimes the comparative form (af'al) is used to describe the reality of the situation. But in this case, we do not consider its opposite, i.e. worse, but rather, we consider the same attribute of goodness, but to a lesser degree. This applies to all cases except for one case that we have noticed relating to one of the Sublime names (attributes) of Allah Glorified is He. One of His Names is Al-Kabir (the Great), not Al-Akbar (The Greatest), although the standard is that we should call Him Al-Akbar since that is the superlative form of Al-Kabir. So why is He Glorified is He not called Al-Akbar?

We say, 'The word Akbar does appear in a form that makes it seem as if it is an attribute of Allah Glorified is He for we hear it every day in every adhan (call to prayer) and every Iqama for every prayer. The prayer is a form of worship that has a special status in Islam, for it is that act of worship that is repeated five times every day, and it is the act of worship that never under any circumstances ceases to be obligatory for the believer as long as he remains alive. It is the only act of worship that was not made obligatory by revelation, unlike all the other acts of worship, but instead was made obligatory directly during Al-Mi'raj (the Night Journey to the Heavens). When we call people to come to do this act of worship, we say, 'Allah is akbar' and not, 'Allah is kabir.'

Here, in this particular place, the word akbar is more apt than kabir and expresses the intended meaning better. This is because we are not only required to perform prayer, fasting, making the pilgrimage and so on, but we are also required to do all actions that benefit and help us to perfect our performance of religious duties. This is why it is stated that one of the shar'i maxims is: 'Anything that an obligatory act cannot be completed without is itself obligatory.'

If we take prayer, as an example, we find that there are many requirements that shall be met so that one can perform this obligation. These requirements include, for example, covering up of one's private area. In order to cover your private area you need clothes to wear, but from where are you going to get those clothes? You need a tailor to tailor them, a retailer to sell the cloth from which they are tailored, a wholesaler, a factory for spinning, textile and dyeing, the farmers who grow the cotton and harvest it, and so on.

All of these processes require tools, machines, and workers. The same is the case with respect to the food that you must have in order to have the power that enables you to carry out the obligatory acts of worship. All these processes are there for your sake, to serve and help you. So, these everyday acts without which one cannot carry out his religious duties are themselves obligatory and should not be viewed with disdain. Rather, they should be venerated and closely adhered to, since they have the status of being obligatory.

So when your Lord calls you to prayer, while you are busy with any of these works, He Glorified is He does not take you from an act that is trivial, insignificant and valueless, but rather takes you from an act that is, in itself, an act of worship. So, for that reason, such works are kabir (great). Yet, The One Who calls you to the prayer is akbar (greater) than all of that. In the Quran, Allah does not call believers to a prayer except for the Jumu'a prayer as He Glorified is He says: 'O you who believe! When the call to prayer is sounded on the day of congregation, hasten to the remembrance of Allah, and leave all worldly commerce…' (al-Jumu'a: 9).

Out of all worldly activities, He Glorified is He singles out selling because it is the fruit of all the remaining activities, such as trade, agriculture and manufacturing. This is because humans are more eager and greedy to sell than they are to buy since selling is the transaction that brings immediate profit. That is why we find people so eager to sell, unlike those who buy, for when a buyer does not find the particular commodity he wants, he says, 'Leave it!' since it is from his pocket that he has to pay. But as for sellers, they gain money and profit.

Then, when the prayer is finished, your Lord allows you to return back to the worldly work from which He Glorified is He summoned you. He says:

‘…and when the prayer is ended, disperse freely on earth and seek to obtain [something] of Allah’s bounty...’ (al-Jumu‘a: 10).

Accordingly, you should not think little of worldly actions or think that they are not part of religion, for instead they are a part of it. Moreover, anything that an obligatory act cannot be completed without is itself obligatory, and those who disobey Allah with regard to worldly actions will inevitably also disobey in religious matters. So when we say in the call to prayer, ‘Allah is the Greatest’, it reminds us that things other than Him are also great and should not be belittled, but at the same time it tells us that The One Who grants us the energy is greater than those great things, so do not let your preoccupation with the great take you away from The One Who is greater.

As such, you come to know the wisdom that Allah Glorified is He calls Himself Al-Kabir (The Great), not Al-Akbar. When we say Allah is Great, this means that everything other than Him is small, but if we were to say Allah is akbar (Greater), that would mean everything other than Him was great.

So, when you hear His Glorified is He revelation and find that there is good and there is better, then follow the better of what He Glorified is He sent down: ‘...Follow the best teaching sent down to you from your Lord.’ (az-Zumar: 55)

Then Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…before the punishment suddenly takes you, unawares.’ (az-Zumar: 55) Punishment does not suddenly take anyone except for the oblivious and heedless person whom punishment never crosses his mind in this world. Had it crossed his mind, he would have avoided it and steered clear of the things that lead to it. And then, when it came, it would not have taken him by surprise.

But how can the punishment take someone by surprise? We say, ‘What is it that differentiates one person who is living his life in this world and one who is meeting his punishment? It is death, of course, for it is simply by dying and his soul leaving his body that a person is transported from the ease of this world to the punishment of the Hereafter if he is one of those destined to be punished. We seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He from that destination.

It is well known that no one knows the moment that his soul will depart his body, for it is possible for one to take a breath, but cannot exhale it. This is something that every believer must always be aware of and never forget.

أَن تَقُولَ نَفْسٌ يَٰحَسْرَتَىٰ عَلَىٰ مَا فَرَّطتُ فِى جَنۢبِ
ٱللَّهِ وَإِن كُنتُ لَمِنَ ٱلسَّٰخِرِينَ ﴿٥٦﴾

And your soul says, “Woe is me for having neglected what is due to God, and having been one of those who scoffed!” [56]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 56)

This is an example of the self when it becomes sorrowful and starts to blame itself. ‘Why have you allowed yourself to come to such a point when we have asked you to repent to Allah Glorified is He submit to His rulings and follow the best of what He Glorified is He sent down to you, thereby lifting all hardship and difficulty from it and keeping blame well away from it? We asked you not to adopt such a stance, but you did not comply.

The words (ya hasrata) are in the vocative form, but what is it that the slave is calling out to? He is calling out to sorrow, grief, and sadness, saying, ‘O my sorrow, come here to me for this is your time.’ He feels sorry for himself after the opportunity for feeling sorry has already passed him by. It is well known that it is only possible to use the vocative to call on something that is of benefit to you, but here he finds himself in a position of sorrow and regret. And the word for sorrow (hasra) has the first person attached pronoun, (ya) added to the end of it as well as the (alif) of absoluteness.

The meaning of: ‘...for having been remiss in what is due to Allah...’ (az-Zumar: 56) is ‘for having fallen short with respect to the obedience that is Allah’s by right.’(1) (tafreet) is neglecting to do what should have been done before, for when an opportunity has passed, it cannot be recovered. It is like the student who neglects his studies, but then takes an interest in them the night before his exam. We say to him, ‘My dear boy, before a shot can be fired the barrels must be filled.'(1) This is a proverb that is struck for those who neglect to prepare for things before their time, for when a hunter goes out to hunt, he prepares his tools in advance so that when he comes across his prey, he can take it out before it runs away. For a gazelle, for example, does not sit there waiting for the hunter until he has filled up his gun barrels or prepared his arrows.

(1) Al-Qurtubi mentioned many opinions for what was meant by (janb Allah) in his Tafsir (8/5916), including that it means:
- a) Obedience to Allah Glorified is He. This was what Al-Hasan said.
- b) Remembrance of Allah Glorified is He. This was what Ad-Dahhak said.
- c) Reward from Allah Glorified is He. This was what Abu ‘Ubayda said.
- d) Seeking closeness to Allah Glorified is He meaning Paradise. This was what Al-Farra’ said.
- e) The Path of Allah Glorified is He to which He Glorified is He calls us. This is what Az-Zajjaj said.

So, you feel sorry for yourself and blame yourself because of the fact that you did not take advantage of the opportunities you were given, and neglected to do so until they passed you by. Such opportunities can never be brought back, so you have no option left but to feel sorry for yourself and bite your fingers in regret. It is as if the two commands that preceded this verse, namely: 'Hence, turn towards your Sustainer [alone] and surrender yourselves unto Him...' (az-Zumar: 54) and '...follow the most goodly [teaching] that has been revealed unto you by your Sustainer,' (az-Zumar: 55) it is as if they should have acted upon these commands in order to protect themselves from saying as soon as they see the punishment: '...Alas for me for having been remiss in what is due to Allah…' (az-Zumar: 56). It is because of the mercy and compassion He Glorified is He has for His slaves that He Glorified is He does not like for them to say these words. Allah Glorified is He does not want His slaves to end up in a situation where they feel sorry for themselves and are not content with that for them. So when He Glorified is He says to us, 'Do not despair of the mercy of Allah Glorified is He turn towards Him, surrender yourselves to Him, and seek the best of what has been revealed to you. He Glorified is He wants by that to wake up the heedless, warn those who are thinking of rejecting Him and remind them of the consequences of their actions and the sorrow they will feel when they see the punishment.

Hasra is the sadness and regret one feels for those good things that have passed you by and can never be brought back. An unbeliever does not just feel one sorrow, but rather constantly feels many sorrows, since each time he sees the punishment which is his lot he feels sorrow, and each time he sees the believers living in bliss he feels sorrow, and each time he is reminded of this world he feels sorrow.

(1) This proverb was mentioned by Abu Hilal Al-'Askari in Jumhurat Al-Amthal, and he said, 'This is a proverb used for being prepared for misfortune and calamity before it happens. It is also mentioned by Az-Zamakhshari in Al-Mustaqsa fi Amthal Al-'Arab.

Allah words: '...and for having been indeed one of those who scoffed [at the truth]!' (az-Zumar: 56) mean 'Their crime is not just one of being remiss and falling short with respect to what is due to Allah Glorified is He but goes beyond that, for they also scoff at those who fulfil what is due to Allah Glorified is He.' So their wrong action is multiplied. We previously mentioned the example of the people of falsehood mocking and ridiculing the people of truth that is mentioned in the chapter of al-Mutaffifin: 'Behold, those who have abandoned themselves to sin are wont to laugh at such as have attained to faith; and whenever they pass by them, they wink at one another [derisively]; and whenever they return to people of their own kind, they return full of jests; and whenever they see those [who believe,] they say, 'Behold, these [people] have indeed gone astray!' And, withal, they have no call to watch over [the beliefs of] others.… But on the Day [of Judgment], they who had attained to faith will [be able to] laugh at the [erstwhile] deniers of the truth: [for, resting in paradise] on couches, they will look on [and say to themselves]: 'Are these deniers of the truth being [thus] requited for [aught but] what they were wont to do?' (al-Mutaffifin: 29-36)

We often hear the people of falsehood mocking the people of truth, saying: 'This guy is (sulala)' 'My uncle, take us over to your side'...etc. But it is enough for the people of belief that Allah Glorified is He is The One Who will give them their rights in the Abode of Permanence. So if they mock you in this impermanent world, you will mock them in the everlasting and permanent abode, if they laugh at you for a limited period of time here, you will laugh at them forever.

There is a point of interest in this verse: '...and for having been indeed one of those who scoffed [at the truth]!' (az-Zumar: 56) When we look at the word (nafs) in the Quran, we find that it always appears in the feminine, such as in Allah's, words: '…and yet, I am not trying to absolve myself: for, verily, man's inner self does incite [him] to evil...' (Yusuf: 53) and in His words: 'Consider the human self, and how it is formed in accordance with what it is meant to be, and how it is imbued with moral failings as well as with consciousness of Allah!' (ash-Shams: 7-8)

But as for here, its quality of masculinity wins out, for He Glorified is He says, quoting the words of the self: '...and for having been indeed one of those who scoffed [at the truth]!' (az-Zumar: 56) '...and for having been indeed one of those who scoffed [at the truth]!' (az-Zumar: 56) saying (sakhirin) and not (sakhirat) Why is that? Because, they say, although the word (nafs) is feminine, when it is used to mean 'human being', it is masculine.

After having warned us of the position in the Hereafter where we will feel regrets and feel sorry for ourselves, Allah then warns us of another thing that will occur to the self when it sees the punishment. Allah Glorified is He says:

أَوۡ تَقُولَ لَوۡ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ هَدَىٰنِي لَكُنتُ مِنَ ٱلۡمُتَّقِينَ ﴿٥٧﴾ أَوۡ تَقُولَ حِينَ
تَرَى ٱلۡعَذَابَ لَوۡ أَنَّ لِي كَرَّةٗ فَأَكُونَ مِنَ ٱلۡمُحۡسِنِينَ ﴿٥٨﴾

Or it says, "If God had guided me, I would have joined the righteous!" [57] Or, faced by punishment, it says, "If only I could have another chance, I would join those who do good!" [58]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 57 - 58)

Allah Glorified is He says: '…or lest he should say,' (az-Zumar: 57) i.e. lest the self should say: '...If Allah had but guided me...' (az-Zumar: 57), i.e. in this world: '...I would surely have been among those who are conscious of Him!' (az-Zumar: 57) This is astonishing! It is astonishing that the self will even deny Allah Glorified is He in the Hereafter, for the fact that he said: '...If Allah had but guided me...' (az-Zumar: 57) meaning that Allah Glorified is He did not guide him, and that is a lie.

Man says in defence of himself, 'The fact that I was not among the ranks of the believers means that Allah Glorified is He did not guide me.' That is a lie, for Allah Glorified is He guided you and pointed out to you the way to goodness. He Glorified is He clearly defined for you what was lawful and what was unlawful, but you did not travel His path nor did you follow His program: '…or lest he should say, when he becomes aware of the suffering [that awaits him], "Would that I had a second chance [in life]"…' (az-Zumar: 58) meaning, 'Would that I could go back to the world and live my life again.'

It is just like what Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: '[As for those who will not believe in the life to come, they go on lying to themselves] until, when death approaches any of them, he prays: "O my Sustainer! Let me return, let me return [to life].'" (al-Mu'minun: 99) These are all empty and false hopes, so do not believe what they say. If they truly were to return, they would simply go back to doing what they were doing before and just as they lied in the first verse when they said: '...If Allah had but guided me...' (az-Zumar: 57) they also lied in the second verse when they said: '...so that I could be among the doers of good!' (az-Zumar: 58)

It is quite possible to conceive of people lying in this world, but astonishing that they could lie in the Hereafter, when they are standing in front of their Lord. And that is why Allah Glorified is He says after that: 'And on the Day of Resurrection you will see those who lied about Allah [with] their faces blackened. Is there not in Hell a residence for the arrogant?' (az-Zumar: 60)

The most obvious explanation is that lying stuck to them and they became so accustomed to doing it that they even took it with them into the Hereafter.

Then Allah Glorified is He responds to these lies, saying:

بَلَىٰ قَدْ جَآءَتْكَ ءَايَٰتِى فَكَذَّبْتَ بِهَا وَٱسْتَكْبَرْتَ وَكُنتَ مِنَ ٱلْكَٰفِرِينَ ﴿٥٩﴾

No indeed! My messages came to you and you rejected them: you were arrogant and rejected the truth [59] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 59)

The word (bala) is a particle of response that only ever comes as a response to a negative statement, and reaffirms the meaning that was negated in that previous statement.

Like when Allah Glorified is He says: '… am I not your Sustainer?' (al-A'raf: 172), and the response comes, using the particle (bala): '...to which they answer: "Yea, indeed, we do bear witness thereto"…' (al-A'raf: 172) meaning, 'No, you are our Lord', since the rule is that the negative of a negative is a positive. Another verse like this is: 'Is Allah not the most just of judges?' (at-Tin: 8) and anyone who hears this verse should respond by saying, '(bala), O my Lord', meaning, 'No, you are the most just of judges.'

So, where then is the preceding negative to Allah's words here: '...Yea, indeed! My messages did come unto thee…'? (az-Zumar: 59) They reply, 'Because of the fact that he denied that guidance had come to him by saying:

'...If Allah had but guided me...' (az-Zumar: 57) the word (bala) appears in the response.' In other words, 'Rather He did guide: '...My messages did come unto thee…' (az-Zumar: 59). (Ayat) is the plural of (verse) which is something amazing that captivates people's gazes and impels their intellects and inner sights to reflect.

These verses (ayat) as we mentioned before, are of three types: existential signs that indicate the power of the Creator such as in Allah's words: 'Now among His signs are the night and the day, as well as the sun and the moon…' (Fussilat: 37).

And Allah's words: '…and among His wonders is your sleep, at night or in daytime, as well as your [ability to go about in] quest of some of His bounties...' (ar-Rum: 23).

These existential signs which direct our attention to The Creator the Most High are the first means by which a person comes to believe in Allah Glorified is He and that is why, every time the scientists discover something new or invent something new, we find the root of that thing in the Book of Allah Glorified is He. Words spoken by Allah Glorified is He to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him more than 14 centuries ago.

Allah Glorified is He sometimes even shows us these existential signs through the medium of the unbelievers, which is why He Glorified is He warns our jurists and religious scholars against meddling in the worldly sciences since those sciences have their scholars who have specialised in those areas, and those people will serve Islam and the matter of believing in Allah Glorified is He as well as showing us the proofs and evidences that oblige us to believe in Allah Glorified is He The Owner and Creator of this universe.

So, those scholars went to great pains in researching and reflecting upon the existential sciences in order to serve those who believe in Allah Glorified is He and serve Islam. They are, even if they themselves disbelieve in Allah Glorified is He one of the armies of Allah Glorified is He. Allah Glorified is He speaks the truth when He Glorified is He says: 'In time We shall make them fully understand Our messages [through what they perceive] in the utmost horizons [of the universe] and within themselves, so that it will become clear unto them that this [revelation] is indeed the truth....' (Fussilat: 53)

The most astonishing thing is that they deprive themselves of the rewards for all that effort they expend, for they did what they did and obtained whatever knowledge they obtained without ever thinking about Allah Glorified is He. All they thought about was serving humankind. So it is from humankind that they receive their payment, and indeed humankind has indeed afforded them great honour, building statues of them and celebrating their works. And that is why they will have no portion for what they have done in the Hereafter.

It is to them that Allah's words apply: '…for We shall have turned towards all the [supposedly good] deeds they ever wrought, and shall have transformed them into scattered dust.' (al-Furqan: 23) and Allah's Glorified is He words: 'But as for those who are bent on denying the truth, their [good] deeds are like a mirage in the desert, which the thirsty supposes to be water – until, when he approaches it, he finds that it was nothing: instead, he finds [that] Allah [has always been present] with him, and [that] He will pay him his account in full – for Allah is swift in reckoning!' (an-Nur: 39) meaning, 'They will be taken by surprise by the fact that the universe has an Allah and Creator, as well as by the fact that there is a Reckoning and Recompense, for none of those occurred to them in this world.

The second type of verses (ayat) are the miracles that accompany the Messages from on high, and whose purpose is to prove that the Messengers are being truthful in terms of what they convey from their Lord. An example of this type of sign is found in Allah's words: 'And, indeed, We gave unto Moses nine clear messages.' (al-Isra': 101)

As for the final type, they are the Quranic verses (ayat) that carry within them the judgements and rulings of Islam, and they are those verses (ayat) that Allah Glorified is He refers to here: '[But Allah will reply:] "Yea, indeed! My messages did come unto you; but you denied them, and you were filled with false pride, and you were among those who deny the truth!"' (az-Zumar: 59)

Allah Glorified is He says: '...and you were filled with false pride...' (az-Zumar: 59): the verb (istakbara) means 'to seek to be big or great'. In other words, not only did he view himself as great, but strived for and sought after greatness. However, that was not granted him, for one who is arrogant deems himself as great and must have no need of the one to whom he displays arrogance. And if you are in the kingdom of Allah Glorified is He and under His sovereignty, if you eat from what He Glorified is He provides you and live from the good He Glorified is He sends your way, then how can you display arrogance towards Him?

Then there is the fact that the only time a person should feel pride or arrogance is when he possesses some intrinsic quality that cannot be taken away. Therefore, all those who display arrogance in this world are doing is contending with Allah Glorified is He in terms of one of His attributes, since their arrogance is not backed up by anything, for who among creation possesses anything that is truly intrinsically his and cannot be taken away? And that is why we see those who are arrogant on account of their might being humiliated by Allah Glorified is He those who are arrogant on account of their wealth being impoverished by Allah Glorified is He and those who are arrogant on account of their good health and well-being being made ill by Allah Glorified is He.

So, the true and acceptable form of arrogance is for you to be arrogant on account of something you possess and which cannot be taken away from you. The very worst form of arrogance is to act arrogantly towards your Lord and Creator, The One Who is able to take absolutely everything away from you. As for those who act arrogantly towards creation, they are heedless of the greatness and immensity of their Lord, since if he had been aware of the greatness and immensity of their Lord, they would have been too ashamed and embarrassed to be arrogant, thereby disputing with Allah Glorified is He for an attribute that is His by right.

وَيَوۡمَ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ تَرَى ٱلَّذِينَ كَذَبُواْ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ وُجُوهُهُم
مُّسۡوَدَّةٌۚ أَلَيۡسَ فِي جَهَنَّمَ مَثۡوٗى لِّلۡمُتَكَبِّرِينَ ٦٠

On the Day of Resurrection, you [Prophet] will see those who told lies against God, their faces darkened.
Is there not ample punishment for the arrogant in Hell? [60] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 60)

Allah Glorified is He says: '... all who invented lies about Allah ...' (az-Zumar: 60), i.e. by saying, 'If Allah had but guided me' (az-Zumar: 57) and other such statements, for Allah Glorified is He did in fact guide you and point out the way to you when He Glorified is He sent Messengers to you, backed up by miracles, and when He Glorified is He sent down Books and clarified the lawful from the unlawful. They also told lies about other things, like those who said: '…Behold, Allah is poor while we are rich…' (Al-'Imran: 181) and like those who said: '…Allah's hand is shackled!…' (al-Ma'ida: 64) And just as these were those who claimed that there were other gods alongside Allah Glorified is He.

All of these told lies against Allah Glorified is He which is why they will come forth on the Day of Rising: '...[with] their faces darkened [by grief and ignominy]…' (az-Zumar: 60). Yes, they will be blackened because then they are face to face with Allah Glorified is He against whom they lied. And so their faces will inevitably be blackened, covered in dust, and overcast with gloom on account of what they did.

This is not to disparage blackness in and of itself, since blackness is one of Allah's creations, and there is nothing inherently blameworthy about it. You could well see a man who is white, but whose countenance carries an air of darkness and gloom so that his face appears dark, and from that we seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He. That darkness is the mark that is left on the face by acts of disobedience and wrong actions in this world before the Hereafter.

Then you could see a slave, whose face is like a raisin, and yet there is an air of light and brightness about him, and in his face you find the markings of right action. It is as if his face is shining with light and you never tire of looking at it. And that is why Allah Glorified is He says: 'Some faces will on that Day be bright with happiness, laughing, rejoicing at glad tidings. And some faces will on that Day with dust be covered, with darkness overspread: these, these will be the ones who denied the truth and were immersed in iniquity!' ('Abasa: 38-42)

So, the quality is not in itself praised or disparaged, and the blackness and whiteness that are referred to here are not the blackness and whiteness that we know in this world. This whitening or blackening is a relative thing with some having it more than others. One of the right-acting people I saw had so much light that it was as if a bright torch were shining out from his face. And whenever joy appeared on his face, it was as if the light of certainty and the delight of belief had spread beyond his interior and spilled out on to his face so that it glowed with radiance and light. That man had black skin like ebony.

We find something similar to this in Allah's words: '...the ugliest of all voices is the [loud] voice of asses,' (Luqman: 19) for is the sound of a donkey blameworthy when it is the donkey making that noise? No, because The Creator created it in that form, and there is a wisdom behind a donkey having such a high-pitched voice, since if it were to become lost or hidden behind a mountain or large hill, the only thing that helps its owner to find it is its loud voice. But when that loud sound emanates from a human being, it is blameworthy, for the most disapproved of noise that can emerge from the mouth of a human being is that which resembles a donkey's voice.

And the same is true of Allah's words: 'The parable of those who were graced with the burden of the Torah, and thereafter failed to bear this burden, is that of an ass that carries a load of books...' (al-Jumu'a: 5) for the purpose of this verse is not to disparage donkeys, since when donkeys carry loads on their backs they are fulfilling their role which is only to carry things. Donkeys carry their loads without objection or discontent. But it is blameworthy for human beings to imitate donkeys and be content to simply carry things without being aware of or understanding what it is they are carrying, and without putting into practice what they know.

Then Allah Glorified is He says: '...Is not hell the [proper] abode for all who are given to false pride?' (az-Zumar: 60) This is a negative form of question to which we must respond by saying, '(bala), my Lord!' meaning, 'No, rather, they do have an abode in Hell.' The meaning here is, 'What do they think? Do they think that there is not a place set aside for them there? Their place there is already prepared. It has the names of all who will be there and is waiting for them. It longs for them to come - there is no housing crisis in hell.

Allah Glorified is He created creation in the time before time, assigning to every person a place in paradise on the basis that all of creation was going to believe in Allah Glorified is He and assigning to each person a place in the fire on the basis that all of creation was going to deny Allah Glorified is He. Then when the inhabitants of paradise enter paradise and the inhabitants of hellfire enter hellfire, the places in paradise that were assigned to the inhabitants of hellfire were they to have believed in Allah Glorified is He are distributed among the inhabitants of paradise, as is mentioned in Allah’s Glorified is He words: ‘for such will be the paradise which you shall have inherited by virtue of your past deeds.’ (az-Zukhruf: 72)

The meaning of (mathwa) is a permanent dwelling place, and it will be: ‘...for all who are given to false pride’ (az-Zumar: 60).

وَيُنَجِّي ٱللَّهُ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱتَّقَوۡاْ بِمَفَازَتِهِمۡ لَا يَمَسُّهُمُ ٱلسُّوٓءُ وَلَا هُمۡ يَحۡزَنُونَ ٦١

But God will deliver those who took heed of Him to their place of safety: no harm will touch them, nor will they grieve [61]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 61)

Here Allah Glorified is He mentions the opposite, for although the permanent abode of the unbelievers will be in hell, the believers will be saved by their Lord: ‘...by virtue of their [inner] triumphs…’ (az-Zumar: 61). That is, by them triumphing and obtaining what they wanted. The bliss of the Hereafter is obtained in one of two ways: either by a believer entering paradise straight away, or by him initially being one of the inhabitants of Hellfire, but then being encompassed by the mercy of Allah Glorified is He and removed from it and taken to paradise as when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...whereupon he that shall be drawn away from the fire and brought into paradise will indeed have gained a triumph...’ (Al-‘Imran: 185). Yes, his triumph is of the highest form. It is for that very reason that they call the desert (mafaza) despite the fact that it is destructive and causes travellers to become isolated: they call it (mafaza) in the optimistic hope that those who travel through it will stay safe. It is similar to the way they call the sting of a scorpion or a snake (salim), in the hope that they will be unharmed by its sting.

When Allah Glorified is He saves them and decrees triumph for them, they are safe from even being touched by the punishment: ‘...no evil shall ever touch them, and neither shall they grieve’ (az-Zumar: 61) since every sight that they do see will fill them with delight, and nothing will ever make them sad, just as Allah Glorified is He Himself says in another verse: ‘The supreme awesomeness [of the Day of Resurrection] will cause them no grief since the angels will receive them with the greeting, “This is your Day [of triumph – the Day] which you were promised!”’ (al-Anbiya’: 103)

ٱللَّهُ خَٰلِقُ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖۖ وَهُوَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ وَكِيلٞ ﴿٦٢﴾

God is the Creator of all things; He has charge of everything [62] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 62)

After having mentioned His promise and His threat, and after having mentioned where the unbelievers and the believers are going to end up, Allah Glorified is He goes back to discussing another matter relating to belief, the fact that: ‘Allah is The Creator of all things...’ (az-Zumar: 62). It is as if He Glorified is He were saying, ‘What is it that has turned them away from believing in Allah Glorified is He The True Deity, when He Glorified is He is The One Who created everything?’

Some of them take this verse: ‘Allah is The Creator of all things ...’ (az-Zumar: 62) and assign every single act to Allah Glorified is He: in their view, Allah Glorified is He is The Creator of everything - The Creator of belief and The Creator of disbelief, The Creator of obedience and The Creator of disobedience. And, following on from that, they say, ‘So why does He Glorified is He punish those who do [wrong action]?’

We say, ‘There are some who firmly believe that everything occurs by Allah’s Omnipotence, saying that everything is by His Power; while there are others who cling fanatically to His attribute of Justice, saying that man is the one who acts and strives for himself, and that is why he is rewarded for obedience and punished for disobedience.’ This is the very opposite of what should be passing between the scholars since obedience and disobedience are both forms of action. But what is action?

Action is what happens when one of the limbs or organs of the body carries out its task. So the eye sees, but The Creator has set rules for what the eye should look at, and limits what it should see. So the eye sees what it is lawful for it to see, and lowers its gaze from what is unlawful for it to see.

And the same is true of the ear, the hand, the foot, the tongue...etc. When your action corresponds to what the Law commands, that is obedience, and when it goes against what the Law commands, that is disobedience.

Take, for example, a man who raises his hand to another and strikes him: by Allah, is it he who makes his limb do that action or does he simply direct that limb in a direction that is in its best interest? The answer is that he is simply the one who puts that limb in a particular direction, for he was certainly not the one who created the action that it does. And that is proven by the fact that he has no knowledge of the individual muscles that moved or nerves that were involved in that strike.

So, we say that the action is one thing while putting the limb in the direction of doing the action is something else. Every aspect of the action itself is created by Allah - He Glorified is He is The One Who gave the hands the capacity to strike, and He Glorified is He is The One Who gives them the capacity to do good to others. Allah Glorified is He is The One Who gives the tongue of the believer the capacity to say, 'There is no Allah but Allah and Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah', and gives the tongue of the unbeliever the capacity to voice the statement of unbelief, and we seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He from that. It is within your capacity to look with the eye towards what is lawful, and it is within your capacity to look with it at what is unlawful.

So, Allah the Most High gives every limb and organ the capacity to fulfil the function for which it was created. If that function corresponds to the Law, then that is obedience, but if it does not correspond to the Law, then that is disobedience. So, based on this, we say that Allah is The Creator of action in the real sense of the word. So, what does a slave do when he disobeys that merits him being punished?' And what does he do when he obeys that merits him being rewarded?

The action of the slave here and his role in the affair is that he directs the capacity that Allah Glorified is He created in him in a particular direction. That capacity that Allah Glorified is He created in him is suitable for being used for one thing and its opposite. So, the capacity and power to act does not come from you, it comes from Allah Glorified is He. But what is up to you is putting that active force in a particular direction.

So, if you look at it from the point of view of action, the entire process of acting belongs to Allah Glorified is He: 'Allah is The Creator of all things...' (az-Zumar: 62). And if you look at it from the point of view of channelling and choosing, that is the role of the slave. And that is why we say that a disobedient person does not disobey Allah Glorified is He because he is compelled by Him, and that when an unbeliever rejects Allah Glorified is He he is far-removed from what Allah Glorified is He knows and wants. If Allah wanted, He could have made all of mankind into a single nation who all believed and were all obedient, but instead He Glorified is He left the choice to them and allowed them to channel their actions in the directions they wanted in order to see which of them would come to Him of their own free will - and Allah Glorified is He knows best what His slaves will do.

Reflect on Allah's words: 'Verily, We did offer the trust [of reason and volition] to the heavens, and the earth, and the mountains: but they refused to bear it because they were afraid of it. Yet man took it up – for, verily, he has always been prone to be most wicked, most foolish.' (al-Ahzab: 72) It would be a mistake for us to say that man alone is the one who has freedom of choice, for the reality is that the whole of existence has the freedom to choose. But the difference between the freedom of choice enjoyed by the heavens and the earth and the freedom of choice enjoyed by man is that when the heavens and earth were offered the choice, they chose to forego their own wants in favour of what their Creator wanted. They indeed made a choice, but their choice was not to have the freedom of choice and to be compelled to follow the Will of their Lord. But as for man, he accepted the trust and chose to have the freedom to choose between the myriad choices that would be presented to mankind.

We previously clarified the difference between taking on the burden of the trust and paying that trust back. We made it clear that although the slave can guarantee himself when he takes it on, he cannot guarantee himself when it comes to carrying it out and giving it back. Thus, the trust is a heavy matter, which is why Allah Glorified is He describes man as being wrongdoing and foolish for taking on the trust and exposing himself to it.

So, beware of entering into a maze and understanding Allah's words: 'Allah is The Creator of all things...' (az-Zumar: 62) in a way in which it is not meant to be understood, and saying, 'If Allah is The Creator of the unbelief of the unbeliever or of the disobedience of the disobedient person, then why does He Glorified is He punish them?'

Allah will punish these disbelievers because they chose to use the energy that Allah Glorified is He had placed within them in a direction that opposes Allah's rulings. Similarly, Allah will punish disobedient people for directing their capacities in a course that is contrary to Allah's Commandments.

Allah says: 'Allah is the Creator of all things.' (az-Zumar: 62) Some people claimed that the word 'all' in this verse does not refer to everything in creation. They said that this verse is similar to Allah's words when He narrated the story of Bilqees. Allah says in the story of Bilqees: '...and she has been given (abundance) from all (good) things.' (an-Naml: 23)

The word kul (all) in the story of Bilqees does not mean that she had been given everything in existence. This is because Allah used the preposition min (from), which indicates that she had been given bounties 'from' every form, but does not indicate that she had been given everything in existence.

Therefore, these scholars were mistaken to use the wording in the Quranic story of Bilqees to infer a limited meaning in Allah's words: 'Allah is the Creator of all things.' Saying that Allah did not create everything is not a correct inference because while Allah used a limiting preposition min (from) alongside the word kul (all) in the story of Bilqees, He did not use the same limiting preposition in our verse.

Yet, despite this limited interpretation being wrong, the verse: 'Allah is the Creator of all things,' (az-Zumar: 62) still has different possible interpretations. The polytheists who disbelieved in Allah's Oneness (at the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him) accepted that Allah was the Creator of everything. Allah says regarding these polytheists: 'Now if you ask those (who worship partners besides Allah) as to who it is that has created them, they are sure to answer, "Allah."' (az-Zukhruf: 87) Allah also says: 'If you ask them, "Who is it that has created the heavens and the earth?" – they will surely answer, "Allah."' (Luqman: 25) So, Allah created the elements of containment, place, and time, and Allah Glorified is He conveyed this information to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who then conveyed this information to us.

Although these polytheists denied Allah's Oneness by worshipping their own false deities; none of them ever claimed that they or their idols had created the universe. Man came into this universe and found it in the same form as it is today, with a sky and an earth. So, how can he claim that he was its creator when it is older than he is? Indeed its creation is greater than his own creation, as Allah says: ‘Greater indeed than the creation of man is the creation of the heavens and the earth: yet most men do not understand (what this implies).’ (Ghafir: 57)

Indeed, the Arabs knew that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was a truthful person. He told us that this universe has a Creator and then described the Creator to us. Thus, we should listen attentively as he explains the solution to this riddle of creation.

We previously illustrated this concept in the example of a man who is stranded in a barren desert, waiting for death to approach him. If that man suddenly sees a table in front of him, laden with the best forms of food and drink, it is inevitable for him to ask: ‘How did this table of food come to exist in the middle of the desert?’

Similarly, we can find many proofs that Allah is the Creator of all things in the world around us. Indeed, as we said, even the polytheists of Quraysh accepted that Allah is the Creator of the world. However, they denied His Oneness because they wanted to deny His Laws and commandments, as His rulings placed restrictions upon their appetites. Belief in Allah is followed with responsibilities and obligations. It informs us that there will be a reward for the good deeds on the Day of Reckoning, and a punishment for the grave sins.

This responsibility is the reason behind the polytheists’ rejection of Allah’s Oneness. Indeed, they worshipped their false deities because idols did not require any actions from them. Therefore, this worship satisfied their natural urges to be religious, but without imposing any obligations on them. The polytheists said: ‘We only worship them (na’buduhum) because they bring us closer to Allah.’ (az-Zumar: 3) Their usage of the word ‘worship’ was wrong because a worshipper should obey the commands and prohibitions of the worshipped deity, and these idols gave the polytheists no orders.

Then Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...and He alone has the power and (is the) authority (wakeel) to determine the fate of all things.’ (az-Zumar: 62) A wakeel is the person who you authorize and entrust to carry out the actions that you are not able to do on your own. For instance, in the story of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him his people said to him: ‘Behold, we shall certainly be overtaken (and defeated by Pharaoh’s army).’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 61) That was the moment when the sea was in front of them and Pharaoh and his army were behind them. All the indications backed up their expectations that they will be defeated on that day. However, Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had another viewpoint and a different nature to theirs, for he was directly connected to his Lord, was reliant on Him and had total trust in Him. He knew with absolute certainty that Allah Glorified is He was his supporter. That is why Prophet Moses responded to them by saying: ‘Nay, indeed.’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 62) These words of trust were the result of his great reserves of belief in his Lord. He continued: ‘My Lord is with me, (and) He will guide me!’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 62) In this case, Prophet Moses considered Allah to be his wakeel.

Allah Glorified is He says about those who rely upon Him: ‘Nay – who is it that responds to the distressed when he calls out to Him, and who removes the evil (that caused the distress).’ (an-Naml: 62) He also says: ‘And whenever danger befalls you at sea, all those (powers) that you (had previously and mistakenly) invoked will forsake you.’ (al-Isra’: 67) So, Allah Glorified is He is the guardian and supporter of all His servants, including those servants who do not believe in Him. Those who disbelieve in Allah Glorified is He call out, ‘O my Lord!’ when things become difficult for them. They may fool others by their disbelief, but they can never fool or deceive themselves.

Allah told us that: ‘Allah is the Creator of all things,’ (az-Zumar: 62) and that: ‘He alone has the power to determine the fate of all things.’ (az-Zumar: 62) Sometimes farmers plant crops to thrive and flourish, but these crops are struck down by a disaster or are consumed by an epidemic that wipes them out. This calamity may even happen just before the crops are harvested. Indeed, any calamity is decreed by Allah Glorified is He as a sign that you should invoke Him alone, and not depend on the worldly laws! Indeed, He is The Creator and the Guardian over everything. His is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth. This is why Allah says immediately afterwards:

لَّهُۥ مَقَالِيدُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِۗ وَٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟
بِـَٔايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ هُمُ ٱلْخَٰسِرُونَ ﴿٦٣﴾

The keys of the heavens and earth are His. Those who have rejected the revelations of God will be the losers [63]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 63)

The Quran was revealed in the language and the dialects that the Arabs used at the time of its revelation, but despite that, there are Persian, Ethiopian and Roman(1) words that still appear within it. These words do not negate the Arabic nature of the Quran because they had entered the Arabic glossary before the Quran was revealed and the Arabs used them knowingly. So, these words become part of their language.

One of those words is the word maqaleed, for to Allah Glorified is He belongs: '...the reigns (maqaleed) (to the mysteries) of the heavens and the earth.' (az-Zumar: 63) The word maqaleed is either the plural of the word miqlad, a word which has the same morphological form as miftah, or is the plural of the word miqleed. Another Arabic dialect uses the word aqaleed which is the plural of iqleed.

The word refers to Allah's right of possession over everything and the right of disposal of anything as He wills. It also refers to Allah's power of protection and preservation. So, this verse means that Allah has Absolute Kingship over the heavens and earth, as well as the absolute freedom to do as He wills within them. He also preserves them while continuously governing and directing all their affairs.

This is the divine attribute by which Allah is the Qayum (Superb Sustainer) of everything in existence. Allah Glorified is He created everything in this world. Then, He provided and sustained these creatures so that they remain able to fulfil the functions for which they were created. To that objective, He set down laws that control them and revealed commandments that they are obliged to follow. Some people claim that Allah left these laws to control His creation without His presence, but this is a false claim. On the contrary, Allah supports and sustains His creatures at all times, without any moment of disregard.

(1) As-Suyuti included a section in his book, 'Al-Itqan fi 'Ulum Al-Quran,' and mentioned the words that appear in the Quran in a language other than that of the Arabs (pp. 105 - 120). Examples of Persian words include (ibriq), (jahannam) and (dinar); examples of Ethiopian words include (sinin), (shatr) and (taghut); and examples of Roman words include (qist), (qustas) and (tafaq).

Read Allah’s words: ‘Verily, it is Allah (alone) who upholds the celestial bodies and the earth, lest they deviate (from their orbits) – for if they should ever deviate, there is none that could uphold them after He will have ceased to do so.’ (Fatir: 41)

Some philosophers claim that Allah left rules and laws to govern the universe and that these laws are uniform. If this concept was true, things would settle into one particular course and would not change. For instance, the healthy systems would remain endlessly healthy, the mighty would remain mighty, and the rich would remain rich. However, this is not the way things are, because Allah Glorified is He acts freely within His creation and sustains His creatures according to His will.

It is narrated (in a weak Hadith) that ‘Uthman ibn ‘Affan may Allah be pleased with him asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about the maqaleed (reigns) of the heavens and the earth. This Hadith has a weak chain of narration, but in it, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied: ‘O son of ‘Affan. Nobody before you has ever asked me about them. The maqaleed of the heavens and earth are, ‘La ilaha illa-Allah (There is no god but Allah)’, ‘Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest [than everything]),’ ‘Subhana’llahi wa bi-hamdihi (Glory and praise belong to Allah)’, ‘Astaghfiru’llaha’l-‘azheem (I ask forgiveness from Allah, the Immensely Great)’, ‘La hawla wa la quwwata illa bi-llahi’l-‘aliyyi’l-‘azheem (There is no power and no strength except from Allah, the High, the Immense)’, ‘Huwa-l-awwalu wal-akhiru waz-zhahiru wal-batin, bi-yadihil-khayru yuhyi wa yumeet (He is the First and Last, and the Inward and the Outward. Good lies in His hands and He brings life and death)’. These are the maqaleed of the heavens and the earth.’(1)

(1) This narration was transmitted by Al-‘Uqayli in ‘The Book of Weak Hadiths’ (Ad-Du‘afa’u Al-kabir) (4/231) in the biography of Mikhlad Abu Al-Hudhayl (1825), =

Therefore, one of the interpretations of the phrase: 'maqaleed of the heavens and the earth,' is that they are the phrases which we should use in the pious remembrance of Allah Glorified is He. If this Hadith was authentic, it means that the entirety of existence was based upon particular concepts, which have been summarized in these phrases connected to belief in Allah Glorified is He.

The phrase: 'La ilaha illa-Allah (There is no god but Allah)' means that Allah Glorified is He is the Only Deity and that He has no partners in Creation. Whenever He decides upon a matter, there is no force that can oppose Him or object to His decrees. If He gives bounties, there is no being that can hold back His gifts, and if He withholds His gifts, none can then give them away. That is why Allah said: 'Behold, (you will find that) those beings whom you invoke instead of Allah cannot create (as much as) a fly, even were they to join all their forces to that end.' (al-Hajj: 73) Indeed, more than that, these false deities are unable to perform even simpler tasks than the task of creation. Allah says: '...And if a fly takes anything from them, they cannot retrieve it.' (al-Hajj: 73) They cannot even retrieve the slightest amount of honey that a fly takes when it falls upon it. Allah says: 'Weak indeed is the seeker, and (weak) is the (false deity being) sought.' (al-Hajj: 73)

The phrase: 'La ilaha illa-Allah (There is no god but Allah),' is a primary principle that has been set by Allah Glorified is He Himself. Allah informed us of it as the ultimate testimony of His Essence. This testimony means that nothing in creation can ever refuse Allah's orders. If He orders anything to come into existence, it will comply as He wishes. Thereafter, the angels testified to this principle because they witnessed it in action. Later on, the people of knowledge also paid witness to it, as they inferred it from the material forms of evidence and proofs they discovered in the Universe. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Allah (Himself) proffers evidence – and (so do) the angels and all who are endowed with knowledge – that there is no deity except Him, The Upholder of Equity: there is no deity except Him, The Almighty, The Truly Wise.’ (Al-‘Imran: 18) Thus, the underlying concept of this is one of Allah’s reigns in creation.

= and he said, 'There is great speculation regarding its chain of narrators, and it is only corroborated by a path of narrations that is almost identical to it.' Al-Kinani also mentioned it in Tanzih Ash-shari'a Al-Marfu'a (1/192), mentioning the difference of opinion regarding this narration being a fabrication, even though there was agreement that it was munkar (denied from being authentic). Ibn Hajar said, 'In my view, it is munkar (denied) with respect to all its chains of narration. But as for definitively declaring it to be fabricated, I will not go that far, for I have not seen anyone in its chain of narration who may be described as being a liar.'

Similarly, the phrase: ‘Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest)’ is one of the maqaleed of the heavens and the earth. We previously explained that this is the phrase which we use to call people to prayer. It is important to note that the word Akbar is not one of Allah’s Names. Rather, it is the word Al-Kabeer which is one of His Names. So, why did Allah not use His Name, Al-Kabeer (The Great), when summoning people to prayer, but instead used the attribute Akbar (The Greatest) for this call?

The answer is that we are comparing two concepts in this call to prayer. Indeed, we are comparing the concept of Allah’s worship to the concept of worldly tasks we may be engaged in at the time of prayer. Thus, the word Akbar (The Greatest) is the appropriate linguistic form to be used, because we use it when making relative comparisons between two concepts. It means that when the time of prayer is due, Allah should be Greater in our eyes than the appreciably important tasks of livelihood and sustenance. Hence, since the tasks of livelihood are themselves important, Allah described Himself using the word ‘The Greatest’ (Akbar) instead of the word ‘Great’ (Kabeer). It is true that these tasks of livelihood are still great endeavours. Certainly, they place our worldly affairs in order, and give us the strength and capacity to uphold the affairs of our religion. However, despite the greatness of these worldly tasks, Allah is Greater. Therefore, in the call, ‘Allah is The Greatest,’ Allah implies that these actions were still great. However, you are obliged as a servant to leave these great elective tasks that you are doing when obligatory prayers are being called to. If Allah had used the Name Al-Kabeer (Great) instead of the word Akbar (The Greatest) in the call to prayer, this would have indicated that the tasks of sustenance are small and trivial, which was not the message intended.

The phrase: ‘Subhanallahi wa bi-hamdihi (Glory and praise belong to Allah),’ is also one of the defining concepts of the heavens and the earth. This is because you will be exposed to wondrous concepts and matters in the universe that are beyond comprehension and understanding. Whenever an extraordinary action is ascribed to Allah Glorified is He a believer should say, 'Subhanallah (Glory be to Allah).' This is a matter we clarified when we narrated the story of the Night Journey of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. As we know, the Quranic account of this journey begins with the phrase: 'Limitless in His Glory (Subhan) is He (Allah) who transported His servant by night from the Inviolable House of Worship (at Mecca) to the Remote House of Worship (at Jerusalem).' (*al-Isra': *1)

There is nothing strange about this event since the action was ascribed to Allah Glorified is He. Prophet Muhammad did not say, 'I travelled from Mecca to Jerusalem in one night,' but rather, he said, 'I was transported from Mecca to Jerusalem (by Allah) in one night.'(1) It is well-known that a verb corresponds to its subject in terms of its strength and time, but when the subject of the verb is Allah Glorified is He there is no time to speak of.

We previously gave an illustration of that concept. If you were planning a journey to Alexandria, you may probably use a horse. Alternatively, you may want to use a car, buy an airplane ticket, or even build a rocket to get there faster. Your journey will not take the same time with each of these modes of transportation because the length of time it takes depends on the speed and strength of the mode you use to travel. The more powerful the means of your travel is, the shorter the time of your journey. So, if the Power that transported Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in the Night Journey was the Omnipotent Power of Allah Glorified is He then there is no doubt that this journey would need no time to be accomplished.

We can find another proof of Allah's extraordinary might in the blood that flows in our veins. This blood must have a specific degree of liquidity in order to flow. If its liquidity decreases inside the blood vessels, the blood starts to clot and may cause fatal emboli to shower the bloodstream. However, in contrast, when that same blood flows out of the body, it normally clots up to seal the wound through which it is flowing. Therefore, the same blood observes two different behaviours to suite its specific function.

(1) From Jabir ibn 'Abdullah may Allah be pleased with him that Prophet Muhammad said, 'When Quraysh called me a liar when I was transported by night to Jerusalem, I stood in the Hijr and Allah made the Sacred House at Jerusalem appear to me. So I started to describe its signs to them while I was looking upon it.' It was transmitted by Ahmad in his Musnad (3/377), Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (4710) and by Muslim (170). Prophet Muhammad described the Sacred House at Jerusalem to them, gate by gate, window by window, as well as its pillars and the road that leads to it. Such a detailed description could not conceivably result from a dream, no matter how true that dream was, for dreams do not contain such details.

Reflect upon the temperature of the human body. You will find that its natural temperature is 37 degrees. Regardless of whether you live in the land of the Eskimos or at the equator, your temperature remains fixed at 37 degrees. Despite that, there are organs within the human body that have slightly different temperatures, even though they are part of a single body. A well-known quality of heat or cold is that of temperature homeostasis. Adjacent objects tend towards a single level of temperature. So, why does the heat and coldness inside the body not equalise at one specific degree? These are all matters to which we must say, 'Subhanallah (Glory be to Allah), the One Who created this capacity.'

The Quran teaches us to utter this phrase and remember its underlying concept whenever we are confronted by any act that only Allah Glorified is He is capable of doing. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Limitless in His Glory is He (Allah) who transported His servant by night,' (al-Isra': 1) and He says: 'Limitless in His Glory is He who has created opposites in whatever the earth produces, and in men's own selves, and in that of which (as yet) they have no knowledge.' (Ya Sin: 36)

The phrase: '(Subhanallah (Glory is to Allah…)' should always be followed by the phrase 'Wa Bi-hamdihi (…and praise is to Him)'. This additional phrase means that you are praising Allah because He is exalted and transcendent above His creation. We should praise Allah Glorified is He because He does not resemble His creation in any way. There is no one like Him, and He has no peer or equal. This is also because the fruits of His transcendence will come back to the believers in the form of divine remarkable bounties.

The phrase: 'Astaghfiru'llaha'l-'azheem (I ask forgiveness from Allah, the Immence),' is also one of the governing concepts of the heavens and the earth. If a servant forgets Allah's orders, it is one of Allah's bounties to forgive that servant and allow them to repent and return to Allah's path. In this world, this forgiveness will remove one's sins and wipe his slate clean, and is one of the main manifestations of Allah's mercy towards us. However, if Allah Glorified is He did not allow the repentance of His servants, their disobedience will become worse and they would continue to transgress against others. So, the institution of repentance spares people from the evils of other people.

The phrase: 'La hawla wa la quwwata illa bi-llahi'l-'aliyyi'l-'azheem (There is no power and no strength except from Allah, the High, the Immense),' is also one of the maqaleed of the heavens and the earth. When you are performing any action, do not consider these actions to be the result of your power or strength, since there is no power or strength except by Allah's will. Indeed, Allah is capable of taking away all your power. For instance, you can move your hands whichever way you want, smoothly and easily, and they obey your commands and comply with your intentions. However, you know nothing of the individual muscles and nerves that participate in their movements. This is the ability that Allah has placed inside your body, and if Allah wills to take that power from you, He can easily stop the nerve impulses that flow from your brain to your limbs. If that happens, these limbs will not respond to you, and you will be unable to even lift them at will. So, keep aware of this matter whenever you approach any action, and know that it does not happen by your power, but rather by the Power of Allah Glorified is He.

The phrase: 'Huwa-l-awwalu wal-akhiru wazh-zhahiru wal-batin (He is the First and Last, and the outward and the inward,' is also one of the defining concepts of the heavens and the earth. Allah is the First being in existence as He is without a beginning. He is also the Last being, which means that He is without an end. It is like we say in the supplication during Ramadan, '(O' Allah), you are the First who is not before a Last, and (O' Allah), you are the Last who is not after a First, but that leads to that, so stop, O intellect, at the limit of what you can grasp!'

The word Azh-zhahir (the Outward) refers to the visible and outwardly signs in the kingdom of Allah Glorified is He that the eyes can perceive. On the other hand, the word Al-batin (the Inward) refers to the hidden aspects of Allah's kingdom that the eye cannot see. So Allah Glorified is He has a visible mulk (kingdom) and an invisible malakut (realm) that no one may see, except those of His servants whom He wills at the time that He wills.

The phrase: 'Biyadihil-khayru (Good lies in His hands)' is also one of the maqaleed. Some of the scholars(1) have wrongly said, 'Both good and evil lie in Allah's hands.' They claimed that the proof for their opinion is found in Allah's words: 'Say: "O Allah, Lord of all dominion! You grant your dominion unto whom You will, and take away dominion from whom You will; and You exalt whom You will, and abase whom You will. In Your hand is all-good. Verily, You have the power to will anything."' (Al-'Imran: 26) They said that the verse brought forth several forms of opposites, and thus, these scholars felt emboldened to claim that both good and evil lie in Allah's hands. However, their opinion is wrong and not permissible. Indeed, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him only said, 'The Good lies in His hands.' This was an exaltation of Allah, as Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not ascribe evil to Allah Glorified is He. Similarly, we must never ascribe evil to Allah, and that is why, since 1928, I have been objecting to the supplication many people repeat, 'Spare us the evil of what You have decreed.'(2) I used to say that this supplication must be amended! Then, Allah guided me to another meaning from this supplication, which is that the real evil we are seeking refuge from is not being content with Allah's Decrees, and not that the divine decrees are evil in any way.

If we were to reflect on the wording of the phrase: 'Biyadihil-khayru (Good lies in His hands),' as well as the verse: '...In Your hand is all good,' (Al-'Imran: 26) we would notice that the good here is absolute. Thus, all of the decrees of Allah are good, and the evil only ever comes from the creation. Read Allah's words: 'Whatever good happens to you is from Allah; and whatever evil befalls you is from yourself.' (an-Nisa': 79) Someone might ask, 'How can we understand the verse in which Allah says: '…all is from Allah'? (an-Nisa': 78) We previously explained that everything is from Allah Glorified is He in the sense that Allah is The Creator of all energy and power. Indeed, He is The Creator of the force and capacity to act. However, it is you who will channel that force and direct it either towards good or towards evil. So, based on that, we can say that good is from Allah Glorified is He and evil is from us.

(1) Ibn 'Abbas, may Allah be pleased with him said, according to what is narrated by Ibn Al-Jawzi in Zad Al-Masir in his Tafsir of verse 26 of the chapter of 'Al 'Imran, 'Both good and evil lie in Your hands, but ask for one of them, since it is the one that is to be desired.'

(2) This Hadith was narrated by Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (2/63 – (Hadith) no. 1425) in the chapter on the qunut in Witr, and was also narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (1/199 & 200) in a Hadith from Al-Hasan ibn 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb may Allah be pleased with him.

The phrase: 'Yuhyee wa yumeet (He brings life and death)' is also one of the maqaleed. Allah created life and created death, as the essential aspects of human existence. He says: 'It is He who has created death as well as life, so that He might put you to a test (and thus show) which of you is best in conduct, and (make you realize that) He alone is Almighty and truly forgiving.' (al-Mulk: 2)

Allah mentioned death first so that we not approach life in the deluded belief that we are going to live forever, but rather, we should approach it with the awareness that death is inevitable. This awareness will help us to act in preparation for that end. The words: '...He has the power over anything!' (ar-Rum: 50) mean that He does what you are unable to do because His power is absolute and there is no force that can resist His will. Therefore, when you ask your Lord for a particular provision, you should ask Him to give you blessings that you do not expect, for Allah Glorified is He can provide for you in ways that exceed your expectations. That is why the people of higher spiritual knowledge said, 'The material means are the outward cover of Allah's divine decrees.'

Thus, the verse in which Allah says: 'His are the reigns (maqaleed) of the heavens and the earth' (az-Zumar: 63) was a reference to His creative power and everlasting sustenance of His creation.

Then, Allah says: 'And those who disbelieved in Allah's messages…' (az-Zumar: 63). These messages could be the universal signs in existence or the miracles of the Messengers. They could also be the verses of the Quran that inform us of Allah's Commandments. Their disbelief is their refusal to put these divine commandments into practice. Allah says: '...it is they who are the losing folk.' (az-Zumar: 63). This means that they have made a losing bargain by denying Allah's messages. This is because they preferred their immediate appetites to the everlasting bliss of paradise. Then Allah says(1):

---

(1) The reason for the revelation of the verse: Ibn Kathir mentioned in his tafsir (4/61) that Ibn Abu Hatim and others narrated from Ibn 'Abbas may Allah be pleased with him that=

قُلْ أَفَغَيْرَ ٱللَّهِ تَأْمُرُوٓنِّيٓ أَعْبُدُ أَيُّهَا ٱلْجَٰهِلُونَ ﴿٦٤﴾

Say, ‘Do you order me to worship someone other than God, you foolish people?’ [64]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 64)

You may remember how the disbelievers acted when they stubbornly opposed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and refused to accept Allah’s religion. However, despite their efforts, Islam spread widely and its followers increased in number. So, the disbelievers tried to have an agreement with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said to him, ‘O Muhammad, if you worship our gods for a year, we will worship your Allah for a year.’(1) So Allah Glorified is He replied to them: ‘Say (O Muhammad to these polytheists), “Are you ordering me (ta’murunani) to worship (a’budu) a deity other than Allah, O folk who are ignorant (of right and wrong)?”’ (az-Zumar: 64)

The question that is asked here is a question of disapproval and astonishment. Did they really want the Messenger of Allah, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him whom Allah entrusted to convey His Message and revelation, to worship someone other than Him? The Arabic word ta’murunani means, ‘Are you ordering me?’ It can be recited in a number of different ways(2)

= the idolaters, in their ignorance, called on Prophet Muhammad to worship their gods, and if he did that, they would then worship his God Glorified is He.

(1) Al-Wahidi mentioned in Asbab An-Nuzul (p. 261) that the chapter of al-Kafirun (The Disbelievers) was revealed because a group of disbelievers from Quraysh said, ‘O Muhammad, follow our religion and we will follow your religion. Worship our gods for a year and we will worship your God for a year. Then if what you have is better than what we have, we have shared in it with you and taken our portion of it, and if what we have is better than what you have, you have shared in it with us and taken your portion of it.’ Prophet Muhammad said, ‘I seek refuge in Allah from associating any partners with Him!’ Then Allah revealed the verse: Say, ‘O you who deny the truth…’ (al-Kafirun: 1)

(2) A number of different ways of reciting this have been narrated, including:
(a) (ṭamuruniya) with a single undoubled (nun) and with a (fatha) on the (ya’). This was the recitation of Nafi‘.
(b) (ta’murunani) with two undoubled (nuns) in the form that would be expected. This was the recitation of Abu ‘Amir.
(c) (ta’murunni) with a single doubled (nun) because of the two (nuns) merging into each other. This was the recitation of the remainder of the reciters and was chosen by Abu= including: ta'murunni (with a doubled nun), ta'murunani (where the first nun is a preventative letter, which prevents a verb from taking the kasra) or it can also be pronounced as ta'muruni (with a single nun).

The word a'budu (to worship) indicates that worshipping their idols is a futile practice that has no intellectual basis, since the worshipper is obliged to obey the commandments of the worshipped deity, and these idols have issued no rules to be obeyed or disobeyed. That is why Allah described those who worship these idols as being ignorant, addressing them with the words: '...O folk who are ignorant (of right and wrong).' (az-Zumar: 64)

Here it becomes incumbent upon us to differentiate between people who are illiterate and people who are ignorant. The person who is illiterate is better than an ignorant because his mind is a blank slate that does not hold any particular theories or viewpoints. Therefore, it is easier for them to be convinced of the true facts. The ignorant's mind is not a blank slate, but holds a firm mistaken view of the world. That is why it takes more effort to convince an ignorant person of anything. Firstly, you must convince them of the error of their mistakes before convincing them of the correct facts. Thus, Allah says: 'Never has Allah endowed any man with two hearts in one body.' (al-Ahzab: 4)

We previously talked about the matter of confined space, and said that any point in space can only contain one body of matter. For instance, we notice that when we fill a jug with water, the bubbles of air have to come out first before the water can find its way in. The same is true of those unsound positions that reside in the heart of the ignorant. Their ignorant or corrupt concepts must leave their place so that the heart can be convinced of the truth. It is even harder to extract incorrect beliefs or positions that satisfy a person's own appetites and whims.

This concept of the capacity of a single space is one that is instinctually understood by most people, be they philosophers, young children, or illiterate individuals. Do you not see that if a young boy is sitting next to his father, and his older brother wants to sit in his place, the younger child would get up to give his seat to the brother? This is because the young child understands the intrinsic concept that any one space can only naturally contain one solid body.

---

= 'Ubayd and Abu Hatim, because the word appeared in the original copy of 'Uthman may Allah be pleased with him with a single (nun) (The Tafsir of Al-Qurtubi 8/5922).

The disbelievers are described as being ignorant because they hold on firmly to a mistaken belief in their hearts. They mistakenly think that Allah Glorified is He has partners in divinity, and there is no greater ignorance than worshipping idols. Then, Allah says:

وَلَقَدۡ أُوحِيَ إِلَيۡكَ وَإِلَى ٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبۡلِكَ لَئِنۡ أَشۡرَكۡتَ
لَيَحۡبَطَنَّ عَمَلُكَ وَلَتَكُونَنَّ مِنَ ٱلۡخَٰسِرِينَ ٦٥

It has already been revealed to you [Prophet] and to those before you: 'If you ascribe any partner to God, all your work will come to nothing: you will be one if the losers [65]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 65)

This verse clarified the reason for the question of amazement in the last verse, when the disbelievers had asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to believe in their idols in order for them to believe in Allah Glorified is He. How can they tell him to do that when he was the Messenger whom Allah entrusted with His religion and revelation? Indeed, Allah Glorified is He has revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and to those who came before him, that anyone who ascribes divinity to any deities besides Allah shall be among the losing people. That is why Allah has described them as an ignorant folk in the last verse.

Allah Glorified is He says in the verse we are studying: '...it has already been revealed to you, as well as to those who lived before you.' (az-Zumar: 65) Those people who received revelation before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were the previous Messengers, for every one of them encountered this same problem.

Is it conceivable for Messengers to ascribe partners to Allah Glorified is He? The scholars said that this phrase was a mere supposition. The verse was declaring the punishment that will await anyone who chose to worship deities besides Allah. So, if the threat was directed to the noble Messengers themselves, then this threat surely included any less righteous member of the general populace.

Some of the scholars have said that this verse was speaking about the infallibility of the Messengers, but this infallibility is by Allah's decree and no one has any say over Allah's decree. Did one of the Messengers not say: 'We should be guilty of blaspheming against Allah were we to return to your ways after Allah has saved us from them! It is not conceivable that we should return to them – unless Allah, our Lord, so wills. All things does our Lord embrace within His knowledge' (al-A'raf: 89)? So, the meaning here is that Allah's power and commands have no limits, and that Allah can do what He wills, even if a particular divine choice was never made.

The underlying message of what has been revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and those who came before him was: '...if you ever ascribe divine powers to anyone but Allah, all your work shall most certainly be in vain.' (az-Zumar: 65) The verse narrated part of the revelation to the previous Messengers, and directed part of the revelation in the singular form to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Allah Glorified is He singled out Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and addresses him alone with the phrase: '...if you ever ascribe divine powers to anyone but Allah, all your work shall most certainly be in vain.' (az-Zumar: 65) However, the fact is that if this message was directed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him this means that the statement was also directed to all the previous Messengers. The meaning of the verse: '...all your work shall most certainly be in vain' (az-Zumar: 65) is that all the righteous actions that lack the correct faith in Allah's Oneness will be corrupt and worthless on the Day of Reckoning. Allah says: '…for (in the life to come) you shall most certainly be among the losing people.' (az-Zumar: 65) We know that in the language of commerce, a loss is when a person's actual capital decreases. So, when a trader does not obtain any profit on top of his capital, he is not considered to be a loser, so long as his capital remains intact. The same is true of the believer whose capital with Allah Glorified is He consists of his belief and righteous actions. Your Lord created you and provided for you out of nothing, then sent Messengers and revealed Books to guide you. Through such messages, Allah has set up a transaction for you with Him that is profitable. So it is up to you, O believer, to take advantage of this opportunity and earn its potential profits. Indeed, the amounts of actions you can do in this world are limited by your life span. On the other hand, the potential reward for this limited life span will be the everlasting bliss of paradise. It is here that the special merit of the trade with Allah Glorified is He lies hidden. This is why Allah Glorified is He said in another chapter: '…for, (if they did, they would know that) the life of this world is nothing but a passing delight and a playful enjoyment –whereas, behold, the life in the hereafter is indeed the only (true) life: if they but knew this.' (al-'Ankabut: 64)

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

بَلِ ٱللَّهَ فَٱعْبُدْ وَكُن مِّنَ ٱلشَّٰكِرِينَ ٦٦

No! Worship God alone and be one of those who are grateful to Him [66] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 66)

The Arabic word bal is a particle that turns the discussion around, by negating its preceding context and affirming its following sentence. So, the meaning of this verse is, 'O Muhammad. Shun the invitation these polytheists offered you to worship their gods, and beware of being convinced by their invitations. Instead, Allah (alone) should you worship.'

In order to emphasise the Oneness of Allah, the verse used the linguistic style of placing the object in front of the verb. This particular linguistic style is called confinement. This style confined and restricted every form of worship to Allah Glorified is He alone and no one else, just as we say in prayer: 'You alone do we worship.' (al-Fatiha: 5) Placing the pronoun that refers to Allah Glorified is He before the verb, '…we worship,' gives the meaning, 'We only worship You and no one else.' If the verse said, 'We worship you,' by placing the verb before the object, it would allow the possibility of adding more objects of worship which is not permissible.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '...and be among those who are grateful (to Him).' (az-Zumar: 66) We should be among those who give thanks to Allah Glorified is He for guiding us and granting us success. We can do that by worshipping Him alone and thanking Him for the blessings that He has bestowed upon us. Those blessings are only a limited form of the eternal bliss that awaits the obedient believers in the Hereafter.

One of the most remarkable aspects of Allah's kindness towards us is that His rulings are in our own best interests in this world. Yet, Allah will still reward us in the Hereafter for obeying these commandments. Thus, His Commandments are a form of His kindness towards us. Certainly, He does not derive any benefit from our obedience, and indeed, our disobedience does not harm Him Glorified is He.

Read the Qudsi Hadith in which Allah says: 'My servants. Were the first of you and the last of you, the human of you and the jinn of you, to all have hearts as pious as that of the most righteous servant among you, that would not increase the wealth of My kingdom in any way. And were the first of you and the last of you, the human of you and the jinn of you, to have hearts as wicked as that of the most wicked servant among you, that would not decrease the wealth of My kingdom in any way, not even so much as a needle takes from the sea when it is put into it.'(1) We should know, as servants, that our Lord, Allah, loves us and wants us to obtain success and salvation. We are His creatures, and every creator wants his creation to be in the best possible state. Then, Allah says:

وَمَا قَدَرُواْ ٱللَّهَ حَقَّ قَدۡرِهِۦ وَٱلۡأَرۡضُ جَمِيعٗا قَبۡضَتُهُۥ يَوۡمَ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ
وَٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتُ مَطۡوِيَّٰتُۢ بِيَمِينِهِۦۚ سُبۡحَٰنَهُۥ وَتَعَٰلَىٰ عَمَّا يُشۡرِكُونَ ٦٧

These people have no grasp of God's true measure. On the Day of Resurrection, the whole earth will be in His grip. The heavens will be rolled up in His right hand – Glory be to Him! He is far above the partners they ascribe to Him! [67]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 67)

Allah's words: '(And) they have not honoured Allah with the honour that is due to Him,' (az-Zumar: 67) mean that the disbelievers did not contemplate and extol Allah's Glory and Power in the way that He should be exalted. That is why they associated others with Him in worship. The reality of the matter is that: '...the whole earth will be in His grasp on the Day of Resurrection, and the heavens will be folded in His Right Hand.' (az-Zumar: 67) How did they forget about this reality of Allah's Omnipotent Power? Indeed, they will see the consequences of their disbelief in the Hereafter.

(1) It is narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (4/1994) in Kitab A-Birr wa As-Sila (Hadith 2577) in the chapter on prohibiting injustice, in a (Hadith) from Abu Dharr may Allah be pleased with him.

Allah says: '...and the whole earth will be in His grasp on the Day of Resurrection, and the heavens will be folded in His Right Hand.' (az-Zumar: 67) When a person says, 'The matter is in my hands,' it means that he has total control over it. Thus, this verse does not mean that Allah Glorified is He actually has a hand or a fist. Rather, it is a metaphor for His omnipotent strength and mastery.

We previously said that when the Quranic verses describe Allah Glorified is He in a way that has its counterpart in creation, we must understand that description in the light of Allah's words: '...there is nothing like Him.' (ash-Shura: 11) Examples of such attributes include Him being described as having hearing, sight, a hand, or knowledge.

Allah's words: '...and the whole earth,' (az-Zumar: 67) refer to this earth of ours upon which we live and breathe, as well as any other earths like it since Allah has said: '...He who has created seven heavens, and of the earth the same number.' (at-Talaq: 12) This includes the planets in our own solar system, let alone all the other solar systems and galaxies which may contain millions of planets just like our own. Allah says: '...He has (also) the power to gather them (unto Himself) whenever He wills.' (ash-Shura: 29)

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '…and the heavens will be folded in His Right Hand.' (az-Zumar: 67) In the Arabic language, the right hand is used as a metaphor of a person's strength. That is why Allah Glorified is He says in another chapter: 'Some (of them) will say, "Behold; you used to approach us (deceptively) from the right."' (as-Saffat: 28) This means that they were approached from their direction of strength.

Allah says in another place in the Quran: 'On that Day, We shall roll up the skies as written scrolls are rolled up; (and) as We brought into being the first creation, so We shall bring it forth anew.' (al-Anbiya': 104)

Which earth is meant by Allah's words: '...and the whole earth will be in His grasp on the Day of Resurrection'? (az-Zumar: 67) The scholars said that this earth will be different from the earth that we currently live upon. The earth will be altered in the Hereafter, as Allah Glorified is He Himself says: '(His promise will be fulfilled) on the Day when the earth shall be changed into another earth, as shall be the heavens.' (Ibrahim: 48) That is because the earth of this world is an earth of means and secondary causes. We live upon it, eat its fruits, and pursue the course of our lives. On the other hand, our lives in the Hereafter will be directly connected to the Primary Causer, Allah Glorified is He.

There will be no planting or cultivation in the earth of the Hereafter. Instead, we will simply wish for food or drink and it will come to us. You will be granted anything that comes to your mind without any need for secondary causes. This is because it will come to you directly by the power of Allah Glorified is He without secondary means.

Similarly, the sky of this world is a sky of means and secondary causes. For instance, the rain has to descend from its clouds. In the Hereafter, there will be no rain, no sun, or moon in the sky. That earth of the Hereafter will be illuminated solely by the light of its Lord.

Allah Glorified is He concluded this verse with the words: 'Limitless is He in His Glory, and sublimely exalted above anything to which they may ascribe a share in His divinity.' (az-Zumar: 67) This is a command for us to say, 'Subhana'llah (Glory be to Allah),' and to disassociate Him from being like His creation with respect to having a hand or folding up the sky, for His folding of it here is nothing like the folding that we know. We must understand all these descriptions in the light of Allah's words: '...there is nothing like Him.' (ash-Shura: 11) So, disassociate Allah Glorified is He from what the idolaters say. Then, Allah says:

وَنُفِخَ فِي ٱلصُّورِ فَصَعِقَ مَن فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَن فِي ٱلْأَرْضِ إِلَّا مَن
شَآءَ ٱللَّهُۖ ثُمَّ نُفِخَ فِيهِ أُخْرَىٰ فَإِذَا هُمْ قِيَامٞ يَنظُرُونَ ٦٨

The Trumpet will be sounded, and everyone in the heavens and earth will fall down senseless except those God spares. It will be sounded once again and they will be on their feet, looking on [68] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 68)

After speaking about the doctrines of belief and mentioning His promise to those who are obedient and His threat against those who are disobedient, Allah started describing the Hereafter. This is the abode where we will all be recompensed for the actions we did in this world. This world contains creatures that are dead and creatures that are alive. The Final Hour will not come until every creature is dead before the phase of Resurrection. Allah spoke to us here about the sounding of the trumpet, for that sounding of the trumpet is what will kill everything that is living at that time.

The verb nufikha appears here in the passive case, which is the case where the subject of the verb is left unmentioned. The Prophetic Hadith has made it clear for us that the angel that will sound the trumpet (soor) will be Angel Israfeel peace be upon him.

The soor is a trumpet much like a bagpipe. Angel Israfeel peace be upon him will initiate a first blow that will kill off everything that is living. Everything will have to die first before they could be resurrected, just like all those who died before them right back to the time of Prophet Adam peace be upon him. Allah says: ‘Every human being is bound to taste death.’ (al-’Ankabut: 57)

Is it the first sound of the trumpet itself that kills everyone, or does the second sound of the trumpet itself bring the dead back to life? We say that it is not the sound of the trumpet itself that gives life or brings death, but the trumpet is the announcement from Allah, The One in whose hands the entire affair resides, that the act has begun: ‘...and all (creatures) that are in the heavens and all that are on earth will fall down senseless (sa’iqa).’ (az-Zumar: 68)

The verb sa‘iqa has two different meanings. The first definition has the meaning of perishing, such as in Allah’s words: ‘Hence, leave them alone until they face that promised day of their (death), when they will be struck down (yus’aqoon),’ (at-Tur: 45) which means that they will perish.

The word sa’iqa also appears with the meaning of fainting and losing consciousness, like what happened to Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when his Lord made Himself manifest to the mountain. When Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him called on his Lord, he said: ‘O my Lord! Show (Thyself) to me, so that I might behold Thee!’ (Allah) said, ‘Never canst thou see Me.’ (al-A‘raf: 143)

Allah Glorified is He is not saying here, ‘I cannot be seen,’ but rather, He is saying, ‘Your current physical form will not allow you to see Me. Yet, circumstances could change in such a way that would make it possible for you to see Me.' Humankind has arrived at ways, means, and tools that enable them to see things that they would not normally be able to see. For example, we have all seen the power of devices such as spectacles, magnifying glasses, and telescopes. So, Allah Glorified is He is more capable of enabling you, one day, to see the things that you could not previously see.

Then, Allah says, completing the story of Prophet Musa (Moses): 'However, behold this mountain: if it remains firm in its place, then – only then – wilt thou see Me.' (al-A'raf: 143) Allah Glorified is He wanted to emphasise this matter to Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him not only with words, but also through an active event: '...And as soon as his Lord revealed His glory to the mountain, He caused it to crumble to dust; and Musa (Moses) fell down in a swoon (sa'iqa).' (al-A'raf: 143)

It is as if Allah Glorified is He was saying to Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him, 'If you lost consciousness simply by seeing the mountain to which the manifestation happened, then what would have happened to you if you saw The One Who manifests Himself.'

Then, Allah Glorified is He says in the verse we are studying: '...unless they are from those whom Allah wills (to exempt).' (az-Zumar: 68) Allah may prevent some of His creatures from falling down senseless at the sound of the trumpet. This may be for a limited period of time, since whoever is not killed by the first sounding of the trumpet will inevitably die later. The last creature to die will be the Angel of Death, when Allah Glorified is He will command him, 'Die, O Angel of Death!' Thereafter, life will become everlasting without end.

They say that Allah Glorified is He will exempt certain angels from falling down senseless, as these are the angels who are entrusted with the affairs of this world: Gabriel, Mika'il, 'Azra'il and Israfeel peace be upon them. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him informed us that Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him will be one of those exempted from falling down senseless at the sound of the trumpet. It has been narrated in a Prophetic Hadith(1) that the sounding of the trumpet will take place and everyone will perish, and that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him will be the first to be resurrected. Then, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him will find Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him awake clinging to the Throne. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not know whether Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had died along with everyone else but was resurrected beforehand, or whether Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had not fallen at all.

(1) Abu Hurayra narrated that Prophet Muhammad said, 'Do not say that I am better than Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him for when everyone falls unconscious on the Day of=

Therefore, Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him could be among those whom Allah Glorified is He exempted in the verse: '…unless they are from those whom Allah wills (to exempt).' (az-Zumar: 68) Alternatively, he may have fallen but had been resurrected before everyone else.

Some of the scholars have explained that Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him may be exempted because he had already fallen senseless in this world when Allah made Himself manifest to the mountain. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He wanted that period of time he was senseless to be taken into account and made the time he was senseless on the Day of Rising shorter.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '... And then it will sound again.' (az-Zumar: 68) The trumpet will sound again for the resurrection. The first sound will kill off all living creatures, while the second sound will resurrect them and bring them out of their graves. Allah says: '…and (then) the trumpet (of resurrection) will be blown – and lo! Out of their graves towards their Lord will they all rush forth (yansiloon).' (Ya Sin: 51) This is the image that Allah Glorified is He illustrated of the concept of resurrection. He said: '...And then it will sound again – and lo! Standing (before the Seat of Judgment), they will begin to see (the truth).' (az-Zumar: 68)

The Arabic word yansiloon refers to the process of these bodies going apart after being together. This is like when we say to a tailor that the thread of a particular piece of fabric has unravelled, after having been closely knit together. This is a precise image and eloquent expression. It portrays the circumstances in the grave when the dead are compacted under the earth together, after their quarrels and disputes when they were alive. An Arabic poet(1) expressed a similar concept when he said:

Perhaps a grave could become a grave many times over,
laughing at the crowding together of many opposites.(2)

When these people died, the earth closed upon them and cancelled the enmity and spite that existed between them. It purified their elements in a way that allowed them to merge together.

It is as if they were joyful at this reunion and this close association since it replaced the differences that had existed between them in this world. Then, when the trumpet is sounded for a second time, their meeting will break up and everyone will take a separate way once more. That is the meaning of the word yansiloon in the phrase: '...will they all rush forth (yansiloon).' (Ya Sin: 51) Every single soul will be on its own, just as the tailor unravels a thread and removes it from its place in the fabric. This is because the Reckoning is a personal matter, with each person only taken to task for what they have done.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '...they will begin to see (the truth).' (az-Zumar: 68) They will have to wait and see what will happen to them, viewing all of the surrounding horrors with wide eyes. Allah Glorified is He says in another verse, mentioning what they will say: 'O our Lord! (Now) we have seen, and we have heard!' (as-Sajda: 12)

The scholars said that this is the only verse in the Quran in which sight is mentioned before hearing. This is because when the people will be resurrected from their graves, they will be surrounded on every side by horrors and torments. In such circumstances, their sights will grasp the horrors before the hearing.

(1) He is Abu Al-'Ala' Al-Ma'arri, Ahmad ibn 'Abdullah ibn Sulayman, a poet and philosopher who was born in 363 AH and died in 449 AH in Ma'arrat An-Nu'man at the age of 86. He started composing poetry when he was a lad of only 11 years. When he died, 84 poets stood by his graveside eulogizing him. He used to prohibit the hurting of animals and the eating of meat. He has a book titled Luzum ma la yalzam and Siqt Az-Zanad. (Al-Mawsu'a Ash-shi'riyya).

(2) The verse is from a poem by Abu Al-'Ala' Al-Ma'arri, made up of 16 verses and composed in the al-khafeef metre. The poem starts with the verse:
They are not noble in my religion and my belief, those who cry and wail at the grave, nor should any singer chant.

The horrors of the Day of Judgment will start with the sounding of the trumpet. The torments of the disbelievers will be more severe, and they will start to tremble and shake. Then, the first stages of Allah's Promise and Threat will be revealed to them, and they will know that everything they denied and rejected will be true as well. Those people had for so long denied the Resurrection and said: 'Shall we, indeed, be raised from the dead? And perhaps our forefathers of old (will be resurrected as well)?' (as-Saffat: 16-17)

Therefore, when they see that Allah Glorified is He spoke truthfully about the events of the Resurrection, they will realize that the Reckoning and its following punishment will also be true. 'So, woe to you, you disbelievers and deniers of the Reckoning. Then, Allah says:

وَأَشۡرَقَتِ ٱلۡأَرۡضُ بِنُورِ رَبِّهَا وَوُضِعَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبُ وَجِاْيٓءَ بِٱلنَّبِيِّـۧنَ وَٱلشُّهَدَآءِ وَقُضِيَ بَيۡنَهُم
بِٱلۡحَقِّ وَهُمۡ لَا يُظۡلَمُونَ ﴿٦٩﴾ وَوُفِّيَتۡ كُلُّ نَفۡسٖ مَّا عَمِلَتۡ وَهُوَ أَعۡلَمُ بِمَا يَفۡعَلُونَ ﴿٧٠﴾

The earth will shine with the light of its Lord; the Record of Deeds will be laid open; the prophets and wit-nesses will be brought in. Fair judgement will be given between them: they will not be wronged [69] and every soul will be repaid in full for what it has done. He knows best what they do [70]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 69 - 70)

These verses transport us to the world of the Hereafter, in which the earth shall be changed into another earth and the heavens into another heaven. In this world, we used to be illuminated by the light of the sun. However, when we will be transported to the Hereafter, the earth itself will shine with Allah's Light, as Allah says: 'And the earth will shine bright with its Lord's light.' (az-Zumar: 69) It is as if this light were an intrinsic part of it. There will be no sun to shine down upon it, but it will shine forth with its own luminance.

The Hereafter will be a world that no eye has ever seen, no ear has ever heard and no mind has ever dreamt of. Allah Glorified is He says: '...and (they) will know therein neither (a burning) sun nor severe cold.' (al-Insan: 13) That is because this world works through means and secondary causes, as the sun shines to light up the earth by day and the moon shines to light up the earth by night. However, in the Hereafter, we do not live through such means, but rather by a direct link to the Primary Causer, Allah Glorified is He. Everything will come to us directly without us having to work for it. We have no need there for a sun to give us light in the day or to cultivate the soil. We do not need a moon to give us light in the night.

Just as the earth is changed into another earth and the sky into another sky, we too will be changed into another form that is in harmony with the Hereafter. So you will eat without producing waste and will continue to live without growing old. When the earth shines brightly with the light of its Lord, you will see an ambient light with an undetected source. We have seen such lighting methods in modern times in this world, where lights are placed in a way that keeps the source of the light hidden, thus preventing the light from harming the eyes directly.

Allah has provided us with a metaphor for His illumination of the heavens and the earth in the chapter of an-Nur, when He says: ‘Allah is the Light of the heavens and the earth.’ (an-Nur: 35) This means that He illuminates them. In order to convey this meaning, Allah illustrated the example which we have all seen in our lives. He says: ‘...The parable of His light is, as it were, that of a niche containing a lamp.’ (an-Nur: 35) This verse does not describe how Allah’s actual light is. It is only a metaphor that is used to convey how Allah Glorified is He gives light to His creation, for none of us will be able to perceive the reality of His actual light.

A (mishkat) or niche is an opening in a wall that does not go all the way through; it is also called a (kuwwa). It still exists today in ancient traditional buildings. This niche is where a torch is placed. Some less educated people think that a (mishkat) is itself the lamp. The special thing about a niche is that it does not go all the way through the wall, and the amount of space inside of it is limited which means that the light of the lamp concentrates, masses inside of it and does not dissipate, thereby ensuring that all of the light goes to lighting up the room in which that niche is situated.

Then, that lamp is described as not simply being an ordinary lamp, but rather: ‘...the lamp is [enclosed] in glass...’ (an-Nur: 35). The glass purifies the light of the lamp, and by preventing additional air from reaching it, it stops the creation of smoke which sullies the purity and clarity of the light.

Moreover, that glass is not of some ordinary type of glass, but rather: '...the glass [shining] like a radiant star...' (an-Nur: 35). A 'radiant star' is one which illuminates itself, which indicates that the light of this lamp is doubly bright.

Then, there is the fact that the oil with which the lamp is fuelled is not just any ordinary sort of oil, but rather, it is oil taken from a tree of moderate nature: '...[a lamp] lit from a blessed tree – an olive-tree that is neither of the east nor of the west – the oil whereof [is so bright that it] would well-nigh give light [of itself] even though fire had not touched it: light upon light!...' (an-Nur: 35)

Some people object to this metaphor being used, saying, 'How can Allah use a niche containing a lamp to draw a metaphor for His light?' We say that the metaphor here is not a metaphor for Allah's light but rather a metaphor for the way He lights up the universe. The poet Abu Tamam(1) expressed this meaning when he said in praise of someone:

The bravery of 'Amr with the generosity of Hatim,
The forbearance of Ahnaf and the cleverness of Iyyas.(2)

Whereupon one of those who was sitting with the person praised objected, saying, 'How can you place the emir at the same level as these uncivilised Arabs? The emir is greater than you have described him.'

---

(1) Abu Tamam is Habib ibn Aws ibn Al-Harith, one of the princes of eloquence. He was born in Jasim, one of the villages of Hawaran in Syria in the year 188 AH, and then travelled to Egypt. He was tall and dark-skinned, eloquent and soft-spoken. He memorised 41 thousand (rajaz) poems, let alone all the other poems. His poetry was both strong and pure and he composed books including Fuhul Ash-Shu'ara' and Diwan Al-Hamasa. (Al-Mawsu'a Ash-shi'riyya).

(2) As-Suli mentioned these verses in his book, 'Akhbar Abu Tamam' in the section on his relations with Ahmad Ibn Al-Mu'tasim. He was reciting this poem until when he reached this verse, Al-Kindi who was present at the time and wanted to criticize him, said, 'The emir is greater than you have described him. So he paused for a moment and then added the two verses that are coming up shortly.

After pausing for a short while, Abu Tamam responded, saying:

Do not disapprove of me using those less than him, to strike a stray metaphor for his courage and generosity.
for Allah uses for His light the least of things, as a metaphor mentioning a niche and a lamp.(1)

In this way, the True Lord provides mankind with the tangible light that protects their physical forms and preserves their abilities to work and move through life unhindered. If people move without light, they will bump into things around them. Bumping into things means that the strong one will crush the weak one underfoot (because they do not see or notice them). Therefore, we use dimmed lights over our walkways in the night to avoid clashing when we move around.

Since the True Lord has provided us with physical light to protect our physical forms from crushing other things or being crushed by them, then, He must also have provided us with spiritual light to protect our values, so that we do not crush others with injustice and so that we are not crushed through persecution. This light is the light of revelation and the Divine Law that brings the hearts to life and puts their spiritual movements in order as they make their way through life.

Just as the True Lord makes clear for us what physical light is, He also makes it clear for us what spiritual light is. He has advised us to get this light from the Houses of Allah. He says: ‘In the houses [of worship] which Allah has allowed to be raised so that His name be remembered in them, there [are such as] extol His limitless glory at morn and evening people whom neither [worldly] commerce nor striving after gain can divert from the remembrance of Allah, and from constancy in prayer, and from charity: [people] who are filled with fear [at the thought] of the Day on which all hearts and eyes will be convulsed.’ (an-Nur: 36-37)

So, we should take the spiritual light from the houses of Allah where we meet our Lord Glorified is He. It is in those meetings that Allah grants you a light from His light that fills up your heart, guides your limbs, and puts them right. The True Lord Glorified is He has explained to us that the light of values is higher than material light; this is proven by the fact that when a man is blind he can still walk and still do jobs in this world. But those who are lacking inner light or having blind hearts, as generally said, they cannot be guided to a correct path. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says at the conclusion of the verse: ‘Allah is the Light of the heavens and the earth...’ (an-Nur: 35) ‘...light upon light! Allah guides unto His light him that wills [to be guided]…’ (an-Nur: 35).

(1) These verses are from a poem of Abu Tamam made up of 24 verses composed in the (Al-kamil) metre and written in praise of the caliph, Al-Mu‘tasim.

Then, after the earth shines brightly with the light of its Lord, ‘...the record [of everyone’s deeds] will be laid bare...’ (az-Zumar: 69). Elsewhere in the Quran, Allah Glorified is He explains what this means and gives us more details, saying: ‘And the record [of everyone’s deeds] will be laid open; and thou wilt behold the guilty filled with dread at what [they see] therein; and they will exclaim: “Oh, woe unto us! What a record is this! It leaves out nothing, be it small or great, but takes everything into account!” For they will find all that they ever wrought [now] facing them, and [will know that] thy Lord does not wrong anyone.’ (al-Kahf: 49)

This way, the True Lord Glorified is He gives us the details of what He mentions in general terms when He says: ‘...the record [of everyone’s deeds] will be laid bare...’ (az-Zumar: 69). It is well known that the meaning of many verses of the Quran is explained in other verses of the Quran. The book or record that is described here is the book of actions that is specific to each individual human being and which a person does not share with anyone else; it is also mentioned in the verse: ‘And [for] every person We have imposed his fate upon his neck, and We will produce for him on the Day of Resurrection a record which he will encounter spread open [It will be said], “Read your record. Sufficient is yourself against you this Day as accountant.”’ (al-Isra’: 13-14)

This book that enumerates all of your actions is a truthful record, since the one who writes it down is the angel that is assigned to you: ‘…noble, recording, aware of whatever you do!’ (al-Infitar: 11-12) Allah also says: ‘…not even a word can he utter but there is a watcher with him, ever present.’ (Qaf: 18)

This book is not just a verbal knowledge of Allah, since Allah's knowledge is His Speech, but rather, it is also a book that it is written down and read out. It is read out to its owner and shown to him so that one can see all of his good actions and bad actions laid out before him. It is for that reason that when the evildoers see their books, they start to tremble out of fear since all their wrong actions are counted out for them, with no major or minor wrong actions being left out. In that moment, they have no option but to wail and burst into loud laments.

Then, after everyone has taken hold of their books, Allah will bring forth the Messengers: '... and all the Prophets will be brought forward, and all [other] witnesses…' (ar-Ra'd: 69). He brings them forth so that each Messenger can bear witness that he has conveyed the Message to his people, for Allah Glorified is He says: 'On the day when Allah shall assemble all the apostles and shall ask, "What response did you receive?"' (al-Ma'ida: 109)

Then, after the Messengers have borne witness, the witnesses bear witness. These witnesses are those who held on to the divine knowledge after the Messengers had gone. This is mentioned in the prophetic Hadith: 'This knowledge will be borne in every generation by its most just and trustworthy people: they will keep away from it the distortions of the people of excess, the presumptions of those who speak idly and the interpretations of the ignorant.'(1)

These scholars also bear witness that they conveyed it to others. It is for that reason that the ummah of Muhammad is characterised by its scholars, for it is they who carry forward Muhammad's Message. That is why we have the advantage over other people when it comes to this matter.

The martyrs who were killed in wars in the way of Allah also bear witness(2) thanks to the position that Allah has granted them. They obtained such a rank based on martyrdom. It is enough for a martyr that he enters the battle knowing that he will be killed if he is defeated. He fights for either victory or martyrdom. He knows his life is the price, so if he had not had full confidence that the reward promised to him by Allah will come about, he would not have gone out to war.

(1) It is narrated by Al-Bazzar in his Musnad. See Kashf Al-Astar 'Az- Zawa'id Al-Bazzar of Al-Haythami (1/86) Hadith (143). Al-Bazzar said: 'The Hadiths of Khalid ibn 'Amr are munkar, for he used to narrate Hadiths that were not corroborated and this is one such Hadith.' Al-Haythami mentioned it in Mujma' Az-Zawa'id (1/140) and said: 'It contains Khalid ibn 'Amr Al-Qurashi who was classed as a liar by Yahya ibn Mu'in and Ahmad ibn Hanbal. This Hadith is ascribed to Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him and Ibn 'Umar Allah be pleased with him, although Al-'Uqayli narrated it in Ad-Du'afa' Al-Kabir (1/9) in his introduction to it as being a Hadith of Abu Umama Allah be pleased with him.'

(2) The fact that the Sheikh said 'also' here indicates his perspicacity and great knowledge, for there are scholars of Tafsir who when it comes to interpreting the word 'witnesses', =

That is why Allah says about martyrs: ‘But do not think of those that have been slain in Allah’s cause as dead. Nay, they are alive! With their Lord have they their sustenance.’ (Al-‘Imran: 169) It is astonishing that some people say in disbelief, ‘Does that mean that if we were to take a martyr out of his grave, we would find him alive?!’ We say, ‘Read the verse and reflect on its meaning: Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...they are alive! With their Lord...’ (Al-‘Imran: 169) not ‘alive with you;’ this is proven by the fact that, Allah mentions the substance with which life is preserved, saying: ‘...have they their sustenance...’ (Al-‘Imran: 169). That is because when the martyr sacrifices his life, his Lord guarantees him another life which is better, greater and more lasting than the one he had in this world. Thus, a poet (1) said concerning Hamza Allah be pleased with him the lord of all the martyrs:

O Hamza, uncle of the chosen one, you are master of all the martyrs of the earth, every last one of them.

= confine themselves to saying that they are the angels who record each person’s actions, like Ibn Kathir in his Tafsir (4/64); and there are scholars of tafsir who mention a number of different opinions, like Al-Qurtubi in his Tafsir (8/5928) who mentioned three different contradictory opinions:

(a) That they are those who bore witness to other nations from the nation of Muhammad (peace and blessing be upon him). Allah says: ‘And thus have We willed you to be a community of the middle way, so that [with your lives] you might bear witness to the truth before all mankind…’ (al-Baqara: 143).

(b) That they are those who were martyred in the way of Allah, and then on the Day of Judgment, they will bear witness on behalf of those who defended Allah’s religion. This is what As-Suddi said.

(c) They are the recording angels who bear witness to the actions people have done. As for Sheikh Ash-Sha‘rawi, he took the position that all of these groups bear witness, thereby seeing the different opinions as supporting each other and not contradictory (‘Adil Abu Al-Ma‘ati).

(1) This verse is composed by Sheikh Ash-Sha‘rawi himself.

That martyrdom is itself enough for you as a defence
Against death, since it links one life immediately to another.

The meaning is that you gave your life and sacrificed it, and by means of that protected yourself from death, since immediately after dying you became alive, thereby linking your life in this world directly to your life in the Hereafter. By giving your life, your life became continuous.

This is not the end point of the testimony against a human being on the Day of Judgement. After the angels have born witness against you by means of the book they have written down, and after the Prophets and other witnesses have given their testimony, the testimony moves over to you and your own body. There is a gradual progression at testimony here: from the angels, which are of a separate species, to the prophets and martyrs, who are of your own species, to your own limbs and organs, which are parts of yourself: 'On that Day We shall set a seal on their mouths – but their hands will speak unto Us, and their feet will bear witness to whatever they have earned [in life].' (Ya Sin: 65) Allah Glorified is He also says: '…on the Day when their own tongues and hands and feet will bear witness against them by [recalling] all that they did!' (an-Nur: 24) As well, Allah says: '…till, when they come close to it, their hearing and their sight and their [very] skins will bear witness against them, speaking of what they were doing [on earth]. And they will ask their skins, "Why did you bear witness against us?" – [and] these will reply: "Allah, who gives speech to all things, has given speech to us [as well]: for He [it is who] has created you in the first instance – and unto Him you are [now] brought back."' (Fussilat: 20-21)

But, how can one's limbs and organs bear witness against their owner, while they were the instruments by which the actions were done in this world? The tongue was speaking, the hand was hitting, the foot was walking...etc. Scholars say that is because Allah Glorified is He created those organs and limbs for a human being and made them subject to his will, commanding them to obey him and do everything he requires. So, the tongue is compelled to serve its owner; if he wants to say, 'There is no deity but Allah', it says it, and if it wants to utter the words of unbelief it utters them. The same is true of all the other limbs and organs.

So, during the lifetime of a person in this world, the limbs are under the authority of the human being who has been granted the freedom of choice, and they follow his will completely. Then, when we are resurrected and presented before The Creator, this will is dissolved and taken away, for there will be no one who has will except for Allah: '...With whom will sovereignty rest on that Day? With Allah, The One who holds absolute sway over all that exists!' (Ghafir: 16) On that day, the organs and limbs will be released and take on their role of being truthful witnesses.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '...and judgment will be passed on them all in justice. And they will not be wronged,' (az-Zumar: 69) i.e. Allah judges between the people, all those present and all created beings. The One Who judges is Allah. Then, it is a judgement based on truth and justice, with no one being treated unjustly. For no one on that day has any will, nor does anyone have any judgement or caprice. The entire affair is in Allah's hand and Allah alone. It is up to Him to allow the wronged to retaliate against those who wronged them, or to satisfy the wronged and have them pardon those who wronged them.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '…for every human being will be repaid in full for whatever [good or evil] he has done: and He is fully aware of all that they do.' (az-Zumar: 70) That is, He will recompense them fairly for their actions: whoever does good will be abundantly rewarded, and whoever does evil will be severely punished.

When they came upon this verse, the orientalists raised objections to it, accusing it of having inconsistent context. They claimed that, in their view, the verse should use the word (ya'malun) and not (yaf'alun) for 'all that they do' since 'he has done' used the verb ('amilat). But they only say that because they do not understand the difference between (fi'l) and ('amal). A (fi'l), 'a deed', is the opposite of speech, and it is only the tongue that has the function of saying words, all of the other limbs and organs act: the eye sees, the ear hears, the hand strikes, the foot walks...etc.

Every limb or organ has its function and each of those functions is called a (fi'l). But as for the word ('amal), it encompasses both saying and doing, each of them may be termed as an (‘amal). And that is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘O you who have attained to faith! Why do you say one thing and do another?’ (as-Saff: 2)

But why is the verb pertaining to tongue action (ya‘malun) mentioned in half of the verse while the other half of the verb used the verb (yaf‘alun) pertaining to deeds of limbs and organs? Because, scholars say, speech is the means for conveying the message and preaching; thus, the tongue is considered the master of all the other limbs.

Then, what is the result of this repayment in full for actions? The result of this repayment in full for actions is that every self will get exactly what is merited by its actions in this world. That is why, after this repayment will have been made in full and the reckoning will have been completed, the people of belief will be driven to paradise and the people of disbelief will be driven to the fire.

وَسِيقَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوٓا۟ إِلَىٰ جَهَنَّمَ زُمَرًا ۖ حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَا جَآءُوهَا فُتِحَتْ أَبْوَٰبُهَا وَقَالَ
لَهُمْ خَزَنَتُهَآ أَلَمْ يَأْتِكُمْ رُسُلٌ مِّنكُمْ يَتْلُونَ عَلَيْكُمْ ءَايَٰتِ رَبِّكُمْ وَيُنذِرُونَكُمْ
لِقَآءَ يَوْمِكُمْ هَٰذَا ۚ قَالُوا۟ بَلَىٰ وَلَٰكِنْ حَقَّتْ كَلِمَةُ ٱلْعَذَابِ عَلَى ٱلْكَٰفِرِينَ ﴿٧١﴾

Those who rejected the Truth will be led to Hell in their throngs. When they arrive, its gates will open and its keepers will say to them, ‘Were you not sent your own messengers to recite the revelations of your Lord to you and warn you that you would meet this Day?’ and they will say, ‘Yes indeed we were.’ But the sentence of punishment will have been passed against those who rejected the truth [71] (The Quran, az-Zumar: 71)

We notice here that the verb (seeqa) ‘…will be urged on...’ is in the passive voice, while in another verse, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And every soul cometh, along with it a driver and a witness.’ (Qaf: 21) Who is the (sa’iq), the ‘driver’, in this verse? Scholars reply that it is the angels, driving the people of the fire to hell; we seek refuge in Allah. The (sa’iq) is the one who urges on those who are driven in order to make them go faster, like a horse rider who scolds and urges on his horse to go more quickly. The angels do exactly the same thing to the evildoers, driving them hard and urging them on in order to get them to get to hell faster.

This indicates that the angels are furious with them, hate them, and are seriously annoyed with how they acted and what they did when they were in this world. Therefore, these angels are pushing them towards their just repayment in hell, without leniency or mercy. Have you seen what police officers do when they get their hands on a criminal? They beat him, punish him, and treat him with contempt because he is a bad egg in society and everyone wants to be rid of him. It is well known that the angels are honoured slaves who do not disobey Allah in any of His commands and do what they are commanded to do.

The Quran also depicts these events in another verse. Allah Glorified is He says: '…on the Day when they shall be thrust into the fire with [an irresistible] thrust, [and will be told:]' (at-Tur: 13) that is, they drive them towards fire and push them into it against their will.

As for the word (zumar) (throngs), it means 'groups'; those who go against the orders of Allah will be sorted into groups based on their type of disobedience: one group will be those who abandon the prayer, another will be those who refuse to pay zakat (alms due), another will be those who partake in usury. Similarly, tyrants, (those who deal in) bribes, thieves, fornicators and embezzlers will be set in groups. Each wrongdoer will be grouped together with those guilty of the same crimes as him, with their leaders and instigators going into the fire first. Allah indicates that when He says: 'One day We shall call together all human beings with their (respective) Imams:…' (al-Isra': 71) '…and thereupon We shall, indeed, draw forth from every group [of sinners] the ones that had been most determined in their disdainful rebellion against The Most Gracious.' (Maryam: 69) As well, Allah Glorified is He says with regard to Pharaoh: '[And so] he shall go before his people on the Day of Resurrection, having led them [in this world] towards the fire [of the life to come]; and vile was the destination towards which they were led.' (Hud: 98)

The fact that the leaders of misguidance and the worst of the unbelievers precede their followers in entering into the fire is to remove any last vestiges of hope the followers might have of being rescued. If followers enter into the hellfire and do not find their leaders there, they may find hope that those leaders would come and save them. But what actually happens is that they go in and find those they followed and took as their example in misguidance having already preceded them into the hellfire.

Then, when they come to the gates of hellfire, the gates are opened up for them: '...till, when they reach it, its gates will be opened…' (az-Zumar: 71). That is because the gate of anger is not kept open (like the doors of a hotel), but rather is kept locked and is only opened for emergencies, unlike the gate of mercy which is always left open. This is part of Allah's mercy since His mercy always precedes His anger.(1)

This ending for the inhabitants of the fire has been written for them; Allah Glorified is He has known about it from the very beginning of life. Read, if you will, Allah's words: 'When that Day comes, not a soul will speak, unless it be by His leave; and of those [that are gathered together], some will be wretched and some, happy. Now as for those who [by their deeds] will have brought wretchedness upon themselves, [they shall live] in the fire, where they will have [nothing but] moans and sobs [to relieve their pain], therein to abide as long as the heavens and the earth endure – unless thy Lord wills it otherwise: for, verily, thy Lord is a sovereign doer of whatever He wills. But as for those who [by virtue of their past deeds] will have been blest with happiness, [they shall live] in paradise, therein to abide as long as the heavens and the earth endure – unless thy Lord wills it otherwise – as a gift unceasing.' (Hud: 105-108)

Firstly, in order to understand this verse, you must first understand what is meant by (khulud) (eternal staying). (Khulud) is a long stay, and this stay is called (khulud) because it has a beginning but does not have an end. The verses here are speaking about those who are happy, namely the inhabitants of paradise, and those who are wretched, namely the inhabitants of the fire. But the True Lord Glorified is He excludes some people from each group; those excluded will have the period of their stays reduced. How is that?

(1) From Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him that the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'When Allah decreed creation, He wrote in His Book that is with Him above the Throne, "My mercy overcomes My anger."' It is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (3194, 7404 & 7422); and by Muslim in his Sahih (2751) in Kitab At-Tawba.

After an unbeliever has been judged and driven to the fire, its gates are thrown open to admit him, and he remains there for a full eternity, from the beginning of that life endlessly. Similarly, a believer who is a recipient of Allah's mercy, after he has been judged, is driven to paradise and remains therein for a full eternity, from the beginning of that life endlessly.

But as for those who are excluded, they are disobedient believers who never repent for their wrong actions or who repent, but their repentance is not accepted. Such people must inevitably be repaid for those wrong actions and be subjected to the scorching flames of the fire; we seek refuge in Allah. That is what happens in the beginning; they enter the fire for as long as Allah wills them to be there, then they will be taken out of the fire and entered into paradise. Thereby, the period of eternity they spend in paradise is shorter than that of their fellow believers. Here, the reduction is in the beginning. Likewise, their period of eternity in the fire is also shorter than that of the inhabitants of the fire who are due to be there forever.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '...and its keepers will ask them …' (az-Zumar: 71), i.e. the keepers of the fire will say to them in order to chastise and rebuke them: '...Have there not come to you apostles from among yourselves, who conveyed to you your Lord's messages and warned you of the coming of this your Day [of Judgment]?…' (az-Zumar: 71) This question establishes the proof against them and silences all their arguments. Their Lord did not take them unawares, but rather sent messengers to warn them. The messengers were '...from among yourselves...' (az-Zumar: 71). They were from your own species, from among the best of you and the closest to you so that it would be easy for you to follow them.

Moreover, these messengers were supported with proof and evidence, and brought forward promises and threats. Therefore, the disbelievers will be unable to deny that: '...They will answer: "Yea, indeed!"…' (az-Zumar: 71) It means: 'That indeed happened.' They will themselves admit to their lack of evidence and that Allah did send them messengers who warned them about the coming of this Day.

So, the warnings which come to people in their lifetimes, about the affairs of this worldly life and affairs that will take place in the hereafter are signs of the perfect and complete mercy of Allah to His creation. Do you not see that when you help show your son what the consequences of negligence will be and make him afraid of failing at the end of the school year, you are in fact helping him to revise and work hard to avoid such a bad outcome which might afflict him all of a sudden?

In this regard, orientalists have raised objections to Allah's words in the chapter of ar-Rahman. They say, 'The blessings that Allah Glorified is He mentions in the verses: 'He has created man out of sounding clay, like pottery, whereas the invisible beings He has created out of a confusing flame of fire. Which, then, of your Lord's powers can you disavow? [He is] the Lord of the two farthest points of sunrise, and the Lord of the two farthest points of sunset. Which, then, of your Lord's powers can you disavow? He has given freedom to the two great bodies of water, so that they might meet: [yet] between them is a barrier which they may not transgress. Which, then, of your Lord's powers can you disavow? Out of these two [bodies of water] come forth pearls, both great and small. Which, then, of your Lord's powers can you disavow? And His are the lofty ships that sail like [floating] mountains through the seas. Which, then, of your Lord's powers can you disavow?' (ar-Rahman: 14-25) Are all blessings that merit Allah saying about them: 'Which, then, of your Lord's powers can you disavow?' (ar-Rahman: 25) But what blessing is there to be found in Allah's Words: 'A flash of fire will be let loose upon you, and smoke, and you will be left without succour! Which, then, of your Lord's powers can you disavow?' (ar-Rahman: 35-36)

Indeed, warning about some evil before it comes about and telling people about it before taking place is a blessing. Quietly, it is one of the greatest blessings man can hope for in order to keep his affairs in order. The only reason for threats, warnings, raising awareness, and making afraid is so that we can take care to avoid the frightening thing and not become involved in it.

Then, Allah says: '...But the sentence of suffering will [already] have fallen due upon the deniers of the truth,' (az-Zumar: 71) i.e. it is due for them despite all the warnings and threats they received. The sentence that will come true is Allah’s words: ‘…most certainly will I fill hell with invisible beings as well as with humans, all together!’ (as-Sajda: 13) Then, what are you expecting to happen after that? It is quite astonishing that by our own failed choices, we do nothing more than help destiny and pave the way for it to come to pass.

A kalima (literally word, term, sentence, or speech) is a single utterance that conveys only the intrinsic meaning of the word used and not a meaning linked to any other word. So, for example, if you say, ‘the sky’, that does not convey a complete meaning that it would be appropriate to stop at. But when you say, ‘The sky is clear’, you express a complete meaning that is appropriate to stop at. However, scholars also say that a single word can sometimes convey a meaning. For example, if someone asks you who is with you and you replied, ‘Zayd,’ this single word conveys the meaning, ‘Zayd is with me.’ But if the words ‘is with me’ were not intrinsically understood, the single word ‘Zayd’ would not convey the complete meaning. So, a word does not convey a complete meaning where it would be appropriate to stop at unless it is linked to other words.

Arab grammarians made this point clear when they divided words up into three types: nouns, verbs and particles, and called each of them a ‘word’. The difference between them is that a noun indicates an independent meaning that can be understood on its own; a verb also can indicate a meaning of its own, but it is connected to a time or time is part of it. For instance, the verb akala (ate) means that an action of eating took place in the past; the same is true for ‘eats’ in the present, and the imperative ‘Eat!’ in the future. As for particles, they do not convey an independent meaning that can be understood on its own, but they must always be linked to another word for their meaning to be understood.

Moreover, the word kalima also means a speech or a talk. For example, you can say, ‘I gave a 'kalima' at the party’ meaning that you gave a talk. The Quran uses the word kalima (word) with that meaning when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...Nay, it is indeed but a [meaningless] word that he utters...’ (al-Mu’minun: 100) for the meaning of ‘word’ here is: ‘...O my Lord! Let me return, let me return [to life], so that I might act righteously in whatever I have failed [a foretime]!…’ (al-Mu’minun: 99-100)

Similarly, in the verse in question: '...But the sentence of suffering will [already] have fallen due upon the deniers of the truth,' (az-Zumar: 71) with the 'sentence' (translated here for the word Kalima (word)) being: '…Most certainly will I fill hell with invisible beings as well as with humans, all together!' (as-Sajda: 13)

قِيلَ ٱدۡخُلُوٓاْ أَبۡوَٰبَ جَهَنَّمَ خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَاۖ فَبِئۡسَ مَثۡوَى ٱلۡمُتَكَبِّرِينَ ٧٢

It will be said, 'Enter the gates of Hell: there you will remain. How evil is the abode of the arrogant!' [72]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 72)

The word (bi'sa) (how vile) is used for expressing censure against something, which, here, is: '...an abode for those who were given to false pride!' (az-Zumar: 72) That is, their place of residence and final destination. They are described, in particular, as being arrogant here, since they would not have come to such a despised end if it had not been for their arrogance. But who did they act arrogantly towards? They acted arrogantly towards their Lord and Creator. It is quite astonishing that the first arrogance displayed by the human being is against his Creator, the One Who created him from nothing and provided sustenance for him from nothing.

We notice in this verse one of the manifestations of Allah's mercy even towards the unbelievers. It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He is opening a door of hope for them, giving them the hope of salvation, and indicating that they still had the possibility of repenting. No matter what they do, this door remains open. We understand that from Allah's words: '...therein to abide!…' (az-Zumar: 72) Allah Glorified is He did not say, 'forever' here, as He did, for example, in the verse: '...Now as for him who rebels against Allah and His Apostle – verily, the fire of hell awaits him, therein to abide beyond the count of time.' (al-Jinn: 23)

When the scholars counted the number of times the word indicating eternal abide (abadan) is used in connection to the unbelievers, they found it only in two verses: one is the verse (65) in the chapter of al-'Ahzab and the second is the verse 23 in the chapter of al-Jinn. So, the word (abadan) is mentioned in some verses and left out in others. This entices those who have not yet reached the truth that will save them so that they will change, save themselves and return to the Straight Path. But when the True Lord Glorified is He talks about paradise, we find the words ‘therein to abide’ are usually linked with the word (abadan), ‘forever’.

We also notice that Allah says: ‘...enter the gates of hell...’ (az-Zumar: 72) and did not say, ‘Enter hell!’ What is the difference between the two expressions? ‘...enter the gates of hell...’ (az-Zumar: 72) indicates that the punishment rushes to meet them as soon as they enter; it is waiting to receive them at the gates.

After that, the context moves to the other party, the inhabitants of paradise. But why did Allah start with the inhabitants of the fire, saying: ‘And those who were bent on denying the truth will be urged on in throngs towards hell...’ (az-Zumar: 71).

Scholars say that unbelievers are mentioned first because they reject and deny the Resurrection and Reckoning. Therefore, they are pushed first to suffer punishment and distress in a state of surprise. On the contrary, the Allah-fearing believers have been certain about that Day, and believe in the Reckoning and Judgement that will take place there. Moreover, the conclusion with the promise and good news gives feeling of rejoicing and it is a happy conclusion.

Then Allah says:

وَسِيقَ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱتَّقَوْا۟ رَبَّهُمْ إِلَى ٱلْجَنَّةِ زُمَرًا ۖ حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَا جَآءُوهَا وَفُتِحَتْ
أَبْوَٰبُهَا وَقَالَ لَهُمْ خَزَنَتُهَا سَلَـٰمٌ عَلَيْكُمْ طِبْتُمْ فَٱدْخُلُوهَا خَـٰلِدِينَ ﴿٧٣﴾

Those who were mindful of their Lord will be led in throngs to the Garden. When they arrive, they will find its gates wide open, and its keepers will say to them, ‘Peace be upon you. You have been good. Come in: you are here to stay’ [73]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 73)

Here also, the angels drive the believers forward. But there is a difference between the way the unbelievers are driven and the way the Allah-fearing are driven, for the unbelievers are driven harshly and forcibly by the angels in order to hurry them to the punishment. But as for the Allah-fearing, they are driven in the manner that a lover drives his beloved on in order to help them get to the blessings of paradise all the more quickly.

The word zumar (throngs) means ‘groups’. The believers are also sorted into independent groups: a group of the ascetics, another of the scholars, a third of the Mujahedeen and fourth of the honest. ‘...till, when they reach it, they shall find its gates wide-open…’ (az-Zumar: 73). In the previous verse, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...till, when they reach it, its gates will be opened’ (futihat), whereas here He says: ‘...till, when they reach it, they shall find its gates wide-open…’ (wa futihat). Scholars say that, with respect to the inhabitants of the fire, (futihat) is the main clause (result) of the conditional (when they reach it) (here ‘when’ is used in place of ‘if’), whereas (wa futihat) is not the main clause (result) of a conditional clause; the result clause comes later when the blessings are mentioned. That is because the goal is not the opening of the gates, but rather, it is the blessings that follow.

The letter waw (equals the particle ‘and’) here is a particle of conjunction, and the phrase: ‘...its gates wide-open...’ (az-Zumar: 73) is conjoined to the sentence: ‘... till, when they reach it…’ (az-Zumar: 73). That is because the believers did not doubt that this Day was to come. But as for the unbelievers, they did have doubts about it. Therefore, ‘...its gates will be opened...’ (az-Zumar: 71) is made the result clause for the conditional clause that came before it.

But as for the Allah-fearing, the result clause of their conditional clause is something more exalted than the gates simply being opened for them; for them, opening the paradise gates is just the beginning of the mercy entries that are to be mentioned later and their elements that make them up, as well as how they gradually increase, starting with the angels greeting them: ‘...and its keepers will say unto them, “Peace be upon you! You have done well,”’ (az-Zumar: 73) since you purified yourselves from the dirt of wrong action and associating other idols with Allah: ‘...enter, then, this [paradise], herein to abide!’ (az-Zumar: 73) This continues to the end of the chapter, whereby they see the angels circling the Throne. That is the result clause of the conditional that befits them.

Another group of scholars[1] said that (wa futihat) is the result clause of the conditional clause and that the letter waw here is one that is called a 'waw of eight'. But what is meant by a 'waw of eight'? The Arabs considered the number (seven) to be the upper limit for numbers; whenever a number came that was above seven, they consider it to be the start of a new sentence and place the conjunction letter waw (and) before it. An example of that is found in the verses in the chapter of al-Kahf: '[And in times to come] some will say, "[They were] three, the fourth of them being their dog," while others will say, "Five, with their dog as the sixth of them" – idly guessing at something of which they can have no knowledge – and [so on, until] some will say, "[They were] seven, the eighth of them being their dog."…' (al-Kahf: 22) Thus, the letter waw is added before the number eight.

Another example of that is found in Allah's words: '[It is a triumph of] those who turn [unto Allah] in repentance [whenever they have sinned], and who worship and praise [Him], and go on and on [seeking His goodly acceptance], and bow down [before Him] and prostrate themselves in adoration, and enjoin the doing of what is right and forbid the doing of what is wrong, and keep to the bounds set by Allah. And give thou [O Prophet] the glad tiding [of Allah's promise] to all believers.' (at-Tawba: 112) The word (an-nahun), 'forbid the doing of what is wrong', is the eighth word in order of these types of the righteous men, and so is preceded by the letter (waw).

Some scholars also say that another example of that is found in Allah's words in the chapter of at-Tahrim: '[O wives of the Prophet!] Were he to divorce

(1) This was said by Abu Bakr ibn 'Iyyash according to what has been narrated by Al-Qurtubi in his Tafsir (8/5931). Then Al-Qurtubi said, 'Those who said that there are eight gates to paradise used this as proof, mentioning the Hadith of 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him who said that the Messenger Muhammad said: whoever performs ablution, doing it thoroughly, and then says, 'I bear witness that there is no Allah but Allah and that Muhammad is His slave and Messenger', shall have the eight gates to paradise opened up for him, with him being able to enter from whichever gate he wishes.' It is narrated by Muslim and others. At-Tirmidhi also narrated this Hadith of 'Umar Allah be pleased with him with the wording, 'of the gates of paradise, eight will be opened up for him on the Day of Rising', with the addition of the particle (min), which indicates that the gates of paradise number more than eight. We have mentioned that in the book, 'At-Tadhkira' with the total number of gates reaching thirteen.

[any of] you, his Lord might well give him in your stead spouses better than you – women who surrender themselves unto Allah, who truly believe, devoutly obey His will, turn [unto Him] in repentance [whenever they have sinned], worship [Him alone], and go on and on [seeking His goodly acceptance] – be they women previously married or virgins.' (at-Tahrim: 5)

Yes, the word (abkaran), 'virgins', here is the eighth word, but the letter waw here is used to separate between these two types of women, for previously married women can never be virgins. So, this verse may not be used as a proof for this matter. It is only the verses in the chapter of al-Kahf and the chapter of at-Tawba that may be used as proof that seven is the upper limit for numbers among the Arabs. The same is true with respect to the number 'a thousand'.

Therefore, when the daughter of Khosrau (1) was taken prisoner and went to ransom herself, the people asked the one in whose portion of the booty she fell, 'How much do you want for her?' He replied, 'A thousand dinars.' They said to him, 'But she is the daughter of Khosrau!' meaning that it was possible for him to ask for more than that amount of money. So, he said, 'By Allah, if I had known of a number greater than one thousand, I would have said it!'

But, we ourselves do not suggest this view, for the phrase (wa futihat) is not the result clause of the conditional clause here; the result clause with respect to the believers who are Allah-fearing is something far more exalted than the gates being opened for them, far more exalted than the angels saying to them: '...Peace be upon you...' (az-Zumar: 73) and far more exalted than saying to them: '...Well have you done: enter, then, this [paradise], herein to abide' (az-Zumar: 73) for the True Lord Glorified is He says after that: 'And thou wilt see the angels surrounding the throne of [Allah's] Almightiness, extolling their Lord's Glory and Praise...' (az-Zumar: 75). His mentioning the Throne and the angels circling around it glorifying their Lord and singing His praises indicate the ultimate blessings that the Allah-fearing believers will receive. They will see the True Lord who is on the Throne and that is the supreme goal that merits being a result clause to the conditional clause mentioned earlier.

(1) The story of paying the ransom for the daughter of Khosrau

But why does Allah conceal the result clause for the conditional this way? Because, scholars say, if He said here: ‘(their blessing is) what no eye has seen, what no ear has heard and what has never crossed anyone’s mind’(1), it would have been something that our ears had heard. But Allah Glorified is He wants it to come as a surprise for us by being something that none of us had ever conceived. In other words, it is something that had never once crossed our minds. For example, when it comes to the fruits of paradise, the fruits I knew in this world, such as the apple or mango, are brought about to me; if I were to be given some new fruit that I did not know about in this world, I could have said, ‘Were these fruits to have been in the world, it would have looked and tasted just like this.’ That is why the fruits in paradise will be in the superficial form of the fruits that I know about in this world, but with different characteristics, which conform to the description: no eye has seen, no ear has heard, and no mind has conceived.

So, its superiority comes from their being in paradise. Then, when the fruits which no eye had seen, no ear had heard, and no mind had thought of, come to me once, how about when it comes to me the second time? For, on the second occasion, I would have inevitably seen it before and thought of it before. When I see a mango, for example, I might say, ‘I ate that before!’

But that is not the case, scholars say, for when it comes to you the second time, it will come to you in a different form with another colour and another taste different to the one you ate the first time. Thus, it will come true that all the blessings that come to you in paradise will be blessings that no eye has seen, no ear has heard and no mind has thought of.

Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘Whenever they are granted fruits therefrom as their appointed sustenance, they will say, “It is this that in days of yore was granted to us as our sustenance!” – for they shall be given something that will recall that [past]…' (al-Baqara: 25).

(1) It is narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (2824); Ahmad in his Musnad (2/466); and Abu Nu‘aym in Al-Hilya (2/262) in a Hadith by Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

وَقَالُوا۟ ٱلْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ ٱلَّذِى صَدَقَنَا وَعْدَهُۥ وَأَوْرَثَنَا ٱلْأَرْضَ نَتَبَوَّأُ
مِنَ ٱلْجَنَّةِ حَيْثُ نَشَآءُ ۖ فَنِعْمَ أَجْرُ ٱلْعَـٰمِلِينَ ﴿٧٤﴾

And they will say, 'Praise be to God who has kept His promise to us and given us this land as our own. Now we may live wherever we please in the Garden.' How excellent is the reward of those who labour! [74]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 74)

Their saying: '…All praise is due to Allah...,' (az-Zumar: 74) is it praise to Allah because He made His promise come true, or is it because Allah gave you the success to affirm as true the promise He made to you? The meaning is, 'Praise be to Allah who made us worthy of having His promise made true so that we could then affirm it as true.' Otherwise, Allah's promise is always true and truthful.

In '...and has bestowed upon us this expanse [of bliss] as our portion…' (az-Zumar: 74), the word irth (literally means inheritance, translated as 'portion') here has a different meaning to the one we all know for it of inheriting from someone after their death. For the thing that is inherited here is paradise, as clarified by Allah in another verse: '...And [a voice] will call out unto them: "This is the paradise which you have inherited by virtue of your past deeds!"' (al-A'raf: 43)

That is clearly shown, as we said before, by the fact that the True Lord Glorified is He decreed in the time before time that He was going to create creation, leaving them to make their own choices in certain things while compelling them in other matters so that they would always remain, despite themselves, in one aspect of their lives slaves to Him, and in another aspect of their lives slaves to the choices they make.

If they take Allah's side and give preference to what He wants over the free choices He assigned them, they are victorious and obtain the position of servitude to Allah ('ubudiyya); when they do that, they become better than the angels, since the angels are obedient by nature, while mankind is given free choice and then chooses to either obey or disobey. If man obeys Allah, he has the right to rise up even above the angels.

That is why Satan (Iblis) rose up above the angels before he disobeyed Allah. He used to be called the peacock of the angels (i.e. the best of them) since he was a being created with freedom of choice, in addition that he obeyed Allah just as the angels obeyed. Therefore, he had a quality that made him superior to them, until of course he finally slipped up and was expelled and cast out from the mercy of Allah.

We say that since Allah created the human beings and granted them with the free will either to obey or to disobey, He Glorified is He prepared a place of reward for each of them in paradise on the basis that they may all be believers and obey His orders. Likewise, He prepared a place in the fire for each of them in case they all may disobey. So, when the inhabitants of the fire enter into the fire, their places in paradise are left empty. Then, what about those places? They are taken by the inhabitants of paradise, or, in other words, they will inherit these places, just as the Quran says.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '...so that we may dwell in paradise as we please!…' (az-Zumar: 74) We say that the meaning of tabawwa'a (translated in this verse as 'dwell') in a place is to settle in it. An example of the word being used in that way is found in the story of Joseph peace be upon him: 'And thus We established Joseph securely in the land [of Egypt]: he had full mastery over it, [doing] whatever he willed...' (Yusuf: 56). The meaning is to settle in and live in, but it is not something that is done with force with everyone going wherever they want to go, nor is there any transgression against anyone else's rights. No, the meaning is that each of us will dwell and live in his own garden, not in someone else's garden. There is a proof here that in fact each person's personal paradise is a wide expanse. '...And how excellent a reward will it be for those who laboured [in Allah's way]!' (az-Zumar: 74): the word ni'ma (how excellent) is used for things that are praiseworthy, referring to the huge compensation they get in exchange for all their right actions.

وَقُضِىَ بَيْنَهُم بِٱلْحَقِّ وَقِيلَ ٱلْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ رَبِّ ٱلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٧٥﴾

You [Prophet] will see the angels surrounding the Throne, glorifying their Lord with praise. True judgement will have been passed between them, and it will be said,
'Praise be to God, the Lord of the Worlds' [75]
(The Quran, az-Zumar: 75)

His saying: '... surrounding the throne of [Allah's] almightiness …' (az-Zumar: 75) means that they circle around it: '...extolling their Lord's glory and praise...' (az-Zumar: 75). They have no job but to glorify their Lord and sing His praises. '...And judgment will have been passed in justice on all [who had lived and died]…' (az-Zumar: 75) i.e. Allah will judge between them. But who are those that Allah will judge between? They are the angels, for there are different categories of them: there are the high class angels who are besotted with the mightiness of the True Lord Glorified is He and they know nothing about our world nor about Adam and his descendants. There are also angels who are charged with serving mankind; they are called the guardian angels about whom Allah says: '...he has hosts of helpers – both such as can be perceived by him and such as are hidden from him – that could preserve him from whatever Allah may have willed...' (ar-Ra'd: 11). It is these angels whom Allah commanded to prostrate to Adam, not all of the angels. It is as if this prostration was an indication of their subjugation and obedience to this created being whom they were going to serve.

Then, there are the noble recording angels: 'and yet, verily, there are ever-watchful forces over you, noble, recording, aware of whatever you do!' (al-Infitar: 10-12)

The meaning of: '...And judgment will have been passed in justice on all [who had lived and died]…' (az-Zumar: 75) is that each of them will get the place and the reward he deserves.

And '...the word will be spoken: "All praise is due to Allah, the Lord of All the worlds!"' (az-Zumar: 75) Who is it who says this? Some scholars say(1) that it is the believers from among the human race who say this; others say(2) that it is all of creation who says this; and others say that it is the True Lord Glorified is He who says this, being an example of Allah praising Himself, just as He bears witness to Himself when He says: '...that there is no deity save Him...' (Al-'Imran: 18).

The True Lord Glorified is He praises Himself being the Lord of all the worlds. Therefore, the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said in a Hadith: '...We pay you the countless praise that is duly dedicated to you: The due praise You are worthy of is known and is estimated by none but yourself.'(3) This is praise paid to Allah by Himself. O Allah, make us always be among those who say, 'Praise belongs to Allah, Lord of all the worlds.'

(1) Al-Qurtubi said this in his Tafsir (8/5933), saying, 'That is to say, the believers say, "Praise be to Allah for all the blessings He has rewarded us with, the kindness He has shown us and the victory He has given us over those who maltreated us." It is also said that the statement is made by the angels, and we take that view, then this is them praising Him for His justice and true judgement.'

(2) Ibn Kathir said this in his Tafsir (4/69), saying, 'That is to say, the whole of existence utter these words, those who have been granted the gift of speech and dumb animals alike, all saying that praise is due to Allah, the Lord of all the worlds for His perfect judgement and His justice. And that is the reason the statement is not ascribed to any particular speaker but rather is left general and unspecified. That indicates that all of creation bore witness to the fact that praise is due to Him.'

(3) It is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (6/58 & 120); as well as by Muslim in his Sahih (486): in a Hadith from 'Aisha Allah be pleased with her in which she said, 'I noticed the Messenger of Allah was absent from the bed one night so I looked around for him and my hand fell on the bottom of his feet which were both upright as he was in prostration, saying, 'O Allah, I seek refuge in Your pleasure from Your displeasure, and in Your pardon from Your punishment. I seek refuge in You from You. I pay you the countless praise that is duly dedicated to you: The due praise You are worthy of is known and is estimated by none but yourself.'

the chapter of

Ghafir

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of Ghafir[1] (The Believer):

حمٓ ﴿١﴾

Ha Mim* [1] (The Quran, Ghafir: 1)

This is the first of the chapters named collectively (al-Hawamim) meaning 'those chapters which begin with Allah's saying: 'Ha Mim'. (Hawamim) is the plural of Ha Mim. It is, however, not formed in accordance to the rules for plurals, and it would be more correct to say 'al HaMim'. The letters Ha Mim are from the isolated letters (al-huruf al-muqatta'a) that are found at the beginning of several chapters. We have spoken of them already more than once. In fact, we are just trying to peruse some of their meanings that we are capable of deriving and understanding; after all, everyone must say of them, ‘Allah knows best what they mean’ because their meanings cannot be certainly encompassed

---

(1) The chapter of Ghafir is also known as the chapter of al-Mu'min in honour of the believer of the people of Pharaoh mentioned in Allah's saying: 'At that, a believing man of Pharaoh's family, who [until then] had concealed his faith, exclaimed…' (Ghafir: 28). It is also called the chapter of at-Tawl from Allah's saying: '…forgiving sins and accepting repentance, severe in retribution, limitless in His bounty (dhi at-Tawl)...' (Ghafir: 3) i.e. the possessor of riches, plenty and blessings. It is a Meccan chapter according to Al-Hasan, `Ata', `Ikrima, and Jabir. It is related that Al-Hasan said it was Meccan up to Allah's saying: '…and extol thy Sustainer's glory and praise by night and by day' (Ghafir: 55) because the prayers were only prescribed in Medina, Ibn `Abbas and Qatada said that it was all Meccan apart from two verses that were revealed in Medina: 'Behold, as for those who call Allah's messages in question without having any evidence therefor – in their hearts is nothing but overweening self-conceit, which they will never be able to satisfy: seek thou, then, refuge with Allah – for, verily, He alone is all-hearing, all-seeing! Greater indeed than the creation of man is the creation of the heavens and the earth: yet most men do not understand [what this implies].' (Ghafir: 56-57) It has 85 verses and is the 40th chapter in the final compilation of the Quran, but it was the 59th chapter to be revealed. It was revealed after the chapter of az-Zumar, and is placed as such in the final compilation, and after the chapter of as-Sajda. [See Tafsir Al-Qrtubi 8/5935 and Al-Itqan fi `Ulum Al-Quran by As-Suyuti 1/27].

We said previously that each letter has a name and a sound of its own. The letter (أ) (A) is named (alif), and the letter (ب) (B) is named (ba’). To clarify the letter sounds, we give an example of the word (كتب) (wrote); you do not pronounce it (kaf ta’ ba’) in accordance with the names of the letters, rather you pronounce it (kataba) because these are the sounds indicated by its letters. The sound of the letter (kaf) is “ka”, the sound of the letter (ta’) is “ta” and the sound of the letter (ba’) is “ba”. So, when we speak we use the sounds indicated by the letters, not the letters themselves.

Nevertheless, when we pronounce the verse 'Ha Mim', we say the names of the letters, (ha) and (mim). Were we to pronounce their sounds as if they were a word we would say (hamm). From this, we can see the importance of oral transmission when learning to recite the Quran. It is through listening that we know that the beginning of the chapter of al-Baqara is recited: ‘Alif Lam Mim’, while the same letters at the beginning of the chapter of ash-Sharh are recited (alam): ‘Have We not (alam) opened up thy heart.’ (ash-Sharh: 1) Had it not been for oral narration by listening, we would not have known this pronunciation.

Some scholars who took to examining the meanings of the letters at the beginnings of the chapters said that the Quran came as an inimitable miracle to the Arab peoples. As the Arabs surpassed in rhetoric and eloquence, this miracle came in the field within which they excelled so that its inimitable nature may be manifested. There are no other people on earth who made markets and exhibitions for the spoken word as the Arabs did in the markets of ‘Ukaz, Marbad, Dhu Al-majaz(1) and other places. The challenge of the

---

(1) `Ukazh was a marketplace where the Arabs would contend in boasting about their forefathers, lineage, and greatness. It is near Mecca. The Arabs would go there once a year, staying for a month. Dhu Al-majaz is a place at Minawhere there was a marketplace in the pre-Islamic period of ignorance. [See Lisan Al-`Arab under (`akaza) and (jawaza).]

Quran to them was the very testimony to their superiority in this field, and that they were authorities therein.

But what are the bases of the incapacitating nature of the Quran? How does it excel the speech of the Arabs, while the letters and words are the very same?

The scholars say that some of the letters from which language is composed are known as 'letters of building' (huruf mabni), i.e., they are the building blocks of words and have no meaning by themselves. Other letters are known as 'letters of meaning' (huruf ma'na), and these have meaning by themselves. For example, if we look at the letter (kaf) (k) in the word (kataba) (he wrote), we see it is used as a building block in the word. If we took the (kaf) out of (katab) it would not have any meaning on its own. But, the letter (kaf) in a sentence like (al-jundi kal-asad) (the soldier is like a lion), it is a letter of meaning. It has meaning on its own, that of similarity, i.e., 'like', and it has no place in the construction of the word (al-asad) (lion). Similarly, the letter (ba') in the word (kataba) is a building block, but in the phrase (billah) (By Allah!), it is a letter of meaning and denotes the swearing of an oath.

From the letters, in general, words are made, and from words sentences and phrases are made. Good style and distinguished rhetoric are composed of sentences which attract listeners and impact the soul. By abiding by the correct rules of Arabic composition, eloquence is achieved. So, if the Arabic letters and words are the same in the Quran, how can it be distinguished from the normal speech of the Arabs? The scholars say that it is distinguished by means of its special composition and style, and that the Quran is the words spoken by Allah.

We previously said that if we want to test the skills of a group of weavers, it is not proper if we give one of them woollen thread, another cotton and yet another silk; if the raw materials are different, how can we judge who is best? Rather, they must all use the same raw material so that results can be distinguished properly.

So, the meaning of: 'Ha. Mim. The bestowal from on high of this divine writ issues from Allah, The Almighty, The All Knowing,' (Ghafir: 1-2) or: 'Ha. Mim. Consider this Divine Writ, clear in itself and clearly showing the truth!’ (ad-Dukhan: 1-2) or: ‘Alif. Lam. Mim. This Divine Writ – let there be no doubt about it...’ (al-Baqara: 1-2) is that, from these letters, the Quran is composed and given the secrets of its inimitable style and the challenge it poses because it is Allah who spoke it and conveyed it to his Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him who knew neither how to read nor write.

Thus, the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him recited the Quran just as it was revealed to him, not changing even a single letter. Illiteracy is a defect in everyone except the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him for him, it was a distinction and an honour. It is as though he were saying: I did not learn anything from any man; rather, my education is all from my Lord.

Similarly, the whole Arab nation was a Bedouin and unlettered people. They knew little of civilization, and they had no widespread legal system to rule them. Had the Arab peoples at the time of the revelation been a civilized nation, the unbelievers would have said that Islam was a civilization on the rise. On the contrary, Islam appeared in the Arabian Peninsula, while the Arab was a Bedouin people, with no constitution and no law to govern them except the tribal law and its fanaticism. The ruler was the sheikh of the tribe. Their houses were portable with them on the backs of their camels. Wherever they found pasture, they stopped and pitched their tents, and wherever they found water they stayed in its neighbourhood. They were not bound to any homeland or place.

Moreover, there were conflicts and wars that erupted among the Arab tribes for the smallest of reasons. You know, for instance, about the war called Dahis and the Ghubara’ which continued between two of the Arab tribes for 40 years. Thus, when the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him wanted to form an army for the emerging Islamic State, he did not open a school to teach people the arts of fighting and war because they were a people who had already practised these arts perfectly. The Arab person is by nature always prepared for war; whenever he hears a battle cry(1) he flies toward it.

(1) (al-Hay`a) refers to a sound which shakes you and you fear to hear from the enemy. It can also refer to any harsh sound [Lisan Al-`Arab under (haya`a)]. The word can be found in the Hadith of the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him:=

Then, how can such a nation with these conditions become the leader of the entire world and conquest its countries?

It seems that Allah has willed to prepare them for travelling throughout the world bearing and presenting Allah's guidance to mankind. They were not inclined to anything. Then, Allah sent to them His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him who turned the slaves into masters and made the sheepherder leaders and pioneers for all nations. Thus, the Arab nation was qualified by its language, illiteracy and Bedouin life to lead the civilized world so that all should know that the Mission of Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him is not a human one, but quietly a divine one. So how could such a nation lead the world, when this was its description?

It is as though Allah Glorified is He wanted to prepare them to travel through the world, spreading His guidance to His creation unshackled by anything. Then, He brought forth the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from their midst and hence, the slaves became the masters and the shepherds became the leaders, as well as the beacons for the entire world. In this way was the Arab nation prepared, in terms of spoken language, illiteracy and Bedouin nature to lead the civilised world so that all might know that what Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him brought was not from humans, but from Allah Glorified is He.

We return now to the disjointed letters. These letters may come in ones, as in Qaf and Sad; in twos, as in Ta Sin and Ha Mim; in threes, as in Ta Sin Mim and Alif Lam Mim; and they may come in fives as in Kaf Ha Ya 'Ayn Sad. So, they do not come in just one format.

When we consider the total number of these letters, we find that they are 14—half the 28 letters of the Arabic alphabet. That they are exactly half indicates that this is something intentional and not a mere coincidence. It is a proof that these 14 letters occur in such a way as to reveal that they have purpose and wisdom and were not just chosen randomly. From the first nine of the 28 letters of the alphabet—from alif to dhal, only two appear among the isolated letters, alif and ha'. The remaining seven are not used. If we then look to the last nine letters of the alphabet, we find that the True Lord used seven of them and left two, the opposite of the beginning of the alphabet. He used qaf, kaf, lam, mim, nun, ha' and ya' and left fa' and waw.

So far, we have seen 18 letters, there remain ten more in the middle of the alphabet, beginning with ra' and ending with ghayn. When we look at these we notice that Allah Glorified is He has used all the letters which do not have dots on and left the ones which do. He used ra' and left zay; he used sin and left shin; he used sad and left dad; He used ta' and left za'; and He used Ayn and left ghayn.

So, this arrangement found in the disjointed letters indicates that they are not uniform, and that there is some wisdom behind them. Since they were not chosen at random, it is our responsibility to derive these wisdoms and understand the indications, each of us in accordance with his ability. Even today, we still, nowadays, examine these letters in order to discover their meanings.

To search for the wisdom therein is a praiseworthy ijtihad (independent reasoning: the exercise of critical thinking and independent judgment). Alternatively, you can rest your mind and take them as they are from Allah Glorified is He as one would take a key from someone who made a padlock. You do not care if it has one, two, three, or four teeth on it, as long as it opens the lock. Still, the secret of the key will remain with the one who made it.

Yet, the human mind likes to discover things. How? The scholars said that the True Lord wants three things concerning His religion: beliefs, laws and a medium to convey the beliefs and laws, i.e., His speech in the Quran. Each of these three has aspects which are unseen and aspects which are manifest.

As for beliefs, the first of them is faith in Allah Glorified is He who is unseen; nevertheless, one can infer His existence from what is manifest in His creation: its greatness and His construction of the visible world. There is no one who claims to have created this marvellous universe, attributing it to himself; for it solely belongs to Allah. Thus, we believe in this unseen Entity because of the things we can see. As for the unseen that has no visible manifestation, like the True Lord's Attributes, these we believe in based on what we hear of His speech.

Similarly, amongst the obligations and laws are things that are seen and others that are unseen. Take, for example, prayer, poor-due, hajj (pilgrimage) and fasting: They are all visible acts, yet within them are unseen aspects, the wisdom of which remains unknown to us to this day. The submission and yielding of servant-hood lays within prayer, fasting develops incessant conscientiousness (taklif), zakat disperses wealth within society, and hajj proclaims one's allegiance to the Ka'ba—the House of Allah Glorified is He. These are things that we are able to understand with our intellects, but what, for instance, is the wisdom in making the Morning Prayer consist of two rak'as (units of prayer); the Noon Prayer four rak'as; the Afternoon Prayer four, the Sunset Prayer three and the Evening Prayer four. These are things we do not know.

Thus, with each unseen aspect there is a manifest aspect, and vice versa. Similarly, Allah's speech contains the seen and the unseen. The seen aspects include the speech that we listen to, read and write, and its exegesis and meanings that we understand. The unseen aspects include these disjointed letters, Alif, Lam, Mim, Nun, Qaf, Sad, etc.

Each aspect of the unseen is accompanied by something manifest that facilitates to us the belief in the unseen. Had everything been manifest and visible, there would have been no room for faith. You and I are now sitting in the Mosque of Sheikh Sulaiman – do we have faith in its existence? No, because we can see it. The unseen is the domain of faith. That is why Allah Glorified is He says: '…who believe in the unseen…' (al-Baqara: 3).

Yet, the unseen must have manifest evidences that corroborate them in the visible world—something to lead us toward them. Think for instance of Prophet Muhammad's Night Journey and Ascension. This was unseen by anyone except Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The Night Journey was a terrestrial one and the Ascension a heavenly one. People saw the signs that were present on the earth, but they did not witness anything in the heavens.

That is why, when the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him desired to introduce a proof of his truthfulness, he described for them some distinctive features he had seen on earth. He described Bayt Al-Maqdis to them and the group he saw travelling and when they would arrive; that they had a camel of such-and-such a description. Thus, it was a terrestrial journey that was possible to prove.

By means of the truthful description he gave of the things he saw on earth, this journey became effectively visible and a means of proving the credibility of the sights—that were beyond the scope of natural laws—he witnessed. So, if he informs you that he ascended into the heavens, believe him, and take from his truthfulness in the manifest world a proof of his truthfulness about the hidden world; for, as we said, every unseen aspect is complemented by a manifest aspect.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

تَنزِيلُ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ مِنَ ٱللَّهِ ٱلۡعَزِيزِ ٱلۡعَلِيمِ ٢

This Scripture is sent down from God, the Almighty, the All Knowing [2] (The Quran, Ghafir: 2)

The Arabic root na za la (literally: descend) comes in the Quran in numerous forms: anzalna (we sent down), nazzalna (we sent down), tanzil (a message sent down) and nuzzila (was sent down). Each of these denotes the lofty status of the thing that was sent down. This attribute of loftiness indicates that the thing that has been sent down is not of human origin. It indicates the station of the thing and its greatness, even if it is something earthly and not heavenly, as Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of al-Hadid: '...We also sent iron, with its mighty strength and many uses for mankind...' (al-Hadid: 25).

It is well known that iron is mined from the ground and does not descend from the heaven. Thus, the meaning of 'tanzil', here, is that it was sent as a gift from One on-high to those below. The One on high must surely be greater than those below. We say this, too, when we wish to make new laws and legal rulings.

We say: do not leave the laws of the One on-high and take those below because the Higher Legislator Glorified is He is different from the human legislator; for whatever knowledge or wisdom he may have, he will never be free from desires or bias. If he is rich, he will make laws that benefit the capitalists, and if he is from the poor, he will make laws that will benefit the communists.

This is why it is necessary for the one who makes laws to be free from bias, and that he should, by no means, benefit from the laws he makes. He must have knowledge of all matters upon which he judges. Thus, no one would correct him, or there would be a chance that he neglects any of the details of the matter at hand. These conditions are only present in the True Lord. This is why it is not permissible for us to leave Allah's Law and adopt man-made laws.

It is for this reason that Islam is exposed to criticisms and negative campaigns by the non-Muslims. The most recent of these was the uproar that they caused in the Vatican over divorce in Islam. They made their own laws against divorce, whereas, in Islam divorce is legislated by Allah Glorified is He. For this reason, it is the right law, and all other laws are wrong. There is no way you can prolong a relationship indefinitely between spouses who hate each other, when their relationship should be one of mutual responsibility to provide a sense of security to each other. How can they force a man to live with a woman who does not attract him?!

So, divorce is legal in Islam for a reason. The Legislator Glorified is He knows best of the nature of His creatures. With the passing of time the problems of society and the cases thrown up by daily life made them recourse to legalising divorce, too. They did not legalise it because Islam permits it, nor out of love of Allah's religion or out of faith in Allah's law, but because life forced cases upon them that could only be solved through divorce.

It was with this argument that we answered when asked in San Francisco about Allah's statement: 'They wish to put His light out with their mouths. But He will perfect His light, even though the disbelievers hate it,' (as-Saff: 8) and: 'It is He who has sent His Messenger with guidance and the religion of truth, to show that it is above all [other] religions, however much the idolaters may hate this.' (at-Tawba: 33)

They said that Islam has been around for 14 centuries, yet most people are still not Muslims and Islam is not the dominant religion, rather, it is being fought and is under threat. To this we replied that had they reflected upon this verse, they would have realised that the ‘manifestation of religion’ does not mean that everybody will believe in it, rather, its law will dominate the other laws and that non-Muslims will find themselves compelled to take from Islam to solve their problems. That Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...however much the idolaters may hate this,’ (at-Tawba: 33) and: ‘...even if the disbelievers hate it,’ (at-Tawba: 32) is proof that the polytheists and disbelievers will still be in spite of the presence of Islam.

The word al-Kitab (Divine Writ) refers to the Quran. Allah Glorified is He named it a Writ because it is written, and He named it a Quran (recital) because it is recited. Alternatively, it could be said that He named it a Kitab so as to grant permission for it to be written, and He named it a Quran so as to grant permission for it to be recited. Recitation can be either from written text or from what has been memorised by heart. It is also named Wahi (revelation) because it was uhiya (revealed) to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. ‘The Quran is nothing less than a revelation that is sent to him.’ (an-Najm: 4) Thus, each name has a specific wisdom behind it.

When they wanted to compile the Quran, they stated a condition: that what people had memorised would match with what was written. They did not record any verse unless they found it written down and they found two upright people to bear witness to its correctness. May Allah have mercy on Sheikh Muhammad 'Abdullah Darraz(1) who compared this matter to Allah’s saying: ‘...so that if one of the two women should forget the other can remind her....’ (al-Baqara: 282)

Allah Glorified is He then says: ‘…from Allah the Almighty the All Knowing.’ (Ghafir: 2) That is to say, this Book is revealed from Allah Glorified is He who is characterized by the attributes of total perfection. To Him belong absolute power, absolute wisdom, absolute mercy and absolute compassion.

(1) Muhammad `Abdullah Darraz was a scholar of Sacred Law and literature Faqih Muta a'ddib from Al-Azhar University in Egypt. He was a member of the group of major scholars at Al-Azhar Hay’a kubbar Al-Ulama’ bi Al-Azhar. Among his books is Ad-Din – Dirasa Tamhidiyya li Tarikh Al-Islam. He passed away in 1958 CE. (from Al-A`lam by Az-Zirikli 6/236)

So long as the Book has come from one whose attributes are thus, no one can correct it, and as long as it cannot be corrected, then one should have complete faith in the verse: '...This day have I perfected for you your religion and completed My favour on you and chosen for you Islam as a religion.' (al-Ma'ida: 3)

It is because of this that we wonder at those who call for the modernisation of Islam. To them we say: instead of modernising Islam, let us religionize the modern age.

The Name of Allah, Al-'Aziz (the Almighty) means, 'the One Who conquers and cannot be conquered.' If this Book has been revealed by The Almighty, then it cannot be conquered. It must necessarily rise up, be spread and be heard by people. None will defeat it because it comes from The Almighty. Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He would not send a Messenger and then abandon him. So, no matter how much they resist, and no matter how stubborn or arrogant they are, this Quran will dominate and will never be defeated in any sphere whatsoever.

It is as though the True Lord is telling the disbelievers and the idol-worshippers to take admonition from the reality around them, for Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his followers, after they had been besieged and persecuted, now grew day after day. The lands of Islam were increasing, and an increase in the lands of Islam was a decrease in the lands of disbelief: 'Do they not see how We come to [their] land and shrink its borders? Allah decides—no one can reverse His decision—and He is swift in reckoning.' (ar-Ra'd: 41) The True Lord also says: 'Anyone who thinks that Allah will not support him in this world and the next should stretch a rope up to the sky, climb all the way up it, and see whether this strategy removes the cause of his anger.' (al-Hajj: 15) That is to say, whoever doubts in assistance and victory from Allah Glorified is He then let him try to find another way. Let him bring a rope and hang it from the sky, put his neck in it and cut it off, then let him see if his struggle will take away that at which he is enraged. Allah Glorified is He says clarifying His custom of giving victory to His Messengers peace be upon them, as well as His righteous servants: 'Our word has already been given to Our servants the messengers:

it is they who will be helped, and the ones who support Our cause will be the winners.' (as-Saffat: 171-173)

So, the True Lord will not stifle His religion; He will not let down his Messengers peace be upon them; and he will not abandon succouring His chosen friends.

As for Allah's statement: '…the All Knowing,' (Ghafir: 2), it means that His Might is not imposed or without basis, rather, it is backed up by knowledge. It is a Might with wisdom, with mercy and compassion, for He has all the attributes of absolute perfection.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

غَافِرِ ٱلذَّنۢبِ وَقَابِلِ ٱلتَّوۡبِ شَدِيدِ ٱلۡعِقَابِ ذِي ٱلطَّوۡلِۖ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَۖ إِلَيۡهِ ٱلۡمَصِيرُ ٣

Forgiver of sins and Accepter of repentance, severe in punishment, infinite in bounty. There is no god but Him; to Him is the ultimate return [3] (The Quran, Ghafir: 3)

The True Lord does not want His creation to be separated from Him, no matter how much they have been conquered by their passions or how many sins they have committed. He wants to attract them to Him by His Kindness, and encompass them with His grace. That is why He has left the door of repentance and forgiveness open for them, and extended the hand of clemency and pardon. After introducing the first part of this carrot-and-stick approach, He warned them against the stick of punishment so that they would not become deluded. Allah's Way benefits society as a whole and the individual in particular, for if the sinner knew that his sin would not be forgiven, he would persist in it, do it more frequently, become openly contentious, and spread corruption in the world. With this he will be a trouble to society and especially to the people of faith.

This is one of the most hope-inspiring verses in the Quran, like Allah's saying towards the end of the chapter of az-Zumar (The Troops/throngs): 'Say, "[Allah says], My servants who have harmed yourselves by your own excess, do not despair of Allah's mercy. Allah forgives all sins: He is truly the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful."' (az-Zumar: 53)

We said previously that these verses and the like of them do not contradict Allah's statement: 'Allah does not forgive the joining of partners with Him: anything less than that He forgives to whoever He will,' (*an-Nisa': *48) because disbelief is not a dhanb (sin). A sin is when one goes against something that has been made obligatory or forbidden by The Lawgiver on high. Shirk (ascribing of divinity to other than Allah), however, is a departure from faith altogether, so it is not considered a sin.

The True Lord repeatedly reminds His servants of His acceptance of repentance and His forgiveness so that no one will despair of His mercy. Allah Glorified is He says: '[Allah says], My servants who have harmed yourselves by your own excess, do not despair of Allah's mercy…' (az-Zumar: 53). There are those who have transgressed against themselves, then, consequently, despaired of the mercy of their Lord. They have sinned so much that they thought that they could never be forgiven

Among these was Wahshi*,* the killer of Hamza may Allah be pleased with him. After he killed Hamza, he perceived the enormity of his sin and the crime he had committed. He felt certain he was doomed and that Allah Glorified is He would never forgive him. Some have said that he went to the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to ask him about this matter…etc. Actually, he was in Mecca and this verse was revealed in Medina. It was then recited to him and, when he heard it, he believed and embraced Islam.

It is related(1) that Wahshi met Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who said to him: 'I did not want to see you unless you came to seek protection; for my Lord says: 'If any one of the idolaters should seek your protection [Prophet], grant it to him so that he may hear the word of Allah, then take him to a place safe for him...' (at-Tawba: 6).

(1) Ibn Jurayj relates from `Ata' on the authority of Ibn `Abbas who said, 'Wahshi came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said, "O Muhammad, I come to seek your protection, so shelter me that I might hear Allah's speech." 'The Messenger of Allah Glorified is He Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to him, "Indeed, I did not wish to see you in my neighbourhood, but if you have come to seek my protection then under my protection you shall be until you have heard Allah's speech." "But I have been a polytheist, killed a soul forbidden by Allah Glorified is He and committed fornication (zina). Will Allah Glorified is He accept repentance from me?" 'The Messenger of Allah Glorified is He Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him remained silent until Allah Glorified is He revealed the verse: "...and who never invoke any (imaginary) deity side by side with Allah Glorified is He and do not take any human=

So, Wahshi said: 'I seek your protection so that I might hear Allah's speech.' The Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him recited to him: 'Say, "[Allah says], My servants who have harmed yourselves by your own excess, do not despair of Allah's mercy. Allah forgives all sins: He is truly the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful."' (az-Zumar: 53)

Wahshi said: 'But Allah says: "Except those who repent, believe and do good deeds..." (al-Furqan: 70) and I cannot guarantee that I will be able to do righteous deeds.' So, the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him recited the following verse to him: 'Forgiver of sins and Accepter of repentance, severe in punishment, infinite in bounty…' (Ghafir: 3).

Another one of those who succumbed to despair of Allah's mercy was 'Ayyash ibn Abu Rabiʿa(1). It is related that when 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him wanted to emigrate, he agreed with 'Ayyash(2) and Hisham ibn Al-'As ibn Wa'il = being's life – (the life) which Allah Glorified is He has willed to be sacred – otherwise than in (the pursuit of) justice, and do not commit adultery. And (know that) he who commits aught thereof shall (not only) meet with a full requital," (al-Furqan: 68) which He, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him then recited it to him.' "I see there is a condition attached; perhaps I will not be able to do righteous deeds. I seek your protection until I hear Allah's speech." The verse: 'Verily, Allah Glorified is He does not forgive the ascribing of divinity to aught beside Him, although He forgives any lesser sin unto whomever He wills...' (an-Nisa': 48) was subsequently revealed so the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him called for him and recited it to him. "Perhaps I am amongst those for whom He does not will (forgiveness). I seek your protection until I hear the speech of Allah Glorified is He."

The verse: 'Say: "(Thus speaks Allah Glorified is He): O you servants of Mine who have transgressed against your own selves, Despair not of Allah's mercy...' (az-Zumar: 53) was then revealed, to which he said, 'Yes, now I do not see any conditions', and so he entered Islam. It was related by Al-Qurtubi in his exegesis (8/5914).

(1) The story of 'Ayyash ibn Abu Rabi'a with 'Umar Ibn Al-Khattab may Allah be pleased with him and Hisham ibn Al-'As during the immigration.

(2) His name was `Amr and his nickname was Dhu Ar-Rumhayn may Allah be pleased with him. His paternal uncle was Khalid ibn Al-Walid may Allah be pleased with him and he was among the very first Muslims. He emigrated both times, but Abu Jahl tricked him into returning from Medina to Mecca and captured him, and the Prophet Muhammad peace=

As-Sahmi(1) that they should emigrate together. They would meet at the Bi'r (the well) of Ghaffar. If one of them was detained, the others would wait for him. However, when the time came, 'Ayyash did not. He had been prevented from emigrating by his family. He was tricked by them and fell for their trick. Thus, he did not emigrate with his two companions, and this caused him to despair of Allah's mercy.(2)

When the verse: 'Say, "[Allah says], My servants who have harmed yourselves by your own excess, do not despair of Allah's mercy. Allah forgives all sins: He is truly the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful"' (az-Zumar: 53) was revealed, 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him remembered his Companion, 'Ayyash, who had been tricked by his family. He remembered that there was a time when they met upon faith that he had intended to emigrate. His heart softened, and he sent a message to him with this verse so that he might find peace and return to faith.

Allah's words: 'The Forgiver of sins…' (Ghafir: 3) refers to past sins. The '…Accepter of repentance...' (Ghafir: 3) refers to the disobedience that was received by the One Who is '…Severe in retribution…' (Ghafir: 3). The True Lord associates forgiveness with punishment for wisdom so that people do not become overly secure, or become deluded by Allah's mercy. Thus, faith is based on both hope and fear. They are like the two wings for a bird: both of them are, together, essential. His words: '…infinite in bounty…'

= and blessings be upon him would pray for him in the qunut prayer. He died in the year 15AH in Sham during the caliphate of 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him. It has also been said that he was martyred at the battle of Yamama and others said at the battle of Yarmuk. (Al-Isaba fi Tamyiz As-Sahaba 5/47)

(1) Hisham ibn Al-`As may Allah be pleased with him was nicknamed Abu Al-`As. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him nicknamed him Abu Muti`. He was one of the early Muslims and emigrated to Ethiopia. The biographical scholars state that he was martyred at Ajnadin. Al-Waqidi mentions that Hisham was a righteous man and that at the battle of Ajnadin he saw some of the Muslims retreating, so he threw the helmet from his head and started to advance toward the heart of the enemy shouting, 'O Muslims! Upon me! Upon me! I am Hisham ibn Al-`As! Is it from paradise that you flee?' until he was killed may Allah be pleased with him (see Al-Isaba 6/286).

(2) Ibn Hajar Al-`Asqalani mentioned this in Al-Isaba (6/286). He said, it was related by Ibn As-Sakan with a sound chain of narrators on the authority of 'Umar that...' and he continued to narrate the story.

(Ghafir: 3) are just like what we say in Egypt: 'idu taylah' (he is capable of doing whatever He wishes). So, Allah Glorified is He is dhu at-tawl (infinite in bounty): He gives whatever He wishes to whomever He chooses, and no one can refuse His gifts. That is why it is said in the supplication, 'None can give what You withhold, and none can withhold what You give.'

When the True Lord says: 'This Scripture is sent down from Allah the Almighty the All Knowing,' (Ghafir: 2) we understand from the word tanzil the lofty status of the One who sends down, the thing sent down, and the one unto whom it was sent, so that it might be a method that guides them in their lives. This loftiness only emerged because the thing sent is a Book from Allah Glorified is He Who is necessarily Existent, and to Whom belong all attributes of absolute perfection, as evidenced by our saying: 'la ilah illa Allah' (there is nothing worthy of worship except Allah) and Allahu Akbar min kull shay' (Allah is greater than everything). These sayings we explained when speaking about His saying: 'To Him belong the keys of the heavens and the earth...' (az-Zumar: 63).

'There is nothing worthy of worship but Allah' is a key; 'Allah is the Greatest' is a key; 'Glory be to Allah' is a key; 'His is the praise' is a key; 'I seek forgiveness from Allah' is a key; and 'there is neither power nor strength except by Allah' is a key. 'He is the First' is a key, and 'He is the Last' is a key. 'He is the Outward' is a key, and 'He is the Inward' is a key. 'In His hand is all goodness' is a key, and 'He has power over all things' is a key. You will never find anything in the world that is outside the realm of these keys; everything in it is under Allah's power, as He says: 'He has the keys to the unseen: no one knows them but Him...' (al-An'am: 59).

After that, the True Lord goes on to say: '…the Almighty…' (Ghafir: 2) i.e., He has no need of His creation. The Almighty Al-'Aziz is the one who overcomes and is never defeated. In this is an indication that if Allah Glorified is He reveals a Book to a Messenger, then there will not be anybody who is able to stand up to it because it will overcome and will never be overcome. His words: '…the All Knowing' (Ghafir: 2) means that He puts things in their correct places according to His knowledge of how they fulfil their roles in the best possible way.

After that He comforts those of His creation who have transgressed against themselves in some points, and mentions the way out: ‘The Forgiver of sins, Accepter of repentance...’ (Ghafir: 3). Yet, alongside His forgiveness and acceptance of repentance He is: ‘…severe in punishment, infinite in bounty. There is no Allah but Him; to Him is the ultimate return.’ (Ghafir: 3) Thus, He gathers, in this verse, all His attributes of majesty and all His attributes of beauty.

We understand from: ‘…There is no deity but Him...’ (Ghafir: 3) that no one can correct what He says. His words: ‘…to Him is the ultimate return’ (Ghafir: 3) mean that there is no return but to Him.

Then, He says to His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him:

مَا يُجَٰدِلُ فِيٓ ءَايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ إِلَّا ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ فَلَا يَغۡرُرۡكَ تَقَلُّبُهُمۡ فِي ٱلۡبِلَٰدِ ٤

It is only the disbelievers who dispute God’s revelations.
[Prophet], do not be dazzled by their movements back and forth across the land [4] (The Quran, Ghafir: 4)

The Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent by Allah Glorified is He with that which brings people out of ignorance into knowledge. By this, their daily lives are purified from anything that would cause inconsistency or opposition in the world so that everyone may become cooperative and mutually supportive, and so that if one builds there would be no one else who destroys. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘None dispute Allah’s revelations except the disbelievers…’ (Ghafir: 4).

Al-jadal means: to conclude a matter so that it is completely settled and cannot be undone. It is like when people in the countryside make a rope. A man takes hemp fibres and he twists them together until they become interwoven and tightly bound. That is why the rope becomes strong and enduring.

Mira’a is commonly called jadal (argumentation or dispute) because each of the parties involved wants to establish his proof and his reasoning in order to overcome the other. Each of them argues for himself. The one in the right argues to prove it so, and the one in the wrong argues to establish his falsehood as the truth.

Is argumentation blameworthy in and of itself though? No, because argumentation is judged according to the intention behind it. That is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘[Believers], argue only in the best way with the People of the Book...’ (al-’Ankabut: 46). This shows that there is hasan (good) arguing and ahsan (better arguing). Good argumentation is that one tries to prove that the truth is true and that falsehood is false.(1) If the opposite is the case, then it is blameworthy argumentation.

Thus, we understand that Allah’s words: ‘None dispute Allah’s revelations except the disbelievers…’ (Ghafir: 4) refer to blameworthy argumentation. In Arabic, we can say jadal Ann ash-shayy’ or, jadal fi ash-shayy’. If we say jadal Ann, it means he argued for something, to defend it, establish its truthfulness and to manifest such. If we say jadal fi, it means he argued against something, and tried to cast doubt on it and refute it.

We said previously that ayat from Allah are of three types, and it is these that argumentation may occur over: His ayat (signs) in creation, i.e., the ayat (signs) that bear witness to the presence of the Creator On-high; the signs of clarification, i.e., the miracles of the Messengers peace be upon them that establish their truthfulness in their claim to speak on behalf of their Lord; and the Quranic ayat (verses) that bear His Sacred Law.

The signs in creation that establish the power of Allah Glorified is He the Creator On-high, are those that we witness in the heavens, the earth, the sun, the moon, the stars, the wind and the water… etc. The Creator made these signs in the best state. He created them according to fixed laws that do not change, and there is no way for man to interfere with them.

We said previously that when corruption befalls the universe, it is because of man’s interference – his interfering with Allah’s creatures in ways that do not accord with His laws. If man were to interact with the world in harmony with laws of the Creator, we would not see the corruption that now encompasses it. The True Lord alerts us to this issue by His words:

(1) Al-Qurtubi says in his exegesis (The Quran, 8/5939), as for one’s saying jidal fi, it refers to elucidating the unclear, solving difficulties, discussion between scholars in figuring out meanings, and defending against people with deviant ideas and refuting them, and this is the greatest jihad in the way of Allah Glorified is He.

‘…do not corrupt the earth after it has been set right...’ (al-A‘raf: 56). This means the True Lord created the earth in the best state. So, beware of corrupting it. This is why the True Lord attributes any corruption that appears on earth to man. He says: ‘Corruption has flourished on land and sea by [reason of] what the hands of people have earned...’ (ar-Rum: 41).

Indeed, we have polluted the waters and thrown rubbish and scrap into them until the fish died and diseases appeared. We have polluted the air, and we have polluted the soil, and so on, and so on. This is because we have interfered with Allah’s creation without paying heed to His laws and the way He ordained to set the world right.

So, which of these three types of ayat do about which the disbelievers argue? Naturally, they do not argue about the ayat in creation, nor do they object to them, primarily because they benefit from them. They also see therein a precise and perfect system with no irregularities or contradictions, so there is no room for argumentation. Rather, they argue about His other ayat, the miracles, and the ayat of the Book that contain the Sacred Law, trying to cast doubt upon them.

As for the miracles: ‘...and they said, “Why was this Quran not sent down to a distinguished man, from either of the two cities?”’(1) (az-Zukhruf: 31) Here, they are not objecting to the Quran itself, but rather to the one unto whom it was revealed. In their view, there would be nothing wrong with the Quran had it not been revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Yet, their denial results in their arguments being contradictory. They say: ‘...They also said, “Allahumma, if this really is the truth from You, then rain stones on us from the heavens, or send us some other painful punishment.”’ (al-Anfal: 32)

Rationally, they should have said: ‘Guide us to it.’ This is proof of their doubt over the Quran and their incredulity at what it brought. That is why the Quran quotes them as saying: ‘The disbelievers say, “Do not listen to this Quran; drown it in frivolous talk”...’ (Fussilat: 26).

(1) There is some difference of opinion about the man upon whom they wanted the revelation to descend. It is said Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughira and 'Urwa ibn Mas`id Ath-Thaqafi, and it is said 'Umayr ibn ‘Amr ibn Mas`ud Ath-Thaqafi. It is also said ‘Utba ibn Rabi`a and Habib ibn `Amr Ath-Thaqafi. As for the two cities, they were Mecca and Ta’if. Ibn Kathir says in his exegesis (4/127), ‘They apparently wanted a great man, whichever of the two cities he came from.’

Ponder for a moment their prohibition of even listening to the Quran. Why? Because they were Arabs: they had a natural inclination and talent for language and rhetoric. If they listened to the Quran it was bound to affect them. Anyone who listens to the Quran with a heart free of opposition must surely be contented by it. If not, why did they prohibit people from listening to it?

Yet, they were not satisfied with preventing people from hearing the Quran, but they took it upon themselves to obscure it so that whoever wanted to listen to it would fail to do so: ‘...drown it in frivolous talk...’ (Fussilat: 26). This is a proof that if the Quran is left to reach the ears, it will permeate to the heart, fill it and turn it towards the truth; if the mind is free of falsehood that is. If the heart is busy with antagonistic beliefs, however, it will not be affected by the Quran, as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Some of these people listen to you [Prophet], but, once they leave your presence, they sneer at those who have been given knowledge, saying, “What was that he just said?”...’ (Muhammad: 16)

Of those who are affected by listening to the Quran Allah says: ‘When a surah is revealed, some [hypocrites] say, “Have any of you been strengthened in faith by it?” It certainly does strengthen the faith of those who believe and they rejoice.’ (at-Tawba: 124)

If one were to ask, ‘How can one thing have two opposite effects?’ We would say it is because the recipient is different. We clarified this issue previously when we mentioned the example of blowing in one’s hands to warm them up in the cold, and blowing on a cup of hot tea to cool it down. The breath is one, but its recipient is different. There is no doubt that the heat of one’s breath is less than that of the cup of tea and greater than that of one’s hands in the winter. In a similar manner, the effect of the Quran differs according to the one listening.

For this reason, while reading the Quran, there should not be anything that might prevent it from reaching one’s heart. The True Lord forbids the clamour of crowds when it comes to arguments concerned with the art of rhetoric because in the chaos voices become mixed up, and one man’s faults become hidden by the others. This happens in demonstrations for instance, where one cannot work out who said what. This matter sheds some light for us on the wisdom behind Allah's words: 'innahu ya'lamu al-jahra min al-qawli wa ya'lamu ma taktumun'; 'He knows what you reveal and conceal.' (al-Anbiya': 110)

The orientalists take issue with this verse saying: 'What is so special about knowledge of ilm al-jahr (the audible) when everyone knows it? Why does Allah tell us of His knowledge of this?' To this we reply that Allah's words: '...and conceal' (al-Anbiya': 110) indicate that al-jahr (the audible), too, addresses a group of people, i.e., as if He says: 'wa ya'lamu ma tajharoon' (He knows what you say out loud). Thus, the True Lord knows every sound and from whom it issues. He distinguishes every voice and attributes it to its originator, and to do this is actually harder than knowing the inaudible.

Among their arguments regarding Allah's ayat (verses) is their saying that the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was a soothsayer or a sorcerer, or that he was a poet…etc. Such sayings are false, rejected and easily refuted. Were Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him a sorcerer who cast a spell on those who believed in him, why did he not cast spells on them as well? Thus, their failure to change is a proof that their accusation is a lie. As for their saying that he was a soothsayer, they had never seen anything of this sort from him before, nor had they heard from him anything that resembled the speech of soothsayers.

Even stranger than this is that they accused him of being a poet, and that what he brought was poetry. These were a people completely given over to poetry. The knights of the field, so to speak, were the most knowledgeable of people about this matter. In fact, anybody with the least familiarity with language can distinguish between poetry and prose. He can recognise both and easily sense when a move has been made from poetry to prose, or prose to poetry.(1)

Take for example, this piece of prose written by ibn Zaydun: 'The consequences of this blame are desirable, and this unfriendliness is but an adversity that will clear up. I will not be suspicious if my master's clouds are delayed, or, far from being miserly, he misdirected his giving; for the fullest buckets are the most delayed; and the heaviest and slowest clouds are the most promising. For every day there will be tomorrow, and for everything there is a time prescribed. If he has done one bad deed, He did thousands of things that pleased.'

(1) Here, Sheikh Ash-Sha'rawi cited several Arabic proverbs to elucidate his point.

So, we have to differentiate between prose and poetry. Then, what of them, a people devoted to eloquence and rhetoric; a people who created marketplaces and exhibitions for wisdom? Yet, somehow they failed to differentiate between the Quran and poetry.

The Quran is not poetry, but a unique type of composition. Read, for instance, Allah's words: 'So when she heard of their sly talk she sent for them and prepared for them a repast, and gave each of them a knife, and said (to Yusuf): Come forth to them. So when they saw him, they deemed him great, and cut their hands (in amazement), and said: Remote is Allah (from imperfection); this is not a mortal; this is but a noble angel.' She said: This is he with respect to whom you blamed me, and certainly I sought his yielding himself (to me), but he abstained...' (Yusuf: 31-32). Such is prose; you do not perceive the least bit of poetry in it. Despite this, if you take, for example, the Arabic words, 'fa dhalika alladhi lumtunnani fihi,'; '...This is he with respect to whom you blamed me...' (Yusuf: 32) you will find that they fit one of the meters of Arabic poetry. Similarly, Allah's words: 'nabbi' ibadi anni Ana al-Ghafur ar-Rahim,'; '…tell My servants that I am the Forgiving, the Merciful.' (al-Hijr: 49) If you replaced the Arabic words with the pattern taf'il, you would find it gives you one of the meters of Arabic poetry. Yet, you would never sense that you had moved from poetry to prose or prose to poetry. That is because, as we said, the Quran is a unique composition.

Furthermore, the perfect style of the Quran cannot be imparted to other works. If one takes a scholar who has memorised the Quran and knows the seven recitations well, one may find that he still cannot produce speeches. We advise students to read books of literature, the books of Al-Manfaluti, for instance, or Al-Aqqad, to improve their writing, expression, and style. This is because the Quran does not impart its style to others. While books of literature will improve one's style, the perfection of the Quran remains intransitive.

One of their arguments concerning Allah's ayat (verses) is that they said of the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: '...It is a man who teaches him...' (an-Nahl: 103). They even specified a particular individual,(1) but the Quran refuted them, saying in effect: 'if you are going to lie, then make sure you have a good memory': '...but the language of the person they allude to is foreign, while this revelation is in clear Arabic.' (an-Nahl: 103)

They subsequently said that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was crazy. It was strange for them to make such an accusation when they were well aware of his exemplary character and manners before he was declared a Prophet. There is no way someone with exceptional character can be crazy, yet such are the doubts of the intellectually bankrupt: people who could find no real arguments to find fault with the message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. What else could they say besides these clumsy remarks? This argumentation is all attacking the person of the Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They would call him ibn Abu Kabsha, but there is no way such insults would discredit the person of the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

They also argued about Allah's laws. They ask for an example of why Allah Glorified is He forbade eating from al-mayta (dead animals). How could it be that the ones that died on their own, or in other words Allah Glorified is He caused them to die, be forbidden, while the ones that you cause to die through slaughtering are permissible? In their view all death is the same; why make this one permissible and forbid that one?

(1) The Messenger of Allah Glorified is He Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to teach a blacksmith in Mecca by the name of Bal'am. He spoke a foreign language and the polytheists would see the Messenger of Allah Glorified is He Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him come in and out of his home. This led them to say that Bal'am was teaching Him, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so Allah Glorified is He revealed the verse: 'And, indeed, full well do We know that they say, "It is but a human being that imparts (all) this to him!" – (notwithstanding that) the tongue of him to whom they so maliciously point is wholly outlandish, whereas this is Arabic speech, clear (in itself) and clearly showing the truth (of its source)' (16: 103). Ibn Kathir related it in his Exegesis on the authority of Ibn `Abbas may Allah be pleased with him (2/586).

They objected to the Sacred Law because it was applied to all; it did not differentiate between the leaders and the slaves. There was one law for all, but they had become over-familiar with their authority.

Allah Glorified is He says: '...except the disbelievers...' (Ghafir: 4) i.e., they concealed their knowledge of the Necessarily Existent, the Most High who created them and the whole universe around them, as evidenced by their own admission about Allah's signs in creation: 'If you ask them who created the heavens and earth, they are sure to say, "Allah"...' (Luqman: 25). So, even though they believe in the signs in the universe, they nevertheless deny their Creator. They conceal the Necessarily Existent, the Most High who put the laws of nature in order for all His creation, and did so in such a way that they support and do not contradict each other, so that the world may be populated as the Creator wishes.

We have previously described how the word kufr (disbelief) is in itself a proof of faith. The word kufr means to cover and hide, and if hiding is taking place, then something is being hidden. Thus the thing being hidden exists before its concealment does. So, if they are hiding their awareness of Allah's existence through disbelief, then it must exist in the first place.

Allah Glorified is He then says: '...do not be dazzled by their movements back and forth across the land,' (Ghafir: 4) i.e., do not be fooled by their authority, loftiness and reverence, such that no one can oppose their travels by summer or winter, or their strutting from place to place.

If they knew the reality of this status they are granted–Who put them there–they would not take such a stance towards you, O Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They achieved this status and respect by means of their custody of the House of Allah Glorified is He and it is Allah Glorified is He who has sent you to them. Hence, it is their responsibility to believe you and have faith in you.

The word taqallubuhum (movements back and forth) indicates their ability to move from place to place, and it also indicates physical strength. This is why the other Arab tribes respected them. This status came to Quraysh because of the Hajj where all the tribes in the Arabian Peninsula would come during that time and be under the protection of Quraysh. Because of this, they could travel without fear. They should have been heedful of this blessing, but they denied it and thus they proved Allah's words concerning them to be true: '[Prophet], do you not see those who, in exchange for Allah's favour, offer only ingratitude and make their people end up in the home of ruin, Hell?' (Ibrahim: 28)

How could such be? Read Allah's words: 'Do you [Prophet] not see how your Lord dealt with the army of the elephant? Did He not utterly confound their plans? He sent ranks of birds against them, pelting them with pellets of hard-baked clay: He made them [like] cropped stubble.' (al-Fil: 1-5)

We know the story of how Abraha came to destroy the Ka'ba to turn people away from the House of Allah Glorified is He so he could build another ka'ba in San'a, for the people to make pilgrimage to. We know what the affair of this army was and how Allah Glorified is He repelled it. It is said that the huge elephant that was leading the army stopped moving towards the Ka'ba, while at the same time it would go in any other direction, until one of them approached the elephant and said to it, 'Kneel, Mahmud, and return as a guide, for you are in Allah's sacred land.(1)' After Allah Glorified is He rained down stones of sijjil (pellets of hard-baked clay) upon them, they turned away, defeated by the power of Allah Glorified is He.

The point here, however, is what Allah Glorified is He says straight after this chapter: '[He did this] to make the Quraysh feel secure: secure in their winter and summer journeys.' (Quraysh: 1-2) It is as though the preservation of the Ka'ba was the preservation of Quraysh's leadership and their safety and security amongst the Arab tribes and by means of this, Allah Glorified is He enabled them to continue their summer and winter journeys.

Thus, the reason for: 'He made them [like] cropped stubble' (al-Fil: 5) is revealed in the verse: '[He did this] to make the Quraysh feel secure' (Quraysh: 1) Otherwise, one would have to wonder about the beginning of the chapter: '[He did this] to make the Quraysh feel secure,' (Quraysh: 1) and ask why is this?

(1) Ibn Kathir mentions in his Exegesis (4/550) that Nufayl ibn Habib approached the elephant until he stood at its side. He then took its ear and said to it, 'Kneel Mahmud, and return as a guide to the place from whence you came, for you are in Allah's sacred land.' He then let go of its ear and the elephant sat down on the spot.

We have previously clarified that the chapters of the Quran are connected. Thus, one can recite it saying: ‘He made them [like] cropped stubble’ (al-Fil: 5) in the Name of Allah, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy: ‘[He did this] to make the Quraysh feel secure.’ (Quraysh: 1)

Someone might ask: why were all the verses of the Quran not just put into one chapter? Why would the cause come in one chapter and the effect in another? The scholars, however, say that a thing may be separated from its cause so that each one may have its own ruling.

So, ‘they were made like cropped stubble’, so that the Ka’ba would not be destroyed, for if the Ka’ba were destroyed, the position and status of Quraysh would disintegrate. Allah Glorified is He maintained their position so that they could travel to the north and south and no one would dare to oppose them. Upon that their sustenance would be based, and they would be free from hunger and fear. He fed them through their trade and their commercial trips, and made them secure so that no one would attempt to harm them.

Allah Glorified is He then clarifies the reason for this, saying: ‘So let them worship the Lord of this House: who provides them with food to ward off hunger, safety to ward off fear.’ (Quraysh: 3-4) Thus, they were immersed in Allah’s blessings, and it was inappropriate for them to deny it.

Returning to Allah’s words: ‘...do not be dazzled by their movements back and forth across the land.’ (Ghafir: 4) We see that Allah Glorified is He did not neglect them, but rather gave them respite. Someone may ask what the wisdom was in giving them respite, i.e., given that Allah Glorified is He has not ignored them, why did He not just take them to account from the first?

The scholars said that it is because Allah Glorified is He sent His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: the Seal of the Messengers, to them. He made his religion the final religion and the guardian over all times and places. There would be no Prophets after him. There comes a time, however, when the Messenger’s role is fulfilled and he passes on to the heavenly company. It is then upon the soldiers of truth, those who have proven themselves through tribulations, to carry his message.

For this reason, we said: the leaders of disbelief who persecuted the first Muslims and tortured them, later, became soldiers for Islam. Why? Because it was this persecution and torture that purified the Muslims and distanced those whose faith or aspiration was weak, those who were put off by persecution, or terrorised by torture such that only the strong remained in the circle of faith; those who were worthy to carry this message and bear its troubles; for this was to be an enduring and ongoing message for every time and place.

The True Lord Glorified is He did not ignore the disbelievers, but He gave them respite for a reason: so that they could partake in the development of the generation that would carry the call to Allah Glorified is He: '[and with all] those who deliver Allah's messages and fear only Him and no other...' (al-Ahzab: 39).

This was the Muhammadan generation that carried the banner of Islam and journeyed with it to every region. They did not expect payment up front; they only wanted their reward from Allah Glorified is He in the next life.

This is the difference between the call for truth and the call for falsehood. The people of truth do not expect any reward up front; the people of falsehood, however, want to be paid before they have even begun work. That is why each of the Messengers of Allah peace be upon them said to his people: 'And I do not ask you any reward for it; my reward is only with the Lord of the worlds.' (ash-Shu'ara': 109) Indeed, their reward is only with Allah because it was too costly and no one would be able to furnish it except Allah. No one could recompense a Messenger for his accomplishing his mission of guiding his people, even if they gave him all the riches in the world.

'Al-taqallubuhum fi al-bilad' indicates that moving back and forth across the land does not occur except after several things are available: physical health, so that they can withstand the stresses of travel; freedom from fear on the road; and sufficient provision in the places where they would camp on the way. This is why Allah Glorified is He says in another chapter: 'Do they then who plan evil (deeds) feel secure (of this) that Allah will not cause the earth to swallow them or that punishment may not overtake them from whence they do not perceive? Or that He may not seize them in the course of their journeys, then shall they not escape?' (an-Nahl: 45-46)

That is to say: at the peak of their strength and ability to move around freely that Allah Glorified is He should bring his punishment down upon them. This is one way that they could be called to account. Another way would be: ‘Or that He may not seize them by causing them to suffer gradual loss...’ (an-Nahl: 47) i.e., He puts them into a state of fear and terror before taking them. An example of this would be those who were befallen by the lightning strike. He scared them before the actual punishment struck. These are two ways in which Allah Glorified is He takes the disbelievers to account.

Then, the True Lord says:

كَذَّبَتۡ قَبۡلَهُمۡ قَوۡمُ نُوحٖ وَٱلۡأَحۡزَابُ مِنۢ بَعۡدِهِمۡۖ وَهَمَّتۡ كُلُّ أُمَّةِۭ بِرَسُولِهِمۡ
لِيَأۡخُذُوهُۖ وَجَٰدَلُواْ بِٱلۡبَٰطِلِ لِيُدۡحِضُواْ بِهِ ٱلۡحَقَّ فَأَخَذۡتُهُمۡۖ فَكَيۡفَ كَانَ عِقَابِ ﴿٥﴾

Before them the people of Noah rejected the truth and so did those who formed opposition after them: every community schemed to destroy its messenger and strove to refute truth with falsehood; but it was I who destroyed them. How terrible My punishment was! [5] (The Quran, Ghafir: 5)

This means that they are not the first people to exist and you are not the first Messenger, O Muhammad. Many were your brethren among the Messengers who preceded you, and they denied them as they deny you. Yet, what was the result of their denial? Did Allah send a Messenger, give him up and abandon him? No! By Allah! Verily the way of Allah Glorified is He is to give victory to His Messengers peace be upon them and forsake the enemies of his message. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Our word has already been given to Our servants the messengers: it is they who will be helped, and the ones who support Our cause will be the winners.’ (as-Saffat: 171-173)

This is not just theoretical speech to console you, O Muhammad; it is a reality of which there are previous examples in the succession of Prophets. Allah Glorified is He says of the deniers: ‘…and We punished each one of them for their sins...’ (al-’Ankabut: 40) i.e., a wind that blasted them with burning stones. ‘...some We struck with a violent storm...’ (al-’Ankabut: 40) i.e., these are the people of Thamud. ‘…some We made the earth swallow…’ (al-’Ankabut: 40) i.e., as was Qarun Korah. ‘...some We drowned...’ (al-’Ankabut: 40) as He did with the people of Noah peace be upon him and the people of Pharaoh.

Thus, Allah’s way is that He gives victory to His Messengers peace be upon them while routing their enemies. It is because of this that we say that if you see the peoples of Islam defeated in a battle, you can rest assured that one of the conditions of being a soldier of Allah is missing, and that had they fulfilled Allah’s conditions that should be found in His soldiers, they would never have been defeated.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Before them the people of Noah rejected…’ (Ghafir: 5), i.e., before your people who disbelieve in you were the people of Noah peace be upon him who also rejected. This is a consolation to the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and an easing of his burden; for the denial of the message is nothing new. Allah Glorified is He chose to mention Noah peace be upon him specifically because his mission was the longest of missions, such that he called his people for a thousand years minus fifty. All this long life did they argue with the Messenger of Allah Noah peace be upon him refusing and denying him. This is why he despaired of their guidance and prayed against them saying: ‘And Noah said, “Lord, do not leave any of the disbelievers on the earth—if you leave them they will lead Your servants astray and beget only sinners and disbelievers.”’ (Nuh: 26-27)

As for the few who had faith with him, he prayed for them, beginning with himself: ‘Lord, forgive me...’ (Nuh: 28) and then his parents, ‘...my parents...’ (Nuh: 28) because they were the cause of his existence, ‘…and whoever enters my house as a believer...’ (Nuh: 28), i.e., those with whom he had some kind of relationship, and finally the majority of the believing men and women, ‘...Forgive believing men and women...’ (Nuh: 28). Allah Glorified is He mentions the people of Noah peace be upon him specifically because they were a prime example of this issue, the clearest example and the most aggressive. No doubt, you are aware of the mockery, denial and harm that Noah peace be upon him had to put up with while he was constructing the Ark.(1)

(1) Allah Glorified is He says of this: ‘And (so Noah) set himself to building the ark; and every time the great ones of his people passed by him, they scoffed at him...’ (Hud: 38) They would say to him, ‘Have you become a carpenter? Why are you making a boat in a land that has no water? Are you going to sail on dry land?’ and other similar expressions of mockery and ridicule.

Allah’s words: ‘… and so did those who formed opposition after them…’ (Ghafir: 5) refer to Ad, the people of Prophet Hud peace be upon him, and Thamud, the people of Prophet Saleh peace be upon him. This was not hypothetical speech; it was a reality that they witnessed, for they actually saw their ruined buildings: ‘You [people] pass by their ruins morning and night: will you not take heed?’ (as-Saffat: 137-138)

They would pass the Al-Ahqaf in their travels, as well as mada’in (the towns) of Aalih peace be upon him. In Egypt, we have the remnants of the Pharaohs, all of which bear witness to the truth of what Allah Glorified is He informed us about. Now, there is the most sophisticated and advanced of the world countries, yet it stands helpless in the face of the civilisation of Pharaoh. See how they reached this level of progress more than seven thousand years ago? Despite this, their civilisation perished, because they could not reach the level that would result in protecting it from such an end.

Read, if you will, Allah’s words: ‘Have you [Prophet] considered how your Lord dealt with [the people] of Ad, of Iram, [the city] of lofty pillars, whose like has never been made in any land, and the Thamud/ who hewed into the rocks in the valley, and the mighty and powerful Pharaoh? All of them committed excesses in their lands, and spread corruption there: your Lord let a scourge of punishment loose on them. Your Lord is always watchful.’ (al-Fajr: 6-14) i.e., this matter did not end with Ad, Thamud and the people of Pharaoh. Indeed, it is general for any and all who deny: ‘Your Lord is always watchful.’ (al-Fajr: 14)

Al-ahzab (those who were leagued together) refers to those who join together for a common cause. In this case, they are those who united against guidance and the call to Allah Glorified is He. This is why they were called hizb ash-shaytan (the party of the Devil)—the opposite of this being hizb Allah (the party of Allah): those who aid the Messengers peace be upon them and support the call to truth.

‘Wa hammat kullu ummatin bi rasulihim liya’khudhuh,’ ‘…every community schemed to destroy its messenger…’ (Ghafir: 5), i.e., to kill him. This matter is explained further in Allah’s words: ‘Remember [Prophet] when the disbelievers plotted to take you captive...’ (al-Anfal: 30) i.e., to imprison you or chain you up so that you would not be able to move here and there, '...kill, or expel you. They schemed and so did Allah: He is the best of schemers.' (al-Anfal: 30) These words indicate that they wanted to do these things, but they were unable. The word hammu (literally: were about to) refers to an inclination, or a desire that was not actualised.

Another example of this can be found in Allah's words regarding the two parties at the battle of Uhud: 'idh hammat ta'ifatayn minkum an tafshala,' 'Remember when two groups of you were about to lose heart...' (Al-'Imran: 122), but they did not lose heart. Al-Hamm is the heart's engrossment with doing something that eventually does not come about. That is why Allah Glorified is He says: 'wa hammu bima la yanalu,' '...they tried to do something/ though they did not achieve it...' (at-Tawba: 74).

An exception to this is the action (hamm; desire*)* on the part of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him because, in the situation referred to, the issue was related to the infallibility of the Prophets. Allah the Exalted says: 'And indeed she did desire him and he would have inclined to her desire...' (Yusuf: 24). Some people, when interpreting this verse, add inappropriate meanings that are quite unbefitting to the infallibility of Prophet Yusuf peace be upon him and ask how he could have desired her when he was a Prophet?

As we said, (hamm) signifies the attachment of the mind to the performance of an action or the attachment of a sense organ to responding to a certain action, but what is important is whether or not one's limbs will respond to the desire. This verse speaks of two different types of (hamm; tending to do something): 'And indeed she did desire him...' (Yusuf: 24); there is a pause, then: '... and he would have inclined to her desire...' (Yusuf: 24). Notice that she got nothing out of her desire, and that is why she is mentioned in the Quran as saying: 'I did seek to seduce him, but he firmly refused. And now if he refuses to obey my order, he shall certainly be cast into prison, and will be one of those who are disgraced.' (Yusuf: 32)

This proves that her desire came to nothing. So how could desire (hamm) be fruitless in her case, despite being bent on disobedience, but be fruitful in the case of Yusuf peace be upon him? Thus, she desired him, but nothing happened despite her wanting it to, and he could have almost inclined to her, but nothing happened because he did not want it to happen.

Ponder the precision of the Quranic diction in using the heavy (nun) of emphasis on the verb in: '...he shall certainly be cast into prison (la yusjananna)...' (Yusuf: 32), and the light (nun) of emphasis on the verb in: '...and will be one of those who are disgraced (wa la yukunan min as-saaghirin).' (Yusuf: 32) Prison was a matter over which the Egyptian Governor's wife had control and Yusuf peace be upon him could be imprisoned at her command, so the heavy (nun) of emphasis was used to indicate her ability to execute the action. As for reducing him to one of those despised, this was something beyond her control, for perhaps the guards would admire him and be kind to him. So the light (nun) of emphasis was used here to demonstrate her inability to execute this action.

Finally, the answer with which we conclusively put an end to the implication of the word (hamm) in this story, and clear Yusuf peace be upon him of the false accusations forged against him, is that we say, yes, she desired him, but did she fulfil her desire or not? She did not, and the proof of this is her saying: '...And now if he refuses to obey my order...' (Yusuf: 32). Also: '...and he would have inclined to her desire...' (Yusuf: 24). Yes, he, at some point, could have had a desire, but he did not do anything, as evidenced by the previous verse. So why are they so keen to attribute this accusation to the Prophet of Allah peace be upon him when nothing resulted from either his or her desire?

Furthermore, the desire mentioned here is a completely natural occurrence because it is a natural disposition of human beings to be drawn into such an act. That is, it is something which is possible for him as a human being because he is by nature capable of this action. Otherwise, we would have said that he was congenitally celibate and incapable of such deeds. But no, he was capable of it; so what then prevented him from it? It was as Allah says: '...had he not seen [in this temptation] the evidence of his Lord...' (Yusuf: 24). That is, of this being prohibited. It is as one says, 'I would have visited you, if so-and-so were not with you,' which evidently means that I had not visited you. Therefore, '...he would have inclined to her desire, had he not seen the evidence of his Lord. Thus it was, that We might turn away from him evil and immorality. Surely, he was one of Our chosen, guided slaves.' (Yusuf: 24) So (hamm) means that the desire occurred to him, but he did not act upon it. So, the judgement here mentioned declares the innocence of Yusuf peace be upon him even of desire.

We return to Allah's saying: '…and every (disbelieving) nation plotted against their Messenger to seize him…' (Ghafir: 5). So, although this happened, they could not accomplish their evil plan and lay their hands on him. '…And they disputed by means of falsehood to refute therewith the truth…' (Ghafir: 5). That is, they wanted to defeat and erase the truth by means of falsehood, but what was the result? '…So I seized them (with punishment)…' (Ghafir: 5). That is, I (Allah) destroyed them, not just in the realm of desire, like them, but in reality, and this is what becomes the Supreme Power. '…And how (terrible) was My Punishment.' (Ghafir: 5) Did you know it? Were We (Allah) able to punish them?

It is similar to Allah's saying: 'Indeed, those who committed crimes used to laugh at those who believed. And when they passed by them, they would exchange derisive glances. And when they returned to their people, they would return jesting. And when they saw them, they would say, "Indeed, those are truly lost." But they had not been sent as guardians over them. So today those who believed are laughing at the disbelievers, on adorned couches, gazing. Have the disbelievers [not] been paid [this Day] for what they used to do?' (al-Mutaffifin: 29-36)

That is, have We (Allah) not ably requited them for their deeds and crimes? It is as though the True Lord the Exalted wants to alert the people of faith and reassure them of His Justice Glorified is He. These people will not escape the punishment, and there can be no doubt that the people of faith find relief in knowing that the disbelievers and criminals are to be punished.

Reflect here for a moment on the precision of the Quranic diction in Allah's saying: '…and every (disbelieving) nation plotted against their Messenger (rasulihim) to seize him…' (Ghafir: 5). Allah has not said: '…and every (disbelieving) nation plotted against its Messenger (rasuliha)…' on the basis that a community is a singular entity; rather, He says: '…plotted against their Messenger (rasulihim)…' (Ghafir: 5). Allah attributed the Messenger to a group in the masculine plural because the confrontation between Islam and disbelief was between men. Women did not take part in this confrontation. The proof of this is that when they plotted against Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him on the night of his emigration (from Mecca to Medina) they were all men. There was not one woman among them.

The same applies to Allah’s saying: ‘…and they (masc.) disputed by means of falsehood to refute therewith the truth…’ (Ghafir: 5). These were confrontations involving no women.

وَكَذَٰلِكَ حَقَّتۡ كَلِمَتُ رَبِّكَ عَلَى ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوٓاْ أَنَّهُمۡ أَصۡحَٰبُ ٱلنَّارِ ﴿٦﴾

In this way your Lord’s sentence was passed against the disbelievers that they would be the inhabitants of the Fire [6] (The Quran, Ghafir: 6)

The word haqqat (has become incumbent) in this verse means that punishment has become necessary, justified and certain regarding them, and nothing will happen that can revoke it. Why? Because the One Who has uttered it knows what is going to happen afterwards. Especially that these people, who are perpetrating such actions, still have a choice to behave or refrain from behaving in certain ways.

So Allah the Exalted has declared and passed down this sentence on them while they are still alive in this world, and it is still possible for them to make choices, yet, despite this, they do not contradict it and act differently. This is one of the grand aspects of Allah’s Speech. He challenges you in something in which you have a choice, and yet, despite that, you do not depart from that which He has decreed.

We stated the same thing concerning Allah’s saying about Abu Lahab and his wife: ‘Perish the two hands of Abu Lahab, and perish he! His wealth and his children (etc.) will not benefit him! He will be burnt in a Fire of blazing flames! And his wife [as well] - the carrier of firewood, Around her neck is a rope of [twisted] fibre.’ (al-Masad: 1-5)

The True Lord Glorified is He decreed that they shall be disbelievers and that they shall end up in the hellfire, even though belief and disbelief are matters which Allah has left free for His slaves to choose which to follow.

This is evidenced by the fact that disbelieving men of Mecca, who were like Abu Lahab, entered Islam, such as Khalid ibn Al-Walid, `Amr ibn Al-`As, `Ikrima and other men may Allah be pleased with them all. Abu Lahab could have, after the revelation of this Quranic chapter, testified that there was no god but Allah and that Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him was His Messenger. Abu Lahab could even have said so just out of hypocrisy, yet it did not happen and Allah's Word regarding him proved true.

This is an issue that the True Lord the Exalted has explained in His saying: '...and know that Allah intervenes between a person and his heart...' (al-Anfal: 24). So although his heart may tell him to do something, Divine Grandeur prevents him from it.

Therefore, Allah the Most High said to Musa's mother: '...suckle him [Musa (Moses)], but when you fear for him, then cast him into the river and fear not, nor grieve...' (al-Qasas: 7). Such a solution is unacceptable, as judged by human logic. How could any reasonable person say that if a woman fears for her child she should throw him into the sea? Yet Musa's mother did not listen to the voice of reason and was not swayed by her emotions toward her child. She listened to her Lord – to this ultimate, supreme inspiration that could not be opposed by any base satanic thoughts. She had no hesitation about casting her child into the sea because Allah Glorified is He intervened between her and her emotions.

The same can be found in the story of Musa peace be upon him with Pharaoh. The soothsayers had told Pharaoh that he would lose his kingdom at the hands of a youth from the children of Israel; so what did Pharaoh do? This allows us to understand the mentality of those who claim divinity, and how Allah comes between a person and his heart. What did Pharaoh do? He started searching out all the children and killed them. He did not know that Allah had stored up this child for him and that he would come to him and knock on his door – in his cradle as you know – and that he would even feel safe toward him and take him as his own son. His wife said: '...A joy to the eye [could this child be] for me and you...' (al-Qasas: 9). So, he took him and raised him in his own house. This is the meaning of Allah's saying: '...and know that Allah intervenes between a person and his heart...' (al-Anfal: 24).

Allah’s saying: ‘Thus has the Word of your Lord been justified against those who disbelieved, that they will be the dwellers of the Fire,’ (Ghafir: 6) signifies that punishment has not been imposed on them through compulsion or oppression, but rather by their own choice. The True Lord Glorified is He knows the choices they will make through His Eternal Knowledge, and so He has passed sentences concerning them by His Foreknowledge (of their choices). It is impossible that something could happen that contradicts this decree because it is Allah Who has pronounced it.

We have previously clarified that the Arabic word kalimah (word*)* can be applied to a single utterance or it can be applied to speech in general. An example of this is Allah’s saying: ‘...No! It is but a word that he speaks...’ (al-Mu’minun: 100) .Regarding those who say: ‘...Allah has taken to Him a son...’ (Yunus: 68). He says: ‘...dreadful is this saying (kalimah) that comes out of their mouths [and] nothing but falsehood do they utter!’ (al-Kahf: 5) We also call a long speech a (kalimah).

The word which has become justified and incumbent in the verse under study is not just any word; it is: ‘…the Word of your Lord...’ (Ghafir: 6). Allah’s Word must necessarily come true. It is not possible that Allah the Exalted could say something and then events prove otherwise. The word that has come true in this case is that the disbelievers: ‘…will be the dwellers of the Fire.’ (Ghafir: 6)

ٱلَّذِينَ يَحۡمِلُونَ ٱلۡعَرۡشَ وَمَنۡ حَوۡلَهُۥ يُسَبِّحُونَ بِحَمۡدِ رَبِّهِمۡ وَيُؤۡمِنُونَ بِهِۦ
وَيَسۡتَغۡفِرُونَ لِلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ رَبَّنَا وَسِعۡتَ كُلَّ شَيۡءٖ رَّحۡمَةٗ وَعِلۡمٗا
فَٱغۡفِرۡ لِلَّذِينَ تَابُواْ وَٱتَّبَعُواْ سَبِيلَكَ وَقِهِمۡ عَذَابَ ٱلۡجَحِيمِ ٧

Those [angels] who carry the Throne and those who surround it celebrate the praise of their Lord and have faith in Him. They beg forgiveness for the believers: ‘Our Lord,
You embrace all things in mercy and knowledge, so forgive those who turn to You and follow Your path. Save them from the pains of Hell [7] (The Quran, Ghafir: 7)

These are the angels whom Allah has created to praise Him Glorified and Exalted is He. They have no work except praising Allah. These angels are the Carriers of the Throne and those around it. We have previously said that glorification of Allah is part of the keys of creation. Allah's saying: '…glorify the praises of their Lord…' (Ghafir: 7) means that they declare His Transcendence above any resemblance to His creation, whether it is respect to His Names, Attributes or Actions.

That is why we said that if the True Lord the Most High shares some aspect with His creation, we must look at it through the frame of: '...there is nothing like unto Him...' (ash-Shura: 11). Allah has actions and you have actions. We cannot compare your actions to those of your Lord. We clarified this matter in our explanation of the beginning of the chapter of al-Isra'. The events mentioned in the beginning of this chapter were extraordinary; therefore, Allah the Exalted started it by declaring His Transcendence: 'Exalted is He who took His servant by night from Al-Masjid Al-Haram to Al-Masjid Al-Aqsa...' (al-Isra': 1) Allah stated this at the beginning so that we might not compare His Actions with human actions, or His Abilities with our abilities. Allah has His own Actions and you have your own actions. Allah's Actions are not like yours, so beware of seeing this event as unlikely based on the factors of time or distance.

The term (subhan Allah) refers to Allah's Transcendence above anything that resembles humanity. That is why it is said: 'anything that occurs to your mind (regarding Allah's Appearance), Allah is other than that.' Allah's Transcendence is not contingent upon the existence of somebody who would declare His Elevation beyond any similarity to His creatures, but rather, it is pre-eternal, existing before Allah created anyone to proclaim it. He is Transcendent in and of Himself and has been so before the existence of any creature who affirms this.

Thus, after the creation of the heavens and the earth, He the Most High proclaimed: 'Whatsoever is in the heavens and the earth glorifies Allah...' (al-Hadid: 1) That is, at the very time they were created, they celebrated His Glories, saying: 'Glory be to Allah, the Creator, the Most Great,' and they are still extolling His Majesty, as Allah says: 'All that is in the heavens and all that is on earth extols the Glory of Allah...' (al-Jumu'a: 1). This glorification is continuous and perpetual. Since the whole universe glorifies

Allah and continues to glorify Him, and since the universe has been created for you, O humankind, you should all the more glorify Him. Therefore, Allah says: 'Exalt the Name of your Lord, the Most High.' (al-A'la: 1)

The glorification of Allah is the declaration of the transcendence of Allah's Attributes and Actions. When, for example, you think of the process of creation, and you find that Allah has created the human of clay, could you take some clay, fashion it into the shape of a human and breathe a soul into it? This is an act that none but the Creator Glorified is He can accomplish.

When Allah wanted to give `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him a miraculous sign relating to creation, He instructed him to say: 'Indeed I have come to you with a sign from your Lord in that I design for you from clay [that which is] like the form of a bird, then I breathe into it and it becomes a bird by Permission of Allah...' (Al-'Imran: 49) Concerning breathing the soul into the form, `Isa empathically clarified that it would happen: '...by Permission of Allah...' (Al-'Imran: 49). By his nature alone, he could not accomplish this. As for fashioning a statue in the shape of a man or a bird, this was something easy.

So, O human being, whom Allah has ennobled, it is your duty to glorify your Lord. All animate and inanimate beings and the whole universe that Allah has created for you glorified Him and continue to do so.

Allah's saying: 'Those (angels) who bear the Throne (of Allah)…' (Ghafir: 7) refers to the angels who carry Allah's Throne. Thus, the Throne is borne by angels. Even the number of the Throne Bearers is inimitable. The True Lord the Exalted has informed us that they are eight in number: '...and eight angels will, that Day, bear the Throne of your Lord above them.' (al-Haqqa: 17) Why has Allah not made them four, as we are used to, in that most buildings have four corners? Why are they not five even? There must be some wisdom and something miraculous in this specific number.

The miraculous aspect of these numbers is also evident in Allah's saying: 'Over it(1) are nineteen...' (al-Muddaththir: 30). Why nineteen specifically?

(1) 'Over it', i.e., the Fire. It refers to the gatekeepers of hell. They are nineteen in number and in the hand of each angel is an iron rod which has two prongs. One blow from it=

Why has He not made them twenty? This is evidence that there must be some wisdom behind this number. Allah the Exalted has also informed us that this number has been fixed to nineteen as a trial: 'And We have not made the keepers of the Fire except angels. And We have not made their number except as a trial for those who disbelieve...' (al- Muddaththir: 31).

Faith requires that one believe in what the True Lord the Exalted has informed us of, and that we do not argue such matters, whether it has been said or not, and whether it has happened or not. What did Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him say when they informed him that his Companion (Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him) claimed to be a Messenger? He asked, 'Has he said so?' 'Yes,' they replied. 'He has spoken the truth,' answered Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him. He did not investigate the matter further.

The same goes for us every time we face a matter that brings the intellect to a standstill; so long as the information has come to us from Allah, we should accept it and have faith in it: '...and whose word could be truer than Allah's?' (an-Nisa': 87)

Whether your intellect can encompass this information or not is another matter because there is a difference between the existence of something and how it exists. Something may exist, but you do not know how it exists.

Reflect for a moment on the story of the father of the Prophets, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him when he said: 'And [mention] when Abraham said, "My Lord, show me how You give life to the dead." [Allah] said, "Have you not believed?" He said, "Yes, but [let me see it] that my heart may be satisfied."' (al-Baqara: 260)

You will find that people who have a superficial understanding of Allah will accuse the Quran of being self-contradictory in this issue. How so? They say that the word (bala) means 'Yes, indeed (I have faith),' and faith requires that one’s heart is tranquil in its beliefs; so why does he say afterwards: ‘...but [let me see it] that my heart may be satisfied’ (al-Baqara: 260)?

We would reply to them that they are excused because they did not understand the meaning of the question. Had they understood the question, they would not have made these accusations against the Quran. Did Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him say to his Lord, ‘Do you give life?’ or did he say, ‘...show me how You give life to the dead...’ (al-Baqara: 260)? So he did not ask about the possibility of the action; he had no doubt about Allah’s Power. Rather, he was asking how it was done: ‘...show me how You give life to the dead...’ (al-Baqara: 260). Giving life to the dead was, therefore, a previously established matter of fact, what Abraham peace be upon him was asking about was the manner with which it was done. If I ask you, ‘How did you build that house?’ it means that the house is already actually standing.

So, his saying, ‘Yes,’ meant, ‘I believe, O Lord, that you resurrect the dead.’ After that, he sought peace of mind about how it was done. When it comes to the matter of creation and bringing into existence, it is necessary to ask about the manner of it because this is an affair that cannot be spoken of. Allah’s actions do not consist of a process like human’s actions do.

If I asked you how you built your house, you would say that you dug the foundation, brought the steel and the cement and that you did such-and-such. That so-and-so designed the house, and that so-and-so supervised the work, and so-and-so carried out the construction while so-and-so poured the cement mixture, etc. You could tell me how you did it such that I could do the same if I wanted to, and there would be no difference between the two outcomes. If, however, we want to show how the dead are brought to life, how could we do that?

This is a matter that could not be explained with words. It requires the actual carrying out of it. We contemplate here that Allah wanted Abraham peace be upon him to perform this deed himself, not that it be done for him. He himself should undertake it. There is a considerable difference between imparting your power to another person in a way that causes things to be done for him, and imparting your power to another person such that he himself can do the action. You might, for example, be incapable of carrying something and so I carry it for you, and this would be quite ordinary. What would be great is when I make you able to carry it yourself.

This is what the True Lord Glorified is He did with His Prophet Abraham peace be upon him. '...He said: "Take four birds, then cause them to incline towards you..."' (al-Baqara: 260) that is, keep them close to you and study their characteristics. '...Then [after slaughtering them] put on each hill a portion of them...' (al-Baqara: 260) that is, slaughter them and distribute the cut pieces over the hills. '...Then call them, they will come [flying] to you in haste...' (al-Baqara: 260).

It was Prophet Abraham peace be upon him who slaughtered the birds, cut them into pieces, distributed them, and he himself who summoned them to him, and they assembled together by Allah's Power and flew to him as they were previously. So if I can make somebody able to do something that they could not do alone, am I not able to do it Myself?

The word al-`arsh (the throne) is a mark of the firm establishment of sovereignty and rule and total mastery over it. It is not necessary that a person actually sits on the throne. That is why when the hoopoe spoke of the Queen of Sheba, he said: '...she has been given of everything, and she possesses a mighty throne.' (an-Naml: 23) A sovereign only sits on his throne when matters are under control and his lands obey him. If there is a region that is resisting or in rebellion against the king, then he will not sit on his throne until they yield to him and his dominion is re-established.

When the True Lord the Exalted spoke of His Istiwa' (Allah's rising over the Throne in a manner that befits Him), He said: 'Say, "Do you indeed disbelieve in He Who created the earth in two days and attribute to Him equals? That is the Lord of the worlds." And He placed on the earth firmly set mountains over its surface, and He blessed it and determined therein its [creatures'] sustenance in four days without distinction - for [the information] of those who ask. Then He Istawa (rose over) towards the heaven when it was smoke, and said to it and to the earth, "Come both of you willingly or unwillingly." They both said, "We come, willingly." And He completed them as seven heavens within two days and inspired in each heaven its command.’ (Fussilat: 9-12) Thus, His establishment on the Throne came after He had completed the creation and exercised absolute dominion.

So, Allah’s saying: ‘Those (angels) who bear the Throne (of Allah)…’ (Ghafir: 7) signify the eight angels who carry His Throne. Whereas, His saying: ‘…and those around it glorify the praises of their Lord, and believe in Him, and ask forgiveness for those who believe…’ (Ghafir: 7) refers to another type of angels known as (Al-Kurubiyyun) who have no other task than to glorify Allah. They have no concern for this world at all, nor do they know anything about it. They only: ‘…glorify the praises of their Lord …’ (Ghafir: 7).

Do these angels, who surround the Throne and glorify Allah and have no other occupation than that, see Allah on His Throne? The scholars may Allah have mercy upon them say that despite their status, they do not see Allah the Exalted. The clearest of their scholarly positions in this regard is that of Al-Fakhr Ar-Razi(1) may Allah have mercy upon him when he discussed the verse: ‘Those (angels) who bear the Throne (of Allah) and those around it glorify the praises of their Lord, and believe in Him, and ask forgiveness for those who believe…’ (Ghafir: 7) he inclined towards the position of the author of Al-Kashshaf(2) who preceded him. He said that: ‘…and believe in Him …’ (Ghafir: 7) means that they do not see Him because there can be no belief or disbelief when it comes to visible things. Faith is reserved for the unseen. Had they seen Allah upon the Throne, He would not have said regarding them: '…and believe in Him …' (Ghafir: 7). Al-Fakhr Ar-Razi(1) then added that had this great scholar, the author of Al-Kashshaf, said nothing else but this observation, it would have sufficed him all his life,(2) This was his viewpoint, despite the difference of opinion that existed between these two Imams.

(1) He was Muhammad ibn `Umar Fakhr Ad-Din Ar-Razi. He was born in Ray (now Teheran) in the year 544 A.H. He was an Imam and an exegete. He was also known as the Preacher of the City of Ray. Among his works are Mafatih Al-Ghayb, an exegetical book, and Muhassal Afkar Al-Mutaqaddimin wa Al-Muta’akhkhirin besides many others. He also wrote poetry in Arabic and Farsi and was thoroughly proficient as a preacher in both languages. He died in Herat in the year 606 A.H. at the age of sixty-three. [Al-A`lam by Az-Zirikli, vol. 6, p. 313]

(2) The author of the Exegetical book, Al-Kashshaf. His name was Az-Zamakhshari Mahmud ibn `Umar Jar Allah Abu Al-Qasim. He was born in Zamakhshar, one of the villages of Khwarizm in the year 467 A.H. He travelled to Mecca and stayed there some time, and was consequently nicknamed Jar Allah (Allah’s Neighbour). He was one of the great scholars in the fields of religion, exegesis, language, and literature. He died in Al-Jurjaniyya (Khwarizm) in the year 538 A.H. Among his other books was Asas Al-Balaghah. He openly subscribed to the School of the Mu`tazila and was a harsh critic of the Sufis. [Al-A`lam vol.7]

So, we should not understand from the closeness of these angels to the Owner of Majesty and Honour the Exalted that they see Him. Certainty not; for them Allah is Unseen. This is emphasised by Allah's saying: '…and believe in Him …' (Ghafir: 7). Now, in this gathering, you would not, for example, say, 'I have faith that Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi is sitting surrounded by his friends, and he is talking about such-and-such a subject' because what we are doing now is visible; there is no role for faith to play in it. Faith only relates to things unseen, and this is its distinguishing feature. That is why Allah Glorified is He often repeats the phrase: '…who believe in the Unseen.' (al-Baqara: 3)

We previously gave an example of this when we asked you to imagine that I am afraid of thieves, so I take the money that I fear for to the far end of the garden and put it under a heavy rock. The time comes when I want my money, so I call the gardener and ask him to lift the rock. He replies that he cannot do it alone because it is too heavy, so I ask him, 'Do you know what is under that rock? Beneath it is the money from which I will pay you your wages.' Hearing this he goes to the rock and lifts it up. So what is important is not one's obedience to a command the benefit of which is apparent to one, but one's obedience to a command the benefit of which is hidden.

(2) In his exegesis Al-Kashshaf, the exact wording of Az-Zamakhshari's opinion regarding Allah's saying: '…and believe in Him…' (Ghafir: 7) is as follows: 'This brings our attention to the fact that had the matter been as the anthropomorphists claim, the Throne Bearers and the angels around it would see Allah, and consequently they would not have been described as having belief. Belief only relates to things absent. Since it is attributed to them by way of praise, it is thus known that their belief, and the belief of all the inhabitants of the earth and all who are absent from such a situation, is the same with respect to being attained by way of deduction and inference and none other. There is no way to know Him except this. He is transcendent above the characteristics of bodies.' Al-Fakhr Ar-Razi praised this opinion in his exegesis of this verse in Mafatih Al-Ghayb, saying: 'The author of Al-Kashshaf gave an excellent viewpoint on it. Had he achieved nothing else in his book, this note would have been sufficient distinction and pride for him.'

Allah's saying: '…glorify the praises of their Lord (yusabbihun bi hamd rabbihim)…' (Ghafir: 7) means that their glorification is accompanied by praise. The term *tasbih (*glorification) denotes a form of praising Allah, while hamd (thankful praise) is gratitude to Allah for the previous blessings He has bestowed. One of the greatest of Allah's Blessings is that He the Most High does not resemble anything. Had anything resembled Him, there would have been much conflict and confusion in the universe: '…(if there had been any god along with Him), behold, each god would have taken away what he had created, and some would have tried to overcome others!...' (al-Mu'minun: 91) For Allah is the One and Only God to be worshipped, and He is the Only One Who deserves to be praised.

Then after that Allah says: '…and ask forgiveness for those who believe…' (Ghafir: 7). That is, one of the jobs of these angels is that they seek forgiveness for the believers. The Quran relates their words: 'Our Lord! You comprehend all things in mercy and knowledge, so forgive those who repent and follow Your Way, and save them from the torment of the blazing Fire.' (Ghafir: 7)

This is one of the supplications of the angels for the believers. Usually, when saying (Rabbana; our Lord) at the beginning of a supplication, the vocative particle (ya; O!) is elided. One does not say (ya Rabbana) because the vocative particle (ya) indicates that the person being addressed is at a far distance. If the addressee is even further away, one employs (ayya). And if the addressee is near, one uses a letter (hamzah) as in (a Muhammad).

As for the True Lord Glorified is He He is so close that we do not use any of the vocative particles when calling on Him. He has described Himself as nearer to the human beings than their jugular vein. That is why we invoke Allah directly saying, (Rabbana). You can study the whole Quran, but you will not find one instance of Allah being called on with a vocative particle.

Even when the disbelievers called on the True Lord, they said: 'O Allah (Allahumm), if this should be the truth from You, then rain down upon us stones from the sky or bring us a painful punishment.' (al-Anfal: 32) It is well known that the letter (mim) at the end of Allah’s Name here replaces the vocative (ya). They did not say (ya Allah). Instead they said, ‘Allahumm.’

The True Lord continues narrating the supplication of the angels for the believers, saying:

رَبَّنَا وَأَدْخِلْهُمْ جَنَّٰتِ عَدْنٍ ٱلَّتِى وَعَدتَّهُمْ وَمَن صَلَحَ مِنْ ءَابَآئِهِمْ
وَأَزْوَٰجِهِمْ وَذُرِّيَّٰتِهِمْ ۚ إِنَّكَ أَنتَ ٱلْعَزِيزُ ٱلْحَكِيمُ ﴿٨﴾

And admit them, Lord, to the lasting Gardens You have promised to them, together with their righteous ancestors, spouses, and offspring: You alone are the Almighty, the All Wise [8] (The Quran, Ghafir: 8)

‘…Gardens of perpetual residence…’ (Ghafir: 8) that is, everlasting gardens for permanent residence in paradise. Reflect here on the fruits of faith in Allah, the fruits of the declaration of the Oneness of God: ‘There is no true god worthy of worship except Allah.’ As long as there is belief, disobedience will not harm the person. The angels in the highest heavens speak of you, O believer, and concern themselves with you. They supplicate for you because you believe in Allah.

This is a solace for Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him and his followers who bore the hardship of calling people to Allah, and those who come after them until the Day of Judgement. Thus, O Muhammad, if the disbelievers of Mecca adopted an obstinate stance against you and your followers, do not grieve. It suffices you that the angels should seek forgiveness for you and your worldwide community. And what category of angels are these? They are the Throne Bearers and the angels that surround it.

Upon reading this supplication, one finds hints and points that deserve reflection. The first of them is that you, O believer, are talked of by the Throne Bearers. You are the subject of their concern, despite their lofty status and your lowly status. These angels have no other task but to exalt Allah with praise and seek forgiveness for the believers.

Ponder how their supplication includes the two stages of takhliyah (purifying the soul from bad traits) and subsequent tahliyah (adorning the soul with beautiful virtues). They say: '…forgive those who repent and follow Your Way, and save them from the torment of the blazing Fire.' (Ghafir: 7) First must come the removal of the causes of distress and then comes the adornment of the soul with the blessings that bring happiness, as expressed in Allah's statement: 'Our Lord, and admit them to the Gardens of perpetual residence which You have promised them…' (Ghafir: 8). This is because ridding one's soul of evil and saving it from the causes of punishment is a higher priority than getting blessings. The principle here is that warding off evil takes precedence over bringing benefits. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: '...and whoever is removed away from the Fire and admitted to paradise, he indeed is successful...' (Al-'Imran: 185).

Further, we can see that their supplication is not only for the believers, but also includes their whole families: '…and whoever was righteous among their fathers, their spouses and their offspring…' (Ghafir: 8). Thus, they have mentioned the whole family tree; for the parents are made happy by the presence of their offspring, so Allah does not deprive them of this bounty.

In another verse, Allah states the grounds behind this favour, saying: 'And those who believe and whose offspring follow them in faith, to them shall We join their offspring...' (at-Tur: 21). The factor here is belief. Joining one group to the other indicates that one of them is perfect while the other is less perfect. Had they been equal in deeds, Allah would have accepted both with open arms.

Allah's saying: '...to them shall We join their offspring...' (at-Tur: 21) does not mean taking the average of their deeds; that is, adding the deeds of the fathers to those of the offspring and then dividing the outcome by two, no: '...and We shall not decrease the reward of their deeds in anything...' (at-Tur: 21). That is, Allah does not reduce their rewards in the slightest. Bringing them together is a favour from the True Lord Glorified is He to please the parents through their children, but the condition is belief. Why? It is because the parents would dislike their company if they were not believers.

If someone were to say that this would mean that some people would get for which they did not work. In other words, they would get the fruits of other people's labour, we would say no, because they have believed and belief is part of one's deeds. It is true that: '…man will only have what he has worked towards; that his labour will be seen and that in the end he will be repaid in full for it,' (an-Najm: 39) but we should not look at their deeds alone, but rather, expand the circle and look at who has made them perform these righteous deeds. It is the result of a good upbringing. Therefore, it is said in a noble Hadith: 'When the son of Adam dies, his deeds come to an end, apart from three things...' one of which is, '...a righteous child who supplicates for him.'(1) The word 'righteous' here is the result of whose efforts? It is the result of the parents' efforts.

So, when the parents receive reward for the good supplications of their offspring, they are only being given what they deserve and the fruit of their labour for this child. If the father is righteous, he will be careful to provide for his child from lawful earnings. His keenness to seek what is lawful often means that his expenses have to be constrained. On the other hand, there are some wealthy people who do not care to have lawful sources of income and work. They buy extravagant food, clothes, cars and other material possessions for their children because they have gathered their wealth from unlawful means.

A righteous father, however, will distance himself and his children from ill-gotten gains. That is why a righteous man may well suffer because of his righteousness in this world. He is patient in hardship and deprivation, and all this is credited to him as good deeds.

It was for this reason that we found many people arguing with us about Allah's saying: '…man will only have what he has worked towards.' (an-Najm: 39) They wanted to know how a person could benefit from the work of others. To answer this, we gave them an example: We are commanded to pray over the deceased. Does this prayer benefit the deceased or not? It is pointless if it does not benefit him; and if it does benefit him, then has he not benefited from the work of others?

(1) Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad [vol. 2, p. 372], At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [1376], and Abu Dawud in his Sunnan [2880] on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him. The Hadith in full is as follows: 'When the son of Adam dies, his deeds come to an end, apart from three: Ongoing charity, beneficial knowledge, or a righteous son who supplicates for him.'

Surely, he benefits from the supplications of the living for him at his funeral prayer, yet this prayer in and of itself will be considered from the deeds of the deceased. It is one of the fruits of his faith in Allah. Had he not been a believer, we would not have prayed over him. When one prays over the deceased, one is not praying over all dead people, but only over those who have believed in their Lord Glorified is He. The beliefs of a dead person are part of his deeds, and so your prayer for him is also one of his deeds.

Alternatively, we could also say concerning Allah's saying: '…man will only have what he has worked towards' (an-Najm: 39), that it means that the human being has no further right than that. Accordingly, this verse precludes justice, but not Allah's Favour and Bounty. There is a difference between justice and bounty. For example, a person may have a worker with whom he has an agreement to pay him 50 pounds, but that does not mean that he cannot pay him 70.

The verse ends with Allah's saying: '…indeed, it is You Who is the Exalted in Might, the Wise.' (Ghafir: 8) But the angels have not said, for example, 'Indeed, You are the Oft-Forgiving, Most Merciful,' so that it would fit with the rest of the supplication.

This is similar to Allah's saying in the story of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him: 'And [beware the Day] when Allah will say, "O `Isa, Son of Maryam (Mary), did you say to the people, 'Take me and my mother as gods besides Allah?' He will say, 'Exalted are You! It was not for me to say that to which I have no right. If I had said it, You would have known it. You know what is within myself, and I do not know what is within Yourself. Indeed, it is You who is Knower of the Unseen. I said not to them except what You commanded me - to worship Allah, my Lord and your Lord. And I was a witness over them as long as I was among them; but when You took me up, You were the Observer over them, and You are, over all things, Witness. If You should punish them - indeed they are Your servants; but if You forgive them - indeed it is You Who is the Exalted in Might, the Wise.'"' (al-Ma'ida: 118)

`Isa peace be upon him has not said: 'Indeed, it is You Who is the Much-Forgiving, the Merciful.' Why? Because they deserve to be punished, yet if You forgive them, no one will dare to revoke your forgiveness. For no one can put back Allah’s Judgement or repel His favour. So, O Lord, it is through Your Power and Wisdom that You forgive them, O Lord, even though they deserve to be punished. Thus the forgiveness does not emanate here from Allah’s Attributes of Pardon and Compassion; rather, it comes from His being the Almighty, the Wise. The Divine Attribute of Al-`Aziz (Almighty) means the One Who Conquers all and cannot be conquered or opposed.

That is why we said that Satan (Iblis) was truthful when he said: ‘...By Your Might, then I will surely mislead them all.’ (Sad: 82) The meaning of the oath bi`izzatik (by Your Might) is: ‘By Your independence of Your creation, and Your complete lack of need for them; so whoever desires may believe, and whoever desires may disbelieve. By means of this might and self-sufficiency shall I misguide them. Had You wanted them all to be believers, I would not have interfered with them nor dared to tempt them.’ This is evident from the exception which Satan then made: ‘Except Your chosen servants among them.’ (Sad: 83) I have no power over such servants and cannot seduce them. Thus the issue is not between Satan and his Lord, rather, it is between Satan and mankind.

The True Lord the Exalted then states more of the angels’ supplications for the believers:

وَقِهِمُ ٱلسَّيِّـَٔاتِ ۚ وَمَن تَقِ ٱلسَّيِّـَٔاتِ يَوْمَئِذٍ فَقَدْ
رَحِمْتَهُۥ ۚ وَذَٰلِكَ هُوَ ٱلْفَوْزُ ٱلْعَظِيمُ ﴿٩﴾

Protect them from all evil deeds: those You protect on that Day from [the punishment for] evil deeds will receive Your mercy – that is the supreme triumph [9] (The Quran, Ghafir: 9)

The verbal form waqihim (guard them) here is imperative, or supplicatory, and is derived from the verb waqa. It means to say: O Lord, turn them away from sin. It is also correct to say that it means: Protect them from the consequences of sin or protect them from sin itself. True mercy is that Allah averts sins and all evil from you. Therefore, Allah says: ‘...whomsoever You guard against evil deeds on that Day, on him You have had mercy...’ (Ghafir: 9).

This is similar to Allah’s saying regarding the Bounteous Quran: ‘And We send down from the Quran that which is a healing and a mercy to those who believe...’ (al-Isra’: 82) The healing effect consists in removing the sickness that already exists in the human soul; for example, the Quran treats illnesses such as miserliness, cowardice, dishonesty, etc. As for the aspect of mercy, it is that one is not afflicted by sickness in the first place. There can be no doubt that avoiding a sickness is better than curing it. Prevention, as they say, is better than cure. ‘...And that is indeed the supreme triumph.’ (Ghafir: 9). Yes, indeed, what triumph could be greater than being protected by Allah from falling into sin? The word fawz (triumph) denotes success and prosperity. It is described as being supreme because in this world one can have success with children, wealth, or status, and this is a triumph. But the supreme triumph is in the afterlife, because it is a permanent and eternal triumph. Any triumph in this world will eventually end.

The True Lord says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ يُنَادَوْنَ لَمَقْتُ ٱللَّهِ أَكْبَرُ مِن مَّقْتِكُمْ
أَنفُسَكُمْ إِذْ تُدْعَوْنَ إِلَى ٱلْإِيمَـٰنِ فَتَكْفُرُونَ ١٠

But those who disbelieved will be told, ‘When you were called to the faith and rejected it, God’s disgust with you was even greater then than the self-disgust you feel [today]’ [10] (The Quran, Ghafir: 10)

If we look at this subject from the beginning, we see that the True Lord Glorified is He has called mankind to believe in Him by means of His Messengers and His Law. Among them are those who answered and believed, and among them are those who disbelieved: ‘...when you were invited to faith, but you refused.’ (Ghafir: 10) Those who did not answer the summons of the True Lord the Exalted did not want to be bound by Allah’s Principles of right and wrong – ‘do this and do not do that.’ They did not want to constrict themselves by adhering to a principled path, but rather desired to live their lives as they pleased. This is what drew them to disbelief.

On seeing the punishment in the next world, the disbelievers will be filled with regret at a time when regret will be of no avail. They will hate themselves most severely for not taking the path of faith. This is the meaning of Allah's saying: 'Indeed, those who disbelieve will be addressed, "The hatred of Allah for you was [even] greater than your hatred of yourselves [this Day in Hell] when you were invited to faith, but you refused."' (Ghafir: 10)

The word maqt (loathing) refers to the most intense hatred. The True Lord the Exalted is saying to them, if you detest yourselves to the worst degree because you have not believed in Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him and the message of truth that he brought, you should know that Allah's loathing of you and your disbelief in Him is greater and more intense than your own self-hatred. You detest yourselves because you deprived yourselves of good and brought evil upon yourselves by disbelieving in Allah. The True Lord, however, loathes you because you have distanced yourselves from the sphere of His Goodness. You have put yourselves outside His Mercy and Care. This is because the Lord Glorified is He becomes enraged when His slave removes himself from His Care and deprives himself of His Goodness.

This denotes that your Lord loves you and loves that goodness comes to you. He wants you by His side and in His company. He is protectively jealous when you break away or deviate from His Path, for you are His handiwork and His servant. Thus, it appears that Allah's loathing of the disbeliever is actually borne of His Mercy and protective jealousy for him. Therefore, Allah says in a Qudsi Hadith: 'Had you created them, you would have had mercy on them.'(1) So, the True Lord Glorified is He first clarifies that the disbelievers detest themselves and that His detesting of them is greater than their own.

(1) This Hadith was related by Abu Hamid Al-Ghazali in Ihya' `Ulum Ad-Din [vol. 4, p. 52] on the authority of some of the (salaf; the pious predecessors). The exact wording is: 'There is no slave who disobeys except that his place on earth seeks permission to swallow him up, and the sky above him seeks permission to fall upon him in fragments. Allah then says to the earth and the sky, "Leave my slave be and give him respite, for you did not create him. Had you created him you would have had mercy upon him. Perhaps he will repent to Me and I will forgive him, or perhaps he will become righteous and I will change his deeds to good ones."'

قَالُوا۟ رَبَّنَآ أَمَتَّنَا ٱثْنَتَيْنِ وَأَحْيَيْتَنَا ٱثْنَتَيْنِ فَٱعْتَرَفْنَا
بِذُنُوبِنَا فَهَلْ إِلَىٰ خُرُوجٍ مِّن سَبِيلٍ ﴿١١﴾

They will say, ‘Our Lord, twice You have caused us to be lifeless and twice You have brought us to life. Now we recognize our sins. Is there any way out?’ [11]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 11)

In order for us to understand the meaning of Allah’s saying: ‘...twice You have caused us to be lifeless and twice You have brought us to life...’ (Ghafir: 11), we need first to understand what death is. Death is the elimination of life after it has been previously present. If death shall occur, it is, therefore, evidence that there has been life before it. Death also refers to a complete non-existence that has not been preceded by life at all.

Therefore, Allah the Exalted says: ‘How can you disbelieve in Allah?...’ (al-Baqara: 28) This is an incredulous question, meaning, ‘tell us how on earth you can disbelieve,’ ‘...Seeing that you were dead and He gave you life...’ (al-Baqara: 28). That is, you were non-existent and He gave you life. ‘...Then He will cause you to die...’ (al-Baqara: 28) that is, He will take away the life that you have, ‘...then He will bring you [back] to life...’ (al-Baqara: 28) that is, in the Hereafter.

So there are two deaths and two lives to be experienced by mankind. The difference of opinion in this matter is whether death must come after life, or whether it can refer to the nothingness that precedes life.

We say that death refers to complete non-existence, whether or not it is preceded by life. For example, when a person sees a small mosquito and a huge elephant, he says, ‘Glory be to the One Who made the elephant big and the mosquito small!’ Were the mosquitoes once big and then Allah caused them to become small, or were they created like that? Thus, it is not necessary that life should precede death. It is sufficient that something has been lifeless. After that Allah brought us to life, we spend our time in this world, and then death comes.

So this verse contains both meanings: first is absolute lifelessness or non-existence which is not preceded by life; and second is death, which is the removal of existing life. Allah Glorified is He says: '...twice You have caused us to be lifeless and twice You have brought us to life...' (Ghafir: 11).

Some scholars(1) believe that the first death designates the removal of life after a human's appointed time on earth is over. The human is then brought to life in the grave for questioning after which he dies again. Finally, the human is resurrected on the Day of Judgement. But the first opinion(2) that we have chosen is more appropriate.

Allah then says: '...Now we confess our sins. Is there any way out?' (Ghafir: 11) The question stated here is wishful thinking, but it will never happen. Even if they were returned to life, they would go back to their previous bad ways. There is no benefit in repeating the experience. The True Lord the Exalted clarified this issue in His saying: '...No! It is but a word that he speaks...' (al-Mu'minun: 100).

If they were returned to life, they would revert to their bad nature and they would continue to disbelieve. When they say 'way out,' they mean a way 'from this predicament that we are in, and from the punishment that we now suffer.' '…Is there any way out?' (Ghafir: 11) In other words, any means to escape and be saved.

What we have mentioned here relates solely to the life and death of the bodies. As for the life of the hearts and souls, this is another issue. The True Lord Glorified is He speaks of it in His saying: 'O you who have believed, respond to Allah and to the Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you life...' (al-Anfal: 24). There is no doubt that Allah is addressing them while they are living their material lives, so there must be some other form of life that He is inviting them to. It is the spiritual life after which there is no death, and that is life in paradise.

(1) This was the opinion of As-Suddi as narrated by Al-Qurtubi in his exegesis [vol. 8, p. 5945]. Al-Qurtubi said, 'They only arrived at this opinion because the word "dead" is not applied in classical usage to reproductive fluids, and the scholars used this as evidence to prove the questioning in the grave.'

(2) The first opinion intended by Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi is that they were dead in the loins of their fathers and then they were brought to life. Then they died the death that all must die in this world and were subsequently resurrected for the Gathering and the Judgement, and this totals two deaths and two lives. This was the opinion of Ibn Mas`ud, Ibn `Abbas, Qatadah and Ad-Dahhak. [See Tafsir Al-Qurtubi vol. 8, p. 5945].

So, there is the material life in which we live, eat, drink and move, and there is the spiritual life with which we enter Paradise, the place of never-ending blessings and life without death. The material life has a spirit that is appropriate to it, and it is a kind of life that ends in death. As for the spiritual and moral life, it must have a loftier spirit that is attained through adherence to the path of ‘do this and do not do that.’ That is why Allah calls His Book a (ruh) in His saying: ‘And thus We have revealed to you (O Muhammad) a Ruh (spirit) of Our Command...’ (ash-Shura: 52). He also calls the one who delivers it a (ruh): ‘The Trustworthy Spirit (Ruh – Angel Gabriel) has brought it down.’ (ash-Shu'ara': 193)

Each of these two lives lasts in a way appropriate to it. The first has an appointed end, while the other is extended and ever lasting. This is why we say of the martyr who has sacrificed himself and ended his life striving in Allah’s Path that Allah rewards him for that by safeguarding him from any further death after that.

ذَٰلِكُم بِأَنَّهُۥٓ إِذَا دُعِيَ ٱللَّهُ وَحۡدَهُۥ كَفَرۡتُمۡ وَإِن يُشۡرَكۡ
بِهِۦ تُؤۡمِنُواْۚ فَٱلۡحُكۡمُ لِلَّهِ ٱلۡعَلِيِّ ٱلۡكَبِيرِ ١٢

[They will be told], ‘This is all because when God alone was invoked you rejected this, yet when others were associated with Him you believed [in them].’ Judgement belongs to God the Most High, the Most Great [12] (The Quran, Ghafir: 12)

When the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted informs us of the beliefs required of us and supports them with miraculous signs, it is our duty to accept His Laws willingly and with pleasure. Allah the Most High has obligated us to act in accordance with the principles of right and wrong only after He gave us the foundations for having ultimate belief in the Supreme God. Then, some people chose to believe, while others choose not to believe, despite all the benefits that we gain through organising our lives according to Allah’s Law.

If He gives you a certain rule, you must obey it, but if some opposition persists in your mind after that, then your reality affirms that you have not believed with your hearts. '...That is because...' (Ghafir: 12) that is, your opposition to the call to Allah, and your taking an adverse stance against it is the result of: '...when Allah was called upon alone, you disbelieved...' (Ghafir: 12).

In another place in the Quran, Allah says: 'and when Allah is mentioned alone, the hearts of those who do not believe in the Hereafter shrink with aversion, but when those [worshipped] other than Him are mentioned, immediately they rejoice.' (az-Zumar: 45) That is, they manifest resentment and irritation when they hear Allah's Speech. Why? Because they have not realized the meaning of faith and the subsequent responsibility of applying the law of 'do this and do not do that.' They know that this law will restrict their desires and forbid them from certain things they love. It will also demand from them other duties that lie heavy upon the soul. That is why they become resentful when reminded of Allah and the path of faith, while if they hear of their false gods: '...immediately they rejoice…' (az-Zumar: 45) and feel glad. Why? This is so because these idols and false gods, which they worship besides Allah, make no demands of them. They do not require them to 'do this, and not do that.' So in their worship, they are left to the dictates of their desires and the evil of their selves. This is the meaning of their rejoicing and the significance of: '...but if others were associated with Him, you believed...' (Ghafir: 12).

Yet, there remains a reality that should not be forgotten: '...So the judgement is with Allah, the Most High and the Grand.' (Ghafir: 12) So rejoice in your alleged gods as you like. My Decree will rule over you against your will. I will make you ill as I wish, and I will cause you to die when I wish. I will make you rich and I will make you poor, and so on. You can never withdraw yourself from My Dominion, except in those things in which I have given you a choice.

You have been given a choice between belief and disbelief; so whoever wishes may believe and whoever wishes may disbelieve. Whoever wishes may obey and whoever wishes may disobey. Yet, your obedience is of no benefit to Me and your disobedience cannot harm Me. No matter how much you rebel in those matters in which you have been given a choice, in the end you will come back to Me.

‘...So the judgement is with Allah the Most High the Grand.’ (Ghafir: 12) Indeed, His Decree cannot be rebelled against. So, even if you are accustomed to rebelling in matters of belief and obedience, show me how you are going to rebel against Allah in those matters in which you have no choice.

The True Lord the Exalted then goes on to mention aspects of His Magnificence and Exaltedness.

هُوَ ٱلَّذِى يُرِيكُمْ ءَايَٰتِهِۦ وَيُنَزِّلُ لَكُم مِّنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ رِزْقًا ۚ
وَمَا يَتَذَكَّرُ إِلَّا مَن يُنِيبُ ﴿١٣﴾

It is He who shows you [people] His signs and sends water down from the sky to sustain you, though only those who turn to God will take heed [13] (The Quran, Ghafir: 13)

The word (ayat) is the plural of aya and, as we have mentioned, it is of three types: cosmic signs that demonstrate the enormous power and superior wisdom of the One True God Who is the Possessor of Majesty and Glory; the miraculous signs with which Allah strengthens His Messengers and affirms the truthfulness of their mission of delivering the message on His behalf; and, finally, the revelations and verses of the Quran that carry Allah’s Rulings.

Allah says: ‘It is He who shows you His Ayat...’ (Ghafir: 13) that is, His cosmic signs so that you may believe in the Supreme God. He also shows you miracles through the hands of His Messengers. After that He reveals to you the verses of the Quran that contain His Rulings, which protect your faith and religion. Because just as I have protected your bodies with the water I have sent down from the sky and brought forth your provisions by means of it, by which you are nourished and sustained, you should also accept this other thing that I have made to sustain your religion. They are the rulings that will protect your beliefs in the legal domain of ‘do this and do not do that.’

Thus, Allah’s saying: ‘It is He who shows you His Ayat (signs, proofs, verses of the Quran or revelations) and sends down to you from the sky, provision…’ (Ghafir: 13) covers both matters together, neglecting neither of them for the sake of the other.

‘…But none will remember except he who turns back [in repentance].’ (Ghafir: 13) That is, the one who repentantly returns to Allah and divests himself of the arrogance of denying Him. He shakes the dust of heedlessness from himself so that he may return to his primordial, natural state of belief, of which Allah spoke in His saying: '...Am I not your Lord' (al-A'raf: 172) The response of course was that all replied, 'Yes, indeed, You are our True Lord.'

فَٱدْعُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ مُخْلِصِينَ لَهُ ٱلدِّينَ وَلَوْ كَرِهَ ٱلْكَٰفِرُونَ ﴿١٤﴾

So call upon God and dedicate your religion to Him alone, however hateful this may be to the disbelievers [14]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 14)

The word du`a' (supplication) is the manifestation of humility and submission to Allah the Exalted. Why? Because among mankind are those who rebel against Allah the Most High and are too arrogant to obey Him and too proud to manifest any humility before Him. So when you show lowliness and humility to Allah and sincerity in worship, it becomes clear to them that this rebellion is not the fundamental nature of mankind, rather, it is born of their own caprice (hawa). The proof of this is that some people do show humility and submission and that some people do call on their Lord, obey Him and demonstrate sincerity.

So, rebellion is not an essential characteristic of mankind, rather, it is a characteristic of the rebel alone. When the human preserves his primordial nature, he will necessarily seek help and refuge from Allah. That is why you should invoke Allah with sincere devotion to Him, even if the disbelievers hate you praying like this.

We have mentioned regarding the virtues of du`a' (supplication) that it is: 'The marrow (essence) of worship.'(1) Supplication is essentially the humility of the worshipper before the Might of his Lord. It is simply a manifestation of humility, regardless of the results of one's supplication, for the True Lord the Exalted has already given to you before you ask Him. He has created many things for you before your existence. That is why it is not necessary for Allah to grant every person his request. It is as though Allah is saying to us, do not forget that there are those among you who supplicate to me, but I do not answer them. For when I leave them unanswered, I am in fact giving them a greater gift. One’s supplication for good may in fact bring evil, as a person may pray for something and not realize that his destruction lies in it.

(1) Narrated by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [Hadith no. 3371] as Hadith Marfu` from the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him on the authority of Anas Allah be pleased with him. At-Tirmidhi said, 'It is (gharib; strange to come) from this route of narration. We only know it from the Hadith of Ibn Lahi`ah.' It was also narrated by Muslim, Ahmad and Al-Bukhari in Al-Adab Al-Mufrad on the authority of An-Nu`man ibn Bashir with the wording: 'Supplication is worship.' [See Kashf Al-Khafa' by Al-`Ajluni, vol. 1, p. 485]

We have previously given the example of a mother overcome by anger who invokes Allah saying, ‘Oh Allah! Punish my son by your fire’. What will be the state of this mother if Allah Glorified is He were to answer her prayer? Allah Glorified is He knows that her prayer is foolish and that she prayed for evil thinking it to be good, and for this reason He corrects her prayer. That is why we say in praise of Allah Glorified is He ‘Glory be to the one who corrects the error of the supplicants by not answering them’. By that He protects us from harm, for how often does a man request something harmful although he thinks he is praying for good?!

This verse: ‘Invoke, then, Allah, with devotion to Him alone, however hateful this may be to those who deny the Truth!’ (Ghafir: 14) It incites us to vex the disbelievers and enrage them by manifesting our lowliness and humility to Allah Glorified is He. This vexes them because it manifests the Might and the Greatness of Allah Glorified is He Whom they were too proud to obey, Who they wrongly placed themselves above and in Whom they disbelieved. For this reason one should continually supplicate in front of them, being very humble before Allah Glorified is He:

رَفِيعُ ٱلدَّرَجَٰتِ ذُو ٱلْعَرْشِ يُلْقِى ٱلرُّوحَ مِنْ أَمْرِهِۦ عَلَىٰ مَن يَشَآءُ مِنْ عِبَادِهِۦ لِيُنذِرَ يَوْمَ ٱلتَّلَاقِ ﴿١٥﴾
يَوْمَ هُم بَٰرِزُونَ ۖ لَا يَخْفَىٰ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ مِنْهُمْ شَىْءٌ ۚ لِّمَنِ ٱلْمُلْكُ ٱلْيَوْمَ ۖ لِلَّهِ ٱلْوَٰحِدِ ٱلْقَهَّارِ ﴿١٦﴾

He is exalted in rank, the Lord of the Throne. He sends revelations with His teachings to whichever of His servants He will, in order to warn of the Day of Meeting [15] The Day when they will come out and nothing about them will be concealed from God. ‘Who has control today?’ ‘God, the One, the All Powerful [16] (The Quran, Ghafir: 15 - 16)

The word rafi' (high above) means that Allah Glorified is He raises others, as when He Glorified is He raises some of His creatures above others. It can also have the meaning of the passive participle, in that He is elevated in and of Himself. In fact, the one who raises others cannot raise them unless He himself is elevated. That is, 'rafi'' here means that He is elevated above everything, as we say 'Allah is greater' or 'higher' or 'more majestic'.

Allah's Existence is elevated because it is pre-eternal and not preceded by non-existence. Our existence on the other hand is preceded by non-existence. His existence is never-ending while ours is finite. His existence Glorified is He is a basic and essential reality, while ours is only by means of Him. Thus He Glorified is He is the ultimate pinnacle of existence, yes indeed He is.

Allah Glorified is He is elevated in the way He upholds and sustains all (qayyumiyyatuhu). We work and become tired, and then we sleep in order to rest. As for Allah Glorified is He He is not tired by work nor does He sleep to rest. That is why He says, 'Allah–there is no deity save Him–The Ever-Living, The Self-Subsisting by Whom all subsist (Al-Qayyum). Neither slumber overtakes Him nor sleep' (al-Baqara: 255). It is as though Allah Glorified is He is saying to us, sleep to your heart's content because neither sleep nor slumber affect me, wanting thereby to make us feel at peace knowing that He is looking after us.

By means of His All-Supporting, All-Sustaining Nature, Allah Glorified is He raises whomever He wills. And through His Absolute Power He keeps whomever He wills raised and he lowers whomever He wills. He says: 'Say, "O Allah, Owner of Sovereignty, You give sovereignty to whom You will and You take sovereignty away from whom You will. You honor whom You will and You humble whom You will. In Your hand is [all] good. Indeed, over all things You have power' (Al-'Imran: 26).

Allah Glorified is He says: 'High above ranks...' (Ghafir: 15) because being high necessitates one being above another; these are the darajat (ranks), that is, the difference between one level and another. The word darajat (ranks) refers to movement in an upward direction, as for going down, these are called darakat (depths).

Allah Glorified is He raises whatever He wills of His creation over whatever He wills. With regard to times, He elevated Ramadan over the other months, and of places He raised the Holy Sanctuary (Ka'ba) and Bayt Al-Maqdis in Jerusalem. He raises some of the angels as He says on their tongue:

‘...Among us, too, there is none but has a place assigned to it [by Him]’ (as-Saffat: 164). With regard to the Messengers, He raised ‘The Resolute Ones’ ulu al-'azm, as He, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Some of these Messengers We have endowed with more [gifts] than others...’ (al-Baqara: 253). Allah Glorified is He also raises some of the masses: ‘...Allah will exalt by [many] degrees those of you who have attained to faith and [above all] such as have been vouchsafed [true] knowledge...’ (al-Mujadala: 11). And just as He Glorified is He has raised those who have been given knowledge, He also raises those who are active but do not have knowledge. They only have the energy to act on this knowledge, apply it and realise its goals in this life. The application of knowledge requires active hands–artisans, manufacturers and workers. That is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘For, He it is who has made you inherit the earth and has raised some of you by degrees above others...’ (al-An‘am: 165).

That is, we have times that have been elevated, places that have been elevated, angels that are elevated, prophets that have been elevated, believers that are elevated, scholars that are elevated and finally the masses on earth that are elevated.

Ponder over the Divine Justice in raising some above others. Allah Glorified is He did not mention who was raised, nor over whom they were raised, for Him Glorified is He to show us that each is raised in one area but others are raised over him in another area. Thus the rich man is not higher or better than the poor man, nor is the handsome man higher than the ugly, nor is the intelligent better than the dull-witted. Each is only raised in accordance with his actions, as we are told in Allah’s saying: ‘O men! Behold, We have created you all out of a male and a female, and have made you into nations and tribes so that you might come to know one another. Verily, the noblest of you in the sight of Allah is the one who is most deeply conscious of Him. Behold, Allah is All Knowing, All-Aware’ (al-Hujurat: 13).

We see that all the creation, apart from those whom we have already mentioned as being elevated by Allah, are raised in some aspects, but others are raised over them in others. Hence, the carpenter who makes a desk for me is elevated above me in this area and is better than me therein because he knows this craft and is a master of it, while I do not know it.

When this worker comes and asks me about a matter, I am raised above him in that because I know it and he does not. We have said previously that Allah Glorified is He choses the daily life of his creatures to be based upon needs, not graces. Each one of us is in need of others; and without this reciprocal need, society will not be complete.

If society were based upon grace and being given blessings, most of the good things will cease to be and life will collapse. Imagine if all of us graduated from university and became scholars, who will do the other jobs for us? Who will clean the streets? Who will work in the sewers? Who will sell in the marketplace? And so on. This is what the poet (1) spoke of who said:

People for people, be they nomads or city-folk,
Are one to another, even if unaware, servants (2).

None of us are totally subservient; rather, each of us is subservient in one thing and serve others in another. Allah Glorified is He teaches us this lesson in His saying: ‘O you who have attained to faith! No men shall deride [other] men: it may well be that those [whom they deride] are better than themselves. And no women [shall deride other] women: it may well be that those [whom they deride] are better than themselves...’ (al-Hujurat: 11).

For this reason, no one should look at one job as being better than another; rather, some workers are better than others. The best one is he who does his job best. The worker who does a job which is considered less respectable but does it excellently is better than one who does a more respected job poorly.(3)

(1) He was Abu Al-`Ala’ Al-Mu`arri Ahmad ibn `Abdullah, a poet and a philosopher. He was born in 363 AH and died in 449 AH in Mu`arrat An-Nu`man. He went blind at the age of four and began to compose poetry at the age of eleven. He prohibited cruelty to animals, did not eat meat for 45 years and wore coarse clothes. He authored Luzum ma la Yalzam and Saqt Az-Zand (Al-Mawsu`ah Ash-Shi`riyya).

(2) The couplet is from a poem by Abu Al-`Ala’ Al-Mu`arri written with the rhyme of Bahr Al-Basit. It has five couplets, and the line as quoted in Al-Mawsu`ah Ash-Shi`riyya is:
People for people, of the city or the countryside,
Are one to another, even if unaware, servants.

(3) Al-`Ajluni related in Kashf Al-Khafa’ [1/285], ‘Indeed, Allah loves that when one of you performs his work (al-`aml) he perfects it’. In another narration the word ‘work’ is indefinite. He said, ’It was narrated by Abu Ya`laand Al-`Askari on the authority of 'Aisha Allah be pleased with her’. Al-`Askari also related it (marfu`: elevated to Prophet=

To this end Imam ‘Ali Allah be pleased with him said, ‘The value of each individual is in that which he does well’(1). Therefore, whoever wants greatness, let him perfect his work, no matter how lowly his work may be in the eyes of some, for there is no lowly work in Islam; there is only a lowly worker, and he is the careless one who does not perfect what he does or does it with sincerity.

We previously drew an example from something that happened (2) in France at a debate at the Council of French Youth. They were presenting us with some important arguments in these debates. Among these was that the workers’ union leader used to make many demands on their behalf and spend extravagantly on these, but the minister in charge of authorising these requests used to overrule his budget.

Time passed and the workers’ leader became the minister. The new leader stopped him and said to him, ‘I ask nothing from you except what you yourself used to seek, but still you overrule my budgets’. Then he added, ‘Do not forget that there was a time when you used to polish shoes’, in the hope of arousing his compassion, or perhaps of making him feel ashamed. The minister was unperturbed by what he said. He replied to him plainly, ‘Yes indeed’, he said, ‘But I used to do a good job’.

Clearly, greatness does not lie in the work itself, but in its quality. That is why we say, if a worker who does his work carefully and is sincere, knows that his employer is absent; he will still do his job to the best of his ability for the sake of Allah.

If such a worker really knew what he had done to strengthen people’s faith in Allah Glorified is He he will brag about this work among the scholars.

= Muhammad) with the wording, ‘he masters it’. The practise of the great scholars dictates favouring them (that is, these narrations and others).

(1) Ibn Ash-Shajari related in his book Al-Amali Ash-Shajariyya on the authority of `Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him that he said, ‘I will tell you four things that Allah Glorified is He confirmed in His Book’, and he mentioned among them, ‘The value (or he said worth) of each person is in that which he does well’. ‘Ali continued, ‘And Allah the Glorified and Exalted subsequently revealed in the story of Talut: “Behold, Allah has exalted him above you, and endowed him abundantly with knowledge and bodily perfection...” (al-Baqara: 247)’.

(2) The story of the French leader of the workers' union who became a minister

How is that? What does a worker do to strengthen people's faith, someone might ask? We answer that it is because whoever sees his excellent work will explain, 'O Allah!' Thus, it is excellent work that spreads Allah's Good Name throughout creation and leads people to remember Allah–and the rewards involved in such are not hidden from anyone.

Allah's saying: '...in almightiness enthroned...' (Ghafir: 15) means, 'the one who owns creation, and this creation submitted to Him without any opposition'. In His Absolute Power and Divinity, He is immovable. It is not for a king to sit and be firmly established on the throne of authority until matters are under his control. However, there is a great difference between Allah being 'seated' and 'firmly established' on His Throne and the sitting of the kings of this world on their thrones. We believe that Allah is 'seated and firmly established' upon His Throne in a way that cannot be likened to creation or can be explained. As long as His Existence is completely unlike our existence, then His being 'seated' is completely unlike our sitting. We have said previously that these matters are to be seen through the lens of: 'There is nothing like unto Him...' (ash-Shura: 11).

Allah subjugated the universe Glorified is He without any difficulty; the proof of which is Allah's saying: 'And He [it is Who] turned to the skies, which were [yet but] smoke; and He [it is Who] said to them and to the earth, "Come, both of you, willingly or unwillingly!"–To which both responded, "We do come in obedience"' (Fussilat: 11).

Also, because He Glorified is He is 'high above ranks', and He Glorified is He is 'in almightiness enthroned', He wanted to grant those who believe in Him something of His Elevation, thereby raising them over others and not leaving them neglected and abandoned without a Message to follow. That is why Allah Glorified is He sent revelation to them: 'By His Own Will does He bestow inspiration upon whomever He wills of His slaves...' (Ghafir: 15). Allah Glorified is He did not take the creation as His slaves and then abandon them; He sent down a clear Message of 'do this and do not do that' to govern their daily lives for them. This is the law that results in prosperity, elevation, and exaltation of mankind. But He made this Message optional–whoever wants can believe and whoever wants can disbelieve, and whoever wants can obey and whoever wants can disobey–so that in the next world the believer will see how Allah elevated him when He makes him enter paradise, the abode of eternal pleasure, where blessings never end and there is no death.

This Message came to us in the Book of Allah and the Sunnah of His Messenger, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. It sets our daily lives in order for our actions to be consistent with one another and not contradictory. When you see that the Sacred Law has restricted your actions in some field, you should realise that it has restricted the lives of millions for your sake. When, for example, it forbids you as an individual from stealing, it restricts your actions. It forbids you from extending your hand to that which is not yours, but at the same time it has restricted a million other hands from taking what is yours. When it commands you to lower your gaze and honour the sanctity of the forbidden, it has also commanded the rest of creation to lower their gaze from members of your family, and so on. Reflect upon whom it is who really benefits from the application of this Divine Message.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'He bestow[s] inspiration (ar-ruh)...' (Ghafir: 15). The word ar-ruh has many meanings. What springs to mind is that it refers to the spirit which enters material objects and gives them life and motion. This is the ruh (spirit) that the Creator cast into Adam peace be upon him for him to be able to move and for his limbs, having previously been mere clay, to fulfil their roles.

Allah Glorified is He then wanted to restrain the actions of such material objects for them not to follow their base passions, therefore He sent down another ruh from Himself: the system of values contained in the Glorious Quran. That is why Allah Glorified is He says: 'O you who have attained to faith! Respond to the Call of Allah and the Messenger [Mohammad] whenever He calls you to that which will give you life...' (al-Anfal: 24).

But how can He bring them to life when they are already alive, as is mentioned in this speech? Yes, they are alive in a material sense, in that the spirit has entered their bodies and they move by means of it, but what is referred to here is a type of life higher than the material one–the spiritual life that elevates man's actions and makes them always for the good of those around him and for himself. Just as the material life has a spirit, the spiritual life has a spirit as well.

That is why the Quran is called a ruh, and the angel who brought it is also called a ruh. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And thus, too, [O Muhammad] have We revealed to you a life-giving Message (ruh), [coming] at Our behest...’ (ash-Shura: 52), and: ‘A trustworthy spirit (ruh) has brought it down’ (ash-Shu'ara': 193).

This is the spiritual life, the life of lofty ideals, the life that qualifies one for another eternal, never-ending life. You can be the judge between a life that qualifies you only for this perishing world and a life that qualifies you for the eternal life in next world. You can only come to the conclusion that the latter is greater than and preferable to the former.

It is sufficient a distinction between them that the first spirit, the material one, exists in the believer and the disbeliever. By means of this spirit the disbelief of the disbeliever and the sin of the sinner exist. As for the spirit that gives us true values, that is the Message, it exists only in the believer, and it moves him only towards goodness, in a balanced way that makes him and those around him happy in this world before the next.

Thus Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Behold, the life in the Hereafter is indeed the only [true] life (hayawan): if they but knew!’ (al-'Ankabut: 64) The word hayawan (only true life) means ‘the true eternal life whose pleasures never end or perish’. In this world, the pleasure of man is governed by his activity and his opportunities, but the pleasure of the next world is governed by the Bestower Glorified is He.

On top of this, you live in the world and you are continually exposed to death, threatened by it in every moment. It may come upon you suddenly. It has no set time or age, and there is no way to know it. Some die after one year, some after a hundred years, and some in their mother’s womb. Death does not differentiate between the old and the young or between the sick and the healthy. Allah Glorified is He has obscured it. Why? This is for us to always remember it, waiting for it to pounce on us. Thus, it is as though its obscurity is clarity itself.

Allah Glorified is He alerts us to this matter in His saying: ‘Blessed is He in Whose Hand all dominion rests, since He has the power to will anything: He who has created death as well as life so that He might put you to a test [and thus show] which of you is best in conduct...' (al-Mulk: 1-2). Ponder over Allah's Words: '...He who has created death as well as life...' (al-Mulk: 2). He began with death, putting it before life. It is as though He Glorified is He is saying to us: do not face life except with death on your mind. Why? Because the remembrance of death prevents one from becoming deluded by the world or inclining towards it. It checks man's behaviour for him to not do anything except good deeds, for he is constantly keeping account of the punishments that are in store for him.

Allah's saying: '...upon whomever He wills of His slaves...' (Ghafir: 15), means, 'those whom He chooses and elects for this station'. This is like His saying: 'Allah chooses Messengers from among the angels as well as from among men...' (al-Hajj: 75), and: 'Allah knows best upon whom to bestow His Message...' (al-An'am: 124).

Allah Glorified is He then clarifies the reasoning behind His saying: 'By His Own Will does He bestow inspiration upon whomever He wills of His slaves...' (Ghafir: 15). Why? He explains: '...So as to warn [all human beings of the coming] of the Day when they shall meet Him' (Ghafir: 15). That is to say, beware of thinking that this matter will end with the end of the life in this world, that the sinners will get away with their sins and the oppressors with their oppression. No! They will be returned to Allah in whom they disbelieved, or whose prohibitions they disobeyed and dared to violate. Remember this reality no matter how averse you feel in your denial or how distant you feel from your Lord. You will be returned to Him in spite of yourself and made to stand before Him. There can be no escaping Him in the slightest.

We mentioned previously that 'warning' means to frighten somebody about some evil in the future for them to prepare for it and thus avoid what results in the matter that is feared in order to be safe from it. There can be no warning if the event is already at hand. It must be before the event by a margin that allows one to take account of the situation and take steps to prevent it from happening.

Allah Glorified is He says: '...the Day when they shall meet (at-talaq)' (Ghafir: 15). But the word at-talaq means at-talaqi (meeting) which cannot happen unless there is now some distance between the things that will meet in the future. What, then, are the things that will meet? The scholars say that what is intended here is the Day of Judgement, and the meeting will take numerous forms. In the next world you will see the angels in whom you had faith in this world, and you will meet them clearly.

In the next world you will see your relatives and your extended family, from Adam peace be upon him right down until the last child in this world. You will meet all of them, even until Adam. You will see the relatives who you used to shun in this world. This amazing huge tree with all its intertwining branches will be manifest before you and you will say, ‘How did I cut these intertwining branches by not keeping contact with my relatives? How did I shun these relatives, regardless of having a reason or not? You used to think that you are from a special race and others are lower than you are. That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said, ‘You are all from Adam, and Adam was from dust’ (1).

Allah Glorified is He says in a Qudsi Hadith, ‘I am the Most-Merciful (Ar-Rahman) and this is the womb (Ar-rahim); I have derived a name for it from My name. Whoever upholds its connections, I will uphold his connection, and whoever breaks its connections, I will break his connection’.(2)

One day(3) the doorman of Muʿawiya ibn Abu Sufyan (4) came to him and said, ‘O Commander of the Faithful, there is a man at the door who says he is your brother’.‘Do you not know my brothers?’ he asked. ‘That is what the man says’, he replied. ‘Bring him in’, said Muʿawiya. When he entered he said to him, ‘Which of my brothers are you?’ ‘I am your brother from Adam’, answered the man. Muʿawiya laughed and said, ‘A relative (rahim) who has been cut off! By Allah, I will be the first to re-establish the connection’. Consequently, he brought him close to him and gave him what he wanted.(1)

---

(1) Ahmad related this in his Musnad [2/361] on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him with the wording, ‘People are the children of Adam, and Adam was from dust’.

(2) It was related by Ahmad in his Musnad [1/191-194] and At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [1907], who said it is a good/sound Hadith. Abu Dawud also related it in his Sunnan [1694], and they all related it on the authority of `Abd Ar-Rahman ibn `Awf Allah be pleased with him.

(3) The story of the man who claimed to be Mu‘awiya's brother

(4) Muʿawiya ibn Abu Sufyan was Sakhr ibn Harb ibn Umayya, the founder of the Ummayad dynasty in Sham and a shrewd man. He was born in Mecca 20 years before the emigration and entered Islam on the day that Mecca was liberated. He died in the year 60 AH at the age of 80. His conquests reached the Atlantic Ocean and he was the first Muslim to take to the sea to fight the Romans (Al-A`lam by Az-Zirikli Vol. 7).

Among the meetings that will take place on the Day of Judgement are those between the victim and his oppressor and between one adversary and another. Indeed, the enemies will be gathered with Allah; therefore, it is upon the intelligent person to hold himself to account a thousand times in preparation for this meeting. And whoever ponders the consequences deeply will be saved.

Another meeting that will take place that Day is the meeting of a man with the record of his actions, wherein every deed, big and small, is recorded: ‘...Allah will have taken [all of] it into account, even though they [themselves] may have forgotten it...’ (al-Mujadala: 6), and: ‘On the Day when every human being will find himself faced with all the good that he has done and with all the evil that he has done; [many a one] will wish that there was a long span of time between himself and that [Day]...’ (Al-ʻImran: 30), the Day when your Lord will say to you: ‘[It will be said], “Read your record. Sufficient is your soul this Day to make an account against you”’ (al-Isra’: 14).

Then the meetings will reach an apex; the believers will meet with their Lord Glorified is He when He Glorified is He manifests Himself to them, and they will then see Him. This is the greatest pleasure, granted from Allah’s Generosity and Bounty. Read: ‘Some faces on that Day will be bright with happiness, looking up to their Lord; and some faces on that Day will be overcast with despair, knowing that a crushing calamity is about to befall them' (*al-Qiyam*a: 22-25).

(1) Nur Ad-Din Al-Yusi (1102 AH) mentioned in his book Al-Muhadarat fi Al-Adab wa Al-Lugha that a man emtered upon Mu`awiya and said to him, ‘I ask you by the relation (ar-rahim) between you and I that you help me’ So he asked him, ‘Are you from the tribe of `Abd Munaf?’ ‘No’, he replied. ‘Are you from Quraysh?’ ‘No’. ‘Are you an Arab?’ ‘No’. ‘Then, what is the connection between you and I?’ he asked. ‘Adam’, he answered. So Mu`awiya Allah be pleased with him said to him, ‘A relation which has been spurned! Verily, I will be the first to re-establish our relationship’, and he gave him [what he wanted].
This was mentioned by Al-Abshihi in his book Al-Mustatraf fi kull Fann Mustazhraf, and he attributed it to Abu `Ali Al-Qali in his book Al-Amali.

While the vision of Allah is the greatest blessing for the believers, it is the worst type of punishment for the disbelievers because they are denied it: 'Nay, verily, from [the grace of] their Lord shall they on that Day be debarred' (al-Mutaffifin: 15). That day their sadness and regret will become even worse: 'But as for those who are bent on denying the Truth, their [good] deeds are like a mirage in the desert, which the thirsty supposes to be water–until, when he approaches it, he finds that it was nothing: instead, he finds [that] Allah [has always been present] with him, and [that] He will pay him his account in full–for Allah is swift in reckoning!' (an-Nur: 39) He finds Allah Glorified is He in whom he disbelieved in this world, and he finds the punishment of which we spent such a long time warning and reminding him.

Allah Glorified is He then says: 'The Day when they shall come forth [from death], with nothing of themselves hidden from Allah' (Ghafir: 16), that is, on this day, the Day of Meetings, they will come openly and publicly after they and their evil deeds were hidden in this world. That day their covers will be removed and their affairs will be disclosed: '...with nothing of themselves hidden from Allah' (Ghafir: 16). All will be gathered, the kings and their subjects, the masters and their slaves, the presidents and their peoples, all in a state of slavery.

That is why Allah Glorified is He will call out: 'With whom will sovereignty rest on that Day?' (Ghafir: 16) Allah Glorified is He will say this because in this world He made some of us kings. In the next world, however, there will be no dominion for anyone except Allah Glorified is He alone. Thus, the believer and the disbeliever will all reply to this question saying: '...with Allah, the One Who holds absolute sway over all that exists!' (Ghafir: 16) Yes, because there is no object that deserves worship but Him and no true king but Him.

Allah's saying: 'With whom will sovereignty rest on that Day' (Ghafir: 16) means that on that day dominion will belong to Allah Glorified is He just as it did before it. But this is a reality that the disbelievers denied in the world, while the believers who were happy to have Allah as their Lord affirmed it. He gives dominion to whomever He wills, and He strips dominion from whomever He wills. He elevates whoever He wills and He abases whomever He wills.

The words: ‘...that Day...’ (Ghafir: 16) are directed here at the disbelievers who denied this reality in the world. In the Hereafter, however, they will recognise and affirm it: ‘...with Allah, the One Who holds absolute sway over all that exists!’ (Ghafir: 16)

ٱلۡيَوۡمَ تُجۡزَىٰ كُلُّ نَفۡسِۭ بِمَا كَسَبَتۡۚ لَا ظُلۡمَ
ٱلۡيَوۡمَۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ سَرِيعُ ٱلۡحِسَابِ ﴿١٧﴾

Today each soul will be rewarded for whatever it has done; today no injustice will be done. God is swift in reckoning [17] (The Quran, Ghafir: 17)

Allah says: ‘On that Day...’ (Ghafir: 17), that is, the Day of Judgement: ‘...will be requited...’ (Ghafir: 17), that is, brought to account: ‘...every human being... for what he has earned (kasabat)...’ (Ghafir: 17). We mentioned previously that the verb kasaba (earned) is used for good, while the verb iktasaba (earned) is used for evil. The scholars of the Arabic language say that every letter added to the base root of a word adds more meaning to the base root. That is why the words kasab and iktasab are different. The word kasaba has the pattern (fa'ala) meaning that the action happens naturally, without trouble. The word iktasaba, however, has the pattern (ifta'ala) indicating that it is contrived and requires effort.

Doing good does not require one to tire oneself out, as opposed to evil which necessitates troubles, weariness, and stealth. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘In his favour shall be whatever good he does (kasabat), and against him whatever evil he does (iktasabat)...’ (al-Baqara: 286). We explained this matter with the example of a man who sits amongst his family and sees beautiful faces: his wife, his daughters, his aunts, etc. and he may look at this beauty without trouble or shame. As for those outside his immediate family, he steals glances to enjoy their looks, yet he must try not to be seen by anyone. Similarly, we see this matter in the difference between a woman who becomes pregnant in a permissible manner and one who becomes pregnant in an impermissible way. See how the first displays her pregnancy and is proud of it, while the other tries her up most to conceal and rid herself of it. The happiness of the former and the grief of the latter is the difference between the permissible and the impermissible.

Another example is a man who takes something from his house; he takes it openly without any trouble or without needing to work out any scheme. If, however, he wants to steal from someone else's house, he must scheme and plot. Hence, we say that the permissible does not trouble a person, while it is the impermissible which causes everyone trouble.

As for Allah's saying: 'Nay! Those who earn (kasab) evil...' (al-Baqara: 81), the word kasab (earn) has been used here in reference to evil. How is this case? The scholars say it is because when an evil deed becomes a familiar habit for someone, he does it without any trouble, as if it were a good deed. Thus, because he has grown used to it, it has become kasab for him, and not iktisab. Such a person is said to be dissolute (faqid), that is, someone who has delved into the impermissible and grown so used to disobedience that it has become second nature for him. Allah Glorified is He gave an example of this in His saying: '[For] He is aware of the treacherous glance...' (Ghafir: 19). That is, there are treacherous glances and there are trustworthy glances. Trustworthy glances are those that look at the permissible and treacherous ones are those that look at the prohibited.

Even from the standpoint of economics, the philosophy that rules the people these days and according to which the progress of nations and their development is judged, we say that the permissible costs nothing, while it is the impermissible that is costly. This is from the standpoint of economics because the basis for the permissible is: 'Eat and drink [freely], but do not waste...' (al-A'raf: 31). It is also stated in a Hadith that, 'We are a people who do not eat until we get hungry, and when we eat we do not fill ourselves up'.(1) If we lived upon this basis we will make do with little. You can try this for yourself. Do not eat until you are hungry and you will find that a morsel is delicious, even if only with salt. It is as though following Allah's Religion gives you rest; it does not trouble you in your daily life, it does not require much work and it does not require much money. In the same way, when we eat we do not eat until we are full. You have seen people who eat until they get indigestion and need medicine to aid their digestion. Yet he has only given himself trouble, exhausting himself eating and spending on food.

(1) It is narrated on the authority of Al-Miqdam ibn Mu`id Yakrib that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The son of Adam does not fill a vessel worse than his stomach. A few morsels are enough for the son of Adam to keep his back straight, yet if he absolutely must, then a third for his food, a third for his drink and a third for air'. It is related by Ahmad in his Musnad [4/132], At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [2380], and Ibn Majah in his Sunnan [3349].

Allah Glorified is He then says: 'No oppression (zhulm) [will be done] on that Day...' (Ghafir: 17). Yes indeed, because the judge on that day will be Allah Glorified is He the Absolutely Just. It is as though Allah is saying to us; injustice and oppression (zhulm) one of your features, O mankind. We gave you respite in the world, and you dwelled therein in oppression. The strong oppressed the weak, the rich oppressed the poor, and the ruler oppressed his charge. But today: 'No oppression [will be done]...' (Ghafir: 17).

In the world, injustice and oppression reached their limit in that you ascribed partners to Allah Glorified is He. Thus Allah Glorified is He says: 'Do not associate [anything] with Allah. Indeed, association [with Him] is a great injustice' (Luqman: 13). Indeed, it is clear, manifest oppression because injustice is that you take someone else's right for yourself, or you take somebody's right and give it someone who has no right to it. This is what happened when they associated partners with Allah Glorified is He. They took His Divinity and gave it to the idols.

Injustice can come about from a number of angles; it could be that you do a good deed and are not rewarded good for it. It could be that you do a good deed for which you deserve ten but you are only given five rewards. It could be that you do a bad deed and are not held to account for it, or that you are held to account for a bad deed you did not do.

That is, any upset in the balance of property and benefits derived from work done is considered an injustice. Allah Glorified is He says in a Qudsi Hadith, 'O my slaves, I have forbidden oppression for Myself, so do not oppress one another'.(1)

---

(1) It is related by Muslim in his Sahih [2577], Ahmad in his Musnad [5/ 160], Al-Bayhaqi in his As-Sunnan Al-Kubra [6/93], and Al-Bukhari in Al-Adab Al-Mufrad [pg. 172,=

That is in this world, as for the Day of Judgement you will be before the unbiased Judge, in the court of the Absolutely Just, Who shows no favouritism to one over another. He has no son or spouse that might make Him swerve from the Truth.

It is for this reason that we said that the jinn were more truthful in their response when they said: ‘For [we know] that sublimely exalted is the Majesty of our Lord(1): no consort has He ever taken unto Himself nor son’ (al-Jinn: 3) because the majority of oppression comes from these two: the spouse and the child.

Allah’s saying: ‘Verily, Allah is swift in reckoning’ (Ghafir: 17) hints at His Absolute Power to judge between people and repay them for their deeds. It is as though He is saying to us: beware of thinking that judging you will be difficult or that it will take a long time. No! For Our affair is something entirely different. Allah’s judgement of our cases is not prolonged nor is it delayed.

‘Verily, Allah is swift in reckoning’ (Ghafir: 17) because Allah’s Deeds are achieved through Divine Command–not by means of a process, like your deeds. The proof of this is that in the world there are hundreds of thousands of judges judging among people in hundreds of thousands of towns and cities at the same time in different courts and different lands, yet the truth by which they judge does not differ from one to the next; rather, it is something that affects them all, a brush that has painted all their judgements.

Clearly, if one of Allah’s creations, in this case the truth, can overcome all the judges in the world at one time, then the One Who created this truth is more capable of judging between all His creatures at one time. Thus, when Imam ‘Ali Allah be pleased with him was asked how all people will be judged at once despite their numbers, he replied, ‘Just as Allah provides for them all at once’.(2)

= 490], on the authority of Abu Dharr Allah be pleased with him. Its wording is, ‘O My slaves, I have forbidden oppression for Myself and made it forbidden amongst you, so do not oppress one another’.

(1) Allah the Glorified and Exalted says: ‘For [we know] that sublimely exalted is the Majesty of our Lord...’ (al-Jinn: 3), that is, the Greatness of our Lord is Exalted, and the Majesty of our Lord is Exalted (Al-Qamus Al-Qawim 1/118).

(2) Ibn `Abd Al-Barr Al-Qurtubi mentions in his book Bahjat Al-Majalis that it was said to `Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him ‘How does Allah judge so many people?’ To which he replied, ‘Just as He apportioned their provision between them’.

وَأَنذِرۡهُمۡ يَوۡمَ ٱلۡأٓزِفَةِ إِذِ ٱلۡقُلُوبُ لَدَى ٱلۡحَنَاجِرِ كَٰظِمِينَۚ
مَا لِلظَّٰلِمِينَ مِنۡ حَمِيمٖ وَلَا شَفِيعٖ يُطَاعُ ﴿١٨﴾

Warn them [Prophet] of the ever-approaching Day, when hearts are at throats, choking them. The evildoer will have no friends, nor any intercessor to be heeded [18]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 18)

We mentioned previously that the phrase: '…that Day that is [ever] drawing nearer' is a warning meant to inform and warn of evil before it arrives. The coming day is death because it comes all of a sudden; no one knows when it will strike. It could also refer to the Day of Judgement, and this is also close because Allah Glorified is He says: 'Allah's Commandment has come; therefore do not desire to hasten it…' (an-Nahl: 1). He Glorified is He uses the verb 'has come' in the past tense to indicate certainty and the nearness of its occurrence, for all that is impending is near.

On this day, the Day that is ever drawing nearer: '...the hearts will come up to the throats, choking them as they restrain their agony and anger (kazhimeen)...' (Ghafir: 18). Imagine the heart coming away from its place in the chest, moving out of its confines until it reaches the throat and blocks one's breath because of the intense fear and distress. It is as Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: '...and when [your] eyes became dim and [your] hearts came up to [your] throats, and [when] most conflicting thoughts about Allah passed through your minds' (al-Ahzab: 10).

Allah Glorified is He says 'kazhimeen' (those who restrain their anger). The verb 'kazhm' (to restrain) means that one tries to hide something in something else. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And who restrain anger (kazhimeen) and who pardon the people–and Allah loves the doers of good' (Al-'Imran: 134).

These are levels of progress in the ranks of good deeds. The first of them is restraining one's anger. Better than that is removing anger by pardoning and better than that is ihsan (doing good): '...Allah loves the doers of good (muhsineen)' (Al-'Imran: 134).

Allah Glorified is He then says: '...no loving friend will the evildoers have, or any intercessor who will be heeded' (Ghafir: 18). This is the time when Allah Glorified is He gathers the evildoers together in hell–we seek refuge with Allah Glorified is He from this. These people joined together in this world to disobey Allah Glorified is He and meandered through life following his desires, but now in the Afterlife they flee from each other, and the one who had followers will flee from them. This is because Allah Glorified is He says: ‘On a Day when everyone will [want to] flee from his brother, and from his mother and father, and from his spouse and his children: on that Day, each one of them will have enough concern [of his own] to make him indifferent to the others’ (‘Abasa: 34-37). Similarly, they will not find anyone who can intercede for them or defend them. Allah Glorified is He has clarified that the leaders of the people, the leaders of disbelief and these so-called intercessors, will precede their followers into Hell. When they enter they will find that their leaders had arrived there first, and this will further cut off their hope of being saved and will increase their woes. This is why Allah Glorified is He says of Pharaoh: ‘[And so] he shall go before his people on the Day of Resurrection, having led them [in this world] towards the fire [of the life to come]; and vile was the destination towards which they were led’ (Hud: 98).

In the next world, the evildoer will not find any friends or anyone who can intercede for him. Their friends fled from them because in this world they came together to disobey Allah Glorified is He. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘On that Day, [past] friends will be foes to one another–[all] save the righteous’ (az-Zukhruf: 67), that is, on the Day of Judgement each one will renounce the other, blame him and hate him.

Then Allah says: ‘...nor any intercessor who will be heeded’ (Ghafir: 18), that is, even if someone stood up to intercede for one of these evildoers, he will be ignored because there are conditions for intercession in the next world: Allah must give permission to the intercessor to intercede and Allah Glorified is He must be content with the one for whom the intercessor wants to intercede. Allah Glorified is He will not be content with the intercession for an evildoer and He will not grant permission for this. That is why intercession such as this will not be accepted, and the prospective intercessor will be ignored, for he is asking Allah Glorified is He in Whose Hand is the punishment, to give him what he is asking and pardon the one for whom he wishes to intercede, and how could Allah Glorified is He become subservient to His slave?

يَعۡلَمُ خَآئِنَةَ ٱلۡأَعۡيُنِ وَمَا تُخۡفِي ٱلصُّدُورُ ﴿١٩﴾

God is aware of the most furtive of glances, and of all that hearts conceal [19]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 19)

This means that we should know that Allah's Knowledge is All-Inclusive; He is not unaware of anything, no matter how small it may be. Thus, even if you deceived Allah's creatures in this world and you stole glances at things that were not permissible for you, you should realise that you are not hidden from Him. If the believer were to have full certainty of Allah's All-Inclusive Knowledge of him, his eyes will not be treacherous in this way.

We once(1) saw a judge presiding over a case, being careful to be just in his judgement. He sensed that the witnesses were lying but what could he do given that everything they said agreed with each other? No matter how much he cross-examined them and turned things around to uncover their lies, he found they spoke with one tongue. Perhaps this was because the lawyer had made them memorise the answers. What did he do, then? He became jealous for the truth by which he was to judge; he became furious and said something that shook all the witnesses and made them tell the truth. He said, 'By Allah, even if you deceive all the judges of the world, you will not deceive the Judge of heaven'. They were words that were inspired by Allah, and it shook them to their depths, brought them back to their senses, and made them return to the truth.

Allah Glorified is He also says: '...and of all that the hearts conceal' (Ghafir: 19), that is, He Glorified is He knows the secrets hidden in the hearts, and this is something Allah alone knows.

(1) The story of the astute judge with the false witnesses

وَٱللَّهُ يَقۡضِي بِٱلۡحَقِّۖ وَٱلَّذِينَ يَدۡعُونَ مِن دُونِهِۦ لَا
يَقۡضُونَ بِشَيۡءٍۗ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ هُوَ ٱلسَّمِيعُ ٱلۡبَصِيرُ ٢٠

God will judge with truth, while those they invoke besides Him will not judge at all. God is the All-Hearing, the All-Seeing [20] (The Quran, Ghafir: 20)

The word yaqdi means (He will judge with truth). Allah continues: '...whereas those [beings] whom they invoke beside Him' (Ghafir: 20), that is, the idols and the other things they worshipped instead of Allah: '...will not [be in a position to] judge at all...' (Ghafir: 20), that is, they are not qualified and have no ability to judge. They will not be able to even judge in error.

Allah then says: 'For verily, Allah alone is All-Hearing, All-Seeing' (Ghafir: 20). He hears every word that deviates from His Way, and knows every deed that disagrees with His Path. He witnesses everything. Allah Glorified is He is the Witness, Judge, Jury, and Executioner. The authorities on earth are many, but the authority in the next world is Allah's alone, there is nobody with Him.

After this, Allah Glorified is He asks what is wrong with these disbelievers who resist the call and oppose the Messenger [Muhammad] whom Allah Glorified is He has sent to them as a mercy. Have they not looked to their predecessors among the nations who refused the Message and the punishment and destruction that befell them, the remains of which they can see?

Allah Glorified is He made a record of His Promise when He said: 'For, long ago has our word gone forth unto Our slaves, the Messengers, that, verily, they will certainly be assisted' (as-Saffat: 171-172). We know that man remembers things that are in his favour but forgets things that are against him. Allah Glorified is He however, remembers and records His Promises: 'Behold, it is We Ourselves Who have bestowed from on high, step by step, this Reminder: and, behold, it is We Who shall truly guard it [from all corruption]' (al-Hijr: 9). Allah Glorified is He has guaranteed aid and victory for His Messengers, and He Glorified is He will not say anything and then let reality contradict it. Clearly, victory for the Messengers is the normal way Allah Glorified is He deals with creation. He says:

أَوَلَمْ يَسِيرُوا۟ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ فَيَنظُرُوا۟ كَيْفَ كَانَ عَٰقِبَةُ ٱلَّذِينَ كَانُوا۟ مِن قَبْلِهِمْ ۚ كَانُوا۟ هُمْ أَشَدَّ مِنْهُمْ قُوَّةً وَءَاثَارًا فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ فَأَخَذَهُمُ ٱللَّهُ بِذُنُوبِهِمْ وَمَا كَانَ لَهُم مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ مِن وَاقٍ ﴿٢١﴾

Have they not travelled through the land and seen how those who lived before them met their end? They were stronger than them and made a more impressive mark on the land, yet God destroyed them for their sins – they had no one to defend them against Him [21] (The Quran, Ghafir: 21)

This asks, 'Did they not stop to take a look at the ruins of those nations who preceded them, even though they pass by them in their summer and winter journeys?' Allah Glorified is He says: 'And, verily [to this day] you pass by the remnants of their dwellings at morning-time and by night. Will you not, then, use your mind?' (as-Saffat: 137-138) Did they not see the remnants of the people of Saleh (Shelah), 'Ad, Thamud(1) and others of those who denied the Messengers?

The ruins show how Allah Glorified is He took them to account and the extent of the punishment that befell them in order for us to learn a lesson from them. Know that your end will be as theirs, and that there is no way for you to prevent Allah Glorified is He from such, for these nations whom Allah Glorified is He took to account were more powerful than you and had a greater impact on earth. Are you greater than Iram, the town of pillars, or Pharaoh with his poles? Where are they now? Were they able, with their civilisations, to protect themselves? Their civilisations and their power did not help them one bit before Allah Glorified is He; Allah's punishment came down on them in this world before the punishment of the next, and He gave them no respite.

Allah Glorified is He said to Prophet Muhammad: 'And whether We show you some of what We have promised them or We take you in death, it is to

(1) The title 'Mada'in Saleh' is the name given to the buildings that were the houses of Thamud. It is as mentioned in the Gracious Quran: 'And [likewise] indeed, the people of al-Hijr gave the lie to [Our] Messengers' (al-Hijr: 80). They are to be found 25 km to the north of the City of Medina. They consist of huge boulders of varying sizes that have had palaces carved into them with great precision. There are about 80 of them. Some, however, consider these to the dwellings of the Nabateans and the people of Dad, and not the people of Thamud.

Us they will be returned' (Ghafir: 77), that is, if you do not see what We have promised them of punishment in this world because you died before it happened, you will see their punishment in the next life. It is as Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: 'And we will surely let them taste the lighter punishment before the greater punishment, that perhaps they will repent' (as-Sajda: 21).

Allah Glorified is He wants two things from us when we travel through the land: that we reflect and take admonition, and that we profit and benefit. Thus, travelling through the land is something desirable from the standpoint of faith. That is why Allah Glorified is He says of travel for the sake of reflection: 'Have they, then, never journeyed through the earth, and beheld what happened in the end to those [deniers of the Truth] who lived before their time...' (Ghafir: 21). Of travel for the sake of profit, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say, "Go all over the earth and behold how [wondrously] He [Allah] has created [man] in the first instance..."' (al-'Ankabut: 20), and: 'Behold, those whom the angels gather in death while they are still sinning against themselves. [The angels] will ask, "What was wrong with you?" They will answer, "We were too weak on earth." [The angels] will say, "Was, then, Allah's earth not wide enough for you to forsake the domain of evil?"...' (an-Nisa': 97).

Clearly, there is nothing wrong with combining travelling for reflection and travelling for profit and benefit when one journeys across the world. One need not deprive oneself of reflecting upon what is new in Allah's creation, yet one should not be distracted from this by trade and profit.

There is a point to be made here regarding Allah's saying 'fi al-ard' (literally 'in the earth') which we have drawn from contemporary science. The scholars used to explain this saying as meaning 'on the earth', that is, on the ground upon which we walk. Now we realise that the earth is encompassed by its atmosphere. This air that covers the ground is an essential and necessary element for life on earth. Without it there could not be life on earth, for man cannot do without it for even one breath. Hence, we travel literally 'in the earth', as stated by the Quran which preceded modern science in stating this reality.

When one travels through Allah's earth to reflect upon his creatures one sees great variety one never knew of before: innumerable people, places, crops, and cattle. One sees that the Creator has given each a place appropriate for it.

Each environment has food appropriate for it, which is why you find different crops grow better in some places than others. In one climate bananas proliferate, in another it is potatoes, and in yet another it is wheat.

It is from this that some people have said that when there are many diseases being transmitted from place to place it is a result of people living off food that is not native to their region. The inhabitants of hot climates import food from cold climates and vice versa, and it is from this mixing that diseases spread.

Allah Glorified is He says: '[See] what happened in the end to those [deniers of the Truth] who lived before their time...' (Ghafir: 21), that is, what was the outcome of their denial of the Messengers, their standing in the way of the call to Allah, and their attempts to extinguish His light with their speech? Allah Glorified is He took them, and their power and influence on earth were unable to protect them from Him. Allah explains: 'And they had none to defend them against Allah' (Ghafir: 21), that is, there was no protector who could protect them from Allah, and no guardian to guard them. Their civilisation did not help them in the slightest because when they founded this civilisation, they did not establish laws that protected them.

Allah Glorified is He then tells us why He took them to task as only the Almighty, Who determines all things, can take to task:

ذَٰلِكَ بِأَنَّهُمۡ كَانَت تَّأۡتِيهِمۡ رُسُلُهُم بِٱلۡبَيِّنَٰتِ فَكَفَرُواْ
فَأَخَذَهُمُ ٱللَّهُۚ إِنَّهُۥ قَوِيّٞ شَدِيدُ ٱلۡعِقَابِ ﴿٢٢﴾

Because messengers repeatedly came to them with clear signs and still they rejected them. God destroyed them: He is truly full of strength, severe in punishment [22] (The Quran, Ghafir: 22)

Allah says: 'with clear evidence of the Truth...' (Ghafir: 22), that is, with clear signs and dazzling miracles to indicate the truthfulness of the Messengers. These signs that they were incapable of imitating despite the fact that they fell within their field of their expertise were sufficient proof for them to believe in Allah Glorified is He and the Messenger that He sent to them with guidance. Yet they disbelieved: '...and so Allah took them to task' (Ghafir: 22). The verb akhadhahum ([He] took them to task) indicates that this was done forcefully: '...for verily, He is Powerful, severe in punishment!' (Ghafir: 22)

There can be no doubt that the taking or seizure here is in proportion to the strength of the one who is seizing. When a child seizes something it is not the same as when a youth seizes, and this is not the same as when a man seizes. What, then, do you think if the one seizing is Allah, the Strong, the severe in punishment? If the one seizing is Allah Glorified is He then the one being seized will have no power to be obstinate or resist.

This is why Allah Glorified is He says in another place: '...We took them to task as only the Almighty, Who determines all things, can take to task' (al-Qamar: 42). This is the greatest power. The Almighty is the One Who conquers all and cannot be conquered, and the Omnipotent (Al-Muqtadir) is the One Who can do anything, for whom nothing is too difficult.

Allah tells us some of the stories of the Messengers who were refused and harmed. First, He narrates to us part of the story of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him:

وَلَقَدْ أَرْسَلْنَا مُوسَىٰ بِـَٔايَـٰتِنَا وَسُلْطَـٰنٍ مُّبِينٍ ﴿٢٣﴾ إِلَىٰ فِرْعَوْنَ وَهَـٰمَـٰنَ وَقَـٰرُونَ
فَقَالُوا۟ سَـٰحِرٌ كَذَّابٌ ﴿٢٤﴾ فَلَمَّا جَآءَهُم بِٱلْحَقِّ مِنْ عِندِنَا قَالُوا۟ ٱقْتُلُوٓا۟ أَبْنَآءَ ٱلَّذِينَ
ءَامَنُوا۟ مَعَهُۥ وَٱسْتَحْيُوا۟ نِسَآءَهُمْ ۚ وَمَا كَيْدُ ٱلْكَـٰفِرِينَ إِلَّا فِى ضَلَـٰلٍ ﴿٢٥﴾

We sent Moses with Our signs and clear authority [23]
To Pharaoh, Haman, and Korah and they said, 'Sorcerer!
Liar! [24] When he brought the truth to them from Us, they said, 'Kill the sons of those who believe with him; spare only their women'– the scheming of those who reject the truth can only go wrong [25] (The Quran, Ghafir: 23 - 25)

Allah Glorified is He mentions the story of Prophet Musa peace be upon him here because it is different from the stories of the other prophets by virtue of the fact that while the other prophets came to cure the people of some defects in their beliefs and to take them out of ignorant systems of law, returning them to the straight path, Prophet Musa came to confront a man who claimed divinity and who became very arrogant and tyrannous. Thus, Musa had a more troublesome task. That is why his story is told the most in the Gracious Quran.

Allah's saying: '...Our signs...' (Ghafir: 23), refers to the nine clear signs that Musa peace be upon him was given to assist him in proving the truthfulness of His Message. The first of these was his staff. The staff has a long history and plays important roles in the story of Musa peace be upon him. With it he struck the sea for it to part and for the water to come to a standstill, each side becoming like a huge mountain. With the same staff he struck the mountain from which twelve springs burst forth. Clearly, this was not a question of water and mountains; rather, it is a miracle from the Creator of the water and the Creator of the mountain Who only says to a thing, 'Be!', and it is.

It is because of this that the orientalists have made an issue with the story of Musa. They noted that it occupies the greatest portion among the stories of the prophets and that the Quran went into it in great detail-repeating it, as they claim–especially regarding the staff which is mentioned three times. In reality, however, there is no repetition, only different glimpses of one common event.

In the beginning when Allah Glorified is He gives Musa peace be upon him the staff as a miracle, He asks him about it: '…"Now, what is this in your right hand, O Moses?" He answered, "It is my staff; I lean on it and with it I beat down leaves for my sheep, and [many] other uses have I for it"' (Ta Ha: 17-18).

We mentioned previously that Musa peace be upon him did not reply to the question keeping the reply as short as he was asked because He was being asked by his Lord and he therefore wanted to prolong his speech with Him. He did not just say, 'It is a staff,' or, 'my staff'. When he sensed, however, that he had talked for too long, he gave a summary and said, '...and [many] other uses have I for it' (Ta Ha: 18).

The second time the staff is mentioned is when Allah Glorified is He wanted to train Musa peace be upon him in its usage and let him test it out for himself in order for him to have experience and be ready when the time came to face Pharaoh, the claimant to divinity. Allah says: 'He [Allah] said, "Throw it down, O Musa (Moses)!" So he threw it–and lo! it was a snake, moving rapidly. He said, "Take hold of it and fear not: We shall restore it to its former state"' (Ta Ha: 19-21). This was the purpose of having this trial run for Musa peace be upon him for him not to be afraid of it after seeing it in front of him, alive. In fact, had it remained a staff as it was Musa will not have been frightened of it, and his Lord will not have said to him: '...and fear not...' (Ta Ha: 21).

The final situation was when Musa peace be upon him met with Pharaoh and his sorcerers to confront their sorcery with his staff. He cast it down and it devoured their contrivances, and of this meeting Allah Glorified is He said: 'They [the sorcerers] said, "O Musa (Moses)! Either you throw [your staff first], or we shall be the first to throw". He answered, 'Nay, you throw [first]". And lo! by virtue of their sorcery, their [magic] ropes and staffs seemed to him to be moving rapidly: and Musa (Moses) conceived (awjas) in his heart a fear(1). [But] We said, "Fear not! Verily, it is you who shall prevail!' (Ta Ha: 65-68).

Clearly, there is no repetition in the story of Moses; rather, these are different situations and various instances of the one common occurrence.

Allah Glorified is He says: '...and a manifest authority (sultan)' (Ghafir: 23). The word sultan can mean 'a clear proof' or it can mean 'strength', that is, either the power of proof or the power to prevail. This is what it means when Iblis (Satan) uses it on the Day of Judgement: 'And when everything will have been decided, Iblis (Satan) will say, 'Behold, Allah promised you something that was bound to come true! I, too, made [all manner of] promises to you–but I deceived you. Yet I had no power (sultan) at all over you: I but called you–and you responded to me' (Ibrahim: 22). That is, I had no strong proof to convince you and neither did I have the strength to force you to disobey Allah; rather, you had a choice, I only had to call you and you responded. Allah continues to relate what Iblis said: '...Hence, blame me not, but blame yourselves. It is not for me to respond to your cries, nor for you to respond to mine...' (Ibrahim: 22).

(1) The word 'awjas' means that he became afraid inside himself when he saw the works of the sorcerers. Allah the Glorified and Exalted also says in the story of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: 'He conceived a fear (awjas) of them...' (adh-Dhariyat: 28), that is, he was shocked and frightened (Al-Qamus Al-Qawim 1/321).

Allah Glorified is He then says: '…to Pharaoh, Haman and Qarun (Korah)...' (Ghafir: 24). Indeed, it was Pharaoh who claimed divinity and who was the prime source of trouble, yet Allah Glorified is He mentions Haman, his minister and aide, and Qarun (Korah), the owner of great riches, along with him. The three of them were partners and that is why they also shared in levelling accusations against Musa peace be upon him: '...but they [only] said, "A sorcerer is he, a liar!"' (Ghafir: 24)

Allah then says: 'Now [as for Pharaoh and his followers] when he [Musa] came to them, setting forth the Truth from Us...' (Ghafir: 25), that is, with clear signs: '...they said, "Slay the sons of those who share his beliefs"' (Ghafir: 25). The killing of sons happened twice under Pharaoh; the first time was when Musa (Moses) was a baby and Pharaoh had learnt from his astrologers that his kingdom will be undone at the hands of one of the Children of Israel. Consequently, he took to killing all the small children out of fear of this child who was to be born and who will bring down his dominion.

What is strange about this is that we see the stupidity and heedlessness of Pharaoh in killing the sons of the children of Israel and his keenness to make sure that none of them escaped, to the extent that his men used to search the houses looking for young children.

This situation manifested Pharaoh's stupidity in two ways: first, he killed all these small children although the prophecy said that his kingdom will be undone at the hands of only one of them. Second, when a boy came to him in a strange way, brought to his door inside a basket floating in the water, he inclined towards it, took it in and raised that very child up, completely heedless of its significance.

This situation exemplifies for us Allah's saying: '...and know that Allah intervenes(1) between man and [the desires of] his heart' (al-Anfal: 24). Yes indeed, the hearts are between the two fingers of the All-Merciful, He turns them as He wishes.

(1) Ibn `Abbas said this means, 'He intervenes between the believer and the disbeliever, and between the disbeliever and faith'. As-Suddi said, 'He intervenes between a man and his heart so that he is unable to believe or disbelieve except by His Permission' (Tafsir Ibn Kathir 2/298).

Allah Glorified and Exalted is He then says, '...and spare [only] their women...' (Ghafir: 25) which means kill the boys because they are the cause of apprehension; it is among them that rebels will appear, and among them is he who will bring down Pharaoh's kingdom. As for the women, keep them alive for them to serve us.

This explains to us why the Arabs used to take their women with them if they went out to war–so that they will all have the same end. If they won they all returned home safely, and if they were killed then they will all be killed, and their women will not be left behind to be taken captive and made subservient.

Allah the Most High says: 'But the guile of those deniers of the Truth could not lead to aught but failure' (Ghafir: 25). Yes indeed, this was guile on the part of Pharaoh and his helpers, but did he pull off his plan for the children of Israel? No, instead Allah turned his scheme back upon him and it brought him nothing but failure and loss.

Allah the Most High then says:

يُبَدِّلَ دِينَكُمْ أَوْ أَن يُظْهِرَ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ ٱلْفَسَادَ ﴿٢٦﴾

And Pharaoh said, 'Leave me to kill Moses – let him call upon his Lord! – for I fear he may cause you to change your religion, or spread disorder in the land' [26] (The Quran, Ghafir: 26)

Pharaoh said: 'Leave me to slay Musa (Moses)...' that is, let me kill him, indicating that there were some people who did not want him to kill Musa peace be upon him. If this was not the case, why did he say dharuni (let me, in the plural). Who were these people? They were probably followers of Pharaoh who believed in Musa and what he brought. They wanted to defend Musa in a way that did not arouse Pharaoh's suspicion, and therefore they had to be astute.

This is proof that righteous people can trick people given to evil in order to make good prevail, and that Allah the Most High will help them in that.

They came to Pharaoh and said to him, ‘If you kill Musa, the people will say that you were unable to refute his proofs; that he was right and thus you killed him to gain respite from him. And then they will stand against you’. Among those who defended Musa was a believer from the people of Pharaoh who hid his faith out of fear of Pharaoh’s punishment, but he forwarded a strong defence for Musa, arguing that: ‘If he be a liar, his lie will fall back on him; but if he is a man of Truth, something [of the punishment] whereof he warns you is bound to befall you...’ (Ghafir: 28).

Let us pause here to ponder on Pharaoh’s mockery of Musa*:* ‘And let him invoke his [alleged] Lord...’ (Ghafir: 26) referring to his Lord to whom he prays, for Him to save him. Had he not been ridiculing him he will have said, ‘and let him invoke our Lord’. Allah Glorified is He then says: ‘Behold, I fear lest he causes you to change your religion, or lest he causes corruption to prevail in the land!’ (Ghafir: 26) Glory be to Allah! Look how the people of falsehood invert reality. Pharaoh was afraid that Musa will change the religion of his people, that is, their belief in Pharaoh being their god and worshipping him instead of Allah.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...Or lest he causes corruption to prevail in the land’ (Ghafir: 26). From what will this corruption spring? From having two parties in the society, one party believing Pharaoh to be a god and another party having faith in Musa and his Lord, the True Lord. Therefore, the people will be divided and at odds with one another. The people in the centre of power who benefit from the ‘godhood’ of Pharaoh were not going to keep silent. There is no doubt that there will be a tribulation that, in Pharaoh’s view, will bring about corruption. Next, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَقَالَ مُوسَىٰٓ إِنِّي عُذْتُ بِرَبِّي وَرَبِّكُم مِّن كُلِّ مُتَكَبِّرٍ لَّا يُؤْمِنُ بِيَوْمِ ٱلْحِسَابِ ﴿٢٧﴾

Moses said, ‘I seek refuge with my Lord and yours from every tyrant who refuses to believe in the Day of Reckoning’ [27] (The Quran, Ghafir: 27)

Here Musa peace be upon him reaffirms the Lordship of the True Lord after Pharaoh threatened to kill him: ‘Leave me to slay Musa (Moses)...’ (Ghafir: 26), and mocked his Lord: ‘And let him invoke his [alleged] Lord...’

(Ghafir: 26). Consequently, Musa replied to him saying, inni (indeed), which is a form of emphasis. The phrase: ‘With my Lord… have I indeed found refuge’ is also an affirmation of his servitude to the Might of the Lord Who Pharaoh is mocking. Thus, he did not say, ‘I seek refuge with Allah from your actions’, but he emphasised that Allah is his Lord, and indeed, ‘...your Lord...’ as well.

The phrase: ‘...I [have] found refuge...’ means ‘I have sought shelter with Him and He is fully capable of protecting me and giving me victory’. His saying: ‘...With my Lord ... have I indeed found refuge...’ shows us the importance of seeking refuge with Allah, for when one seeks refuge with Allah the Most High from something that one is not strong enough to deal with he has done the right and most appropriate thing because he has brought to deal with this one who has harmed him, and whom he is unable to repel, One Who is capable of repelling him. That is why Allah the Most High says: ‘Whenever you read this Quran, seek refuge with Allah from Iblis (Satan), the accursed’ (an-Nahl: 98).

Why? Because when you recite the Quran, you interact with it. You are with it in Allah’s Presence. He is speaking to you and you are listening. When you interact with the Quran and ponder over its meanings, you obtain new understandings and new feelings, and this enrages Satan (Iblis), and for this reason he hastens to turn you away from your recitation. This is similar to what happens in prayer, for example; many are those who complain of being distracted in their prayers by the whisperings of the devil.

One will not be surprised by this if he looks at what Allah Glorified is He narrates to us of Satan’s stance towards us: ‘I shall most certainly lie in ambush for them all along your straight way’ (al-A‘raf: 16). Indeed, this is the case. And what path is straighter than that of prayer and the recitation of the Quran? This is why we have said, Satan (Iblis) does not need to go to the wine bars, for example, he only needs to go to the mosque to ruin our prayers and distract us from the path of guidance. This is why Allah has ordered us to seek refuge from him in order for this refuge to be a protection and a fortress for us.

Here Musa peace be upon him says, ‘I seek refuge with Allah from you, O Pharaoh, for Allah is stronger than you and capable of protecting me from your schemes. He is my Lord, that is, the One Who created me and took care of my upbringing, and I rely on Him. He created me by His Power and He protects me by His All-Sustaining Power. Do you not see that every creator preserves his creation and guarantees its maintenance?' Is it not more likely that my Creator will guarantee for me my life that He created? Indeed, this is the case. It is on condition that one says, 'I seek refuge in my Lord'. It was sufficient for Musa to say: 'With my Lord ... have I indeed found refuge ....' This makes us ask why he said: '...as well as your Lord...' (Ghafir: 27). The scholars say it was to emphasise the Lordship of his Lord, and to emphasise his contentment with this Lordship–that is, He is my Lord the Most High and the Lord of others, indeed the Lord of all of you–so that they might say with him, 'Indeed, we have sought refuge with our Lord from Pharaoh and his deeds'. It is as though he wants to gather the forces of faith and goodness, to strengthen himself with a group of believers, so that his supplications will more likely be accepted.

This matter shows us the importance of unity and its spirit in Islam. In our prayers, for instance, we recite from the chapter of al-Fatiha: 'You alone do we worship and to You alone do we turn for aid' (al-Fatiha: 5), using the plural. Why did Allah the Most High not say, 'You alone do I worship; and to You alone do I turn for aid'? It is because the prayer of the group is stronger. Being in a group makes you be present among the righteous. If you are not righteous, you should keep their company in the hope that what came to them of acceptance and reward will come to you. For this reason you should be wary of showing contempt for the pious and the righteous, for perhaps your deeds will be accepted along with them, out of sheer grace.

So the prayer of the group is more likely to be accepted than the prayer of the individual. That is why the Congregational Prayer is better than the prayer of an individual by 27 times (1).

A merchant, for example, sells goods, some of which are good and some are bad. If you take him to task and say that you will not accept a flawed item, he will say to you, ‘It is one deal, with all its good and bad items’. Similarly, in the Congregational Prayer, we hide the flawed amongst the good out of hope that the whole batch will be accepted as one unit.

(1) It is related on the authority of `Abdullah ibn `Umar that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The Congregational Prayer is better than the prayer of the individual by 27 degrees'. It was related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [645] and Muslim in his Sahih [650].

But from what did our master Musa seek refuge? It was: ‘From everyone who, immersed in false pride, does not believe in [the coming of] the Day of Reckoning!’ (Ghafir: 27) Note that this is in the plural, and that there is a description: ‘...from everyone ... immersed in false pride...’ (Ghafir: 27). Nevertheless, he did not name his enemy: Pharaoh, the person in question, the claimant of divinity who threatened to kill him. Why is this? The scholars say that Pharaoh is not mentioned here for two reasons: The first is in order not to place Pharaoh opposite Allah by saying, ‘I seek refuge in Allah from Pharaoh’. Moreover, Pharaoh was not alone, there were others like him with him, and by saying this Musa included them all as he used words that encompass every arrogant person. The second reason is that Musa was taking care here to give his upbringing its due, and not to disrespect the good that Pharaoh had done for him. Thus, he did not name him personally. It is sufficient that he falls under the rubric of this description: ‘...from everyone who, immersed in false pride, does not believe in [the coming of] the Day of Reckoning!’ (Ghafir: 27)

We find that the Gracious Quran treats upbringing like the sibling of birth meaning the son through upbringing is like the son through blood. Allah the Most High says: ‘We have enjoined upon man goodness towards his parents...’ (Luqman: 14). He then mentions the mother and the reason why man should be good to her: ‘His mother bore him by bearing strain upon strain...’ (Luqman: 14). Why does the Quran mention the reason for the mother here?

The scholars say it is because when he is small, a child does not grasp these things; however, at the same time he grasps his father’s merits. Hence, Allah Glorified is He mentions the virtue of the mother because he did not witness it. Allah Glorified is He also says: ‘And say, “O my Lord! Bestow Your Grace upon them, even as they cherished and reared me when I was a child!”’ (al-Isra’: 24) The reasoning behind the supplication here is his upbringing, whether it is for his mother who bore him or his mother who raised him. Whoever raises children other than his own, is entitled to be prayed for with this supplication: ‘And say, “O my Lord! Bestow Thy Grace upon them, even as they cherished and reared me when I was a child!”’ (al-Isra’: 24)

To continue we say, Allah’s saying: ‘...from everyone who, immersed in false pride, does not believe in [the coming of] the Day of Reckoning’ (Ghafir: 27), mentions two evil characteristics. Firstly, he is arrogant, that is, hard-hearted, and if he is hard-hearted, he will not refrain from coercion and tyranny. Next, he does not believe in the Reckoning; he does not fear retribution and does not keep count of the consequences of his actions. There is no hope of rectifying someone like this.

Allah Glorified is He continues:

وَقَالَ رَجُلٞ مُّؤۡمِنٞ مِّنۡ ءَالِ فِرۡعَوۡنَ يَكۡتُمُ إِيمَٰنَهُۥٓ أَتَقۡتُلُونَ رَجُلًا أَن يَقُولَ رَبِّيَ
ٱللَّهُ وَقَدۡ جَآءَكُم بِٱلۡبَيِّنَٰتِ مِن رَّبِّكُمۡۖ وَإِن يَكُ كَٰذِبٗا فَعَلَيۡهِ كَذِبُهُۥۖ وَإِن يَكُ
صَٰدِقٗا يُصِبۡكُم بَعۡضُ ٱلَّذِي يَعِدُكُمۡۖ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يَهۡدِي مَنۡ هُوَ مُسۡرِفٞ كَذَّابٞ ٢٨

A secret believer from Pharaoh’s family said, ‘How can you kill a man just for saying, “My Lord is God”? He has brought you clear signs from your Lord – if he is a liar, on his own head be it – and if he is truthful, then at least some of what he has threatened will happen to you. God does not guide any rebellious, outrageous liar [28] (The Quran, Ghafir: 28)

When Musa peace be upon him sought refuge in his Lord the Most High saying: ‘With my Lord ... have I indeed found refuge...’ (Ghafir: 27), Allah Glorified is He answered his supplication and granted him a safe haven, not by means of a Messenger, a king, or any of his believing followers, but rather by means of a believer among the people of Pharaoh who was hiding his faith out of fear of Pharaoh’s punishment. He stood up to defend Musa, and because of this his argument was clearer and more effective.

But why had this man, ‘concealed his faith’ if he was a believer? The scholars say that such people hid their faith because they did not have the power to defend themselves from tyranny. Their faith stayed in their hearts until they found an opportunity to manifest and declare it. Here we see it manifesting itself on the tongue of a believer, announcing his faith in front of Pharaoh and his tyranny. He is making a request very similar to that of a Messenger, and speaking about Allah's Path as if he himself were a Messenger.

The practice of concealing one's faith has a history and a place in Islam. The meaning of hiding one's faith is that faith manifests itself in one's actions, but one does not actually declare it. It is a desire to keep one's faith a secret between oneself and one's Lord in order for one to speak the Truth openly in front of the people, apparently as a non-believer and thus avoid being harmed.

Faith is an act of the heart that has an effect on all the limbs of the human body. You will find the believer is humble; he responds to the Truth and submits to it. The believer is compassionate, generous, forbearing, and merciful. We see his faith in his behaviour, yet he tries to hide it until the time comes when he can declare his Islam openly and vigorously.

This is why they say that faith is an act of the heart, a secret between the slave and his Lord. There is also an aspect of it which is manifested between the person and the people. And there may be a conflict between these two affairs, his secrecy and his openness, between him and his Lord and between him and the people. One may be a believer between oneself and one's Lord, yet among the people he may or may not show his faith because there is more to faith than just declaring it openly. This is something the Messenger established. How was this?

In the battle of Al-Ahzab (the Confederates), the tribes of Quraysh*,* Ghatafan(1) and the Jews joined forces. In this way, the Jews drew both Quraysh and Ghatafan into war with them against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him because they wanted to take revenge against the Prophet after he defeated them in the battle of Banu Qaynuqa'.(2)

(1) Ghatafan was a large tribe who were descended from Ghatafan ibn Sa`d ibn Qays `Aylan, and from him back to `Adnan. In both the Islamic and pre-Islamic periods, they formed an important bloc among the tribes of Qays whose rule spread throughout the outlying areas of the Arabs. Many of the tribes of Ghatafan moved to Egypt and concentrated in Libya. Some also went to Palestine into the mountains of Nablus and some to Iraq (Wikipedia).

(2) Banu Qaynaqa` were the first of the Jews to break their agreement with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They declared war on him in the period between the battles of Badr and Uhud, and consequently Prophet Muhammad besieged them until they agreed to his terms (Dala'il An-Nubuwwa 3/174). After that, but before=

When Huyay(1) went with Salam ibn Mashkam(2) to Mecca to rouse Quraysh and Ghatfan against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him they said to them, ‘We must stand together, as one block, against Muhammad, because if we leave him he will humiliate us as well as you. You must bolster us with your strength’. Quraysh, knowing that the Jews were people of the Book, said to them, ‘We want to ask you first, is it Muhammad who is on the Truth or us?’

They knew what the stance of the Jews regarding Prophet Muhammad was previously, as they used to wait for a victory against the disbelievers, saying, ‘A prophet is coming, his time is due, and when he comes we will follow him and kill you, just as `Ad and Iram(3) were killed’.

Nevertheless, the Jews said to them, ‘Indeed, you are on the Truth and Muhammad is on falsehood’. They did indeed unite to fight the Messenger

---

= Uhud, came the conflict with Banu Nadir. They refused to make a treaty with Prophet Muhammad, and therefore he fought them until they agreed to leave their houses, taking with them whatever their camels could carry of possessions, even the doors and wood from their houses (Dala’il An-Nubuwwa 3/179).

(1) He was Huyay ibn Akhttab An-Nadari, a fierce and arrogant man from the pre-Islamic period who was known as ‘The master of the city dwellers and the country folk’. He lived into the time of Islam and used to harm the Muslims. They captured him on the day of Qurayza and killed him. He died in 5 AH (626 CE) (A-A`lam by Az-Zirikli 2/292).

(2) Salam ibn Mashkam Al-Qurazi was a Jewish poet who was known as Aba Ghanam. He was the leader of Banu Nadir in his time and the caretaker of their treasures. He was one of those who said that `Uzayr (Ezra) was the son of Allah, and his wife, the Jewess Zaynab bint Al-Harith, was the one who tried to poison Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

(3) Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And whenever there came to them a [new] revelation from Allah, confirming the Truth already in their possession–and [bear in mind that] before then they used to pray for victory over those who were bent on denying the Truth–whenever there came to them something which they recognized [as the Truth], they used to deny it. And Allah’s Curse is on all who deny the Truth’ (al-Baqara: 89). Abu Nu`aym Al-Asbahani related in Dala’il An-Nubuwwa [1/52] on the authority of Ibn ‘Abbas that the Jews were awaiting a victory over the tribes of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj by means of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him before he was sent as a prophet. But when Allah sent the Prophet from among the Arabs, they disbelieved in him and denied what they previously used to say. Consequently, Mu`adh ibn Jabal and Bishr ibn Al-Bara’ said to them, ‘O Jews, fear Allah and enter Islam. You used to await a victory over us by means of Muhammad when we were polytheists. You used to tell us that he was coming and used to describe him as he actually is’. But Salam ibn Mashkam replied, ‘He is not the one we used to tell you about. We know nothing of what he brings’. Hence, Allah Glorified is He revealed the aforementioned verse.

of Allah peace and blessing be upon him and this was the battle of which Allah the Most High said regarding the believers: ‘...and so shaken were they that the Messenger [Muhammad] and the believers with him exclaimed, “When will Allah’s Help come?” Oh, verily, Allah’s Help is [always] near!’ (al-Baqara: 214)

This battle was called the battle of Al-Ahzab (the Confederates), or the battle of Al-Khandaq (the Trench). During it, one of Allah’s soldiers became manifested: ‘...And none can comprehend Your Lord’s soldiers save Him alone...’ (al-Muddaththir: 31). He came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him and said, ‘O Messenger of Allah, my heart has become filled with faith, but no-one knows of it, and I bear witness that you are the Messenger of Allah’.

The man was Nu`aym ibn Mas`ud Al-Ashja`yy(1). Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him replied to him, ‘You are one man, what can a single man do? Yet, conceal your faith and be a double agent for us’ (2). This is the first instance a person’s faith was concealed, and we see from it that hiding one’s beliefs is permissible and that it has a role to play. The man said, ‘But, O Prophet Muhammad, I will have to speak other than the truth!’ (that is, lie).‘Do as you like’, he peace and blessing be upon him replied. (Lying is permissible in Islam only in very limited occasions, like war).

Nu`aym ibn Mas`ud then went to Quraysh and Ghatafan and said to them, ‘You know how close we are and my fondness for you. I bring you advice for me to discharge my duty of fidelity to you. The Jews regret making an enemy of Muhammad and want to give up, but they will not do this without something that will help them when making a treaty with Muhammad. You want to fight against Muhammad with them and believe for sure that they are not going to betray you, Yet, I tell you that they will ask you for seventy men from Quraysh and Ghatafan as hostage, out of fear that you will return to your lands if the war becomes too difficult and leave them to face Muhammad as his enemy'.

(1) He was Nu`aym ibn Mas`ud ibn `Amir Al-Ashja`i, a Companion of considerable intelligence. He came to Prophet Muhammad secretly during the days of Khandaq and the gathering of the Confederates, and hid his Islam. He stirred up trouble between the tribes of Qurayzha, Ghatafan and Quraysh. He lived in Medina and passed away during the caliphate of `Uthman. It is also said that he died on the day of Jumal before `Ali came to Basra. He died around 30 AH (Al-A`lam by Az-Zirikli 8/41).

(2) Al-Abshihi related in his book Al-Mustatraf fi kull Fann Mustazhraf that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to him, ‘Deceive them for us, for indeed war is deception’. It was narrated by At-Tabari in Tahdhib Al-Athar [4/175] and Abu Nu`aym Al-Asbahani in Ma`rifat As-Sahaba (Hadith 5797).

He then went to the Jews and said to them, 'You know how close we are and my fondness for you. I tell you, these people (that is, Quraysh and Ghatafan) are not from your lands and they have a high status in their own lands; they have their own wealth and families. If they sense trouble, they will flee and leave you to face Muhammad. Why do you not request seventy of their men as hostage for you to be sure of them?' When Abu Sufyan came, he said, 'The situation has become unbearable. We have waited too long and the feet and the hooves are all tired; come, O Jews, let us get ready for our task'. They replied, 'This is the Sabbath and we do not fight on the Sabbath. Indeed, we will not fight this man unless you guarantee that you will stay with us until the battle is done. Give us seventy of your men as hostage'. Upon hearing this Abu Sufyan became certain that what Nu`aym had said was true, and he said, 'The only thing for us to do is to return to our lands'. Then he said, 'O people, let each of you look to who is on his right and his left for we are about to say something important'.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him had already sent Hudhayfa into their midst and he was between their ranks, and therefore he turned quickly to the person on his right and asked him, 'Who are you?' and to the one on his left and asked him, 'Who are you?' This was an astute and incisive thing to do on his part, as like this no-one will ask him and thus his true identity will not be uncovered(1).

After that, Abu Sufyan said, 'There remains nothing before us but departure. Let us not get caught in the talons of the Jews. Come, hurry!', and he struck his mount to stand up. It was, however, still tied up, so it broke its cord.

The point here is that Nu`aym ibn Mas`ud concealed his faith from the people for him to be able to say the things he said, even though they were untrue. Yet he did not do this without first seeking permission from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. This is proof that hiding one’s faith is permissible and that it has a role to play.

(1) It was related by As-Suhayli in his book Ar-Rawd Al-Unuf [3/433] in the story of the Confederates and their gathering to raid Medina.

Similarly, there can be no doubt that Al-'Abbas had believed in Prophet Muhammad, although at the time they took the covenant(1) with the Messenger of Allah he had not yet announced his Islam. He went and said, ‘Here is Muhammad being embargoed by his people–if you want to accept him then give him your covenant over such-and-such, but if not, then leave him’. But how could he support the covenant with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him if he was still on the religion of Quraysh?

Thus, he must have been hiding his faith in order for Quraysh not to even dare harm Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him out of deference to his uncle Al-'Abbas. This is why he hid his faith. Hence, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘As for anyone who denies Allah after having once believed–and this, to be sure, does not apply to one who does it under duress while his heart remains true to his faith, but [only to] him who willingly opens up his heart to disbelief: upon all of these [falls] Allah’s Condemnation, and a tremendous suffering awaits them’ (an-Nahl: 106).

At the battle of Khaybar, a Jew named Al-Hajjaj ibn `Allat As-Sulamyi(2) came to Prophet Muhammad and said, ‘O Messenger of Allah, Allah has opened my heart to Islam. I bear witness that there is nothing worthy of worship except Allah and that you are the Messenger of Allah. I am going now to Mecca to collect some wealth I have there and to return some trusts. They will question me, and therefore permit me to speak(1) (deceitfully)'. 'Say whatever you wish', Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him replied.

(1) Al-Bayhaqi related in Dala’il An-Nubuwwa [2/446] on the authority of Ka`b ibn Malik in a long Hadith, ‘At the beginning of the night when we gave our oaths to Prophet Muhammad at Mina, we were with our people. When they were sleeping heavily we snuck away from Quraysh like sand grouses, finally meeting at `Aqaba. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to us with his uncle Al-`Abbas and no-one else. He wanted to attend the affair of his nephew and he was the first to speak. He said, ‘O people of Khazraj, indeed Muhammad has the status with us that you know of. His people and his city are protecting him. We have forbidden him from those who have similar views to ours, and he has chosen to be cut off in favour of you and to what you have called him. If you believe that you will be true to him in your claims, it is up to you to bear the burdens you have taken upon yourselves. But if you fear that you will forsake him, leave him now with his people. Indeed, he is protected by his family and in his own place’.

(2) His full name was Al-Hajjaj ibn `Allat ibn Khalid ibn Thuwayra and he was a Companion. According to his lineage, he was a Salami and then a Fihri, and was known as Abu Kilab. He came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him while he was at Khaybar and entered Islam. He settled in Medina and built a house and a mosque there (Al-Isaba fi ma`rifat As-Sahaba 1/212).

Consequently, Al-Hajjaj Allah be pleased with him went to Quraysh, who said to themselves, 'He must surely have some news'. They asked him, 'Has the disrupter gone to Khaybar?' This refers to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him for they accused him of breaking up families and tribes after becoming a prophet. 'Yes', he replied, 'he was defeated most heinously and his companions were killed. The Jews will take him prisoner and bring him to you for them to do a favour for you which you should remember for the rest of your lives. I have come to collect the money I have left with the people in order to go and buy some captives before they are all sold'. Therefore, they helped him to gather his wealth and assisted him in his tasks.

This news subsequently reached Al-'Abbas, who came to him and asked, 'O Al-Hajjaj, what is this you are saying? 'It is as you have heard', he replied. 'Is it really true?' said Al-'Abbas. 'Will you keep my secret?' said Al-Hajjaj. 'By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, I will, indeed', replied Al-'Abbas. 'Then leave me alone until the people leave', said Al-Hajjaj. He sat for a while longer and then went to him and said, 'By Allah, nothing of the news that has reached you from me came to pass. Verily, I left Muhammad victorious at Khaybar and the groom of Safiyya bint Huyay ibn Akhttab*,* yet I needed a scheme to restore my money from these people. Keep my secret for three days until I escape them and am beyond their reach, then spread it as much as you like'.

After three days, Al-'Abbas took his staff, put on his perfume and went to walk around the Ka'ba. He met one of the people of Quraysh who said to him, 'By Allah, O Abu Fadl*,* this is indeed great forbearance', referring to what had supposedly happened to his nephew.

(1) That is, to say what he needed to in order to deceive the polytheists into letting him take his wealth that he had left with his wife. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him granted him permission to deceive them.

Consequently, Al-'Abbas said to the man, ‘By the One Whom you swore by, this is not forbearance, it is due to the reality of the matter; what your companion told you was the opposite of what really happened. My nephew was victorious over his enemies and he is now the groom of Bint Huyay ibn Akhttab at Khaybar’. ‘Could it be true?’ ‘It is as I said’. ‘That scum has escaped us now, woe to him’.(1)

Clearly, we see that these people concealed their faith for them to give victory to the religion and be among its soldiers. Islam has different types of forces; it has soldiers who are openly visible, soldiers who are hidden, and soldiers for spying on its enemies.

Some of the exegetes(2) said that Allah’s saying: ‘...[he] concealed his faith...’ (Ghafir: 28) meant from Pharaoh’s people, but this is incorrect. The proof of this is that he will speak and let his faith be known, going into details as though he were a Messenger. Were he hiding his faith from Pharaoh’s people, Allah will have said, ‘He concealed (yaktum) his faith from the people of Pharaoh’ because the verb katama (conceal) can take two objects, as in Allah’s saying: ‘...but they shall not [be able to] conceal (la yaktumoon) from Allah anything that has happened’ (an-Nisa’: 42).

What did this believer say, then? He said, ‘...Will you slay a man because he says, “Allah is my Lord”...’ (Ghafir: 28)? Look at the courage of this believer for the sake of the Truth, positing this incredulous question, ‘...Will you slay a man...’, openly in front of Pharaoh: ‘...because he says, “Allah is my Lord”...’, and has committed no offense other than this? He is saying this plainly in the presence of Pharaoh. And do you know who Pharaoh was? He was the one who claimed divinity for himself. He said to his people: ‘I did not know that you could have any deity other than myself...’ (al-Qasas: 38). There can be no doubt that this man’s words, ‘Allah is my Lord’, will enrage him, undermining, as they did, the very foundations of the divinity he claimed.

(1) It was related in the Musnad of Ahmad from the collection of Anas ibn Malik. Al-Bayhaqi also related it in As-Sunnan Al-Kubra [9/151], `Abd Ar-Razzaq in his Musannaf [5/466, Hadith 9771] and Ibn Sa`d in his Tabaqat Al-Kubra [2/108].

(2) This is the opinion that Ibn Kathir inclined towards in this matter

The believer goes on to say: '...when he has indeed brought you clear signs of this Truth from your Lord?...' (Ghafir: 28) That is, he has brought you clear signs and then you want to kill him?! Let us suppose that he is a liar; even then his lies will not harm you because he will be lying about Allah the Most High and he will bear the consequences of these lies: 'And if he be a liar, his lie will fall back on him; but if he is a man of Truth, there will strike you some of what he promises you...' (Ghafir: 28). This means that if he is truthful, you will not be deprived of his good and some of it will come to you. In such a case, why will you kill him? All in all, it will be more cautious not to have him killed.

Does that mean, however, that we should leave any heretic to say whatsoever he likes and speak about matters of religion, not preventing him therefrom relying upon the verse: 'And if he be a liar, his lie will fall back on him...'? No, this is not the case; rather, we should infer a sentence here. We should say, prevent him from speaking but do not kill him. We hear much of heretics these days who delve into matters of Allah's Religion. What are we to do? Do we leave them and say, 'Their lies will fall back on them'? No, this is not possible; rather, it is incumbent upon us to oppose and prevent them from this foolish talk and restrain them in order that they do not say things that harm Allah's Religion.

Similarly, this believer from Pharaoh's people defended Musa peace be upon him. It is as though he wants to preserve the proof of the Truth, as perhaps there will be those who will come later and listen to him, and give him victory.

The Lord Glorified is He then affirms the following reality: '... for verily, Allah will not grace with His Guidance one who has wasted his own self by lying [about Him]' (Ghafir: 28). This speech is insinuating and could be considered to be an insult to Pharaoh. The Lord the Most High does not let anybody lie about Him without exposing his lies. Why? It is because not burying these lies will result in things that Allah did not reveal being included in the Divine Revelation; but the Divine Revelation is too pure for that. That is why we see that whenever someone claims prophethood, his affair is exposed and the people will come to know of his lies. This is because it is not right for a liar to claim prophethood and Allah does not expose him. This is understood from Allah's Promise: ‘Behold, We shall indeed help Our Messengers and those who have believed ... in the life of this world...’ (Ghafir: 51), and: ‘… that, verily, Our hosts–they indeed–will [in the end] be victorious!’ (as-Saffat: 173)

يَٰقَوۡمِ لَكُمُ ٱلۡمُلۡكُ ٱلۡيَوۡمَ ظَٰهِرِينَ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ فَمَن يَنصُرُنَا مِنۢ بَأۡسِ ٱللَّهِ إِن
جَآءَنَاۚ قَالَ فِرۡعَوۡنُ مَآ أُرِيكُمۡ إِلَّا مَآ أَرَىٰ وَمَآ أَهۡدِيكُمۡ إِلَّا سَبِيلَ ٱلرَّشَادِ ٢٩

My people, as masters in the land you have the power today, but who will help us against God’s might if it comes upon us?’
But Pharaoh said, ‘I have told you what I think; I am guiding you along the right path’ [29] (The Quran, Ghafir: 29)

Allah’s saying: ‘O my people! Yours is the dominion today...’ is quoting the believer who is advising his people. Indeed, they did have the dominion–the dominion of Pharaoh, his tyranny, his whips (different signs of strength) and his claims to divinity, etc. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Most eminent are you on earth...’ which means victorious and empowered over others; but beware because this situation is temporary, it will not last–it is restricted temporally: ‘Yours is the dominion today...’.

It is as though he is saying to them, ‘Beware of letting this dominion slip from your grasp’, for perhaps this man, that is, Musa, is truthful, and will gather helpers and followers around him and put an end to your dominion. Seek to prolong it then, even if it is just the misguidance that you are currently upon, and do not enter into a conflict the outcome of which you cannot guarantee: ‘But who will rescue us from Allah’s punishment, once it befalls us?’ No one will because Allah’s revenge and punishment when aiding His Messengers is a punishment that cannot be averted. It will necessarily destroy any opponents, so be warned. This is how the believer speaks with words of faith that are firm in his heart. He tells his people nothing but the total Truth.

Here, Pharaoh must stand up and try to take control of matters for his own ends: ‘Pharaoh said, “I just want to make you see what I myself see; and I will never make you follow any path but that of rectitude!’’ (Ghafir: 29) Notice how obsessive he is when he speaks, saying: ‘I just want to make you see what I myself see...', and the lie in his saying: '...and I will never make you follow any path but that of rectitude!'

Yet Pharaoh's interjection does not stop the man from advising his people, nor from continuing his summons.

وَقَالَ ٱلَّذِىٓ ءَامَنَ يَٰقَوْمِ إِنِّىٓ أَخَافُ عَلَيْكُم مِّثْلَ يَوْمِ ٱلْأَحْزَابِ ﴿٣٠﴾
مِثْلَ دَأْبِ قَوْمِ نُوحٍ وَعَادٍ وَثَمُودَ وَٱلَّذِينَ مِنۢ بَعْدِهِمْ ۚ وَمَا ٱللَّهُ يُرِيدُ ظُلْمًا لِّلْعِبَادِ ﴿٣١﴾

The believer said, 'My people, I fear your fate will be the fate of those others who opposed [their prophets]: [30] the fate of the people of Noah, 'Ad, Thamud, and those who came after them – God never wills injustice on His creatures [31] (The Quran, Ghafir: 30 - 31)

Here, the believer continues his advice to his people; Pharaoh's interjection has neither frightened him nor prevented him from his call. He says: '...O my people! Verily, I fear for you the like of the day that befell those others who were leagued together [against Allah's Truth] (yawm al-ahzab)' (Ghafir: 30) meaning even if you are in eminence upon the earth and dominion is yours, you are not more eminent than those who preceded you in the line of prophets, starting from Nuh , then 'Ad, Thamud and the others who came after them: 'The like of what happened to Nuh's (Noah's) people, and to [the tribes of] 'Ad and Thamud and those who came after them! But Allah does not will any wrong for His creatures' (Ghafir: 31).

Allah Glorified is He has shown us amazing things regarding those who denied the Messengers: 'For every one of them did We take to task for his sin. And so, upon some of them We let loose a deadly storm wind; and some of them were overtaken by a [sudden] blast; and some of them We caused to be swallowed by the earth; and some of them We caused to drown. And it was not Allah who wronged them, but it was they who had wronged themselves' (al-'Ankabut: 40).

Therefore, it is upon you to take a lesson from those who preceded you in denial, especially considering the fact that you can see their ruins which show you that they were more powerful than you and more influential on earth. Yet despite that, their power did not benefit them, and their influence did not avert Allah's punishment when it came upon them. Allah Glorified is He did not preserve these ruins except that they might be a reminder for those who came after them: 'And verily, [to this day] you pass by the remnants of their dwellings at morning-time, and by night. Will you not, then, use your reason?' (as-Saffat: 137-138)

Had their ruins been completely obliterated there will not have been any actual proof. The persistence of these ruins until today shows us that the people who built these civilisations and left these ruins were unable to protect them despite the fact that they were stronger than you, more influential on earth, and reigned over more of it than you. Therefore, given that this actually happened and you can see it with your own eyes, accept what the Messenger says and the reality in front of you in the world.

We notice that the word yawm (day) comes in the singular here, and that the word al-ahzab (those who were leagued together) is in the plural. Allah Glorified is He did not say 'ayyam al-ahzab' (the days of those who were leagued together). The word 'hizb' is singular for 'ahzab', and refers to a group who deny and oppose a Messenger. Hence, there was a group who opposed Nuh, a group who opposed Hud (Eber) a group who opposed Saleh (Shelah), etc.

Clearly, the days spoken of here are numerous, but despite this Allah the Most High says: 'The like of the day that befell those others who were leagued together [against Allah's Truth]' (Ghafir: 30). Allah spoke of one day yet made the groups that were leagued together plural. How is this the case? It is because what happens is effectively one thing, the same for all even if there are numerous leagues and numerous Messengers, it is still 'yawm al-ahzab' in the singular, not in the plural. This is because if we were to say it in the plural, it will mean that one day had one reason for the punishment, while another day had another reason, etc. But the reason was the same in all instances–their denial of the Lord's Creed and Law for creation.

Allah Glorified is He then goes on to expand upon what was summarised in the word 'al-ahzab' (those who were leagued together): 'the like of what happened to Nuh's (Noah's) people and to [the tribes of] 'Ad and Thamud and those who came after them! But Allah does not will any wrong for His creatures' (Ghafir: 31). This means that Allah Glorified is He did not take them to task as He did out of oppression. He calls them His 'creatures', that is to say, how could He oppress them when they are His creation and His slaves? He merely recompensed them in proportion to their deeds and their denial of their Messengers for them to be an enduring warning in the world for anyone who opposes the Path of the Lord Glorified is He.

وَيَٰقَوۡمِ إِنِّيٓ أَخَافُ عَلَيۡكُمۡ يَوۡمَ ٱلتَّنَادِ ﴿٣٢﴾
يَوۡمَ تُوَلُّونَ مُدۡبِرِينَ مَا لَكُم مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ مِنۡ عَاصِمٖۗ وَمَن يُضۡلِلِ ٱللَّهُ فَمَا لَهُۥ مِنۡ هَادٖ ﴿٣٣﴾

My people, I fear for you on the Day you will cry out to one another [32] The Day you will turn tail and flee with no one to defend you from God! Whoever God leaves to stray will have no one to guide him [33] (The Quran, Ghafir: 32 - 33)

The 'yawm al-ahzab' (the day that befell those who were leagued together) was in this world the 'yawm at-tanad' (the day of calling to one another), however, is the Day of Judgement. As such, it seems that this believer first warned them by means of 'yawm al-ahzab' of the troubles that may come upon them in this world, and then he warned them of the day of recompense, the Day of Judgement, saying: 'And, O my people, I fear for you [the coming of] that Day of [Judgment–the Day when you will be] calling to one another [in distress]' (Ghafir: 32). The word 'tanad' signifies give-and-take, meaning, you call me and I call you. This mutual calling on the Day of Judgement will take a number of forms. Allah the Most High says, '[But] one Day We shall summon all human beings [and judge them] according to the conscious disposition which governed their deeds [in life]...' (al-Isra': 71). This is the first call. It will be said, 'O people of Muhammad, O people of 'Isa (Jesus), O people of Musa (Moses)...etc., or perhaps they will call out to each other.

The Lord Glorified is He mentions several instances of people calling out. He Glorified is He says: 'And the inmates of paradise will call out to the inmates of the fire, "Now we have found that what our Lord promised us has come true; have you, too, found that what your Lord promised you has come true”’ (al-A‘raf: 44) And: ‘And the inmates of the fire will call out to the inmates of paradise, “Pour some water upon us, or some of the sustenance [of paradise] which Allah has provided for you!”...’ (al-A‘raf: 50). And: ‘…they who [in life] had possessed this faculty of discernment (ashab al-a`raf) will call out to those whom they recognize by their marks...’ (al-A‘raf: 48). The ‘ashab al-a`raf’ are a group of people whose good deeds and bad deeds were equal and did not enter paradise, yet nevertheless they gloat over the disbelievers.

On the other hand, the word at-tanad may not refer to people calling each other but may be derived from the verb nadda, meaning ‘to run away and flee’. Hence, ‘yawm at-tanad’ means the day when you will flee from me and I will flee from you. This is like Allah’s saying: ‘On a Day when everyone will [want to] flee from his brother, and from his mother and father, and from his spouse and his children’ (‘Abasa: 34-36). The meaning here is that he flees from them and they flee from him. Each one flees from the other because he is worried about himself.

But what did this believer intend with this speech? He wanted to tell them that even if you help one another in falsehood in this world, you should realise that in the Afterlife you will flee from each other: ‘the Day when you will [wish to] turn your backs and flee...’ (Ghafir: 33).

Consider the great style of the structure of the Quranic phrase here. The Quran sometimes uses a word that could have more than one meaning. When the Quran uses a word that refers to two different meanings at the same time, these two meanings are appropriate for the verses in which the word is mentioned. Here, for example, ‘yawm at-tanad’ gives the meaning of ‘calling to one another’, and ‘the Day when you will [wish to] turn your backs and flee' gives the meaning of fleeing from one another, which is another meaning of ‘at-tanad’. Hence, the two meanings of the word ‘at-tanad’ are mentioned.

Another example of this is found in the chapter of ar-Rahman in Allah’s saying: ‘[At His behest] the sun and the moon run their appointed courses; [before Him] prostrate the stars (an-najm) and the trees’ (ar-Rahman: 5-6). The sun and the moon are heavenly creations while the tree is earthly creation; but between the two is the word ‘an-najm’ which has two meanings.

One, the first that springs to mind, is that it refers to a heavenly body (a star) like the sun and the moon. The other meaning is that it refers to a plant that has no stem, and thus it is similar to a tree.

Allah the Glorified and Exalted then says in the verse under discussion: '...having none to defend you against Allah: for he whom Allah lets go astray can never find any guide' (Ghafir: 33). This means that no one can protect you from Allah or stave off His punishment if it should come upon you. And: '...For he whom Allah lets go astray can never find any guide' (Ghafir: 33) means no one can guide someone whom Allah has judged to be misguided. Why? Because Allah Glorified is He will assist him and establish him in his misguidance

For the same reason, we say that if the slave of Allah loves something, Allah the Most High will say to his slave, 'Do you love it my slave? Then I shall test you by it'. An example of this is one who has a loved one who has died and as a result he went into deep mourning, taking it to extremes and wallowing in it. For that reason, Allah Glorified is He says to him, 'Do you enjoy the sorrow and revel in it? Then I will give you more of it–whenever it wanes I will renew it for you'.

That is why the people of knowledge say, 'Close the gates of sorrow with the nails of contentment'. If you befriend sorrow and revel in it, Allah will prolong it for you. This is because He is your Lord and the one in charge of your affairs. He gives everyone what he desires. Even the disbeliever who loves disbelief, Allah the Most High has promised him that He will help him in it. That is why He seals his heart in order for no faith to enter it and for denial to not leave it.

The believer from the people of Pharaoh continues to advise his people, saying(1):

(1) Al-Qurtubi says in his Exegesis [8/5961] that this speech is that of Musa to his people, but he also says, 'And it is said that it is a continuation of the admonition of the believer from the people of Pharaoh, speaking of their long-standing recalcitrance in the face of the prophets'.

وَلَقَدْ جَآءَكُمْ يُوسُفُ مِن قَبْلُ بِٱلْبَيِّنَٰتِ فَمَا زِلْتُمْ فِى شَكٍّ مِّمَّا
جَآءَكُم بِهِۦ ۖ حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَا هَلَكَ قُلْتُمْ لَن يَبْعَثَ ٱللَّهُ مِنۢ بَعْدِهِۦ
رَسُولًا ۚ كَذَٰلِكَ يُضِلُّ ٱللَّهُ مَنْ هُوَ مُسْرِفٌ مُّرْتَابٌ ﴿٣٤﴾

Joseph came to you before with clear signs, but you never ceased to doubt the message he brought you. When he died, you said, “God will not send another messenger.”’ In this way God leaves the doubting rebels to stray [34]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 34)

When Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him came there was no pharaoh in Egypt, rather, there was a king known as Al-`Aziz. That is why when you read the story of Yusuf (Joseph), you find no mention of Pharaoh, as opposed to the story of Musa. When the successive events of history were uncovered and scholars managed to align certain events with the times in which they occurred, they discovered that Yusuf (Joseph) lived in the time of the shepherd kings, the Hyksos. When these came to Egypt, they defeated the pharaohs, removed them from power, and made themselves kings. That is why Allah Glorified is He says in the story of Yusuf: ‘And the King said...’ (Yusuf: 43)–He did not say, ‘Pharaoh’. When the pharaohs restored the rule of Egypt, they took to oppressing the children of Israel because they used to support the kings and fight for them.

Allah the Most High mentions the believer saying: ‘...with all evidence of the Truth...’ (Ghafir: 34) which refers to clear signs indicating the truthfulness of his being a Messenger of Allah. Allah then says: ‘...But you never ceased to throw doubt on [the Message] that he brought you...’ (Ghafir: 34). This means you were not convinced of his being a Messenger(1): ‘...so much so that when he died, you said, “Allah will never send any Messenger after him!”...’ (Ghafir: 34). They said this because they denied the prophecy of Yusuf and were hypocrites. Allah Glorified is He then says: ‘In this way Allah lets go astray such as waste their own selves...’ that is, by overstepping the boundaries: ‘...by throwing suspicion [on His revelations]’ (Ghafir: 34) which means doubting and denying the Messengers and their Messages.

(1) Ibn Kathir mentioned a sidenote in his Exegesis [4/79] that the Egyptians remained doubtful of the revelation that Yusuf brought them. He said, ‘Yusuf was a Messenger who used to call his people to Allah to uphold justice, but they only obeyed him because he was a minister and had worldly authority’.

ٱلَّذِينَ يُجَٰدِلُونَ فِيٓ ءَايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ بِغَيۡرِ سُلۡطَٰنٍ أَتَىٰهُمۡۖ كَبُرَ مَقۡتًا عِندَ ٱللَّهِ
وَعِندَ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْۚ كَذَٰلِكَ يَطۡبَعُ ٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ قَلۡبِ مُتَكَبِّرٖ جَبَّارٖ ﴿٣٥﴾

Those who dispute God’s messages, with no authority given to them, are doing something that is loathed by God and by those who believe. In this way God seals up the heart of every arrogant tyrant [35] (The Quran, Ghafir: 35)

Is there some dispute about Allah that has evidence ‘sultan’ to support it? The scholars say that yes there is. The dispute in question here is about Allah (fi Allah), which means about Allah’s Commandments to us to do things or the opposite, not do to things. We have said previously that Allah’s signs are of three kinds: signs in creation that show the Absolute Power of The Creator, and signs that affirm the truthfulness of the Messengers in their conveying from Allah, referring to their miracles, and the verses of the Quran that bear Allah’s Rulings. We can ask about which of these types they were disputing.

First, they disputed about the miracles saying that they were sorcery. The refutation of this claim is simple. We will say to them, if he cast a spell on those who believed in him, why did he not cast a spell on you too in order for you to believe in him and then the matter will be finished?

Similarly, they disputed about the verses bearing Allah’s Rulings. Why? Because every ruling that Allah Glorified is He reveals to His slaves forbids the oppression of one generation by another or one individual by another, and this contradicts with the interests of the people who have earthly power and cause tyranny. Allah the Most High explains: ‘As for that [happy] life in the hereafter, We grant it [only] to those who do not seek to exalt themselves on earth, nor yet to spread corruption: for the future belongs to the Allah-conscious’ (al-Qasas: 83).

As for the signs in creation which affirm the Power of the Creator, such as the sun, the moon, the stars, and others, there is no room for dispute here. That is why they did not dispute about them.

Allah Glorified is He continues by saying: '...exceedingly loathsome...'; this arguing over Allah's signs without right is repulsive and Allah hates it most vigorously. Similarly, the believers themselves who care for Allah's Religion and want to make faith strong hate this type of arguing.

Next Allah Glorified is He says: '...It is in this way that Allah sets a seal (yatba') on every arrogant, self-exalting heart' (Ghafir: 35). The word 'yatba`' means He seals the heart. The word 'arrogant' refers to anyone who considers himself great and claims such for himself without having the necessary requirements to be great. He considers himself great but he lacks the proof required for greatness. There is a Qudsi Hadith that clarifies this matter; the society of believers is divided into twelve types: six of them are loved: three at a high level and three at a lower level and six are detestable: three more and three less. Let us look and see in which group the arrogant falls:

Allah Glorified is He says in the Qudsi Hadith, 'I love three, yet My love for three others is greater: I love the poor humble man, yet My love for the rich humble man is greater. I love the obedient old man, yet My love for the obedient young man is greater. And I love the generous rich man, yet My love for the generous poor man is greater. Moreover, I loathe three, yet My loathing for three others is greater: I loathe the rich arrogant man, yet My loathing for the poor arrogant man is greater. I loathe the disobedient young man, yet my loathing for the disobedient old man is greater. And I loathe the miserly poor man, yet my loathing for the miserly rich man is greater'.(1)

Thus, we see in light of this Hadith that in the society of the believers the rich man should be humble, the poor man generous, and the youth obedient.

---

(1) Abu Layth As-Samarqandi related something similar to this in his book Tanbih Al-Ghafileen in the nineteenth chapter which deals with envy and its prohibition (page 58 of the Azhari manuscript, No. 307071). He related it using the word 'yuqal' (it is said), indicating the weakness of the Hadith, and he does not mention a chain of narrators or any authority for it. Its wording is, 'Indeed, Allah loathes three, yet His loathing for three others is greater: He loathes the sinner, yet His loathing for the elderly sinner is greater. He loathes the miserly man, yet His loathing for the miserly rich man is greater. And He loathes the arrogant man, yet His loathing for the arrogant poor man is greater. Moreover, He loves three, yet His love for three others is greater: He loves the pious, yet His love for the pious youth is greater. He loves the generous man, yet His love for the generous poor man is greater. And He loves the humble, yet His love for the humble rich man is greater'.

This is how the best and most noble society should be. After that, the next level in society is that the poor man is humble, the rich man generous and the elders obedient.

To continue, we said that the arrogant man is the one who considers himself great but without basis. But what if he has a basis for his claims? To this we will reply that if he does have a basis for considering himself great he is still lacking in that he prides himself on something that is not basically his– something that can be taken away from him. Someone may pride themselves on their health, yet Allah may take it away for it is an incidental quality that can be removed. Furthermore, when the arrogant man sees someone who is greater than him, his arrogance diminishes. And were he to see the Greatness of his Lord the Most High with his inner sight, he will not consider himself great at all.

Allah Glorified is He says:

وَقَالَ فِرْعَوْنُ يَٰهَٰمَٰنُ ٱبْنِ لِى صَرْحًا لَّعَلِّىٓ أَبْلُغُ ٱلْأَسْبَٰبَ ﴿٣٦﴾ أَسْبَٰبَ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ
فَأَطَّلِعَ إِلَىٰٓ إِلَٰهِ مُوسَىٰ وَإِنِّى لَأَظُنُّهُۥ كَٰذِبًا ۚ وَكَذَٰلِكَ زُيِّنَ لِفِرْعَوْنَ سُوٓءُ عَمَلِهِۦ
وَصُدَّ عَنِ ٱلسَّبِيلِ ۚ وَمَا كَيْدُ فِرْعَوْنَ إِلَّا فِى تَبَابٍ ﴿٣٧﴾

Pharaoh said, 'Haman, build me a tall tower so that I may reach the ropes that lead [36] To the heavens to look for this God of Moses. I am convinced that he is lying.' In this way the evil of Pharaoh's deed was made alluring to him and he was barred from the right path – his scheming led only to ruin [37] (The Quran, Ghafir: 36 - 37)

Pharaoh is commanding his minister and helper Haman to build a tall building for him to go up it and perhaps see the God to Whom Musa calls in his worship. Clearly, he seems to think that this tower will help him to see Allah, but by Allah, the god whom one can see from a tower is no god at all. Then Allah says: '...And thus was made alluring in Pharaoh's eyes the evil of his own deeds, and so he was barred from the path [of Truth]: and Pharaoh's guile did not lead to aught but ruin' (Ghafir: 37), referring to misguidance and loss. He did not remain as he was, but continued to raise himself up until Allah the Most High laid bare his case on the day he was drowned.

وَقَالَ ٱلَّذِىٓ ءَامَنَ يَٰقَوْمِ ٱتَّبِعُونِ أَهْدِكُمْ سَبِيلَ ٱلرَّشَادِ ﴿٣٨﴾
يَٰقَوْمِ إِنَّمَا هَٰذِهِ ٱلْحَيَوٰةُ ٱلدُّنْيَا مَتَٰعٌ وَإِنَّ ٱلْءَاخِرَةَ هِىَ دَارُ ٱلْقَرَارِ ﴿٣٩﴾

The believer said, ‘My people, follow me! I will guide you to the right path [38] My people, the life of this world is only a brief enjoyment; it is the Hereafter that is the lasting home [39]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 38 - 39)

This is the speech of the believer from among the people of Pharaoh. He is preaching his people as if he were a prophet. What kept him silent regarding Pharaoh until, in his misguidance, Pharaoh reached the point of claiming divinity? This falls under the rubric of the saying, ‘The Truth is victorious, yet there is a time appropriate for it’. The Lord the Most High has quoted the words of this believer, so it is as if the Lord the Most High Himself is speaking. That is why no one objected, because no one objects to the inspiration of the Most Merciful; only the speech of men can be challenged.

This is why, when the Lord Glorified is He says: ‘And so, [when he was born] We inspired to the mother of Musa (Moses), ‘Suckle him [for a time] and then, when you have cause to fear for him, cast him into the river and have no fear and do not grieve...’ (al-Qasas: 7), she did not oppose this idea. Who could say to a woman that if she fears for her child she (1) should cast him into the river? By Allah, if someone other than the Lord Glorified is He were to say this, she will refuse, but she accepted and did not decline. This is because the inspiration of the Most Merciful is not to be refused and not to be challenged. Had this not been the case, she will have said, ‘Should I save him from a probable death to have a certain death?’

Similarly, it is no wonder that this believer should say this speech openly within ear of Pharaoh, and yet despite this the believer was not opposed.

Allah Glorified is He continues to relate what the believer said: ‘O my people! This worldly life is but a brief enjoyment, whereas, behold, the life to come is the home abiding’ (Ghafir: 39). This verse directs us to the fact that every man must have a purpose. The condition of this purpose is not to be followed by another purpose; if it has another purpose after it, then it is not a true purpose–rather, it is a stage on the way to the ultimate goal. An example of this is a child whom one teaches for him to go to preparatory school. Is preparatory school his ultimate goal? No, it is just a stage to take him to the next level which is secondary school. Similarly, secondary school is a stage taking one on to what follows it. Therefore, as long as there is something after one objective, this objective is not the ultimate goal. The ultimate goal is that which is not followed by anything else. This is why the believer is saying to them, 'Verily, this world and all that is in it is a provision, a mere provision. It is not the ultimate goal–the real goal is the Afterlife'.

(1) She is Musa’s mother.

If one reflects, he will see that man has an expected life span in this world, but his end is not known; Allah the Most High has kept it obscure. But this uncertainty in this reality results in it being very clear because by hiding the time and place of death, Allah the Most High has forced us to always be wary of it, waiting for it at any moment and in any place. For this reason, one of the scholars (1) said, 'Death is an arrow that has been thrown; it is on its way to you, and your life is only as long as its [i.e. the arrow's] journey to you'.

When you reflect upon the creation around you, you find that the Creator has made a harmonious world to serve you: the sun, the moon, the stars, the air, the water, the plants, etc. Look, O you for whom all these things were created, how you disappear and they remain. You die but the sun stays as it is; the moon, the stars, the air, the water, nothing changes. Even the water that one imagines to be used up, it is as it was since Allah Glorified is He created the world, it neither increases nor decreases.

The water that you take from creation during your life span passes out of you once again as sweat and excretions. Even that which remains in us after death will be sucked out by the earth. The same is true of a rose, for example, and all other things. This means the world is a changing yet united phenomenon.

Still, is it reasonable that the life of the servant is longer than that of the one it is serving? That I die and that the sun that was created for my sake and is there for my service remains? Yes, in order for you to realise that your servant has a longer life than you do in this world, even though you are ennobled and served. Hence, there must be some other life for me that is appropriate to this ennoblement, a life that continues after these creations have faded away; when the sun, moon and stars are all gone, yet I remain. And this can only be the Afterlife: '...on the Day when the earth shall be changed into another earth, as shall be the heavens, and when [all men] shall appear before Allah, The One Who holds absolute sway over all that exists' (Ibrahim: 48).

(1) This is one of the sayings of `Abdullah ibn Al-Mu`tazz. It was ascribed to him by Al-Husari Al-Qayrawani in his book Zahr Al-Adab wa Thamr Al-Albab, and Abu Mansur Ath-Tha`alabi in Al-I`jaz wa Al-Ijaz. Its wording is, 'Death is an arrow flying towards you. Your life is as long as its [i. e. the arrow's] journey towards you'.

The believer, however, must acknowledge this day and believe in it for him to be actually ennobled and be the one that lives longer. Even death will die and you will remain in the Afterlife, everlasting. No blessing will pass you by, and death will never come to you again.

This is why the Lord Glorified is He wants us to look to this goal, he does not want us to look under our feet and live only for the moment we are in now. The ultimate goal for every believer is the Afterlife. This is because there is nothing that comes after it: 'Behold, the life in the hereafter is indeed the only [true] life (al-hayawan): if they but knew this!' (al-'Ankabut: 64) The word 'al-hayawan' is an emphatic form of the word 'hayah' meaning life; that is, it is the true life.

In this verse, the believer says: 'My people, the life of this world is only a brief enjoyment; it is the Hereafter that is the lasting home' (Ghafir: 39). It is the residence from which one will not be turned out, and therefore we should be prepared for it.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

مَنْ عَمِلَ سَيِّئَةً فَلَا يُجْزَىٰٓ إِلَّا مِثْلَهَا ۖ وَمَنْ عَمِلَ صَٰلِحًا مِّن ذَكَرٍ أَوْ أُنثَىٰ
وَهُوَ مُؤْمِنٌ فَأُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ يَدْخُلُونَ ٱلْجَنَّةَ يُرْزَقُونَ فِيهَا بِغَيْرِ حِسَابٍ ﴿٤٠﴾

Whoever does evil will be repaid with its like; whoever does good and believes, be it a man or a woman, will enter Paradise and be provided for without measure[40]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 40)

As long as the Afterlife is the place of permanent residence, the return must be to Allah for each one to be rewarded according to his deeds. He is not a tyrant, rather, He is merciful; He rewards an evil deed with its like or forgives it, and He multiplies the reward of good deeds many times.

We should reflect on Allah’s saying: ‘...and believes...’ (Ghafir: 40). This condition does not prevent a non-Muslim from doing good deeds. Allah Glorified is He clarifies this matter in His saying: ‘Whoever desires the harvest of the Hereafter–We increase for him in his harvest. And whoever desires the harvest of this world–We give him thereof, but he has no share in the Hereafter’ (ash-Shura: 20).

When the disbeliever does a good deed, he takes his reward for it in this world and he has no reward for it in the Hereafter. In this worldly life, he gains repute, renown, and prestige among men, and gains his reward in the form of respect and honour, as statues of them are made to perpetuate their memory.

They receive their reward in this worldly life, and that is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘But those who disbelieved–their deeds are like a mirage in a lowland which a thirsty one thinks is water until, when he comes to it, he finds it is nothing; but finds Allah before Him, and He will pay him in full his due. And Allah is swift in taking account’ (an-Nur: 39).

Reflect on Allah’s saying: ‘…finds Allah before Him...’ (an-Nur: 39). He is surprised because it did not occur to him in this worldly life, and he did nothing for his Lord at all. It is well known that a person takes his pay from the one for whom he works.

We were asked about this point in San Francisco, ‘Does the disbeliever lose the reward for any good he does in this world?’ I asked in return, ‘Did he do this good for Allah or for humanity and its progress?’ They said, ‘He did it to serve humanity and better it’. Hence, I replied, ‘Then let him take his reward from people, as he gains fame, renown and the perpetuation of his name’. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And We will regard what they have done of deeds and make them as dust, dispersed’ (al-Furqan: 23).

We benefit from the work of the disbelievers who have strove to improve the society with their works, discoveries, and inventions. In fact, we harness them in serving faith and calling people to Allah. For example, the microphone and recorder are the fruits of their work, but they will not receive any share from their reward. They will not receive rewards in the Hereafter.

Allah Glorified is He refers to people like this, saying: ‘We will show them Our signs in the horizons...’ (Fussilat: 53). They live a difficult and ascetic life that makes them dedicate themselves to research and study in order to discover Allah’s Secrets and Signs in the universe. At the end, people benefit from their works, but they are deprived of their rewards.

Allah the Most High says: ‘...will enter Paradise and be provided for (yurzaqoon) without measure’ (Ghafir: 40). The word ‘rizq’ (provision, which comes from ‘yurzaqoon’) refers to everything that a man benefits from. It is not just wealth as some people think; health, safety, knowledge, and forbearance are types of provision. Everything that one benefits from is part of his provision. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...without measure (min ghayri hisab)’ (Ghafir: 40). The word ‘hisab’ (measure) means that one is credited with things according to their worth. In the Afterlife, however, provision is without measure because the Provider is Allah. When Allah Glorified is He gives provision to you, He does not give you in strict accordance with your deeds, but He gives you according to His own measure.

When good comes to a person unexpectedly, he says to himself that he has not prepared himself (ghayri hisab) for this. Allah’s saying: ‘...without measure (min ghayri hisab)’ (Ghafir: 40) refers to the fact that Allah gives without limit, and that He gives to people without measure and without the people deserving it. Thus, this giving includes many different aspects of open-handedness.

Scholars say that in paradise you eat without defecating(1) because you will eat from the food of Allah. Allah, the Creator, will give you nutrition in accordance with the needs of your body, without excess. Consequently, how will there be any excrement?! But why do some people deny this or find it hard to understand when it happens in this worldly life despite our limited possibilities?

(1) It was related that Zayd ibn Arqam said, ‘A man from the people of the Book came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said, “O Abu Al-Qasim, do you claim that the people of Paradise eat and drink?” “Yes”, he said, “By the One in Whose Hand is the soul of Muhammad, any one of them will be given the strength of a hundred men in terms of food, drink, intercourse and passions”. “But the one who eats and drinks will have a need to fulfil, but there can be no filth in Paradise.” “Their excretions will be perspiration that will come out of their skin like the diffusion of musk, and with it their bodies will lose weight”’. It was related by Ahmad in his Musnad and An-Nasa’i in his Sunnan with a sound chain of narrators according to the conditions of Al-Bukhari (See: Hadi Al-Arwah by Ibn Al-Qayyim, pg. 177).

For example, the soldiers in war are given special pills that act as their nutrition, giving them the necessary energy without any excess and leaving nothing in the body to excrete. But if the created being can do this, what do you think of the Creator?

One may eat in paradise without any need for food, only for the pleasure of eating. In fact, one may not need any food at all. Therefore, the scholars said that the highest level of paradise with regard to bounties is `Illiyyin. This is because it does not contain anything of the worldly pleasures, as one sees his Lord the Most High which is a sufficient bounty. In His Presence, one does not need these other bounties.

Ash-Sha'bi went to the Emperor of Rome, who asked him, 'You claim that you eat in paradise but do not defecate. How can it be?' He replied, 'What is strange about that? Do you not see that the child in his mother's womb is fed and grows? Does he defecate in her womb? He does not; if he were to do that, then the placenta will be damaged. Similarly, the believer in paradise will not defecate'. Then the king said to him, 'You claim that you eat in paradise, yet the food does not decrease. Anything that is taken from must decrease'. He replied, 'Indeed, it does decrease if there is no supply to replace what has been taken. Please bring me a candle'. Therefore, a candle was brought to him. He lit it and said to those present at the gathering, 'Let everyone get a candle and light it from this one'. They did this, and then he said to them, 'Has the light of my candle been lessened at all? Similarly, Allah's Bounties to the people of paradise do not run out or decrease'.

Among the wonders of paradise is that it contains rivers: a river of milk, a river of honey, a river of wine and a river of water. These rivers have no banks or barriers as they are intertwined, but they do not mix. We should believe that, and should not be surprised because Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him informed us about that, 'In paradise, [there is what] no eye [has ever] seen, no ear has [ever] heard and no human heart has ever perceived'.(1) Therefore, why should anybody be surprised?

(1) Related by Muslim in his Sahih (2824), Ahmad in his Musnad (2/366), and Abu Na'im in Hilyat Al-Awliya' [2/262] from the Hadith of Abu Hurayra

However, when Allah the Most High describes paradise, He informs us that He is not describing paradise itself, but He only gives us parables. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘The example of paradise, which the righteous have been promised...’ (Muhammad: 15).

Allah Glorified is He gives us this parable in order to make it easier for us to understand, and He negates some of the defects that we have in this worldly life. He says: ‘…is the description of paradise which the righteous are promised, wherein are rivers of water unaltered, rivers of milk the taste of which never changes, rivers of wine delicious to those who drink, and rivers of purified honey...’ (Muhammad: 15).

The water of paradise is not prone to stagnation; it never changes, unlike the water of this worldly life. Wine in the Hereafter brings one pleasure, but it does not intoxicate, while wine in this worldly life intoxicates. Honey in the Hereafter is purified of all blemishes unlike the honey of this worldly life.

The believer from the people of Pharaoh goes on to say:

وَيَٰقَوۡمِ مَا لِيٓ أَدۡعُوكُمۡ إِلَى ٱلنَّجَوٰةِ وَتَدۡعُونَنِيٓ إِلَى ٱلنَّارِ ﴿٤١﴾
تَدۡعُونَنِي لِأَكۡفُرَ بِٱللَّهِ وَأُشۡرِكَ بِهِۦ مَا لَيۡسَ لِي بِهِۦ عِلۡمٞ
وَأَنَا۠ أَدۡعُوكُمۡ إِلَى ٱلۡعَزِيزِ ٱلۡغَفَّٰرِ ﴿٤٢﴾

My people, why do I call you to salvation when you call me to the Fire? [41] You call me to disbelieve in God and to associate with Him things of which I have no knowledge;
I call you to the Mighty, the Forgiving One [42]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 41- 42)

This is what the believer from the people of Pharaoh said, yet it looks like the speech of prophets. Until now, I cannot find a convincing reason why Pharaoh did not react severely to what the believer said. This shows that Allah the Most High is capable of bringing together things that contradict each other; the believer openly talks of matters of faith, yet Allah lets Pharaoh hear the believer’s speech as something else. If this was not the case, Pharaoh will not have kept quiet and permitted him to speak in such a way that refutes the divinity he claimed. Or perhaps, as we said earlier, it is because the inspiration of the Most Merciful cannot be disputed.

Allah's saying: '...how is it for me to...' (Ghafir: 41) includes a question–how strange is it for me to call you to salvation and you call me to the fire? The scholars say that what seems good is not really good unless you love it for other people. For this reason, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said, 'None among you (truly) believes until he loves for his brother that which he loves for himself.'(1)

Then the Lord Glorified is He clarifies the meaning of the verse: '...how is it for me to call you to salvation while you call me to the Fire?...' (Ghafir: 41) saying: 'You call me to disbelieve in Allah and to associate with Him things of which I have no knowledge' (Ghafir: 42). You encourage me to disbelieve in Allah the Most High and attribute partners to Him, while I encourage you to believe in him.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

لَا جَرَمَ أَنَّمَا تَدۡعُونَنِيٓ إِلَيۡهِ لَيۡسَ لَهُۥ دَعۡوَةٞ فِي ٱلدُّنۡيَا وَلَا فِي ٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ
وَأَنَّ مَرَدَّنَآ إِلَى ٱللَّهِ وَأَنَّ ٱلۡمُسۡرِفِينَ هُمۡ أَصۡحَٰبُ ٱلنَّارِ ﴿٤٣﴾

There is no doubt that what you call me to serve is not fit to be invoked either in this world or the Hereafter: our return is to God alone, and it will be the rebels who will inhabit the Fire [43] (The Quran, Ghafir: 43)

The phrase starting with 'la jarama' (there is no doubt) means that the one that you call me to worship instead of Allah cannot answer supplications because it cannot hear prayers, and even if it could, it will not answer them. Allah Glorified is He continues: '…our return is to Allah alone...' (Ghafir: 43); our final return is: '...to Allah and it will be the transgressors (al-musrifeen) who will inhabit the Fire' (Ghafir: 43). Those who deserve it are those who dwell in it.

(1) This Hadith is agreed upon. It is related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (13), Muslim in his Sahih (45) in the Book on Faith on the authority of Anas ibn Malik with the wording, 'None among you (truly) believes until he loves for his brother–or he said "for his neighbour"–that which he loves for himself'.

The word 'al-musrifeen' (transgressors) which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse refers to those who have transgressed and surpassed the limits with regard to oppression and disbelief. The worst of them is he who has transgressed against his own self and has exceeded the bounds when he should have stopped at the limits. Such bounds and limits could be either commandments or prohibitions.

Allah Glorified is He clarifies this matter in His saying: 'These are the limits of Allah, so do not transgress them...' (al-Baqara: 229). This is regarding commandments. As for prohibitions, He says: '...These are the limits [set by] Allah, so do not approach them...' (al-Baqara: 187).

When it comes to commandments, one must take care not to transgress them. As for prohibitions, the Lord Glorified is He does not enjoin us to just not do them; rather, He instructs us not to approach them or the means that lead to them. It is just like if someone grazes (his animals) around [the edge of] a sanctuary, he will soon wind up inside it(1). The believer must respect this caution on the part of his Lord, for He is his Creator, and He knows him better than himself.

When the believer from the people of Pharaoh ended his warning to his people with the words: '...and it will be the transgressors who will inhabit the Fire' (Ghafir: 43), he was confronting Pharaoh, who had reached the pinnacle of transgressing against himself. Transgression in religion means turning away from the Call of Allah, ignoring His commandments and opposing His prohibitions. It may also include rejecting belief in Allah completely. But Pharaoh's transgression was greater than all of these forms of transgression, as he claimed to be a god, saying to his people: 'And [Pharaoh] said, "I am your most exalted lord"' (an-Nazi'at: 24).

This is the greatest form of transgression.

(1) This is part of a Hadith narrated by An-Nu`man ibn Bashir Allah be pleased with him. The full Hadith is, 'The lawful is clear and the unlawful is clear, and between them are matters that are doubtful (not clear); many of the people do not know whether they are lawful or unlawful. So whoever leaves them to protect his religion and his honour, he will be safe, and whoever falls into something from them, he will soon fall into the unlawful. Just like if someone grazes (his animals) around a sanctuary, he will soon wind up inside it. Indeed, for every king is a sanctuary (pasture), and indeed, Allah's Sanctuary is what He made unlawful' (related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [2051] and Muslim in his Sahih [1599]).

فَسَتَذْكُرُونَ مَآ أَقُولُ لَكُمْ ۚ وَأُفَوِّضُ أَمْرِىٓ
إِلَى ٱللَّهِ ۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ بَصِيرٌۢ بِٱلْعِبَادِ ﴿٤٤﴾

[One Day] you will remember what I am saying to you now, so I commit my case to God: God is well aware of His servants [44] (The Quran, Ghafir: 44)

Allah the Most High continues to relate what the believer said: '[One Day] you will remember what I am saying to you now...' (Ghafir: 44). This part of the verse means if they chose to deny him when he was admonishing them, when he wanted to stop them from worshipping Pharaoh, they will remember his advice later, either in this worldly life or in the Hereafter.

Allah Glorified is He continues: '...so I commit my case to Allah...' (Ghafir: 44). This means that he will resort to Allah the Most High Who will protect him. This indicates that his speech will make Pharaoh angry, and will cause Pharaoh to take revenge from him, but without any direct confrontation in order not to stir the people against him (Pharaoh). Thus, the believer said what is mentioned in this verse. The verse also means that if he experienced any trouble because of his explanation of Allah's Religion and defending his Prophet Musa (Moses), he hoped that Allah will reward him for his deeds with that which will benefit him in the Hereafter. The verse ends with: '...Allah is well aware of His slaves' (Ghafir: 44).

The result of committing himself to Allah was:

فَوَقَىٰهُ ٱللَّهُ سَيِّـَٔاتِ مَا مَكَرُوا۟ ۖ وَحَاقَ بِـَٔالِ فِرْعَوْنَ سُوٓءُ ٱلْعَذَابِ ﴿٤٥﴾
ٱلنَّارُ يُعْرَضُونَ عَلَيْهَا غُدُوًّا وَعَشِيًّا ۖ وَيَوْمَ تَقُومُ ٱلسَّاعَةُ أَدْخِلُوٓا۟ ءَالَ
فِرْعَوْنَ أَشَدَّ ٱلْعَذَابِ ﴿٤٦﴾

So God saved him from the harm they planned. A terrible punishment engulfed Pharaoh's people [45] They will be brought before the Fire morning and evening. On the Day the Hour comes, it will be said, 'Throw Pharaoh's people into the worst torment' [46] (The Quran, Ghafir: 45 - 46)

The Lord Glorified is He says: 'So Allah saved him from the harm they planned...' (Ghafir: 45). This means that he was safe, which is a matter that makes one amazed because this man had actually confronted Pharaoh. However, no ill consequences happened to him and Pharaoh's attempts to take revenge did him no harm. This is because Allah the Most High protected him: 'So Allah saved him from the harm they planned...' (Ghafir: 45). This is because an action should be considered in relation to the one who performed it, as it should be judged, whether good or bad, according to the one who performs it.

Imagine that your child came in with blood dripping from his face. The first question you will ask him is: 'Who did this to you?' You will not be as worried about the blood as you will be about the one who caused this to happen to him. If he said to you, 'Uncle so-and-so hit me', you will say to him, 'You must have done something that deserves punishment, and that is why he hit you'. However, if he said, 'So-and-so's son hit me', you may say, 'Indeed, he dislikes us…etc.' and cause a great commotion.

Therefore, every action is judged in accordance with who does it, and your reaction depends on your knowledge of the one who did it. This understanding clears up an issue relevant to the Night Journey and Ascension to Heaven and explains Allah's saying: 'Exalted is He Who took His slave by night from Al-Masjid Al-Haram to Al-Masjid Al- Aqsa, whose surroundings We have blessed...' (al-Isra': 1). As long as the one who took His slave on the Night Journey was Allah, there is nothing strange about this, because the deed is appropriate to the one who performs it. The Lord Glorified is He is far above time, place, and any similarity to the created beings. If Allah had said, 'Muhammad journeyed' there will have been much debate about this matter. But as Allah the Most High took him on the night journey, there is nothing amazing about this. If one said, 'I climbed to the top of the Himalaya with my baby son', will someone ask you, 'How did your son climb to the top of the Himalaya?'

If a person is protected by the Lord, then no tyrant or oppressor can harm him. This protection came as an answer and response to his committing his case to Allah. The believer said: '...so I commit my case to Allah...' (Ghafir: 44), and the response came immediately: 'So Allah saved him from the harm they planned...' (Ghafir: 45).

Imam Ja`far As-Sadiq[1] derived some subtle points and wisdoms from this verse. He said: ‘I wonder at the one who becomes afraid yet does not resort to Allah’s saying: ‘...so I commit my case to Allah…’ (Al-‘Imran: 173), as Allah the Glorified and Exalted says after it: ‘So Allah saved him from the harm they planned...’ (Al-‘Imran: 174)’. ‘I wonder at the one who seeks worldly pleasures and does not resort to Allah’s saying: ‘...What Allah willed [has occurred]; there is no power except in Allah...’ (al-Kahf: 39), as Allah Glorified is He says after it: ‘Then may be my Lord will give me [something] better than your garden...’ (al-Kahf: 40).

‘I wonder at the one who becomes grieved and does not resort to what Yunus (Jonah) said, which Allah relates: ‘...There is no deity except You; exalted are You. Indeed, I was one of those who did wrong’ (al-Anbiya’: 87) as Allah the Most High says after it: ‘So We responded to him and saved him from the distress. And thus do We save the believers’ (al-Anbiya’: 88) which means this was not limited to Yunus (Jonah) alone’.

These are some of the subtle points of the Book of Allah. Whoever reads it habitually will not be afflicted by any harm, and Allah will save and protect him from fear, conspiracies, poverty, and sorrow.

Allah Glorified is He responded to this believer by not just protecting him from his enemy, but by reversing the roles for the troubles to afflict the believer’s enemy. Reflect on Allah’s saying: ‘So Allah saved him from the harm they planned. But a terrible punishment engulfed Pharaoh’s people’ (Ghafir: 45), that is, they were afflicted with torment during the worldly life before being punished in the Hereafter. Man has three stages in his life: the worldly life that we are living right now, the life after death until we are resurrected on the Day of Judgement, and life after the Resurrection.

Allah the Glorified and Exalted says: ‘...A terrible punishment engulfed Pharaoh’s people’ (Ghafir: 45). The punishment will be inflicted on them in this worldly life, before the Afterlife and the Judgement. Allah's saying: 'They will be brought before the Fire morning and evening' (Ghafir: 46). Bringing people before the hellfire is before the Judgement because Allah the Most High says after it: '...And on the Day the Hour comes, it will be said, "Throw Pharaoh's people into the worst torment"' (Ghafir: 46).

(1) He was Ja’far ibn Muhammad Al-Baqir ibn `Ali Zayn Al-‘Abidin ibn Al-Hasan ibn bint Rasul Allah Al-Hashimi Al-Qurashi, Abu ‘Abdullah, known as As-Sadiq. He was one of the greatest Tabi’un (Followers, the generation after the Companions of the Prophet). He was born in 80 AH and passed away in Medina in 148 AH. Both Imam Abu Hanifa and Imam Malik learnt knowledge from him. He was very courageous in the face of the Abbasid caliphs (Al-A’lam by Az-Zirikli 2/126).

Are people brought before the hellfire in the worldly life or in the life after death? Given that they do not see the hellfire during this worldly life, what is referred to here is seeing it in the life after death, which is called the 'punishment of the grave'. Then, they are put into the hellfire after the Resurrection and Judgement.

Accordingly, Allah Glorified is He has combined for the transgressors punishment in this worldly life with punishment in the life after death, and a more severe and grievous punishment in the Hereafter.

Allah's saying: '...terrible punishment…' (Ghafir: 46) also refers to the punishment of the grave, as it contains severe suffering, yet the suffering of the Hellfire is more severe; Allah protect us all from this suffering.

The Lord the Most High then says:

لَكُمْ تَبَعًا فَهَلْ أَنتُم مُّغْنُونَ عَنَّا نَصِيبًا مِّنَ ٱلنَّارِ ﴿٤٧﴾ قَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ
ٱسْتَكْبَرُوٓاْ إِنَّا كُلٌّ فِيهَآ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ قَدْ حَكَمَ بَيْنَ ٱلْعِبَادِ ﴿٤٨﴾

In the Fire they will quarrel with one another: the weak will say to the haughty, 'We were your followers, so can you now relieve us from some share of the Fire?' [47] But they will say, 'We are all in this together. God has judged between His creatures'[48] (The Quran, Ghafir: 47 - 48)

The Arabic word 'yatahajoon' means that they will quarrel with one another, each trying to cast the responsibility on the other. The weak will tell their leaders that they imitated and followed their footsteps, so: '...can you now relieve us from some share of the Fire?' (Ghafir: 47) which means will you not defend us, protect us from the punishment of the hellfire, or bear the burden of our sins?

The Quran gives us many examples of the contentions and arguments that will take place on the Day of Judgement; arguments between the believers and the disbelievers and between the strong leaders and their weak followers. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Here they are–those who [you] argue on their behalf in [this] worldly life. But who will argue with Allah for them on the Day of Resurrection, or who will [then] represent them?’ (an-Nisa’: 109)

Those who were followed will then reply: ‘...Those who had been arrogant will say, "Indeed, all [of us] are in it. Indeed, Allah has judged between the slaves"’ (Ghafir: 48). As Allah the Most High has judged between his creatures, then the matter is settled and no one can repel His Judgement.

How could they possibly defend them when they were admitted into the hellfire first? The Lord Glorified is He said in another verse: ‘Then, We will surely extract from every sect those of them who were worst against the Most Merciful in insolence’ (Maryam: 69). Allah Glorified is He said about Pharaoh: ‘He will precede his people on the Day of Resurrection and lead them into the Fire; and wretched is the place to which they are led’ (Hud: 98).

Allah’s saying: ‘He will precede his people...’ (Hud: 98) means that he precedes them to the hellfire in order to destroy any hope of salvation they may have. If they were admitted to the hellfire first, they will believe that their leader will come and save them from this punishment. However, as their leaders preceded them to the hellfire, they will despair. Next, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَقَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ فِي ٱلنَّارِ لِخَزَنَةِ جَهَنَّمَ ٱدۡعُواْ رَبَّكُمۡ يُخَفِّفۡ عَنَّا يَوۡمٗا
مِّنَ ٱلۡعَذَابِ ﴿٤٩﴾ قَالُوٓاْ أَوَلَمۡ تَكُ تَأۡتِيكُمۡ رُسُلُكُم بِٱلۡبَيِّنَٰتِۖ
قَالُواْ بَلَىٰۚ قَالُواْ فَٱدۡعُواْۗ وَمَا دُعَٰٓؤُاْ ٱلۡكَٰفِرِينَ إِلَّا فِي ضَلَٰلٍ ﴿٥٠﴾

Those in the Fire will say to the keepers of Hell, ‘Ask your Lord to lessen our suffering for one day’ [49] But they will say, ‘Did your messengers not come to you with clear evidence of the truth?’ They will say, ‘Yes they did,’ and the keeper will say, ‘You can plead, then, but the pleas of disbelievers will always be in vain’ [50] (The Quran, Ghafir: 49 - 50)

We understand from Allah’s saying concerning the disbelievers: ‘...Ask your Lord to lessen our suffering for one day’ (Ghafir: 49) that they understood that they are not worthy to supplicate Allah or call on Him directly. Hence, they call the angels, who replied: ‘Did your Messengers not come to you with clear evidence of the Truth?...’ (Ghafir: 50) This means that Messengers came to them with proofs that confirmed their truthfulness. The Lord Glorified is He says: ‘They will say, “Yes”...’ (Ghafir: 50). This means that they will confirm that Messengers came to them with proofs. Allah Glorified is He then says: ‘...You can plead, then, but the pleas of disbelievers will always be in vain’ (Ghafir: 50). Their pleas are useless and will not benefit them. This verse contains rebuke and ridicule of the disbelievers.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

قَالُوٓا۟ أَوَلَمْ تَكُ تَأْتِيكُمْ رُسُلُكُم بِٱلْبَيِّنَـٰتِ ۖ قَالُوا۟ بَلَىٰ ۚ قَالُوا۟ فَٱدْعُوا۟ ۗ وَمَا دُعَـٰٓؤُا۟
ٱلْكَـٰفِرِينَ إِلَّا فِى ضَلَـٰلٍ ﴿٥٠﴾ إِنَّا لَنَنصُرُ رُسُلَنَا وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ فِى ٱلْحَيَوٰةِ ٱلدُّنْيَا وَيَوْمَ
يَقُومُ ٱلْأَشْهَـٰدُ ﴿٥١﴾ يَوْمَ لَا يَنفَعُ ٱلظَّـٰلِمِينَ مَعْذِرَتُهُمْ ۖ وَلَهُمُ ٱللَّعْنَةُ وَلَهُمْ سُوٓءُ ٱلدَّارِ ﴿٥٢﴾

We support Our messengers and the believers, in the present life and on the Day when witnesses arise [51] On the Day when excuses will not profit the evildoers, their fate will be rejection and they will have the worst of homes [52]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 51-52)

This is Allah’s Promise to support His Messengers and the believers. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And Our Word has already preceded for Our slaves, the Messengers. [That] indeed, they will be those who are given victory, And [that] indeed, Our soldiers will be those who overcome’ (as-Saffat: 171-173). This is why we say that if you see that some Muslims are defeated, you should know that they have not fulfilled the conditions for victory. Consequently, they should suffer from the results of their action in the worldly life because Allah’s Way of dealing with His slaves never changes.

Allah’s saying: ‘We support Our Messengers and the believers, in the present life and on the Day when witnesses arise’ (Ghafir: 51) comes after the believer from the people of Pharaoh defended Musa (Moses), calling the people to believe in Allah, and after he spoke the Truth openly in front of Pharaoh. The meaning of this verse is that Allah the Most High did not send a Messenger with a new revelation to guide the deluded people and then forsake him.

Nevertheless, Allah Glorified is He may leave the call to Truth to be resisted and opposed by some people at its beginnings in order to test those who call to His Path, for only the strong and the brave people stand firm. This is because they will undertake this mission in order to call others towards Allah throughout the whole world, and for this reason it is not strange that they should be tested and that their faith and perseverance upon the principles of religion should be tested.

This meaning applies to the earlier believers who carried the banner of Islam with Prophet Muhammad; they emigrated to Ethiopia and then to Medina. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Do the people think that they will be left to say, "We believe" and they will not be tried (yoftanoon)?' (al-'Ankabut: 2) The Arabic word 'fitnah', from which 'yoftanoon' comes from, means exposing people to troubles and tribulations which can only be borne by people with strong belief who put their trust in Allah and are sure that the Truth will overcome and gain victory. The true believer is the one who sees that reward and punishment in the Afterlife is something obvious, with no doubt. This is because even if a man may cheat others, he will never cheat himself.

When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him asked Hudhayfa(1), 'How are you this morning, Hudhayfa', he replied, 'I woke up a true believer in Allah'. (The word 'true' here is of great import, as Prophet Muhammad asked him about it). The Prophet asked, 'And what is true about your faith?' He said, 'My soul has renounced this world, and now gold and earth have become equal to me. It is as if I am looking at the people of paradise rejoicing and the people of the hellfire suffering'. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him replied, 'You have realised the Truth, so adhere to it'.(2)

Allah's saying: '...in the present life...' (Ghafir: 51) means that He will give the believers victory in the present life by making the Truth victorious over the falsehood of their enemies. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says: '...And whether We show you some of what We have promised them or We take you in death, it is to Us they will be returned' (Ghafir: 77).

---

(1) He was Hudhayfa ibn Hasl Al-Yaman ibn Jabir Al-`Absi, a Companion who was a courageous and victorious governor. He knew Prophet Muhammad's opinion about the hypocrites. He passed away in Al-Mada'in 36 AH. He related 225 Hadiths which are mentioned in the books of Hadith (Al-A'lam by Az-Zirikli 2/171).

(2) Al-Haythami mentioned it in Majma' Az-Zawa'id (1/57) and he ascribes it to At-Tabarani in Al-Mu'jam Al-Kabir on the authority of Al-Harith ibn Malik Al-Ansari, not Hudhayfa. Ibn Hajar Al-'Asqalany attributed it to Ibn Al-Mubarak in Az-Zuhd (see: Al-Isaba fi Tamyiz As-Sahaba [1/343]).

Allah Glorified is He clarifies that there will be numerous witnesses against man in the Hereafter: '...when witnesses (ash-had) arise' (Ghafir: 51). The word 'ash-had' is the plural of 'shuhud' (which is already plural in Arabic). This means there will be a great number of witnesses on that Day.

The prophets and Messengers will bear witness: '[Be warned of] the Day when Allah will assemble the Messengers and say, "What was the response you received?" They will say, "We have no knowledge. Indeed, it is You who is Knower of the unseen"' (al-Ma'ida: 109). The believers will bear witness that they delivered the Message to those who came after them: '...in this [revelation], that the Messenger may be a witness over you and you may be witnesses over the people....' (al-Hajj: 78). In addition, man's limbs will bear witness against him.

Similarly, each man's guardian angels will bear witness against him. The martyrs who fought until they were killed will bear witness. This is because if life has deceived man, he keeps working for a comfortable life and does not want to die. But a martyr wants death to take him to what is better than what he will leave behind; for this reason, the Lord the Most High rewards him.

If a man volunteers to fight in the cause of Allah, knowing that he will die, Allah the Most High will reward him by letting him be alive with Him because he has died in His cause. Hence, we said regarding the philosophy of martyrdom when we spoke of Hamza ibn 'Abd Al-Muttalib(1) that martyrdom protects one from death, as when anyone gives precedence to death over life and becomes a martyr, they will be alive with Allah. Your worldly life will be joined with your life with Allah and then your life after the Resurrection. This indicates that the martyr never really dies.

---

(1) He was Hamza ibn 'Abd Al-Muttalib, Prophet Muhammad's uncle. He was born 54 years before the Hijra and was martyred at the Battle of Uhud in 3 AH at the age of 57. He immigrated to Medina and fought at the Battles of Badr and Uhud (Al-A'lam 2/278).

O Hamza, uncle of the elected Messenger, you are the master,
Of all martyrs on earth, all without exception,
It is enough that martyrdom protects you,
From death, by linking the two lives with the other life after Resurrection

Thus, it seems that whoever sacrifices his life for Allah has presented it as a gift to Allah and in order to boost His Religion. For this reason, Allah the Most High will reward him by protecting him from death due to his martyrdom.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘On the Day when excuses will not profit the evildoers...’ (Ghafir: 52). This means that if they apologise, their apologies will not be accepted from them. In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Nor will it be permitted for them to make an excuse’ (al-Mursalat: 36). It seems that there are different situations; in one verse they apologise saying: ‘...O our Lord! Take us out; we will do good deeds other than those which we used to do...’ (Fatir: 37). In another verse, they are not permitted to apologise: ‘...their fate will be rejection and they will have the worst of homes’ (Ghafir: 52).

Then Allah Glorified is He mentions the progression of Musa’s (Moses) Message:

وَلَقَدْ ءَاتَيْنَا مُوسَى ٱلْهُدَىٰ وَأَوْرَثْنَا بَنِىٓ إِسْرَٰٓءِيلَ ٱلْكِتَٰبَ ﴿٥٣﴾
هُدًى وَذِكْرَىٰ لِأُو۟لِى ٱلْأَلْبَٰبِ ﴿٥٤﴾

We gave Moses guidance and passed down the Scripture to the Children of Israel [53] as a guide and a reminder to people of understanding [54] (The Quran, Ghafir: 53 - 54)

The word ‘al-huda’ (guide) means showing someone the path that leads to a beneficial goal, as Allah Glorified is He says at the beginning of the chapter of al-Baqara: ‘Those are upon [right] guidance from their Lord, and it is those who are the successful...’ (al-Baqara: 5). The goal of religion is not to put burdens upon you or to make things difficult for you. Rather, it has come as a mercy and guidance that benefits you.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...We caused the children of Israel to inherit the Scripture (al-kitab)’ (Ghafir: 53). The word ‘al-kitab’ (Scripture) refers to the Torah, the Psalms and the Injil (Bible).

All of these Scriptures are: '…a guide and a reminder (dhikra) to people of understanding' (Ghafir: 54). The word 'dhikra' means a reminder to a person because if he sticks to his innate nature without any corrupting influences affecting him, the protection he gained from the old covenant (1): 'Am I not your Lord?...' (al-A'raf: 172) will persist. However, he has forgotten the covenant and deviated from the straight path, as man is forgetful by nature. Thus, the objective behind sending Messengers is to remind people of the= primordial covenant. The word 'al-albab' (people of understanding) refers to reflective intellects.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

فَٱصۡبِرۡ إِنَّ وَعۡدَ ٱللَّهِ حَقّٞ وَٱسۡتَغۡفِرۡ لِذَنۢبِكَ
وَسَبِّحۡ بِحَمۡدِ رَبِّكَ بِٱلۡعَشِيِّ وَٱلۡإِبۡكَٰرِ ٥٥

So be patient, Prophet, for what God has promised is sure to come. Ask forgiveness for your sins; praise your Lord morning and evening [55] (The Quran, Ghafir: 55)

The phrase: 'So be patient...' (Ghafir: 55) indicates that Allah addressed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him with this phrase during hard times, about which Allah Glorified is He says: '...and were shaken until [even their] Messenger and those who believed with him said, "When is the help of Allah?" Unquestionably, the help of Allah is near' (al-Baqara: 214).

Allah the Most High then says: '...the promise (wa'd) of Allah is sure to happen...' (Ghafir: 55). The word 'wa`d' (promise) means promising something good before it takes place; and Allah's Promise is true and sure to happen. If you promise somebody, you give them glad tidings of happiness, blessings, and good, but are you able to guarantee that you will fulfil your promise? No, perhaps you will die before you fulfil your promise, or perhaps your ability to fulfil it will be weakened and you will find yourself unable to fulfil your promise. But if the promise comes from Allah, the Self-Subsisting and the Everlasting, it is a true promise that will certainly come true.

(1) This is the first covenant which Allah took from the children of Adam. He Glorified is He says about it: 'And [mention] when your Lord took from the children of Adam, from their loins, their descendants and made them bear witness against themselves [saying to them], "Am I not your Lord?" They said, "Yes, we have testified". [This] lest you should say on the day of Resurrection, "Indeed, we were of this unaware"' (al-A'raf: 172). Allah the Most High made them bear witness against themselves that Allah is their Lord and there is no god except Him, a fact which they should be convinced of innately.

For this reason, Allah the Most High teaches us not to confirm promises decisively because our circumstances change just as that of all created beings change. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And never say of anything, "Indeed, I will do that tomorrow", except [when adding], "If Allah wills"’ (al-Kahf: 24).

Making your fulfilment of the promise conditional upon His Will frees you from being accused of lying if you do not fulfil your promise. If you promise decisively to do something, are you sure that you will be able to fulfil your promise? Do you control time or the ability to fulfil your promise? You cannot guarantee the continued existence of any of the means. Therefore say, ‘If Allah wills’, to free yourself from being accused of lying if you cannot fulfil your promise.

Allah’s saying: ‘...Ask forgiveness for your sins...’ (Ghafir: 55) means seek pardon from Allah. Does the phrase, ‘...for your sins...’ (Ghafir: 55) mean that Prophet Muhammad has committed some sins? Scholars said that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him was a human being who received Revelation. As a human being, he gave opinions regarding matters about which he had received no Revelation from Allah. Even if his opinion was correct, Allah’s saying is more correct.

Thus, Allah corrects him, saying: ‘...Ask forgiveness for your sins...’ (Ghafir: 55). From what was Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him commanded to seek forgiveness? He was commanded to seek forgiveness from finding Allah slow, which is referred to in Allah’s saying: ‘...until [even their] Messenger and those who believed with him said, "When is the Help of Allah?..."’ (al-Baqara: 214) The help was coming, and that is why they should not have been in a hurry.

Some verses in the Quran affirm that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him did things for which he was blamed, and Allah corrected what he did. How was Prophet Muhammad blamed? Ponder on Allah’s saying: ‘May Allah pardon you, [O Muhammad]; why did you give them permission [to remain behind]?...' (at-Tawba: 43) The Lord the Most High says He has pardoned Prophet Muhammad before He talked about blaming him(1).

Why did Prophet Muhammad give permission to those people? Scholars said that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him thought that if the person seeking permission was truthful, then there is no problem with pardoning him as he was excused; but if this person was untruthful regarding his excuses, then his absence is better than his presence with the Muslims. Allah says: 'Had they gone forth with you, they will not have increased you except in confusion, and they will have been active among you...' (at-Tawba: 47).

We know that Allah blamed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him in the following verse: 'Why did you give them permission [to remain behind]?...' (at-Tawba: 43) from Prophet Muhammad himself. Had the Prophet not informed us, we will not have known of it. He found no problem with being blamed by Allah or his choice being corrected by Allah.

We have clarified this point when discussing the issue of the adoption of a child that took place when Prophet Muhammad adopted Zayd ibn Haritha. When Allah willed to abolish the custom of the adoption of children, He took Prophet Muhammad's adoption of Zayd ibn Haritha as an example for this new ruling.

Zayd was Khadija's slave whom she gave to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. When Zayd's family found out that he was in Mecca with Prophet Muhammad, they came to seek Prophet Muhammad's permission to take him. At that time, the Prophet told Zayd to choose between staying with him or going with his family, but Zayd chose to stay with him. Consequently, Prophet Muhammad wanted to honour Zayd for standing by him and preferring to stay in his company, and this is why he adopted him. Since that day, Zayd was known as Zayd ibn Muhammad.

(1) Ibn Abu Hatim related this with his chain of narration from Mis'ar from 'Awn who said, 'Have you heard blame more gentle than this? It entails pardoning before blaming.' Muwarraq Al-'Ajali and others mentioned the same meaning (Tafsir Ibn Kathir 2/360). Mujahid said, 'This verse was revealed concerning some people who sought permission from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to stay behind and not go to perform Jihad (striving for the cause of Allah). They held the view in their minds that whether Prophet Muhammad gave them permission or not, they will stay behind'. This means that they will not join them in Jihad (striving in the Cause of Allah) in any case. Allah blamed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for giving them permission, as he should have waited until the truthful one became distinct from the liar.

However, Allah wanted to abolish this practice and prohibit the adoption of children, and for this reason He revealed: ‘Call them by [the names of] their fathers; it is more just in the sight of Allah. But if you do not know their fathers, then they are [still] your brothers in religion and those entrusted to you...’ (al-Ahzab: 5).

His saying: ‘...more just in the sight of Allah...’ (al-Ahzab: 5) means that what the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him did was just, but Allah’s Judgement is more just. Did this correction anger Prophet Muhammad? No, it did not. The proof is that he peace and blessings of Allah be upon him is the one who informed us of this situation. Had Prophet Muhammad hidden it, we will never have known about it.

Another example when Allah blamed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him is His saying about the captives taken after the Battle of Badr: ‘It is not for a prophet to have captives [of war] until he inflicts a massacre [upon Allah's enemies] in the land...’ (al-Anfal: 67), when they differed(1) about taking ransoms for the captives. Allah blamed His Messenger [Muhammad] with this verse, but did the ruling change after it? No, it remained the same. Allah Glorified is He said: ‘If not for a previous decree from Allah, you will have been touched for what you took by a great punishment' (al-Anfal: 68).

(1) This happened on the Day of Badr. Ibn Mas’ud said that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘What is your opinion about these captives?’ Abu Bakr said, ‘O Messenger of Allah, they are your people and your family, keep them alive and ask them to repent, perhaps Allah will forgive them’. ‘Umar said, ‘O Messenger of Allah, they belied you and caused you to leave Mecca; let me cut their heads off’. Ibn Rawaha said, ‘O Messenger of Allah, you are in a valley that contains much firewood. Therefore, set it on fire and throw them into it’. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him remained silent and did not reply at all. He went into his room and then came out to them and said, ‘Allah may soften men’s hearts until they become softer than milk, and He may harden men’s hearts until they become harder than rocks... ’. Then he said, ‘You are needy, so not one of them will be freed without a ransom, or their heads will be cut off’. Then Allah Glorified is He revealed this verse reproaching Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for accepting ransoms.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him could have denied this matter, especially when the ruling did not change. However, we know that Allah reproached Prophet Mohammad only through the Prophet himself. The one who reflects on how Allah reproached Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him will find that either He does this for Prophet Muhammad's interest or because the Prophet's judgment was not correct, which is the case of the above-mentioned verse.

An example of blaming Prophet Muhammad for his own interest is Allah's saying: 'O Prophet, why do you prohibit [yourself from] what Allah has made lawful for you, seeking the approval of your wives?' (at-Tahrim: 1) An example from life with the same meaning is when a father blames his son for studying too much or over-exerting himself. In this verse, Allah blames His Messenger [Muhammad] because he has put himself into difficulties and oppressed himself in order to please his wives.

Allah also blamed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him regarding the blind man(1), as Allah says: 'The Prophet frowned and turned away, Because there came to him the blind man, [interrupting]. But what will make you perceive [O Muhammad], that perhaps he might be purified. Or be reminded and the remembrance will benefit him? As for he who thinks himself without need, to him you give attention, Though there is upon you [no blame] if he will not be purified. But as for he who came to you striving [for knowledge], While he fears [Allah]; From him you are distracted' ('Abasa: 1-10).

The blame in these verses is because he has hurt himself by leaving a blind man and turning away from him because he was a believer, going instead to the leaders of the disbelievers to call them to Allah, for he felt that calling them to Allah should be given precedence.

(1) He was 'Amr ibn Al-Qays ibn Za'idah ibn Al-Asam (known as Ibn Umm Maktum), a blind yet courageous Companion. He embraced Islam in Mecca and emigrated to Medina after the Battle of Badr. He used to announce the call to prayer in Medina along with Bilal. He attended the Battle of Qadisiyya, in which he carried a black flag and fought, despite being blind. Afterwards, he returned to Medina and died there shortly before the death of 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab in 22 AH (Al-A'lam by Az-Zirikli 5/83).

Some scholars(1) have taken Allah’s saying: ‘...Ask forgiveness for your sins...’ (Ghafir: 55) as a proof that the prophets are not infallible. Others said that the good deeds of the righteous are the bad deeds of the elect. It was related that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said in his supplications, ‘O Allah, I seek refuge in You from every deed I did for Your sake but was mixed with something that was not for Your sake’.(2)

Some scholars have another view concerning the following verse: ‘...Ask forgiveness for your sins...’ (Ghafir: 55). They said that it does not necessarily mean that Prophet Muhammad actually sinned, but it means: ‘If you sin, then seek forgiveness’. This meaning is indicated by the Lord’s saying: ‘O Prophet, fear Allah...’ (al-Ahzab: 1). Does this mean that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him did not fear Allah? No, it is a command for him to persist in fearing Allah. It does not mean that he deviated from the instructions of Allah and this is why Allah ordered him to fear Him. It is not like advising a deviant person to fear Allah, and stop deviating from Allah’s Religious Instructions and in this way protect himself from Allah’s Wrath.

It has become clear that the command in Allah’s saying: ‘...Ask forgiveness for your sins...’ (Ghafir: 55) is a command pertaining to acts of worship, as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Our Lord, and grant us what You promised us through Your Messengers...’ (Al-‘Imran: 194). This is a commandment requiring unqualified obedience because we say, ‘Grant us’ even though He Glorified is He has promised His Messengers this. That is, it is going to happen anyway.

---

(1) Al-Qurtubi mentioned in his Exegesis several meanings regarding Allah’s saying, ‘...Ask forgiveness for your sins...’ (Ghafir: 55):
- Seek forgiveness for the sins of your people–the ‘mudaf’ (people) was elided and the ‘mudaf ilaih’ (sins) was put in its place.
- Seek forgiveness for your own sins–according to those who consider it possible for Prophets to commit minor sins.
- Those who do not consider it possible for Prophets to commit even minor sins say that this is a command involving worshipping Allah by supplicating Him.
- Seek forgiveness for any sins that you committed before prophethood.

(2) This was mentioned by Ibn Rajab Al-Hanbali in his book ‘Jami’ Al-‘Ulum wal Hikam’ (pg. 27) as the supplication of Mutraf ibn ‘Abdullah. He said, ‘O Allah, I seek Your forgiveness for what I have repented from but then returned to. I seek Your forgiveness from that which I took upon myself for Your sake but then have not fulfilled, and I seek forgiveness from that which I claimed that it is for Your sake but my heart (intention) became mixed with what You know’.

We will ask those who maintain that the Messengers may sin, ‘Did Allah strip them of their Prophecy because they fell into sin, or did he keep them as Messengers? Of course, He kept them as Messengers. Moreover, what about the fact that the Messenger did not act differently from the Message he brought?’

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Praise your Lord evening (al-‘ashiy) and morning (‘al-ibkar)’ (Ghafir: 55). The word ‘al-‘ashiy’ (evening), which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse, refers to the time between noon and the end of the day, whereas ‘al-ibkar’ (morning) refers to the time between the dawn and mid-morning. Thus, it means that Allah commands Prophet Muhammad to praise his Lord the Most High on an ongoing basis. While this command is for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him and the believers who are with him in the morning and afternoon, it is also a command for all people, in all times and places because of the all-encompassing nature of his Message.

Thus, morning and afternoon here spread through all times and places. Morning and afternoon is appropriate to each one’s time and place. Clearly, if we take into account the differences in time from one place to another, we will find that Allah will be glorified during all times and places, continuously.

Allah’s saying: ‘...praise your Lord evening and morning...’ (Ghafir: 55) means glorification and praise together. Glorification involves regarding Allah to be too great and exalted to have any errors; and as Allah is too exalted to have any errors, you should praise the One you believe in for being the Lord Who is free from any faults.

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يُجَٰدِلُونَ فِىٓ ءَايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ بِغَيْرِ سُلْطَٰنٍ أَتَىٰهُمْ ۙ إِن فِى صُدُورِهِمْ إِلَّا
كِبْرٌ مَّا هُم بِبَٰلِغِيهِ ۚ فَٱسْتَعِذْ بِٱللَّهِ ۖ إِنَّهُۥ هُوَ ٱلسَّمِيعُ ٱلْبَصِيرُ ﴿٥٦﴾

As for those who, with no authority to do so, dispute God’s messages, there is nothing in their hearts but a thirst for a greatness they will never attain. Seek refuge in God, for He is the All-Hearing, the All-Seeing [56] (The Quran, Ghafir: 56)

The word ‘al-jadal’ means argument, discussion, and refutation. This meaning is derived from the phrase ‘jadl al-habal’ meaning to twist a rope or to twist threads together for them to intertwine with each other to make a rope. Thus, the word 'al-jadl' involves strengthening one opinion with another.

There are different types of arguments: constructive arguments that aim at reaching the Truth, and negative arguments that have no benefit. Constructive arguments use authoritative proofs and evidences, while negative arguments are based on falsehood, without any authoritative proof. Authority can involve physical strength that forces somebody to do something or it can involve proofs and persuasion. Subjugation involves forcing people to do something unwillingly, whereas authoritative proofs make one do things willingly.

Thus, the enemy of Allah, Satan, will say: '...when the matter has been concluded, "Indeed, Allah had promised you the promise of truth. And I promised you, but I betrayed you. But I had no authority over you except that I invited you, and you responded to me. So do not blame me; but blame yourselves...' (Ibrahim: 22). This means that Satan had no coercive authority to force people to disobey Allah, and had no persuasive proof either to persuade them to disobey.

In fact, we notice that in the verse relevant to the prostration to Adam, Allah asks: '...what prevented you from prostrating...' (Sad: 75), but in another verse, Allah the Most High asks Satan: '...What has kept you from not prostrating...' (al-A'raf: 12)? One verse is in the positive and the other in the negative. It means, 'Did you intend to prostrate but some external power prevented you from prostrating, or did someone convince you not to prostrate, and hence you did not prostrate out of conviction?'

To continue, Allah Glorified is He says: '...the signs of Allah...' (Ghafir: 56). We said before that the signs of Allah are divided into three types:

First: the signs that prove the existence and marvellous creation of Allah, such as the sun, the moon, the stars, the earth, air, water, etc.

Second: the miracles that Allah the Most High grants to His Messengers to prove their truthfulness in conveying Messages from Allah.

Third: the verses of the Gracious Quran that bear Allah's Rulings and Religious Instructions for man.

About which of these types are they arguing? The scholars said that these people argued about Allah's Miracles and Rulings, but that there is no scope for arguing about Allah's signs in creation.

Next, the Lord Glorified is He says: '...with no authority to do so...' (Ghafir: 56). Does it mean that there are arguments against Allah's signs based on evidence? Scholars said that this is not the case, but the meaning is that there can be no arguing about Allah's signs. The issue is that: '...there is nothing in their hearts but a thirst for greatness...' (Ghafir: 56). This is the cause and source of their arguing over Allah's signs. Their arrogance prevents them from accepting the Truth and from following a man from amongst them who was inferior to them, as they thought.

We notice that Allah Glorified is He clarifies in some verses that they believed in the Quran, but their opposition was to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him as an individual conveying Allah's Message. This is because he was one of the common folk, not one of the leaders or the wealthy people. Allah mentions the disbelievers saying: '… "Why was this Quran not sent down upon a great man from [one of] the two cities?"' (az-Zukhruf: 31) In another verse, they deny everything: 'And [remember] when they said, "O Allah , if this should be the Truth from You, then rain down on us stones from the sky or bring us a painful punishment"' (al-Anfal: 32). The sound logic dictates that they should say, 'Then guide us to it'. Their saying indicates that they hated the religion as a whole because their hearts were busy with an opposing matter: ascribing divinity to others beside Allah and worshipping idols, the worship which they inherited and were accustomed to. If a person is preoccupied with falsehood, he cannot be guided to the Truth until the falsehood is extricated from his heart.

For this reason, Allah the Most High clarifies that matters of belief should not be discussed in public; rather, one should reflect upon them on his own. If participation is necessary, then one may discuss them with only one person because when you sit on your own or with one person the discussion can be fruitful and the disagreement does not become severe. Accordingly, you are more likely to arrive at the Truth. If one is defeated, he is not defeated in front of a crowd and as a result he will not be stubborn or arrogant, and he will come back to the Truth without trouble.

This is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Say, "I only advise you of one [thing]–that you stand for Allah, [seeking Truth] in pairs and individually, and then give thought; there is no madness in your companion...’ (Saba’: 46). This means: do not discuss matters of belief collectively because there is hardly any control over discussions among a group of people, and collective thinking leads to chaos and confusion. In fact, a person should think about matters of belief on his own, not to be affected by passions.

Allah’s saying: ‘There is nothing in their hearts but conceit...’ (Ghafir: 56) means that their hearts are arrogant towards the Truth that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him brought. It prevented them from listening to Prophet Muhammad, and led them to consider themselves superior to him. This is because they were the leaders of their society, and if they listened to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him and obeyed him, it will make them his followers.

It is well known that Quraysh was the dominant tribe amongst the Arabs, and it was this position that made them able to travel every summer and winter for trade without being opposed by anyone. This is because all the Arab tribes came to Quraysh in Mecca during the pilgrimage season and they were all under their protection as their guests. It was the Sacred House and pilgrimage that gave Quraysh their special standing and status. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘For the accustomed security of the Quraysh. Their accustomed security [in] the caravan of winter and summer, Let them worship the Lord of this House, Who has fed them [saving them] from hunger and made them safe [saving them] from fear’ (Quraysh: 1-4). Allah Glorified is He also says: ‘Have they not seen that We made [Mecca] a safe sanctuary, while people are being taken away all around them?...’ (al-Qasas: 67)

The proof is that when they saw that their idols gave them no commandments and charged them with no responsibilities, they were satisfied with them and worshipped them instead of Allah. When they wanted a place to honour these idols, they found nowhere better than around the Ka’ba. As a result, they considered the Ka’ba as sacred despite their disbelief in Allah.

This thirst for greatness which prevented them from accepting the Truth is the very thirst which Allah Glorified is He assures: ‘...they will never attain’ (Ghafir: 56). This means that they do not have the prerequisites to claim greatness. Their greatness is not authentic, since authentic greatness means having some subjectively inherent characteristics, rather than ephemeral ones that come and go. Hence, it is a false façade, just as the one who sees himself great because of his health, wealth, or power.

Allah the Exalted says: ‘Seek refuge in Allah...’ (Ghafir: 56) because when you seek refuge in Allah when you confront something beyond your material power, you do not confront it with empty hands; rather, you turn to your Lord the Most High and say to Him that this issue has overwhelmed you and surpassed your abilities, and you ask Him to lift it off your shoulders. That is why Allah the Most High tells us He is the One: ‘Who responds to the distressed when he calls out to Him’ (an-Naml: 62).

Therefore, when your power runs down you should turn to the Ultimate Causer: ‘...for He is the All Hearing, the All-Seeing’ (Ghafir: 56). Hearing and seeing are two Perfect Attributes of Allah. Every movement, every limb of man performs deeds; the tongue, the hands and the feet. These deeds are divided into two types: actions and words. Our words, which are an act of the tongue, constitute part of any deed, while the deeds of the rest of the limbs are called actions.

This is why Allah the Exalted says: ‘O you who believe! Why do you say that which you do not do’ (as-Saff: 2) mentioning both words and actions, which together form our deeds. Hearing is applicable for what words are said and seeing is applicable for what action is done. The Lord the Most High clarifies the need to seek refuge: ‘Seek refuge in Allah...’ (Ghafir: 56) to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him because Allah’s Hearing covers everything spoken, and His Seeing covers everything done.

لَخَلْقُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ أَكْبَرُ مِنْ خَلْقِ
ٱلنَّاسِ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَ ٱلنَّاسِ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ٥٧

The creation of the heavens and earth is greater by far than the creation of mankind, though most people do not know it [57] (The Quran, Ghafir: 57)

The letter ‘lam’ (indeed) in this verse is indicative of an oath which is being sworn. It is as though the Lord Glorified is He says that by His Might and Power: Indeed, the creation of the heavens and earth is greater by far than the creation of mankind' (Ghafir: 57). How is this so? The scholars say that in this world people have lives of different lengths, one lives for a moment, another for an hour, and yet another for a hundred years, or even as long as Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him.

But, how does our short life compare to the lifetime of the sun even though it was created for us? Can the life of the servant be longer than the one it serves? Thus, we must have another life that lasts even longer than that of the sun and Allah's other creations that serve us, and this can only be in the Afterlife. Scholars say that one's life has a length which is known only to Allah, and it has a width which may outdistance its length. Similarly, it has a size and a depth, yet its width can extend to be the largest dimension. This means that we can broaden the circle of our actions to benefit the society and ourselves; leaving a legacy after our death. That way, we will be adding lives and lives to our short life!

That is also why it is said that people's worlds are bound by their aspirations. For one man his world is his own self–he wants everything for himself and he helps no one and this is selfishness. For another man his world may be his family, for another his tribe, his country, or yet the whole world. The greater the aspiration, the greater the scope of the world and the more our lot increases.

When we say that the sun lives longer than we do, we also take note of the fact that man is a living, eating, drinking being; the sun however is inanimate, it neither eats nor drinks. We need maintenance and are vulnerable to sickness and other things because we undergo constant change; the sun, on the other hand, has none of these attributes. It needs no maintenance and it is not vulnerable to the things that we are. It has been this way since Allah created it; it works without stopping, without maintenance and without fault. Any instrument that has these qualities shows you the Power and Greatness of its Creator.

This is why we say that if we look at the creation of the heavens and the earth we will indeed find them to be greater than the creation of man: '...though most people do not know' (Ghafir: 57). But what does 'do not know' mean? The creation is right in front of us, we see it with our eyes. And upon seeing this creation and its wonders, we should reflect on it, on its magnitude, the precision of its laws and its perfection and its faultlessness.

Are we not able to predict the time of an eclipse to the precise second? It is as though the Lord Glorified is He has enlisted even the non-Muslims to manifest the truth of His signs in creation and how they are so precise and well organised that no one can disrupt them. This is why we say, if you see something wrong in the world you can be sure that it was the hand of man, through his choices, interfering with it. What we leave alone without disrupting will never go wrong.

Next, the Lord the Most High says:

وَمَا يَسۡتَوِي ٱلۡأَعۡمَىٰ وَٱلۡبَصِيرُ وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَعَمِلُواْ
ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ وَلَا ٱلۡمُسِيٓءُۚ قَلِيلٗا مَّا تَتَذَكَّرُونَ ﴿٥٨﴾

The blind and the sighted are not equal, just as those who believe and do good works and those who do evil are not equal: how seldom you reflect! [58] (The Quran, Ghafir: 58)

Indeed, those who neglect Allah's signs and fail to reflect upon them are not equal to those who delve deeply into them and are guided by them. Thus, the one who does not reflect upon these signs is like a blind man because he does not see the signs that are greater than the creation of man himself. How can one miss a sign greater than the creation of man except if he were blind? From these signs it is possible to find proof of the Necessarily Existent the Most High and of His Absolute Power and Marvellous Creativity.

Just as the blind and the seeing are not equal in Allah's sight, similarly neither are those who believe and do righteous acts equal to those who do bad deeds. This is a manifestation of His Justice. Allah the Most High says: '...little [of you and little] do you reflect!' (Ghafir: 58), which means how few of you keep this in mind!

إِنَّ ٱلسَّاعَةَ لَأٓتِيَةٌ لَّا رَيۡبَ فِيهَا وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكۡثَرَ ٱلنَّاسِ لَا يُؤۡمِنُونَ ﴿٥٩﴾

The Final Hour is sure to come, without doubt, but most people do not believe[59] (The Quran, Ghafir: 59)

The Lord Glorified is He reminds us of this reality which is very often absent from our minds, yet it is something we should not be heedless of. This does not just refer to realising the truth of the hour using our minds, but to being ready for what will transpire at that time. Allah the Most High continues: ‘The Last Hour is sure to come...’ (Ghafir: 59), that is, the Judgement Day: ‘...without doubt...’ (Ghafir: 59), and as long as this is the case, we must prepare for it. Had you been created and left free by Allah, you could have done what you liked. But since you are returning to your Creator and Lord and will be held accountable for what you do, what should you do? There is no way out but to take heed for your Afterlife, for it is the ultimate goal after which there is no other.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...but most people do not believe’ (Ghafir: 59) which means they do not know of these realities or they are heedless of them. This is despite the fact that by only viewing matters rationally will surely guide one to believe in the existence of a final hour, judgement, and recompense. Why? This is because when you look at the creation, you see that the one who abides by the ‘dos and do nots’ and acts in accordance with them is respectful of the creation around him and does not spread corruption or transgression. On the other hand, the carefree and unrestrained ones are a source of trouble and corruption in the world around them. Tell me, are these two equal? Are the righteous and the wicked equal? One of them harms Allah’s creation and troubles the whole world, while the other sets things straight, helps people and makes them happy. Are the two equal?

Furthermore, in the process of teaching, do we not give our students examinations at the end of the year and we see that some succeed, while others fail? Do we not in this world have rules for punishment and reward, to repay the doers of good and punish the doers of evil?

But why do some people deny accountability on the Judgement Day, the day when all will be repaid for what they did? Even those who do not believe in the Judgement Day believe in the principles of reward and punishment. They have punishments for crimes against the society, to discipline those who defy the law. They criminalize certain deeds and make them worthy of punishment, to keep their daily lives in order. But why do they deny the same principle when it comes to Allah and the Afterlife? Is it comprehensible that all the people in this life from the start to the end should be left without accountability or without rewards for the good and punishments for the bad?

By Allah, if the matter was as they claim, the criminals, and deviants will have succeeded and the outlaws of society and religion will have profited by doing what they do and oppressing others! They will have gotten away with their crimes, but the believers and the upright who kept adhering to a spiritual path, in vain, will have lost everything.

Yet, Allah's saying: '...but most people do not believe' (Ghafir: 59) shows that this matter does not depend on rational thinking; rather, it depends on our faith. If it was left to rational thinking alone, we will say what we just said above, but the whole issue is talking about belief and faith. The one who does not want faith and wants to escape its tethers, and does not want his life to be bound by a methodology of 'dos and do nots', wants to be free to live his life according to his desires.

This is why we say that those who worship trees and rocks do this because their deities have no methodology and give them no responsibilities. Such worship is by definition false because worship means obeying the deity being worshipped. What have these so-called deities commanded them to do? From what have they forbidden them? What have they prepared for those who worship them? And what have they prepared for those who reject them?

Clearly, they only chose these deities in order for them to live life without restrictions or responsibility, with no methodology and nothing to restrain their passions.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

وَقَالَ رَبُّكُمُ ٱدْعُونِىٓ أَسْتَجِبْ لَكُمْ ۚ إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يَسْتَكْبِرُونَ
عَنْ عِبَادَتِى سَيَدْخُلُونَ جَهَنَّمَ دَاخِرِينَ ﴿٦٠﴾

Your Lord says, ‘Call on Me and I will answer you;
those who are too proud to serve Me will enter Hell humiliated’ [60] (The Quran, Ghafir: 60)

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Your Lord...’ (Ghafir: 60). In Arabic, the word ‘Rabukum’ (your Lord) is derived from ‘tarbiyya’ which means upbringing. Your Lord brings you out of non-existence and keeps you from annihilation. As long as He is my Lord, I am His charge; He guarantees my provision and sustenance, and before that He gave me limbs with which to work and live. He is my Lord and my Creator, Who brought me into the world and provided me with the means of life.

When the Lord Glorified is He created the systems of the world, He created them to be inter-dependable and integrative. He made one thing strong and the other weak, one healthy and the other sick.

The strong one lives his life to the full, having more than his needs. He should give what is above his needs to the weak one who is not able to do that much. The Creator could make all people strong, but He wants His creation to be connected in their daily affairs through need, and not through favours. Being connected will not have been possible if each one had all his needs because relying only favours can never connect people together as they will not really need each other.

Allah Glorified is He then says: ‘...Call on Me and I will answer you...’ (Ghafir: 60), that is, regarding those things in which you lack the means, you are unable to achieve, or do not find anyone around you to help you. When you find no option but to turn and supplicate Me, I will answer you, for it is Me (Allah): ‘Who responds to the distressed when he calls out to Him and relieves the suffering’ (an-Naml: 62). He is our Lord and Creator; He brought us into existence and provided us with limbs and means and He established us upon earth, and we have no refuge beside Him to go to if the means become too difficult for us.

If the means are there before you and each person is fulfilling his role, do not ignore the means and call Allah to help you; you must use the means at your disposal first. Use them first and, if you have no success, then go to the Ultimate Cause.

We notice here that Allah the Exalted has commanded us to supplicate Him and has promised us that He will answer us. Yet despite this there are those among us who supplicate Allah and are not answered; how can this be? The scholars say it is because the person calling is not in real distress; if he was in a state of real distress, he will be answered.

Imagine someone living in a nice house asking Allah for a villa or a palace. When Allah the Most High gives him a palace, he then says that he needs another house for him to rent out to pay for the upkeep of the palace! This is a supplication for luxury, not out of distress. Being answered is conditional upon being truly in need.

Concerning our relationship between each other, the Lord Glorified is He does not excuse His slaves from the responsibility of bringing benefit to His creatures. The scholars say that the one who has plenty should spend, and the one who does not have plenty should give sincere advice to the one who does. If the advice does not bear fruit, this is not the end and there is still more left for us to do. Allah Glorified is He tells us: ‘There is no blame on the weak, or the sick, or those who have no means to spend [for the sake of Allah], as long as they provide sincere advice for the sake of Allah and His Messenger. And there is no reason to reproach those who do good. Allah is Most Forgiving, Most merciful’ (at-Tawba: 91).

When do we do this? The scholars say that if you have no wealth then you must: ‘…provide sincere advice for the sake of Allah and His Messenger’ (at-Tawba: 91). If you do give advice but the person does not respond, the scholars say you should look at yourself and your reaction. Why is this? Allah Glorified is He tells us that there is no blame attached to those who came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him seeking mounts and he said to them, 'I cannot find a mount for you', and as a result: ‘They turned away with their eyes overflowing with tears of grief since they had nothing they could contribute’ (at-Tawba: 92).

Clearly, no one is excused! You either spend from your wealth or give good advice, and if you are not able to do either you should feel grieved because you had nothing to contribute. Feeling bad is not sufficient here; rather, one should feel emotional pain accompanied by weeping–weeping because one did not find anything to spend in the way of Allah.

Thus, the main point is to bring benefit to Allah's creatures. If everyone were to do this, nobody will be left needy. After this we may ask, 'Is this person poor because he is incapable or is he pretending? If he is just pretending and using begging as a profession, no attention is to be paid to him. But if he is poor because he is incapable for some reason, he can sit in his house in dignity and honour as in this case the rich man comes to him and gives him his portion. In this way the capable are at the service of the incapable.

Allah Glorified is He then says: '...those who are too proud to serve Me will enter Hell humiliated' (Ghafir: 60). His saying: '...those who are too proud to serve Me...' (Ghafir: 60) means those who are too proud to humble themselves to Allah and supplicate Him, and too proud to confess their neediness for Allah. This is why the people of true knowledge say, 'Do not let the target of your supplication be to have it answered, rather, let it be the humility of the needy before the One Who has plenty'. This is the true essence of worship.

This is why our Lord Glorified is He corrects the mistakes we do when calling Him, for man often supplicates for bad things thinking he is supplicating for something good. Allah Glorified is He says this is because: 'Man is prone to be hasty' (al-Isra': 11).

One may ask for evil things for himself thinking they are good, and part of Allah's Mercy towards us is that He does not answer us. This is why we say in praise of Allah, 'Glory be to the One Who corrects the errors of the supplicants by not answering them'. By this He protects us from harm, for how often does a man supplicate for evil thinking it to be good!

We said previously that a woman may sometimes chide her naughty son by saying things like, 'May Allah punish you and let me see it!', but it is due to Allah's Mercy towards her that he does not answer her. In such a case, His depriving her is a gift.

But why will they: ‘...enter Hell humiliated’ (Ghafir: 60)? Why will they be so shamed and disgraced? Because when we call Allah the Most High we intend to obey Him, since supplication and worship are correlated. This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said, ‘Every matter that does not start with the Name of Allah is maimed’,(1) that is, there is no blessing in it.

We know that we should say, ‘In the Name of Allah, the Most Merciful, the Most Compassionate’, and that we should start any action with the Name of Allah in order to recall His Blessings in that action. But why do we invoke, ‘The Most Merciful, the Most Compassionate’? The scholars say that perhaps we might commit an act of disobedience, and for this reason we invoke Allah by His Attributes of Mercy, for He never abandons His slave even if he has been disobedient.

To sum up, those mentioned in this verse will enter the fire abased and humiliated because they disdained to call upon Allah and were too proud to worship Him. The fire is the reward for arrogance.

The Lord Glorified is He then says:

ٱللَّهُ ٱلَّذِى جَعَلَ لَكُمُ ٱلَّيْلَ لِتَسْكُنُوا۟ فِيهِ وَٱلنَّهَارَ مُبْصِرًا ۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ
لَذُو فَضْلٍ عَلَى ٱلنَّاسِ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَ ٱلنَّاسِ لَا يَشْكُرُونَ ﴿٦١﴾

It is God who has given you the night in which to rest and the day in which to see. God is truly bountiful to people, but most people do not give thanks [61] (The Quran, Ghafir: 61)

The Lord Glorified is He mentions here two of His signs in creation: night and day. We know what night is: the time between sunset and sunrise. Similarly, we know that the day is the time between sunrise and sunset. These are two periods of time, which mean they contain events. And given that periods of time contain events, every event must happen at a particular time.

(1) This was narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (2/359) on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him: Prophet Muhammad said, ‘Any speech or matter of any significance that does not start with the remembrance of Allah is maimed (abtar)–or he said (‘aqta`’--cut off)’.

Events that require work take up a specified time. When you work in the daytime you tire out your limbs and need a time for rest. The Creator has given you the night for rest and the day for work. You rest at night to replenish your strength and energy for the work of the coming day.

If circumstances prevent you from getting your rest at night, how will you be during the day? You will be tired and too drained to do anything. Thus, it seems that Allah the Most High wishes to teach us that the creation contains dualities. But it is part of man's heedlessness to assume that these dualities are at odds, rather than being in harmony.

In one of the chapters of the Quran, Allah Glorified is He swears: 'By the enshrouding night, by the radiant day, by His creation of male and female, truly [the ends] you strive towards are diverse' (al-Layl: 1-4). This means that the night has a role, the day has a role, the male has a role and the female has a role. Do not think that the night and the day are at odds with each other, or that the male and the female are at odds with each other. Each one compliments the other. They are paired together, not opposed, as some people think.

This is why Allah the Exalted says to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him in one of the verses of the Quran: 'Say, "Ponder and think; if Allah were to cast perpetual (sarmada) night over you until the Day of Resurrection, what deity other than Him could bring us light? Will you not then listen?" Say, "Ponder and think; if Allah were to cast perpetual (sarmada) day over you until the Day of Resurrection, what deity other than Him could give you night in which to rest? Will you not then see?"' (al-Qasas: 71-72)

In the above verses, one question ends with urging us to 'listen', while the second ends with urging us to 'see', because during the night the faculty of the sense of sight is greatly reduced, while the sense of hearing is very effective for it is what is used to alert us at night. As for the day, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Will you not then see' (al-Qasas: 72) because sight is very effective during the daytime.

Regarding the word 'sarmada' (perpetual), some of the exegetes said the night is not perpetual, and similarly the day, in that they are not continuous and never-ending. Yet, if we look at the motion of the earth and the perpetuality of night and day, we find that they are without break–because when the night leaves us it goes on to others.

Thus, they are both perpetual and without any break, but the perpetuality is invalid pertaining to every single place. This means they are perpetual in and of themselves but not pertaining to each place since their existence in one place is limited as they keep moving to another place.

This is why Allah the Exalted says: ‘It is He who causes the night and the day to succeed one another (khilfa), for those who wish to be mindful or to show [their] gratitude’ (al-Furqan: 62). The word ‘khilfa’ (to succeed one another) means each one follows the other. The night follows the day and the day follows the night. This is clear for us nowadays, as a sign in creation.

What about the beginning of creation, though? Which came first? The scholars say that Allah the Most High created both of them at the same time because the sun was created facing the earth and thus the part of the earth which was facing the sun was in daytime and that which was hidden from it was in nighttime. Then, as the earth rotated in its orbit, the night and the day followed each other. This is a proof of the spherical nature of the world, even though it appears flat.

It is amazing that Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...and the day in which to see (mubsira)...’ (Ghafir: 61) which means things become visible during it. In the past, they used to think that rays came out of the eye and fell on the object we are looking at. This was the case until the Muslim scholar Al-Hasan ibn Al-Haytham(1) came along and proved that the opposite was the case. He proved that light rays come from the object to the eye and thus we can see it.

(1) Al-Hasan ibn Al-Haytham’s full name was Mohammad ibn Al-Hasan ibn Al-Haytham Abu `Ali. He was an engineer from Basra and was dubbed ‘Ptolemy the Second’. He authored several works on engineering and news of his good work reached the Fatimid ruler of the time. He sent a message to the ruler, saying that, ‘If I was in Egypt I will build on the Nile something that will bring benefit in both its times of excess and recess’. Consequently, the ruler called him to Egypt and he went to the south of Aswan, where he wanted to build a dam, but he was unable to complete it. He wrote many books, in excess of seventy, one of which is Al-Manazir. He was born in 354 AH and died around 430 AH (Al-A`lam by Az-Zirikli 6/83).

The proof to this is that we cannot see anything in the dark, while we can see what is in the light because the rays are reflected by the object we are looking at. According to this interpretation, the day itself makes you see (mubsir).

Allah Glorified is He then says: ‘Allah is truly bountiful to people...’ (Ghafir: 61). Indeed, Allah Glorified is He is most generous to all of mankind because He gives to them although they have no rights they can demand from Him. He is generous to them as He created them from nothing. He is generous to them as He keeps them from annihilation, and He is generous to them as He has given them responsibilities. Yes indeed, even in giving them responsibilities, He is generous. How is this?

The scholars say this is because when He made you responsible, He laid down responsibilities concerning things that benefit you greatly. He Himself does not benefit from them in any way, and yet He rewards you for them. Hence, Allah is doubly generous to you by giving you responsibilities.

Allah Glorified is He continues: ‘But most people do not give thanks’ (Ghafir: 61). This means that a small portion of mankind is grateful. Gratitude can be known through a resulting increase in blessings since gratitude and blessings are concurrent. The Lord the Most High has promised that: ‘If you are grateful, I will most certainly give you more and more’ (Ibrahim: 7).

Then the Lord the Most High says:

ذَٰلِكُمُ ٱللَّهُ رَبُّكُمْ خَٰلِقُ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ لَّآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ ۖ فَأَنَّىٰ تُؤْفَكُونَ ﴿٦٢﴾
كَذَٰلِكَ يُؤْفَكُ ٱلَّذِينَ كَانُوا۟ بِـَٔايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ يَجْحَدُونَ ﴿٦٣﴾

Such is God your Lord, the Creator of all things: there is no God but Him. How can you be so deluded? [62] This is how deluded those who deny God’s messages are [63]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 62 - 63)

The word, ‘Such...’ (Ghafir: 62) refers to Allah Glorified is He meaning the One Who has done these things for you and been generous to you is Allah, your Lord: ‘The Creator of all things...’ (Ghafir: 62), and this is something that no one has denied and no-one has claimed for himself.

Allah the Most High says: ‘There is no god but Him...’ (Ghafir: 62). This is how the Lord Glorified is He has judged Himself, that there is nothing worthy of worship but Him. This means you have faith in Allah and Allah Glorified is He has faith in Himself and bears witness to Himself. He bore witness Himself that there is nothing worthy of worship save Himself before anybody else bore witness to this. This is why He uses the word ‘Be!’ He knows that this word is effective because it is His Word, which has no rival. There is no other god to stop, divert, or protest against Him.

Allah the Exalted tells us: ‘Allah bears witness that there is no deity but Him, as do the angels and those who have knowledge. He upholds justice. There is no deity but Him the Almighty the All-Wise’ (Al-‘Imran: 18). The scholars say that Allah Glorified is He bore witness to Himself. He bears witness to Himself by Himself, while the angels bear witness according to what they see, and the people of knowledge bear witness based on their deductions.

When the Lord Glorified is He says: ‘The Creator of all things...’ (Ghafir: 62), this phrase is both general and specific. Such a phrase could be either true or–Allah forbid–otherwise. If it is true then the evidence holds, but if it is otherwise then where is the creator of everything? Where is the creator of the universe if Allah is not its creator? Who is it? Why has he kept quiet and not revealed himself? If he does not know about the existence of Allah the Most High then he is a heedless and a sleepy deity, unfit for Divinity, and if he knows about Allah giving us this information and he has not opposed it, then he is weak, and an object of worship should never be weak. This is why Allah Glorified is He says, emphasising the soundness of this we are discussing: ‘Say, “If there were other deities along with Him, as they say there are, they will have tried to find a way to the Lord of the Throne”’ (al-Isra’: 42), which means each will have gone to the True Deity to dispute with Him over why He took their creations and claimed them for Himself. But this has not happened.

Allah Glorified is He then says: ‘How can you be so deluded?’ (Ghafir: 62), that is, how do you deviate from the Truth to which reason bears witness, which is established by evidence and proofs and the world we see before us? The Truth of this matter is clear. This claim has been made openly and absolutely, yet no-one has stood up to oppose it and no-one has claimed this for himself–and it is well known that a claim is to be judged in favour of the one who makes it as long as no-one stands to oppose it.

We have previously clarified this matter when we mentioned the following scenario: imagine a group of people sitting in a place and when they leave the owner of the place finds a wallet. He tells his servant, ‘Go and find the owner of this wallet’, and his servant goes and rings each of them, one by one. But none of them says that the wallet is his. After that, one of them knocks on the door and says, ‘By Allah, I left my wallet here’. Whose will it be then? It will be for the one who claimed it until another claimant appears!

Allah Glorified is He then says: ‘This is how deluded (yu’fak) those who deny Allah's Messages are’ (Ghafir: 63) which means this is how they deviate from the clear manifest Truth. The phrase: ‘Those who deny Allah’s Messages’ means they deny them out of obstinacy and arrogance. They do not deny them based on proof or logic; rather, they deny them because they are Allah’s signs and they do not want Allah or His Path.

They fear this path that will discipline their actions in life and restrain their caprices. They just want to continue oppressing people in life with the viciousness of their power and unrestrained caprices. Their denial of the signs is the cause of their deviation from the Truth; as if it is something unnatural for them.

This is why we see that the disbelievers of Quraysh were too proud to accept the Truth and were stubborn in the face of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They never bore witness that ‘there is no deity worthy of worship besides Allah’; they did not even say the phrase. Why? Because they knew full well what these words meant and what they implied. If they thought they were mere words to be spoken, they will have said them; but they were Arabs and this was their language, and they knew what the phrase ‘there is no deity except Allah’ meant: That there is nothing worthy of worship except Allah, there is no leadership and no opinion except that of Allah, there is no judgement but Allah’s and there is no submission except to Allah. How were they to accept this when they had gotten used to their leadership over the Arab tribes?

The word 'yu'fak' (deluded) is derived from the word 'ifk' which means lying and inverting realities. To lie is to make a statement that does not accord with reality; as though one is inverting reality upside down. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And He [Allah] brought down the overthrown (al-mu'tafika) cities' (an-Najm: 53). The word used in this case to describe the overthrown cities is 'al-mu'tafika' which is derived from the word 'yu'fak' and literally means the towns (1) that Allah turned upside down. This is what lying does to reality, it denies what exists and affirms what does not.

Next, Allah the Exalted says: 'How can you be so deluded?' (Ghafir: 62), meaning, how are you turned away from the clear Truth? Man can realise Allah just by his innate nature, and it is not for man to oppose this matter because it is evident and clear. All the teachings of religion are intrinsic to man's innate nature, more than anything; it is only the caprices of the baser-self, the heedlessness, and vicissitudes of time, that cloud this disposition.

All the teachings of the creed and its evidences can be deduced and reached by the pure innate nature of man. The proof to this is that there are people who did not believe in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him but still thought about these matters, reflected upon the signs of creation and concluded that the Creator exists.

The philosophers who did not like the idea of having Messengers said, 'We are guided by our natures. We have no need for Messengers'. This is what Socrates(2) said, but his student Aristotle(1) debated with him and presented him with signs and questions, exactly as religion does.

(1) The word 'al-mu'tafika' (overthrown) refers to the towns of the people of Lut (Lot) peace be upon him that Allah turned upside down and bombarded with stones of hardened clay (sijjil mandud). This is why Allah said: 'And then covered them from sight forever' (an-Najm: 54), that is, with stones that He rained down upon them (Tafsir Ibn Kathir 4/259). Ibn Manzhur said in Lisan Al-`Arab under 'afaka', 'The word 'al-i'tifak', as understood by the scholars of the Arabic language, means 'inversion', as in the towns of the people of Lut which, along with their people, were turned upside down'.

(2) Socrates was a Greek philosopher and teacher. He was born in 469 BC and lived in Athens. He was known to have been humble in his clothes, food and drink, and he used to teach the people in the streets, markets and stadiums by asking questions to his listeners. He was accused of corrupting the youth against the rulers and was sentenced to death by being forced to drink poison. He died in 399 BC at the age of 71 (Wikipedia).

He said to him, ‘Look at yourself and your formation. Reflect upon your abilities. I am not telling you to look at the signs in the universe around you, rather look to yourself and your abilities. Do you not have senses?’ ‘Of course’, he replied. ‘Identify them’, he said. ‘I have eyes to see, ears to hear, a tongue to speak, a hand to touch etc.’ ‘Why have you been created with two eyes, two ears and one tongue?’ he asked, ‘Is there not some wisdom behind this? Reflect upon the wisdom of being created in this manner. You have been given two eyes for you to see things from over here and over there, and two ears for you to hear things from over here and over there’.

‘As for the tongue, one is sufficient to fulfil its role of speaking and articulating. With it, you can also taste food. Despite its small size, the tongue can differentiate between hot, cold, sweet and sour. If you like what you taste, you swallow it, and if not, you spit it out. It is as through it is a guardian over what you eat. Moreover, the sense of taste encourages us to eat, and in this way it keeps us alive and strong in order to be able to fulfil what our Deity seeks from us’.

‘In addition to this, do you not see the wisdom in placing the entrance for food near the nose which smells and the eye which sees? The Creator has created them in this outstanding manner for you to be able to see and smell your food before eating it. As for the exit, where is it? It is far away from the eyes and far away from the nose in order not to be harmed by your excretions’.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Can you not see the signs within yourselves?’ (adh-Dhariyat: 21). Reflect upon the eye. It has an eyelid that opens and closes at one’s behest. Above the eye is the eyebrow that prevents sweat from dripping into the eye. Under that come the eyelashes that defend the eye against harmful things like dirt and dust, and if something manages to escape into the eye, the tears wash it out and clean it, like the windshield wiper in a car.

(1) Aristotle is more commonly known as Plato (a name derived from his large body) and he is the most famous of the Greek philosophers. He was born in Athens to an aristocratic family and lived between the years 427 and 347 BC. He joined his teacher Socrates at the age of twenty and was deeply affected by the unjust execution of his teacher. His philosophy was based upon how the politics of the state should be conducted in accordance with philosophy. He wrote his book ‘The Republic of Plato’ (See Qamus Natan Al-Falsafi by Jirar Duruzawi and Andrverse Rasil, translated into Arabic by Akram Antaki).

Then there is the nose with which we smell the pleasant scents of nature and by which we can distinguish things. These days they employ the dogs' sense of smell to uncover crimes and criminals.

These are all concepts that a man with a pure heart will reach by his natural disposition, arriving at the Truth with the minimum of reflection.

As for Allah's saying: 'How can you be so deluded?' (Ghafir: 62), it carries the meaning of amazement at people's deviation from the Truth, since it is something that should not happen. People of intellect should not stray from the Truth when it is so clear.

Allah Glorified is He wonders in the chapter of al-Baqara: 'How can you refuse to acknowledge Allah!' (al-Baqara: 28). This is an exclamatory question which means, 'Tell us how on earth can you disbelieve when all these clear signs indicating the Power of Allah the Exalted are present in front of you?'

The Lord the Most High then says:

ٱللَّهُ ٱلَّذِى جَعَلَ لَكُمُ ٱلْأَرْضَ قَرَارًا وَٱلسَّمَآءَ بِنَآءً
وَصَوَّرَكُمْ فَأَحْسَنَ صُوَرَكُمْ وَرَزَقَكُم مِّنَ ٱلطَّيِّبَٰتِ ۚ ذَٰلِكُمُ ٱللَّهُ
رَبُّكُمْ ۖ فَتَبَارَكَ ٱللَّهُ رَبُّ ٱلْعَٰلَمِينَ ٦٤

It is God who has given you the earth for a dwelling place and the heavens for a canopy. He shaped you, formed you well, and provided you with good things. Such is God your Lord, so glory be to Him, the Lord of the Worlds [64]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 64)

Allah the Exalted says: 'It is Allah who has made the earth a dwelling place (qarar) for you...' (Ghafir: 64). This means it is a place for you to settle and live. The words 'for you' mean 'for all Allah's slaves'; this is explained in Allah's saying in the chapter of ar-Rahman: 'And the earth He laid [out] for the creatures' (ar-Rahman: 10). But which land and which living beings are meant here? He does not specify.

Therefore, all the earth is for all the creatures. But is this really the case in our world? No, it is not. And the corruption that has taken hold of the world, the crises that have befallen people and the constraints on their livelihoods have only come about because this principle has not been applied.

In the world these days, there are lands without people, while in other places there are people without land. The cause of this is the presence of barriers that men have placed to come between the slaves of Allah and the land.

Allah the Most High tells us: ‘When the angels take the souls of those who have wronged themselves, they ask them, “What circumstances were you in?” They reply, “We were oppressed in this land”, and the angels say, “But was Allah's earth not spacious enough for you to migrate to, away [from evil]? (an-Nisa’: 97) But O Lord, how are we to emigrate when they have set up borders, placed barriers on the gates, and enacted laws for entry for which Allah has given no authority?

Look at a map and see the borders of the different countries, you will find them to be complex and entangled! In some regions you will find the borders to be unclear or disputed, while in others you find them to be the cause of international conflicts.

If this shows anything, it is that the earth is just one and that it is for everyone. When man came to it, he divided it up and placed borders. Allah the Exalted created it as one wide and open area because if your sustenance becomes constrained in one place you can go to another. If this Divine Principle is not applied, the problems will not be solved and crises will continue to take a heavy toll on the people.

Being settled (al-istiqrar) on earth takes two forms: being settled in one’s daily life and work and being settled by finding rest and tranquillity. One takes place in the house in which we live and take shelter. It is man’s place of stay, rest, and sleep (mabeet). This is why it is called in Arabic ‘al-bayt’ (house).

A man will also have a place where he works and seeks his provision. This is why Allah Glorified is He mentions Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him as saying: ‘O our Lord! I have settled some of my offspring in a valley in which there is no arable land, close to Allah's sanctified House' (Ibrahim: 37), and he asked Allah: 'My Lord, make this city secure' (al-Baqara: 126). The first verse relates to a place of sleep and rest, while the second relates to a place of work and toil.

You will notice that the place of sleep and rest is for you alone whereas the place of work is shared with others. Also, the earth is not just a resting place for you in your life in this world, it is also your resting place after you die because Allah the Most High says: 'From it (this earth), did We create you, and into it We shall return you' (Ta Ha: 55).

Allah Glorified is He then says: 'And the heavens a canopy (bina'a)...' (Ghafir: 64), that is, it is built perfectly with no faults in it. It is well known that a building (al-bina') stands upon a supporting structure that bears its weight. This is why Allah Glorified is He tells us: 'Allah is He Who raised the heavens without any supports that you can see' (ar-Ra'd: 2); this means either there are no supports at all or there are invisible supports which our senses cannot perceive. This means the sky is supported by Allah's Power! Certainly, the earth upon which we live is but a sphere floating in space! But why does it not fall despite its weight? Allah Glorified is He says: 'Indeed, Allah holds the heavens and the earth, lest they cease. And if they should cease, no one could hold them [in place] after Him. Indeed, He is Forbearing and Forgiving' (Fatir: 41) meaning, that no one can hold them if Allah let them go.

The Lord the Most High gives us a palpable example to help us understand His Power in holding the heavens and earth. He tells us to ponder on the physical things and to extract evidence for that which is hidden from us. He tells us: 'Do they not observe the birds above them, spreading and closing their wings? None can uphold them except the Lord of Mercy' (al-Mulk: 19). Yes indeed, we see the birds up in the air hovering without moving their wings, yet despite that they do not fall. So, who is holding them? Their Lord Glorified is He is the One holding them with His Power, and similarly He holds the heavens and the earth with His Power.

Then He says: 'He shaped you, formed you well...' (Ghafir: 64). Having spoken of the things in the universe that are outside ourselves: the night and day and the heavens and earth, Allah speaks of something within in ourselves.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'Soon We shall show them Our signs in the [furthest] regions [of the earth] and in their own souls until it becomes clear to them that this is the Truth' (Fussilat: 53).

Consequently, He says: 'He shaped you...' (Ghafir: 64) which means he has given you different forms by which each one can be distinguished from others. After that, He has given you different names to differentiate between the individuals in order for people to be known properly; in order for no one to do something and pretend to be someone else. Hence, the differences between people are important to attribute the actions to their rightful doers.

Next, Allah the Most High says: 'Formed you well...' (Ghafir: 64) meaning that He has given us the best form among all His creatures. Allah Glorified is He could have formed man in any shape He wished. He could have made him walk on four legs for example like an animal; but he honoured us, gave us an excellent form, and made us walk straight and upright.

Allah the Exalted says: 'O man, what has lured you away from your Generous Lord Who created you, shaped you, and proportioned you in whatever form He chose!' (al-Infitar: 6-8) This means He made us in the best, most well-proportioned and most beautiful form.

After that He says: 'And provided you with good things....' (Ghafir: 64). These things provide nutrition to maintain our life, yet here Allah did not mention procreation, which maintains our kind. He says one thing and leaves the other for another time to have no place in His Book free of the miracles of His creation.

Allah Glorified is He continues: '...Such is Allah your Lord, so glory be to Him, the Lord of the Worlds' (Ghafir: 64) meaning, He is transcendent and sanctified.

All blessings, bounties, and sustenance come from Him. The word 'tabarak' (glory be to Him) takes up its fair share in the Book of Allah. We find it used in connection with material things and we find it used in connection with spiritual things and the path that Allah has laid down for the uprightness of our daily lives. Allah the Exalted has given you a material body and he has given you a soul by means of which your body thrives.

هُوَ ٱلۡحَيُّ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ فَٱدۡعُوهُ مُخۡلِصِينَ لَهُ ٱلدِّينَۗ ٱلۡحَمۡدُ لِلَّهِ رَبِّ ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ٦٥

He is the Living One and there is no God but Him, so call on Him, and dedicate your religion entirely to Him. Praise be to God, the Lord of the Worlds [65] (The Quran, Ghafir: 65)

Allah the Most High says: ‘He is the Ever-Living...’ (Ghafir: 65). It is as though the basis for all the attributes of perfection is the presence of life, for power cannot be present without life, hearing cannot be present without life, and sight cannot be present without life. The attribute ‘the Ever-Living’ means that Allah is not from those things that change. We have existence and a life which is bound to that existence. The Lord, however, is Ever Living in His Essence (dhat). ‘The Ever-Living’ (Al-Hayy) is an attribute of His Essence, while ‘the One Who grants life’ (Al-Muhyiyy) is a description of His Actions. Given that ‘the Ever-Living’ is an attribute of His Essence, He can never perish. It means that He does not die, yet His attribute of being ‘the One Who grants life’ has an opposite, which is ‘the One Who grants death (Al-Mumit). He grants one life while He grants another death.

Scholars say that the Divine Attribute that has an opposite describes one of His Actions, while the attribute that has no opposite is an attribute of His Essence. Hence, when you call upon Him, saying, ‘O Ever-Living’, this is an attribute of His Essence, while when you say, ‘O You Who grants life’, this describes His Actions. That which concerns His Essence persists unchanged, and that which concerns His Actions results in Him giving or taking (life etc.).

Clearly, as long as Allah is the Ever-Living and there is nothing worthy of worship but Him: ‘So call on Him...’ (Ghafir: 65), with the condition that you, ‘Dedicate your religion entirely to Him...’ (Ghafir: 65), that is, when you call on Him let nothing else be on your mind, for if there is nothing else on your mind when you call Him, He will be with you and will answer you. Yes indeed: ‘So call on Him...’ (Ghafir: 65), for He is the One Who supports all. He tells you to sleep and rest because He, your Lord, is: ‘The One Who supports all; slumber does not overtake Him or sleep’ (al-Baqara: 255). It is as though He is coddling the faithful. Allah tells us: ‘So call on Him, and dedicate your religion entirely to Him...’ (Ghafir: 65). Beware of saying, ‘I have put my trust in Allah and you', or 'I have put my trust in Allah and then you' because this is false. Suffice yourself with Allah alone; and sufficient is He as a guardian.

When you call on Him and are sincere in your faith to Him, you have put your affair into the Hand of the One Lord, and it is He Who is capable of doing what you ask Him. You are not left to the pity of one who is incapable. But notice that your supplication was answered by Allah Glorified is He and your request was granted before you even supplicated, before you even knew how to supplicate; in fact, before you even existed. In fact, all He wants from you is for you to manifest the humility of slavery to the Majesty of His Lordship.

The Lord Glorified is He then says: '...Praise be to Allah, the Lord of the Worlds' (Ghafir: 65) which means praise Allah Who has been so gracious to you with all these blessings, from the very beginning of your creation. He created you from nothing and kept you from annihilation until the whole matter will end with you, Allah willing, going to paradise. Then when we enter paradise we will say, as Allah the Most High tells us: 'Praise be to Allah, the Lord of the worlds!' (Yunus: 10)

Next, Allah the Most High says:

قُلۡ إِنِّي نُهِيتُ أَنۡ أَعۡبُدَ ٱلَّذِينَ تَدۡعُونَ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ لَمَّا جَآءَنِيَ
ٱلۡبَيِّنَٰتُ مِن رَّبِّي وَأُمِرۡتُ أَنۡ أُسۡلِمَ لِرَبِّ ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ٦٦

Say [Prophet], 'Since clear evidence has come to me from my Lord I am forbidden to serve those you call upon besides God: I am commanded to submit to the Lord of the Worlds' [66] (The Quran, Ghafir: 66)

Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say', addressing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: '...I have been forbidden to serve those you call on besides Allah' (Ghafir: 66). Clearly, this is not a command from me, this command is from Allah and it has come to me in a clear and manifest verse. The Lord the Exalted then says: '...And I have been commanded to submit to the Lord of the Worlds' (Ghafir: 66). I have been commanded to submit my affairs to the Lord of the Worlds.

Yes indeed, because even in this life when one of us is not good at something and things do not go in his favour, he turns to one who can help him with his needs. An example of this is when we go to a lawyer to look into a case, or to a doctor for a diagnosis, etc., you surely cannot defend yourself in front of a judge or diagnose yourself! When you go to a specialist, you surrender your affair to him and let him do what he thinks is best without arguing with him or rejecting his commands.

Therefore: '...submit to the Lord of the Worlds' (Ghafir: 66) is a command for the incapable to submit himself to the One Who is capable. If your Lord the Most High orders you to do something, you accept it because of your faith in Him. You should do what you do with the doctor when he prescribes the right medicine for your condition. You do not argue with him or say, 'Why did you write such-and-such and leave out such-and-such?' Even when we are asked about the medicine, we say, 'By Allah, the doctor prescribed it for me'; we put the whole responsibility upon the doctor's shoulders.

Hence, if you surrender yourself to a doctor who is a human like yourself and who can be right or wrong, because you see he has knowledge and wisdom which you lack, how can you not surrender to Allah Who is All Knowing, Wise, and Fully Capable?

When your Lord Glorified is He orders you to do something, obey His orders and carry them out without disputing, protesting, or showing discontent against what He has judged for you. The Lord teaches us a lesson in submission to Him in the story of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and how he surrendered himself and his affair to his Lord Glorified is He when Allah commanded him to sacrifice his son Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him whom he was 'granted despite his old age' (1) and after he had despaired of having a child. This is why he praised Allah, saying: 'Praise be to Allah

---

(1) It is mentioned in Genesis in the Old Testament that Ibrahim was 86 years old when Ismail was born (Genesis 16: 16), that there were 14 years between Ismail (Ishmael) and Ishaq (Isaac), and that Ibrahim was 100 years old at the time he had Ishaq (Genesis 5: 21).

Who has granted me in old age Ismail (Ishmael) and Ishaq (Isaac). Indeed, my Lord is the Hearer of supplications' (Ibrahim: 39).

But why did Allah use the word ''ala al-kibar' (lit. 'over old age') and not 'ma' al-kibar'[1] (with old age) in this verse. To make this easier to understand, some of the exegetes said that there is a difference between a two–letter word and three-letter word; the Quran does not use a two–letter word and use a three-letter word instead except for a reason dictated by the meaning. The exegetes said that ''ala al-kibar' (despite old age) is an assumption that he is not able to father children, but Allah's Intent and Will will overrule this assumption; Allah's Will is 'over and above old age'.

Similarly, in the story of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him Allah Glorified is He said: 'My Lord, how will I have a boy when my wife is barren and I have reached extreme old age?' (Maryam: 8) But the angels answered: 'Thus [it will be]; your Lord says, "It is easy for Me ('alaya), for I created you before while you were nothing"' (Maryam: 9).

The word '`ala' here, from which 'alaya' is derived, means that old age dictates his inability to father children, yet Allah's Intent is 'over and above old age'. We also understand this meaning from Allah's saying: 'And indeed, your Lord is full of forgiveness for the people despite ('ala) their wrongdoing, and indeed, your Lord is severe in penalty' (ar-Ra'd: 6). Some scholars said that the word '`ala' here means 'with' (ma`), but this is not correct; rather, it means 'over and above all their evildoing'. The Lord the Most High is saying, 'Although evildoings demand punishment, Allah's Forgiveness is transcendent above evildoings and above punishing the evildoer for his evil'.

Allah Glorified is He tells him to say: '...I have been forbidden to serve those you call on besides Allah...' (Ghafir: 66) prohibiting him because He loves him. That is why He tells him to direct his worship to the One Who is able to do things for him. An advice like this only comes from one who cares for you. This is just like you advising a friend and showing him what is good; had you not cared for him, you will not have advised him.

---

Next, the Lord Glorified is He says: '...I have been commanded to submit to the Lord of the Worlds' (Ghafir: 66) which means I have been commanded to submit my reins to my Lord; I do what he has ordered me to do, and I abstain from what He has prohibited me from. If there is something to which Allah the Most High has said neither 'do' nor 'do not', then I treat it as permissible, even if it is something that a normal person may consider distasteful. Even if Allah the Exalted gives you a command in which you see clear hardship for yourself, you should realise that He wants good for you in a way that you may not understand, as we mentioned in the story of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him.

We know that Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was tested by His Lord with many things that contained a great deal of hardship. Allah the Most High tells us: 'Ibrahim (Abraham) was tested by his Lord with certain commandments, which he fulfilled' (al-Baqara: 124), and when he had fulfilled them, Allah Glorified is He said to him: 'I will make you a leader of people' (al-Baqara: 124). As a young man he was tested by being cast into the fire, and at his old age he was tested by being commanded to sacrifice his son at a time when his son was dearer to him than his own self. It was very difficult for him because when a man becomes old and approaches the end of his life and the next life, he wants to be succeeded by his children.

Thus, he was tested at the beginning of his life by the fire and he was tested in his old age by being commanded to kill his son. This latter test was extreme, for were his son to die a normal death this will have been enough of a calamity for him; imagine how difficult it was for him when he was told to slaughter his son with his very own hands! Furthermore, this test did not come by means of a direct command, rather by a vision in his sleep that was open to interpretation. Yet, despite this, Ibrahim peace be upon him yielded to a mere vision because he knew that it was from Allah.

But, how did Prophet Ibrahim peace be upon him fulfil this command? Did he take his son unawares? No, he preferred to include him in the test in order not to deprive him of the reward of submitting to Allah. He said to him: 'I have seen in a dream that I should offer you as a sacrifice; see what your view of this is' (as-Saffat: 102). He said it was 'a dream' to give Ismail (Ishmael) an opportunity to say, 'Father, how could you kill me based on a dream?' As in such a case, Ismail needed to submit to Allah in order for him not to refuse. In fact, Ismail replied: 'Father! Do as you are commanded' (as-Saffat: 102).

Imagine if Prophet Ibrahim peace be upon him had taken his son unawares, throwing him on the ground and holding a knife ready to slaughter him! What will have been the feelings of the son towards the father? He will have hated him and he will have been enraged by his action. This will consequently deny him the reward of the test. Moreover, reflect upon what Ismail peace be upon him said to his father: 'Father! Do as you are commanded' (as-Saffat: 102). He reminded him that this is a command. That is to say, 'O father, as long as this is an order from above, then do it'. We have said previously that one should not be happy or angry about an action until one knows who did it. If you know that it was your Lord the Most High who did it, the matter is closed and no room is left except for submission.

This is how we see that both of them submitted! Allah Glorified is He tells us clearly: 'So when the two had both surrendered [to Allah]' (as-Saffat: 103); the word 'both' is used in describing the incident: 'And he (Ibrahim) laid his son down on his face' (as-Saffat: 103), and he began to actually carry out the command, his Lord Glorified is He told him to raise his hand because he had passed the test. Allah Glorified is He tells us: 'We called out to him, "Ibrahim, you have fulfilled the dream". This is how We reward those who do good; it was a clear test [to prove their true characters], and We ransomed his son with a momentous sacrifice' (as-Saffat: 104-107).

This is how tribulation is lifted. An affliction is not lifted until it is met with acceptance. The ruling of death for Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him was lifted and his ransom was revealed. His Lord replaced any disquiet that had afflicted him and gave him glad tidings of another child(1): 'And [in time] We gave him the glad tiding of Ishaq (Isaac), [who, too, will be] a prophet and one of the righteous' (as-Saffat: 112) meaning that We were going to take Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him but when you showed contentment with our decision regarding him, We decreed for you another son. Furthermore, We made both of them prophets, and of their offspring prophets. Reflect upon what submitting to Allah's Decree and being contented with it will bring you. In your submission to Allah, you do not look just at the deed itself, but at the context of the One Who is commanding you to do it.

(1) Allah Glorified is He gave Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him glad tidings of Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him when Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him was 13 years old. Sa`id ibn Al-Musayyib said, 'Allah gave Ibrahim the glad tidings that his son will be a prophet after this affair as a reward for his obedience and patience' (see the chapter of As-Saffat in Zad Al-Masir by Ibn Al-Jawzi).

Next, the Lord the Most High says:

هُوَ ٱلَّذِى خَلَقَكُم مِّن تُرَابٍ ثُمَّ مِن نُّطْفَةٍ ثُمَّ مِنْ عَلَقَةٍ ثُمَّ يُخْرِجُكُمْ forth as infants, then He allowed you to reach maturity, then He let you grow old – though some of you die sooner – and reach your appointed term so that you may reflect [67]

(The Quran, Ghafir: 67)

The Lord Glorified is He takes us back once again to the matter of our first creation: 'It is He who creates you out of dust...' (Ghafir: 67). It is obvious that we have been created twice, so to speak: once from dust when Allah Glorified is He created Adam and Eve peace be upon them and the other by means of procreation leading back to them both

Notice that Allah Glorified is He says: '...out of dust...' (Ghafir: 67), and also: '...out of clay...' (al-An'am: 2), and: '...out of dark slime transmuted' (al-Hijr: 26), as well as: '...out of dry clay, like pottery' (ar-Rahman: 14). These are different stages of one process. When we mix water with dust it becomes clay. If we leave it for a while it putrefies and its odour changes; this is 'dark slime transmuted'. And if we then leave it to dry, it becomes 'dry clay'.

Allah's saying: 'It is He who creates you out of dust...' (Ghafir: 67), does not refer to Adam alone peace be upon him. Indeed, we are all made from dust, even those who are the result of marriage and procreation. How is this? The sperm of the man and the ovum of the woman are made only of the food that we eat, and this food comes from either animals or plants, and both of these grow from the earth.

For this reason, we see that when they run a chemical analysis of the components of the human body they find they are the same elements that are found in soil–sixteen well-known elements. That is, there is material evidence known to us nowadays that supports the fact that man is created from dust; it shows we are all created from dust, even though we were produced by procreation. This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said, ‘You are all from Adam, and Adam was from dust’.(1)

Moreover, when the Lord Glorified is He spoke of the creation, He said: ‘I did not make them witnesses of the creation of the heavens and the earth, nor of the creation of their own selves...’ (al-Kahf: 51) because the heavens and the earth were created before man; man is new to them. And when Adam peace be upon him was being created he was not aware in order to know how he was created. Allah Glorified is He then says something to incapacitate and silence the stubborn: ‘...and neither do I ... take as My helpers those [beings] that lead [men] astray’ (al-Kahf: 51) which means, ‘I do not seek their help either now or when I made the creation’. The phrase: ‘Those that lead men astray’ (al-Kahf: 51) are those who present falsehood as the Truth, and what is meant here by this specifically are those who mislead men regarding the creation, as we find some of them saying nowadays that man was first a primate and then evolved into a human being, as Darwin(2) posited.

(1) At-Tirmidhi related in his Sunnan that Ibn `Umar peace be upon him and his father, said, ‘Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him addressed the people on the Day of Victory in Mecca, saying, ‘O people, Indeed Allah has ridden you of the disgrace of the pre-Islamic period of ignorance and the arrogance of its forefathers. People are of two types: a righteous, Allah-fearing man, who is valued in the sight of Allah, and a wicked, wretched man, who is of little worth in the sight of Allah. Mankind are the children of Adam, and Allah created Adam from dust’ (Sunnan At-Tirmidhi, Hadith 3270).

(2) Darwin was an English zoologist who became famous because of his theory of the evolution of man. He was born in England on the 12th of February 1809 and died on the 19th of April 1882 at the age of 73. He studied medicine and theology and was the author of the books, ‘The Origin of Species’, ‘The Descent of Man’, and ‘The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the Actions of Worms, with Observations on Their Habits’.

In fact, the Lord Glorified is He cuts off their path of misguidance by telling them that they did not witness the creation in order to be able to inform people of it, and that He alone is the Creator and that no one was with Him to know what happened. And for this reason, if you want to know how the creation happened, listen to Him and He will tell you, and indeed He has done this in many verses of his Book.

And if someone were to say that Allah has informed us of this, but we have not actually witnessed it, we will tell them to reflect upon the reality of life around them because it shows the Truth of what Allah has told us. You did not see the creation, but you do see its opposite–death. The destruction of something happens in the opposite way to its construction. When you build a house with four stories, for example, you begin with the first, and if you want to destroy such a building you begin with the fourth.

Death is similar to this. It begins with the soul exiting the body and this relates to the last stage in the creation of man. After the soul leaves the body it becomes stiff and it starts to decay and decompose; this is called a corpse. Then the water evaporates from it and the remains turn into dust. Thus death confirms what is hidden from you of the beginning of creation.

This is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘It is He who creates you out of dust, then out of a drop of sperm, then out of a germ-cell; and then He brings you forth as children; then [He ordains] that you reach maturity, and then, that you grow old’ (Ghafir: 67). These are the stages of creation. Allah the Most High continues: ‘...And then He brings you forth as children’ (Ghafir: 67). The scholars say that one is a child as long as one is growing. Once a person has taken his final form, he has reached the stage of puberty in which he becomes capable of reproduction because his reproductive organs will have reached maturity.

Allah the Exalted says: ‘Yet, when the children among you attain puberty, let them ask leave of you [at all times], even as those [who have reached maturity] before them have been enjoined to ask it...’ (an-Nur: 59). We see that childhood is the stage of growth and puberty is the stage of becoming strong. Then Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...and then [He ordains] that you reach maturity...’ (Ghafir: 67), referring to full strength: ‘...and then, that you grow old...' (Ghafir: 67) meaning you decline from strength into old age and a state of weakness once again, and this is when the body becomes emaciated.

Clearly, when the stages of growth and maturation are completed, the stages of weakness and emaciation begin. In the stage of growth you will find that a man consumes more than he excretes, and thus he grows. In the stage of old age, however, he excretes more and therefore he shrinks and becomes emaciated. His strength declines and his muscles weaken until decline reaches the final storehouse of the body, his bones, which become brittle and break easily because of what they are losing. This is why Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him said: '...O my Lord! Infirm indeed are my bones, and [the hair on] my head glistens with grey hair...' (Maryam: 4) mentioning the weakness of the bones in the last stages of old age.

These stages are from the perspective of the material body. As for the memory and intellectual matters, man becomes forgetful, as Allah Glorified is He says: '...ceasing to know anything of what he once knew so well...' (al-Hajj: 5). His forgetfulness reaches such a level that it is as if he never knew anything. Then we see him moving very slowly, to the extent that he needs to be supported like a child: 'But [let them always remember that] if We lengthen a human being's days, We also cause him to decline in his powers [when he grows old]: will they not, then, use their reason?' (Ya Sin: 68)

Allah Glorified is He then says: '...though some of you [He causes to] die earlier...' (Ghafir: 67), and they do not reach these stages. How many people are there who die in the womb of their mothers, after birth or in childhood? Allah Glorified is He then says: '...and [all this He ordains] so that you might reach a term set [by Him]...' (Ghafir: 67). This means our terms differ and are pre-established by Allah. Some of us live for a moment, some for a few minutes, some for a few hours, some for a few days or months, and there are some who do not live past the first stages of creation, dying as it were in the early stages of embryonic development.

Next the Lord Glorified is He says: '...and that you might [learn to] use your reason' (Ghafir: 67) to understand that when Allah brings you to maturity and you reach the stage of full strength, it is not your essential nature; rather, it is something granted to you, as are all your blessings, and can be taken away from you at any time. And if you know it is a gift which can be withdrawn at any moment, be well mannered with the One Who bestows these blessings on you.

هُوَ ٱلَّذِى يُحۡىِۦ وَيُمِيتُۖ فَإِذَا قَضَىٰٓ أَمۡرٗا فَإِنَّمَا يَقُولُ لَهُۥ كُن فَيَكُونُ ٦٨

It is He who gives life and death, and when He ordains a thing, He says only ‘Be’ and it is [68]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 68)

We know that man passes through stages in his creation, and that his life is uncertain which means he may die at any one of these stages. How are we, then, to understand Allah’s saying: ‘...‘Be’–and it is’ (Ghafir: 68) in regard to the one whose life is only a moment or who dies in the womb of his mother?

The scholars say that the word ‘Be!’ here is addressed to whatever state that person is in at that time, be it an embryo or whatever. It is as though He says to it, ‘Come to life’, and then He takes its life in a way and time appropriate to it which only He knows.

The Lord the Most High then says:

أَلَمۡ تَرَ إِلَى ٱلَّذِينَ يُجَٰدِلُونَ فِيٓ ءَايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ أَنَّىٰ يُصۡرَفُونَ ٦٩
ٱلَّذِينَ كَذَّبُواْ بِٱلۡكِتَٰبِ وَبِمَآ أَرۡسَلۡنَا بِهِۦ رُسُلَنَاۖ فَسَوۡفَ يَعۡلَمُونَ ٧٠

[Prophet], do you see how deluded those who dispute
God’s messages are [69] those who reject the Scripture and the messages We have sent through Our messengers?
They will find out [70] (The Quran, Ghafir: 69 - 70)

As we said previously, Allah’s signs are of three types: signs of creation, such as the sun and the moon; miracles that accompany the Messengers; and the verses of the Quran that bear Allah’s Rulings. We heard how they disputed the miracles and called them trickery and sorcery, and how they disputed Allah’s Rulings and said that they were inappropriate, but Allah’s signs in creation are not open to question.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... how [far] they ... have lost sight of the Truth?’ (Ghafir: 69) meaning, how have they been diverted from it when it is so clear? Where are their intellects?

The Lord the Most High says: ‘Those who reject this Book and [thus] all [the Messages] which We sent Our Messengers [of old]? But in time they will come to know...’ (Ghafir: 70). Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Those who reject...’ (Ghafir: 70), using the past tense, yet when he talks of the recompense he says: ‘But in time they will come to know...’ (Ghafir: 70) using the future tense. The scholars said that this is because the recompense does not necessarily come at the same time they reject the book or while they are still in the life of this world. There is no problem with it being delayed until the Afterlife.

The word ‘sawfa’ (will) in this verse indicates the future, whether it be the near future in this world or the distant future in the next. If the punishment does not come upon them in this world, it is waiting for them in the next, as Allah the Exalted says: ‘...And whether We show you [in this world] something of what We hold in store for those [deniers of the Truth], or whether We cause you to die [before that retribution takes place–know that, in the end], it is to Us that they will be brought back’ (Ghafir: 77).

The Lord Glorified is He wants us to be connected to Him always in such a way that we never think of anything else. A connection such as this prevents you from imagining that things that come to you are by your doing; rather, you see them as gifts granted to you and remember that the One Who gave them may take them back.

This is why He Glorified is He alerts us by saying: ‘Nay, but man does transgress all bounds, in that he believes himself to be self-sufficient’ (al-‘Alaq: 6-7), and then: ‘For behold, to your Lord all must return’ (al-‘Alaq: 8), Which means, remember, you will be returned to Him and made to stand before Him.

To continue, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...this Book...’ (Ghafir: 70) meaning, what Allah has revealed bearing His Path: ‘...and... all [the Messages] which We sent Our Messengers [of old]...’ (Ghafir: 70), that is, the things that they said. If someone were to say that it is Allah’s Books that are being spoken of here, we will say no; there is a difference. The Book contains the path, but the Messenger bears the path in himself, he delivers it and is a living example of its application. It is as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Verily, in [Muhammad] the Messenger of Allah you have a good example...’ (al-Ahzab: 21).

إِذِ ٱلْأَغْلَٰلُ فِىٓ أَعْنَٰقِهِمْ وَٱلسَّلَٰسِلُ يُسْحَبُونَ ﴿٧١﴾
فِى ٱلْحَمِيمِ ثُمَّ فِى ٱلنَّارِ يُسْجَرُونَ ﴿٧٢﴾

When, with iron collars and chains around their necks, they are dragged [71] Into scalding water, and then burned in the Fire[72] (The Quran, Ghafir: 71-72)

But: '...in time they will come to know' (Ghafir: 70). When? This is on the Day of Judgement: 'When they shall have to carry the shackles (aghlal) and chains (salasil) [of their own making] around their necks, and are dragged' (Ghafir: 71). Consider the extent of the humiliation they are in: 'Into boiling water (al-hamim), and in the end they will become fuel for the fire [of hell]' (Ghafir: 72).

The word 'aghlal' (shackles) is the plural of 'ghull' and it refers to shackles that bind one's hands to one's neck. The word 'salasil' (chains) refer to iron chains that are used to bind men. See how humiliating it is!

Moreover, the word 'al-hamim' refers to boiling water, meaning water at its highest temperature. Then after this they are put into the fire to stoke it and be its fuel. Allah Glorified is He continues:

ثُمَّ قِيلَ لَهُمْ أَيْنَ مَا كُنتُمْ تُشْرِكُونَ ﴿٧٣﴾ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ ۖ قَالُوا۟ ضَلُّوا۟ عَنَّا
بَل لَّمْ نَكُن نَّدْعُوا۟ مِن قَبْلُ شَيْـًٔا ۚ كَذَٰلِكَ يُضِلُّ ٱللَّهُ ٱلْكَٰفِرِينَ ﴿٧٤﴾

And asked, 'Where now are those you called upon [73]
besides God?' They will say, 'They have abandoned us:
those we called upon before were really nothing at all.'
'This is how God lets disbelievers go astray [74]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 73 - 74)

Contemplate the censure of the polytheists in this terrible situation, 'Where are your gods to whom you attributed divinity besides Allah? Call on them and ask them to protect you from this punishment'. By Allah, if they used to worship people like themselves, they will see them in front of their eyes because they will have arrived to the hellfire before them. And if they worshipped rocks, they will see them in front of them as the fuel of the hellfire.

Hence, it is they who will say: '...They have forsaken us...' (Ghafir: 74) which means they do not know where we are or how to get to us. At that time they will see that the situation is beyond their gods, and consequently they will deny them, saying: '...or rather, we did not used to call on anything [real] before!'' (Ghafir: 74) Glory be to Allah! They lie even in this situation just as they swore by Allah in another verse that they did not ascribe divinity to anything besides Allah: '...By Allah, our Lord, we did not ascribe divinity to anything beside Him' (al-An'am: 23).

This is why Allah the Exalted describes these liars, saying: 'and [they] will persist in heinous wickedness' (al-Waqi'a: 46). That is, they have become so used to lying that even the Day of Judgement does not discourage them from it. They will say: '...we did not used to call on anything before!' (Ghafir: 74) meaning we did not ascribe divinity to other than Allah. It is possible that they could be telling the Truth here if they knew these gods could not benefit or harm them but they rather worshipped them only to quench their desire for a religion, although that religion entailed no path and no responsibility.

Allah the Most High continues: 'This is how Allah lets the deniers of the Truth go astray' (Ghafir: 74). Indeed, Allah does not let anybody go astray except the disbelievers. If someone disbelieves, how will Allah guide him? We previously gave a parable for this–but of course Allah is beyond any comparison. We said: imagine a traffic warden whom you ask for directions. If you refuse his directions, mock them or ignore them, and tell him he does not know the area, he will leave you alone and stop helping you. If, however, you listen to his instructions and thank him for his help, he may say something like, 'But I swear there is a difficult road or a diversion in front of you after some kilometres. I will come with you until you move past it'. That is, first he guided him to the way, and then, when you thanked him for his guidance, you earned even more help.

Similarly the Lord Glorified is He says: 'But to those who are [willing to be] guided, He increases their [ability to follow His] Guidance and causes them to grow in piety' (Muhammad: 17). But in the verse we are discussing: 'This is how Allah lets the deniers of the Truth go astray' (Ghafir: 74) referring to those who do not deserve guidance. This is why we said that whoever craves disbelief, inclines towards it or chooses it for himself, Allah will say to him, 'I am a Lord Who will give you whatever you want. If you love disbelief, then I will help you in that. I will seal your heart in order for faith not to enter it and disbelief not to leave it'.

ذَٰلِكُم بِمَا كُنتُمۡ تَفۡرَحُونَ فِى ٱلۡأَرۡضِ بِغَيۡرِ ٱلۡحَقِّ وَبِمَا كُنتُمۡ تَمۡرَحُونَ ٧٥

This is a result of your having arrogantly rejoiced on earth without any [concern for what is] right, and of your being so insolent! [75] (The Quran, Ghafir: 75)

Allah's saying: 'This...' (Ghafir: 75) referring to the punishment, shackles, chains and fire: '...is a result of your having arrogantly rejoiced (tafrahoon) on earth without any [concern for what is] right, and of your being so insolent!' (Ghafir: 75).

The word 'al-farah' (rejoicing) which is derived from 'tafrahoon' (rejoiced), refers to one's breast being expanded by what makes one happy. But true happiness is to be happy with what will help one towards one's original goal. This means that a person can rejoice over anything, even disobedience, and a person can rejoice over the Truth, which is rejoicing over what will help a person reach his ultimate goal. As for something that does not help one reach the goal, but rather blocks the path, it is but a fleeting pleasure that will be followed by sadness that will probably far outweigh the pleasure that one gained from it.

Read here an example of rejoicing over the Truth. Allah Glorified is He says: 'But do not think of those that have been slain in Allah's Cause as dead. Nay, they are alive! With their Lord they have their sustenance, rejoicing over that [martyrdom] which Allah has bestowed on them out of His Bounty...' (Al-'Imran: 169-170).

Yes indeed, this is rejoicing over the Truth; and, in fact, it may spill over to others: '...And they rejoice in the Bounty provided by Allah: And rejoice for the sake of those [of their brethren] who have been left behind (not yet martyred) and have not yet joined them, that they have no fear and do not [have cause to] grieve' (Al-'Imran: 170). This rejoicing which has spread from you to others is true rejoicing because it helps one to realise one's original goal in this world.

Another example of this is found in Allah's saying: 'Say, "In [this] Bounty of Allah and in His Grace–in this, then, let them rejoice: it is better than all [the worldly wealth] that they may amass!"' (Yunus: 58) This is rejoicing over Allah's Bounty and Mercy, not one's deeds. This is the rejoicing enjoined by the Sacred Law.

Another type of rejoicing ordained by the Sacred Law is mentioned in Allah's saying: 'Hence, they to whom We have given this Revelation rejoice at all that has been bestowed on you [O Prophet Muhammad] from on high...' (ar-Ra'd: 36) because it confirmed what they already had and strengthened their understanding of the Truth. They rejoiced at this because it helped them to reach the true goal of their existence.

Allah the Exalted also says: 'Alif. Lam. Mim. The Romans have been defeated, in the lands close-by; but it is they who, after this defeat of theirs, shall soon be victorious, within a few years: [for] the decision of the matter, in the past and in the future, is only with Allah. And on that day will the believers [too, have cause to] rejoice in the Help of Allah: [for] He gives help to whomever He wills, since He alone is the Almighty, the Most Merciful' (ar-Rum: 1-5).

Clearly, there are many types of rejoicing ordained by the Sacred Law. There is the rejoicing of the martyrs at Allah's Bounty and Mercy. There is the rejoicing of those who have been given the Revelation through Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him and there is the rejoicing of the believers at the victory of a religion that has its roots in the heavens over one that has its roots in the earth.

However, that rejoicing which is not ordained by the Sacred Law is the rejoicing of the fool. An example of this is found in Allah's saying about the disbelievers: 'Should good fortune alight on you [O Prophet Muhammad], it will grieve them; and should misfortune befall you, they will say [to themselves], "We have already taken our precautions beforehand!" And they turn away rejoicing. Say, "Never can anything befall us save what Allah has decreed!..."' (at-Tawba: 50-51), which means, whatever afflicts us from Allah is something that will be accounted in our favour, not against us. And His saying: 'If good fortune comes to you, it grieves them; and if evil befalls you, they rejoice in it. But if you are patient in adversity and conscious of Allah, their guile cannot harm you at all: for verily, Allah encompasses [with His Might] all that they do' (Al-'Imran: 120). Allah Glorified is He also said regarding the rejoicing of fools: 'Then, when they had forgotten all that they had been reminded of, We threw open to them the gates of all [pleasurable] things, until–even as they were rejoicing in what they had been granted–We suddenly took them to task...' (al-An'am: 44). He the Exalted also says: 'Think not that those who rejoice in what they have thus contrived...' (Al-'Imran: 188), that is, they rejoice because they have mocked the believers and harmed them: '...and who love to be praised for what they have not done–think not that they will escape suffering: for grievous suffering awaits them [in the life to come]' (Al-'Imran: 188).

And He says: 'And thus it is: if We let man taste some of Our Grace but then take it away from him–behold, he is in despair and ungrateful [for Our past Favours]. And thus it is: if We let him taste ease and plenty after hardship has visited him, he is sure to say, "Gone is all affliction from me!" For behold, he is given to vain rejoicing and pride' (Hud: 9-10). And: 'But they [who claim to follow you] have torn their affair [of unity] into pieces, each group rejoicing in that which they themselves possess [by way of tenets]' (al-Mu'minun: 53). As long as there are a number of groups, and each one rejoices in what it has, then this is rejoicing that is false and not approved by the Sacred Law.

Furthermore, the Lord the Most High says: '[Now] Behold, Qarun (Korah) was one of the people of Musa (Moses), but he arrogantly exalted himself above them–simply because We had granted him such riches that his treasure-chests alone will surely have been too heavy a burden for a troop of ten strong men or even more. When [they perceived his arrogance], his people said unto him, "Rejoice not [in your wealth], for verily, Allah does not love those who rejoice [in vain things]!"' (al-Qasas: 76)

To sum up, we have four instances of rejoicing which is approved by the Sacred Law and nine instances where it is blameworthy and not approved.

Continuing with the verse under discussion, Allah the Exalted says: 'This is a result of your having arrogantly rejoiced on earth without any [concern for what is] right...' (Ghafir: 75). This is proof that there is rejoicing with and without right: '...And of your being so insolent (al-marah)' (Ghafir: 75). The word 'al-marah' (insolent) is an excessive form of the word 'farah' (rejoicing), and it means to swagger about, boasting and being conceited.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

ٱدْخُلُوٓا۟ أَبْوَٰبَ جَهَنَّمَ خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَا ۖ فَبِئْسَ مَثْوَى ٱلْمُتَكَبِّرِينَ ﴿٧٦﴾

Enter the gates of Hell, there to remain – an evil home for the arrogant [76] (The Quran, Ghafir: 76)

The word 'mathwa' (abode) means a place to return to and stay in. The word 'al-mutakabbireen' (those who are given to false pride) refers to those who assume they are above Allah, the One Who gave them life, and yet despite this they still do not believe in Him. These people assumed they were above Allah and did not believe in Him. They assumed they were above the Messengers and did not believe them. They assumed they were above His Religion and did not practise it. They chose their desires and submitted to their leadership instead of submitting to Allah.

After this, Allah turns to address Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him telling him that he will face many troubles that will require patience because this mission is hard, and that he will be harmed in every way possible.

فَٱصْبِرْ إِنَّ وَعْدَ ٱللَّهِ حَقٌّ ۚ فَإِمَّا نُرِيَنَّكَ بَعْضَ ٱلَّذِى
نَعِدُهُمْ أَوْ نَتَوَفَّيَنَّكَ فَإِلَيْنَا يُرْجَعُونَ ﴿٧٧﴾

So be patient [Prophet], for God's promise is sure: whether we show you part of what We have promised them in this life or whether We take your soul back to Us first, it is to Us that they will be returned [77] (The Quran, Ghafir: 77)

Yes: 'Verily, Allah's Promise always comes true ...' (Ghafir: 77) referring to Allah's Promise of victory to His Messengers. This is because He the Exalted is fully capable of fulfilling His Promises. We have already elucidated the difference between our promises and Allah's Promises. Our promises are not 'true' because we do not possess the means to fulfil promises and cannot guarantee them. However, the Lord Glorified is He has all the attributes of perfection, and nothing can prevent Him from fulfilling His Promise.

Allah Glorified is He then says: '...And whether We show you [in this world] something of what We hold in store for those [deniers of the Truth]...'

(Ghafir: 77), that is, of punishment in this world: '...or whether We cause you to die...' (Ghafir: 77) before you see a sign in them: '...it is to Us that they will be brought back' (Ghafir: 77) in the next life, where they will be unable to escape the punishment. This is why Allah the Exalted says: 'However, before [We condemn them to] that supreme suffering, We shall most certainly let them taste a suffering closer at hand so that they might [repent and] mend their ways' (as-Sajda: 21).

The 'closer' suffering is that which befalls them in this world, while the 'supreme' suffering is that which befalls them on the Day of Judgement which none of them can escape.

Then He Glorified is He clarifies for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him the reality of prophethood. He says to him, 'Know, O Muhammad, that you are not the first of the Messengers, and you are not the first to be harmed while bearing His Message. All of your brothers in the line of prophethood have been harmed, each to a degree relative to the importance of their Message, and this is why you are suffering the most; this is because you [Muhammad] are the prophet for the end of time, and your Message is general for all people, all times and all places. Consequently, your tribulation will necessarily be more severe than that of those who preceded you.

Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَقَدْ أَرْسَلْنَا رُسُلًا مِّن قَبْلِكَ مِنْهُم مَّن قَصَصْنَا عَلَيْكَ وَمِنْهُم مَّن لَّمْ
نَقْصُصْ عَلَيْكَ ۗ وَمَا كَانَ لِرَسُولٍ أَن يَأْتِيَ بِـَٔايَةٍ إِلَّا بِإِذْنِ ٱللَّهِ ۚ فَإِذَا جَآءَ
أَمْرُ ٱللَّهِ قُضِيَ بِٱلْحَقِّ وَخَسِرَ هُنَالِكَ ٱلْمُبْطِلُونَ ﴿٧٨﴾

We have sent other messengers before you – some We have mentioned to you and some We have not – and no messenger could bring about a sign except with God's permission. When [the Day] God ordained comes, just judgement will be passed between them: there and then, those who followed falsehood will be lost [78] (The Quran, Ghafir: 78)

The Lord Glorified is He mentioned the names of some of the Messengers to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him and there are 25 mentioned in the Quran. A poet said,

In that is our proof, and of them are eight,
Coming after ten. Seven remain and they are:
Idris (Enoch) then Hud (Eber), Shu'aib (Jethro) and Saleh (Shelah), Dhu Al-Kifl (Ezekiel), Adam, and the Chosen One, their seal.

Nevertheless, the Lord Glorified is He states in another verse: 'For there never was any community but a warner has [lived and] passed away in its midst' (Fatir: 24), and this means that the number of Messengers who have not been mentioned is a very large number.

Next, the Lord the Most High says: '...And it was not given to any Messenger to produce a miracle save by Allah's Leave...' (ar-Ra'd: 38). Why is this verse appropriate here? The scholars say it is because they used to suggest signs to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him as Allah Glorified is He says: 'And so they say, "[O Muhammad], we shall not believe you till you cause a spring to gush forth for us from the earth, or have a garden of date palms and vines and cause rivers to gush forth in their midst in a sudden rush"' (al-Isra': 90-91), in order for it to be a permanent garden: '"Or cause the skies to fall down on us in fragments, as you have threatened, or [till] you bring Allah and the angels face to face before us, or have a house [made] of gold, or ascend to heaven–but nay, we will not [even] believe in your ascension unless you bring down to us [from heaven] a writing which we [ourselves] can read!"...' (al-Isra': 92-93) But what was Prophet Muhammad's reply: 'Glory to my Lord! Am I nothing but a mortal man, a Messenger?' (al-Isra': 93) meaning I am but a Messenger from Allah, delivering what I am sent with.

The Lord Glorified is He by refusing to respond to their demands for signs, has clarified for us that they were not satisfied or content with what they already had. In fact, to seek more signs than they had been given is considered to be an insult to the earlier signs. This is one point. Another point is that there were people before them who asked for signs and Allah granted them, but after that they disbelieved. Therefore, for Allah to keep up with their demand for signs is a waste of time. That is why He Glorified is He says: 'And nothing has prevented Us from sending [this Message, like the earlier ones] with miraculous signs [in its wake] save [Our knowledge] that the people of old times [only too often] gave the lie to them...' (al-Isra': 59) referring to the signs they were demanding.

Allah Glorified is He says: '...Yet, when Allah's Command becomes manifest, judgment will [already] have been passed in all truth and justice, and lost, then and there, will be all who stood on falsehoods' (Ghafir: 78). He says: '...judgment will [already] have been passed in all truth and justice...' (Ghafir: 78), and as long as the judgement is passed in truth, the believers who believe in the Truth will be successful: '...and lost, then and there...' (Ghafir: 78) in the Afterlife: '...will be all who stood on falsehoods' (Ghafir: 78), referring to the disbelievers and the people of falsehood who disbelieved in the Path of Truth; and this is their natural end, for the reward is appropriate for their deed.

The Lord the Most High then says:

ٱللَّهُ ٱلَّذِى جَعَلَ لَكُمُ ٱلْأَنْعَٰمَ لِتَرْكَبُوا۟ مِنْهَا وَمِنْهَا تَأْكُلُونَ ﴿٧٩﴾ وَلَكُمْ فِيهَا
مَنَٰفِعُ وَلِتَبْلُغُوا۟ عَلَيْهَا حَاجَةً فِى صُدُورِكُمْ وَعَلَيْهَا وَعَلَى ٱلْفُلْكِ تُحْمَلُونَ ﴿٨٠﴾

It is God who provides livestock for you, some for riding and some for your food [79] You have other benefits in them too.
You can reach any destination you wish on them: they carry you, as ships carry you [on the sea] [80]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 79-80)

The word 'al-an`am' (livestock) refers to camels, cows, sheep and goats. These have roles and they are: '...so that on some of them you may ride...' (Ghafir: 79) which means on a camel, for you do not ride sheep, for example: 'And from some derive your food' (Ghafir: 79), that is, meat, 'and find benefits in them...' (Ghafir: 80) referring to benefits other than riding them or eating them, such as benefitting from their skins, their wool and their fur, for they used to make clothes, blankets, beds, tents and other things from them.

Reflect here upon the greatness of the Quranic linguistic style: For riding, Allah Glorified is He said: '...so that on some of them you may ride (li tarkabu minha)...' (Ghafir: 79) with the letter 'lam' before 'tarkabu' (you may ride), while for eating He said: '…And from some derive your food (wa minha ta'kulun)' (Ghafir: 79) with no 'lam' in front of 'ta'kulun' (derive your food). The scholars said this is because eating is something which is just permissible, whereas riding is something which is necessary.

Allah Glorified is He then says: '...and that through them you may attain any need in your hearts...' (Ghafir: 80) which means they help you achieve your needs, be it travelling to Hajj, for example, travelling for trade or carrying burdens.

The Lord the Most High continues: '...For on them, as on ('alayha) ships, you are carried [through life]' (Ghafir: 80), literally on them, because we ride them and put our burdens on them. As for: '...on ships...' (Ghafir: 80) meaning boats, it is obvious that we ride in (fi) them, as Allah the Exalted says about the Ark of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him: 'We said [to Nuh (Noah)], "Place in this (fiha) [ark]...' (Hud: 40). He did not say ''alayha' (on it). Why are the two verses different? The scholars said it is as if the Lord Glorified is He is showing us the stages of the development of boats and how they will be used. The Ark of Nuh peace be upon him was the first ship and it was built very simply, such that a person used to be actually inside it. This is why 'fi' (in) is used when talking about the ark of Nuh. But in the verse we are discussing, the Lord Glorified is He wanted to teach us that the building of ships will develop, and that they will come to have different levels such that we could ride on top of them.

It was because of this that when we were in San Francisco we asked them when the huge ships they have were first built. They did not know the exact year, but one of them said that he thought it was probably about one century ago. 'Yes', I said, 'And in the Glorious Quran we are given a precise description of them. They are wide at the bottom and become narrower and narrower at each level towards the top, like a mountain. One sees them like giants on the water, just like mountains. The Lord Glorified is He says in His Quran when he enumerates His Blessings in the chapter of ar-Rahman: "And His are the lofty ships that sail like [floating] mountains through the seas" (ar-Rahman: 24). But it is well known that Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him did not sail on the sea, and he did not see these huge ships. This is why this is a proof of the truthfulness of Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him in delivering the Message from his Lord'. 'And tell me', I asked, 'When were these elevators and escalators invented?' 'About fifty years ago', they said.

'The Lord Glorified is He tells us in the Glorious Quran: "And were it not that [with the prospect of boundless riches before them] all people will become one [evil] community, We might indeed have provided for those who [now] deny the Most Gracious roofs of silver for their houses, and [silver] stairways (ma`arij) whereon to ascend" (az-Zukhruf: 33). The Arabic word 'ma`arij' means an escalator, such as the ones you have had for the last fifty years. Allah informed us of them over 14 centuries ago'.

These are all glimpses from the Book of Allah. They are things that the Lord Glorified is He mentioned to us in order for them to be a proof of its miraculous nature: 'In time We shall make them fully understand Our Messages [through what they perceive] in the utmost horizons [of the universe] and within themselves so that it will become clear to them that this [Revelation] is indeed the Truth...' (Fussilat: 53).

Allah the Exalted then says:

وَيُرِيكُمْ ءَايَـٰتِهِۦ فَأَىَّ ءَايَـٰتِ ٱللَّهِ تُنكِرُونَ ﴿٨١﴾

He shows you His signs: which of God's signs do you still ignore? [81] (The Quran, Ghafir: 81)

There are His signs in His creatures and His signs in the sea when you sail in boats and see other worlds–and its signs are greater than those we see on land. Nowadays, with the technological progression that has come about, we see they have made boats with glass windows under the water's surface. They make transparent boats that allow a person to see into the depths and what they contain of Allah's wondrous creations and signs indicating His Immense Power. The sight makes one say, 'Glory be to Allah! How can the faithless disbelieve after seeing such things?'

Similarly, if one rides a camel over a long distance, one will see many of Allah's signs in His creation. One will see them in the camel one is riding, in the desert, in the mountains one passes and in everything around the person. This is why the Lord Glorified is He asks us to travel through the earth. He Glorified is He says: ‘Say, “Go all over the earth and behold (fanzhuru)...’’ (an-Naml: 69), and in another verse: ‘Say, “Go all over the earth, and then behold (thumma unzhuru)...”’ (al-An‘am: 11). It is well known among grammarians that the letter ‘fa’’ indicates a sequence which happens after a short period of time, whereas the particle ‘thumma’ indicates sequence after a delay. It seems that travelling around is for one of two reasons: to travel to reflect and ‘behold’, indicated by ‘fa unzhuru’ (and behold), or to travel for trade and profit and then reflect, indicated by ‘thumma unzuru’ (and then behold). Allah told us to travel through the earth and seek our provision and profit, but at the same time, we need not deprive ourselves of the pleasure of reflecting on Allah’s wonderful creation. He says: ‘Say, “Go all over the earth, and then (thumma) behold...”’ (al-An‘am: 11)(1).

Next, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...then which of the signs of Allah will you still deny?’ (Ghafir: 81) meaning which of these signs which you can see do you reject, and how can you reject them when they so clearly show the Power of Allah? Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of ar-Rahman: ‘Then which of your Lord’s Blessings will you deny?’ (ar-Rahman: 13) The Lord Glorified is He repeats this verse after each of the blessings he enumerates. This means that these are signs that are not to be dismissed or denied. In fact, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said to his Companions Allah be pleased with them ‘I recited the chapter of ar-Rahman to your brothers among the Jinn and they had a better response to it than you did. When I recited:

(1) In actual fact, the Lord Glorified is He uses the letter ‘fa’’ in three verses referring to traveling through the earth to reflect on the final end of the disbelievers, criminals and those who came earlier: the chapter of an-Nahl verse 36, the chapter of an-Naml verse 69, and the chapter of ar-Rum verse 42. He uses ‘thumma’ to express the same meaning in one verse, and that is Allah’s saying: ‘Go all over the earth and then (thumma) behold what happened in the end to those who gave the lie to the Truth’ (al- An‘am: 11). He also used the letter ‘fa’’ to express the other meaning, that being to reflect upon Allah’s wondrous creation, in the verse: ‘…Say, "Go all over the earth and (fa’) behold how [wondrously] He has created ... in the first instance...”’ (al-'Ankabut: 20). Allah does not use the word ‘thumma’ as the Sheikh, Allah have mercy on him, stated here. The one verse in which ‘thumma’ comes specifically to reflect relates to the end of the disbelievers, as we already mentioned.

"Then which of your Lord's Blessings will you deny?" (ar-Rahman: 13), they all replied together, "Not one of your blessings do we deny, Our Lord"'.(1)

In the verse under study, Allah Glorified is He uses the word 'ayy' (which) in the masculine–he did not say 'ayyat' in the feminine–despite the fact that the word 'ayat' (signs) is feminine. The scholars said that this is because the word 'ayat' (signs) does not represent something which is actually feminine, and therefore it is permissible to treat it as masculine. Another example of this is found in Allah's saying: 'Then, when he beheld the sun rising, he said, "This (hadha) is my Lord..."...' (al-An'am: 78). Allah Glorified is He used the word 'hadha' for 'this' in the masculine, when the sun is feminine.

Next Allah Glorified is He says:

أَفَلَمْ يَسِيرُوا۟ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ فَيَنظُرُوا۟ كَيْفَ كَانَ عَـٰقِبَةُ ٱلَّذِينَ مِن
قَبْلِهِمْ ۚ كَانُوٓا۟ أَكْثَرَ مِنْهُمْ وَأَشَدَّ قُوَّةً وَءَاثَارًا فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ فَمَآ
أَغْنَىٰ عَنْهُم مَّا كَانُوا۟ يَكْسِبُونَ ﴿٨٢﴾

Have they not travelled through the land and seen how those who lived before them met their end? They were more numerous than them, stronger than them, and made a more impressive mark on the land, yet what they achieved was of no use to them at all [82] (The Quran, Ghafir: 82)

This travel is, as we said, for reflection. The reflection here is upon those nations who preceded them. The Lord Glorified is He clarifies that their predecessors among the nations of the world were more numerous and stronger than they were, and left a greater mark on the earth. The word 'athar' (the impact which they left) refers to things like the pyramids that the pharaohs left behind and Allah preserved as a witness to their presence.

There are other ruins that we do not see because they are buried, yet Allah has informed us of them, as in His saying: 'Are you not aware of how your Lord has dealt with [the tribe of] ʿAd, [the people of] Iram, with lofty pillars, the like of whom has never been reared in all the land?' (al-Fajr: 6-8) And the following refers to ruins that still exist: 'And verily, [to this day] you pass by the remnants of their dwellings at morning-time and by night. Will you not understand?' (as-Saffat: 137-138)

---

(1) This has been related by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur [7/690] and he ascribed it to At-Tirmidhi, Ibn-Mundhir, Al-Hakim, Ibn-Mardawiyya, Abu Ash-Sheikh in Al-`Azhama and Al-Bayhaqi in Ad-Dala'il on the authority of Jabir ibn-`Abdullah Allah be pleased with him.

Therefore, where are you, O Arabs, in comparison to these faded civilisations? You should have understood the lesson from those who preceded you in denying and opposing the Messengers; they were more powerful than you yet Allah took them to task and gave victory to His Messengers and His Religion. You are less than these and will not be able to confound Allah; indeed, it will be easier to deal with you.

Allah Glorified is He then says: '...but all that they achieved was of no avail to them' (Ghafir: 82), referring to these civilisations and their buildings, the secrets of which have still not been fully grasped (although they are not impossible to understand) did not profit their people.

Let us speak of their ruins in Egypt, as an example. We have the ruins of the pharaohs, pyramids, and temples. We see colours on the wall just as they used to be, as if they were painted in recent times. We have found seeds just as they used to be, and scientists say that they could be grown even after these thousands of years since the time of the pharaohs. It is well known that there are many secrets hidden in the building of the pyramids that we still have not unravelled. Despite all this progress on the part of the pharaohs, they were not able to protect themselves or prolong their civilisation. They were not even able to leave behind what can explain their civilisation to us. Had Champollion(1) not deciphered the Rosetta Stone, we will not have been able to understand their history or uncover it.

(1) He was Jean-François Champollion, a French scholar who was born in 1790 CE and died in 1832 at the age of 42. He was a boy of 8 when he came to Egypt with the French campaign in 1798 CE. He spent three years studying oriental and Coptic languages at the hands of some of the greatest scholars of his time. He worked as a teacher and chair of the department of Egyptian Antiquities in the College de France.

فَلَمَّا جَآءَتْهُمْ رُسُلُهُم بِٱلْبَيِّنَٰتِ فَرِحُوا۟ بِمَا عِندَهُم مِّنَ ٱلْعِلْمِ
وَحَاقَ بِهِم مَّا كَانُوا۟ بِهِۦ يَسْتَهْزِءُونَ ﴿٨٣﴾

When messengers came to them with clear signs, they revelled in the knowledge they had, and so they were engulfed by the very punishment they mocked [83]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 83)

Their Messengers brought them clear signs and miracles, but they said, ‘We do not need Messengers’ just as the philosopher Socrates himself had said a long time ago, ‘We are a people who are already guided. We have no need for Messengers’, and yet despite claiming that he was guided and had good manners, they saw he was bad and sentenced him to death. On the other hand, if he was truly guided and their judgement on him was unjust, he was in need of someone to defend him; a neutral party to check what was for and what was against him. That is, in both situations he needed the help of others.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...they kept proudly rejoicing(1) in whatever knowledge they [already] possessed...’ (Ghafir: 83). This is a type of rejoicing that we have already discussed, saying that it is not ordained by the Sacred Law and is the rejoicing of fools.

What is intended here is that they rejoiced in that knowledge by means of which they disputed with the Quran, such as their saying: ‘...There is nothing beyond our life in this world. We die and we live, and nothing but time destroys us...’ (al-Jathiya: 24). This is what the atheists say. And similarly: ‘...Had Allah so willed, we will not have ascribed divinity to anything but Him...’ (al-An‘am: 148). Whenever a matter is presented to them that they wanted to refuse, they refute it in a way that satisfies them, even though it may false, and they consider this to be a type of knowledge.

(1) Ibn Al-Jawzi said regarding this verse in Zad Al-Masir, ‘There are two opinions about those who are being spoken of here. The first is that they are the nations who denied their prophets, and this is what the majority said. As to the meaning of what they said, there are also two opinions: One is that they said, ‘We are more knowledgeable than them; we will not be resurrected or held to account’, and this was the opinion of Mujahid. The other is that they rejoiced in what they had, believing it to be knowledge. This was the opinion of As-Suddi. The second opinion about who is being spoken of here is that they are the Messengers; Abu Sulaiman, among many others, believed that Messengers rejoiced at the destruction of the deniers of the Truth because this meant that they themselves and the true believers with them were saved. In addition, they, by the destruction of these disbelievers, became totally assured of the truthfulness of the Divine Knowledge revealed to them.

Alternatively, it could mean that they were contented with the knowledge they had of the outward aspects of this world and the civilisations that established it. They said that they had no need for Messengers because what they had of material knowledge was sufficient. We will tell them that they have looked only at the surface of matters and at those things by which they feel they can justify their beliefs. But they also said: '...Had Allah so willed, we will not have ascribed divinity to anything but Him...' (al-An'am: 148), that is, blaming Allah, and this shows that they were just disagreeing with everything that was said.

Some scholars said that: '...they kept proudly rejoicing...' (Ghafir: 83) refers to the Messengers rejoicing that Allah had guided them and made them sources of guidance, yet this opinion does not take into account the dictates of the context of this verse and contradicts its latter half where Allah Glorified is He says: '...and [so, in the end] they were overwhelmed by the very thing which they used to deride (yastahzi'oon)' (Ghafir: 83) which means as a result of their derision.

An example of such derision is found in Allah's saying: 'He [Pharaoh] said, "If you have come with a sign, produce it–if you are a man of Truth!"' (al-A'raf: 106), and: '…Have you come to us [with the demand] that we worship Allah alone, and give up all that our forefathers used to worship? Bring about, then, that [punishment] with which you have threatened us, if you are a man of Truth!' (al-A'raf: 70) The word 'yastahzi'oon' (they used to deride) is derived from the phrase 'huz' al-batil min al-haqq' meaning 'falsehood sneering at the Truth'. Why does falsehood do this? The scholars say that it is because when falsehood sees the Truth repelling it, it must try to undermine the strength of those who believe in it; this is because if it does not try to undermine those who believe, it will be drawn towards the Truth. This is why we have heard them say: '...Do not listen to this Quran, but rather talk at random in the middle of its reading so that you might gain the upper hand' (Fussilat: 26).

(1) As-Samarqandi in Bahr Al-`Ulum in his Exegesis of this verse said, 'This verse was revealed about Abu Jahl and his companions. He said, "If Muhammad recites the Quran,=

By Allah, had they not known the sweetness of the Quran, how it takes hold of its listeners, and overcomes their hearing and their hearts, and had they not feared that the Quran will strip them of their authority, they will not have said these things. They will not have warned people from listening to it had it been normal speech and they will not have taken this stance towards it. Thus they understood that the Quran was true and that those who listened to it will surely be guided by it, and when we say listened to it, we mean listened with his heart.

We have heard much of the story of the conversion(1) of `Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him. He was stubborn, tyrannical, and hard-hearted before entering Islam, but what happened to him after he heard the Quran? He first heard it from his sister and flew into a fit of rage, striking her on her face thereby making it bleed. When he saw her bleeding, his feelings for his sister were stirred; and when this happened, his feelings overcame the vehemence of his enmity to Islam and allowed the Quran to penetrate to his heart without impediment, and thus he was affected and entered faith.

In another verse, the Quran has painted a picture for us of the way the people of falsehood mock the people of Truth. Allah the Exalted says: ‘Behold, those who have abandoned themselves to sin used to laugh at the believers; and whenever they pass by them, they used to wink at one another [derisively]; and whenever they return to their own people, they used to return jesting; and whenever they see those [who believe], they used to say, “Behold, these [people] have indeed gone astray!” But they had not been sent to watch over [the beliefs of] others’ (al-Mutaffifin: 29-33).

= raise your voices while reading poetry and speech in front of them in order to confuse them”. This is what Allah Glorified is He spoke of in His saying: “...but rather talk at random in the middle of its [reading]...” (Fussilat : 26) meaning, make a lot of noise’.

(1) The conversion of `Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him happened in Dhul-Hijja, six years after Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him first received the Revelation. According to what Ibn-Sa`d related from Ibn-Musayyib, he was then 26 years old. Abu-Na`im said, ‘He entered Islam three days after Hamza Allah be pleased with him’. Ibn-Ishaq said, ‘There were approximately forty Muslim men and women [at this time]’ (See Subul Al-Huda wa Ar-Rashad, chapter 17, concerning the conversion of `Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him).

The Lord Glorified is He then tells us the result of this mockery and who will have the last word in this discussion between the believers and sinners: ‘But on the Day [of Judgment], the believers will [be able to] laugh at the deniers of the Truth: [resting in paradise] on couches, they will gaze [at their condition and that of the disbelievers in Hell]’ (al-Mutaffifin: 34-35). Then our Lord asks us: ‘Are these deniers of the Truth being [thus] requited for [anything but] what they used to do?’ (al-Mutaffifin: 36) which means, are We not able to repay them as they deserve?

Next Allah the Most High says:

فَلَمَّا رَأَوْا بَأْسَنَا قَالُوٓا۟ ءَامَنَّا بِٱللَّهِ وَحْدَهُۥ وَكَفَرْنَا بِمَا كُنَّا بِهِۦ
مُشْرِكِينَ ﴿٨٤﴾ فَلَمْ يَكُ يَنفَعُهُمْ إِيمَـٰنُهُمْ لَمَّا رَأَوْا۟ بَأْسَنَا ۖ سُنَّتَ ٱللَّهِ
ٱلَّتِى قَدْ خَلَتْ فِى عِبَادِهِۦ ۖ وَخَسِرَ هُنَالِكَ ٱلْكَـٰفِرُونَ ﴿٨٥﴾

When they saw Our punishment, they said, ‘We believe in God alone; we reject any partner we ascribed to Him,’ [84] But believing after seeing Our punishment did not benefit them at all – this has always been God’s way of dealing with His creatures – there and then the disbelievers were lost [85]
(The Quran, Ghafir: 84 - 85)

This verse portrays for us the same situation that happened with Pharaoh when he was about to drown: ‘…[Pharaoh] exclaimed, “I [now] believe that there is no deity except Him in whom the Children of Israel believe, and I am of those who surrender themselves to Him!’’ (Yunus: 90) But Allah replied to him, ‘Now?–but a little while before this you used to rebel [against us], and used to be among those who spread corruption?’ (Yunus: 91) This means faith will not benefit you now. This means that there is a time where one cannot turn back from disbelief to faith, and it is the time when death takes its hold. Faith is only accepted when one’s options are still open and one can believe or disbelieve. Similarly, Allah says about those in the verse under discussion: ‘...when they [clearly] beheld Our Punishment...’ (Ghafir: 84) come down on them in this world: ‘...they said, ‘We [now] believe in Allah, [and] only Him, and we have renounced our belief in those we used to associate [with Him]!’’ (Ghafir: 84)

But is this a time when faith is going to be accepted? The Lord Glorified is He repeats: ‘But believing after they had beheld Our Punishment could not possibly benefit them [at all]...’ (Ghafir: 85). Clearly, it does not make sense that their faith should benefit them now, and this is not the Way Allah deals with His creation. How could it be now that they have no strength or tricks to oppose Allah’s Way, they want to believe? It is not at all appropriate that they should benefit from such faith–their imagined faith–it is false, rejected, and devoid of meaning because it has come at the wrong time.

This is: ‘...the Way that Allah has always followed...’ (Ghafir: 85); it has always been the way: ‘...with His creatures...’ (Ghafir: 85). We can see Allah’s Ways in the annals of history. Just as he took other peoples to task for their sins and rejected their faith at the moment of death or when His punishment came upon them, he will not accept yours. This way will never change, for it is fixed: ‘...and never will you find any change in the Way that Allah follows!’ (al-Ahzab: 62) And it will remain in force for all of creation: ‘...And so, then and there, those who had denied the Truth were lost’ (Ghafir: 85). This is the normal and expected outcome and ending they deserved.

the chapter of

Fussilat

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of Fussilat(1) :

حمٓ ﴿١﴾ تَنزِيلٌ مِّنَ ٱلرَّحۡمَٰنِ ٱلرَّحِيمِ ﴿٢﴾

Ha Mim [1] A revelation from the Lord of Mercy, the Giver of Mercy [2] (The Quran, Fussilat: 1-2)

We say that Ha Mim belong to the group of disconnected letters, and scholars have debated endlessly about what these letters mean – all such attempts being made merely to satisfy the intellect's passion for inquiry. Belief, however, has a different approach. It takes the matter as something given: as long as Allah Glorified is He has said it, there the question ends

Therefore, when our master Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him was told: 'Your associate claims that he did such and such,' he immediately responded, 'Was it Allah's Messenger, Muhammad that said it?' When they replied 'yes', he said: 'So he has spoken the truth'(2) – that is, this question is beyond discussion, and there is no space here for applying reason; for it possesses such veracity as to put it beyond discussion

We have already mentioned the gist of the subject of these disjointed letters. These letters are those the names of which Allah has mentioned, for each letter has a name and a referent. For example, the first letter of the Arabic alphabet is called 'Alif' and its musamma al-harf (the sound which the name of the letter refers to) is 'a,' 'u,' and 'i.' Now only a teacher uses its name, while an illiterate person knows nothing of the names of the letters, Alif, Ba' Ta', but still uses their sounds when he speaks.

(1) The chapter of Fussilat is chapter number 41 according to the order of the Holy Book, revealed after the chapter of Fatir; it consists of 54 verses. In his commentary, Al-Qurtubi states that this chapter Fussilat is Meccan according to all authorities (IX, 6001). Fussilat means clarified or explained, that is, according to Qatada, the permitted is distinguished from the forbidden and obedience is distinguished from rebellion.

(2) Al-Qurtubi quotes this in his commentary (V, 4012). It continues with them asking him, 'You believe him before hearing from him directly?' To which he replied, 'Where is your reason? I believe him when he speaks of heaven, so how should I not believe him when he speaks of Jerusalem, since heaven is far above it!'

Thus, the illiterate person uses musamma al-harf (the sound which the name of the letter refers to) without knowing its name. This is shown by the fact that when we teach children we tell them, 'Spell this word,' to which they respond, 'w', 'r', 'i', 't', 'e'. An illiterate person, on the other hand, simply says 'write' without knowing the letters that compose the word or its spelling. We can all agree on this point.

Recall then, that the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was illiterate, so what made him realise that the (Arabic) letter 'h' is called Ha' and the letter 'm' is called Mim, given that you read at the beginning of the chapter of al-Baqara (the Cow) Alif, Lam, Mim, whereas at the beginning of the chapter of ash-Sharh (the Opening Forth) you say Alam nashrah laka sadrak, that is: 'Did We not expand for you, [O Muhammad], your breast?' (ash-Sharh: 1). Why do you read it one way in the chapter of al-Baqara (the Cow), and another way in the chapter of ash-Sharh (the Opening Forth)?

In the chapter of al-Baqara, you read the name of the letters, whereas in the chapter of ash-Sharh you read the musamma of the letters. Only a literate person can tell the difference. So who taught Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him this, since in both cases – in the chapter of al-Baqara and the chapter of ash-Sharh – the letters are identical and in the same order?

There is something else here: the disjointed letters in the Quran represent half of the letters of the alphabet. It is well known that the letters of the alphabet are 28 in number, and the disjointed letters represent only 14 of them, and are distributed in a most mysterious way such that the scholars are all still at a loss to explain their significance.

As for the first nine letters of the alphabet, only two of them occur: Alif and Ha'. Of the last nine letters of the alphabet, only seven occur, leaving aside two – the mirror image of the first. Of the middle ten letters, only those without diacritical points are used, leaving aside those with diacritical points:

thus, Sin is used but not Shin, Sad but not Dad, Ta' but not Zha', 'Ayn but not Ghayn. The matter, though not regular, thus shows a fine organisation; these letters are not monotonously arranged, but are arranged according to a higher wisdom, and with intended accuracy, much like the teeth on a key.

Sometimes, the True Lord puts a single letter, at the beginning of a chapter, like 'Sad' or 'Qaf', and other times He puts two letters like 'Ha Mim'; sometimes He puts three letters like 'Alif Lam Mim'; sometimes he puts four letters like 'Alif Lam Mim Ra'; sometimes He puts five letters like 'Ha Mim 'Ayn Sin Qaf' or 'Kaf Ha Ya 'Ayn Sad'. So the matter is intentionally arranged according to a certain wisdom, and for a purpose – a purpose that is based on the difference between these letters and the rest of the words in the chapter; yet, in which way? Scholars said that you are to pronounce the names of the disjointed letters in pausal form, not saying for example 'Alifun Lamun Mimun', that is, using the connective vowels, but rather, you must say Alif – and stop, Lam – and stop and Mim – and stop. The Quran itself is of course generally based on a reading that includes all connective vowels. Thus, you say, in the chapter of ar-Rahman (The Most Gracious): 'Mudhammatani', '…Both inclining to blackness...' (ar-Rahman: 64), that is, with the connective vowel kasrah (here: 'i' at the end of the word) so as to connect it with the following words, 'Fa-bi-ayyi ala'i rabbikuma tukadhdhibani', 'Which then of the bounties of your Lord will you deny?' (ar-Rahman: 65).

This is the case even with the very last letter of the Quran, in the chapter of an-Nas (Mankind). You say, 'Mina l-jinnati wa-n-nasi', 'From among the jinn and the men' (an-Nas: 6) so as to start again at the beginning immediately after, and connect it to 'Bi-sm Allah ar-Rahman ar-Rahim. Al-hamd li-Allah rabb al-'alamin.', 'In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful. All praise is due to Allah, the Lord of the Worlds' (al-Fatiha: 1-2).

The disjointed letters, however, are based on pausal reading; therefore Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'I do not say 'Alif Lam Mim' is one letter, but Alif is a letter, Lam is a letter and Mim is a letter.'(1)

---

(1) This Hadith is narrated on the authority of 'Abdullah ibn Mas'ud Allah be pleased with him who said, 'the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said ''Whoever reads a single letter of Allah's Book, it is accounted to him as a good deed ten=

Thus, the disjointed letters comprise certain wisdom and specific purposes, the least part of which the scholars are still trying to understand, each to the extent Allah Glorified is He allows him to penetrate. The disjointed letters themselves are an eternal treasure trove that cannot be exhausted, and the True Lord gives of it to each of us according to our capacity.

They say: the Quran has come to us as an inimitable miracle of stylistic eloquence; the Arab nation was famed as a people of eloquence and rhetorical finesse, yet they were unable to produce anything comparable to the Quran nor imitate it at all; this despite the fact that Allah Glorified is He couched it in their own language and used their own writing system and their expressions, thereby challenging them – and they were unable to meet that challenge, being unable to produce even a single verse like it.

It is as though Allah Glorified is He was saying to them: ‘You have the same letters and the same words, so why have not you woven from them what I have woven?’ Thus, the aspect of inimitability seen here is due to the fact that He is the Speaker in the Quran. It is He Who created it and speaks through it.

Moreover – and this is the point that should be emphasised in all this – the True Lord Glorified is He revealed to us certain articles of faith and prescriptive rulings that issue from the very One in Whom you believe, and the Quran, itself, that demonstrates this. These are three: the articles of faith, that is, belief in the Highest Existent, the Necessary Existent, and that He possesses certain qualities which represent His absolute perfection for example, the First and the Last, the Outward and the Inward, and so on; for, rational proofs can be brought to bear here.

This marvellous, flawless universe must necessarily have been created by an All-Powerful, All Knowing, All-Wise Creator and so on and so forth. So, reason supports and establishes such articles of belief, but not all articles of belief can be so supported; there are also things that no rational proof can be based on because they deal with the invisible (unseen), as for example when you say that paradise is, looks such and such, describing it in specific terms.

= times the value of other good deeds. Thus I do not say ‘a’‘l’ ‘m’ as a single unit, but Alif alone, and Lam alone, and Mim alone’’’ At-Tirmidhi, (Sunnan), 2910, identified by him as a sound Hadith.

Likewise, all descriptions of the punishment in the grave – these pertain to the unseen realm and also admit of no rational proof, although they are guaranteed by those articles of faith that are supported by reason. So, as long as you believe in this Deity, Allah Glorified is He, and your reason leads you to Him, take what He has told you without disputing it – simply accept it as you hear it.

This applies also for the prescriptive rulings such as the ritual prayer, the purpose of which is to perpetuate one's devotion to Allah Glorified is He the Obligatory Alms, the purpose of which is financial and economic participation in society and the pilgrimage to Allah's inviolable house, and so on. These rulings have both a rational aspect and an audible aspect. Prayer, for example, may be rationally seen as worship of Allah Glorified is He and a proof of one's devotion to Him, while the specifics of how to perform it, such as the number of prostrations, is purely a matter of revelation we take as given to us without dispute. This applies for all acts of worship.

The prescriptive rulings comprise an aspect that may be understood rationally and an aspect that must be accepted undisputedly. If you ask, how can we simply keep within limits when it comes to certain issues of religion that cannot be disputed? We say, yes, such keeping within limits when it comes to the unseen realm is an indication of the level of our belief in Allah Glorified is He; for, all people are equal when it comes to intellectual matters.

We said before that if, for example, you have some money you fear might be stolen, you hide it underneath a rock in the garden. When the end of the month rolls around and you want to pay your servant his wages from this money, you tell him to lift this rock and take what is under it. He responds that he is not able to lift it alone, so he will wait for someone else to help him lift it. You respond that he should know that under the rock is a purse containing the money from which he is to take his wages – he immediately, heads to the rock and lifts it by himself without any help from anybody!

If however you were to tell another person to lift the rock and he did so without caring for a reason, would you consider both individuals equal in obedience to you? This also applies to the articles of faith – there is a difference between the one who believes in tangible things and the one who believes in unseen matters of which you inform him.

This then is the situation with the articles of faith, the prescriptive rulings, and the Quran – they all comprise an aspect that can be understood rationally and an aspect that must be accepted undisputedly. It is your responsibility to accept the unseen matters based upon your knowledge of the intellectual matters. The Holy Quran – the subject of our discussion here – contains both speech that may be understood rationally, and disjointed letters whose meaning is obscure beyond the basic fact that Allah Glorified is He spoke them. So, to sum up our view on the subject we say: Allah Glorified is He knows best what He means by them.

As for His saying: ‘Ha Mim. ‘Sending down [of this revelation] from the Lord of Mercy, the Giver of Mercy’ (Fussilat: 1-2), we say that it is precisely ‘Ha Mim’ that Allah Glorified is He is referring to as ‘[This is] A revelation from the Lord of Mercy, the Giver of Mercy’ (Fussilat: 2). Given this, these letters represent a revelation from the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy. Beware lest you get stuck on this point, asking what they mean or complaining that they are obscure. No, rather stop there and take them as they are with the understanding that Allah Glorified is He knows best what He means by them.

Know that He then says: ‘A Scripture whose verses are made distinct...’ (Fussilat: 3). There are then two elements in the Quran: those things which must be accepted undisputedly, without exceeding the boundaries, like the case of ‘Ha Mim’. Such things which belong to the world of the unseen represent the arena where belief is tried. Yet, the Quran also provides matters which may be understood rationally – and these the Quran thoroughly expounds.

The word tanzil, ‘Sending down [of this revelation]...’ (Fussilat: 2) derives from the word nuzul (the action of descent). Descent involves movement from a high place to a lower place or a higher rank to a lower rank. This term occurs frequently and refers to the descent of the Quran and the Path from on high, and occurs in all its various derivations: tanzil, nazala, nunazzilu, nazzalnahu, anzalna. The True Lord says: ‘And with the truth We have sent the Quran down, and with the truth it has descended...’ (al-Isra’: 105). He also says: ‘The angels and the Spirit descend therein by permission of their Lord for every matter’ (al-Qadr: 4).

Therefore, the moment you hear the word tanzil you know that what has come to you is from a higher station than yours, though it may reside with you now, or even be under your feet – as He says in the chapter of al-Hadid (the Iron): '...And We sent down iron, wherein is mighty strength and benefits for the people…' (al-Hadid: 25). It is obvious that iron comes from the ground with respect to its formation, but it comes down from on high with respect to its Creator: The One Who gives it to you.

Thus, all of these derivations from the root n-z-l refer to the sublimity of that which is sent down. From whom then is it sent down? '…From the Lord of Mercy, the Giver of Mercy' (Fussilat: 2). It is incumbent upon you to receive that which is sent down to you with absolute submission and acceptance. For this reason, when they told our master Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him that his associate was claiming to have been taken on a journey, by night, to Jerusalem and then taken up to heaven, he did not dispute the matter from a rational standpoint but simply said to them: 'If he said it, then he spoke the truth.'

Thus, he made Muhammad's statement the foundation – if the statement issues from him it must be true since he is truthful – and ever since that day Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him has been called As-Siddiq 'the absolutely believing'. The fact of Muhammad's being taken on a night journey, actually, constitutes an earthly sign and has a rational aspect to it since the distance was known to them, as was the nature of the trip to Jerusalem in terms of time and place; yet Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him did not dispute it. As for the ascension, it is an unseen matter. It is as though He made believing Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in terms of familiar earthly things a means whereby the people could believe him in heavenly things they knew nothing of.

We also understand from Allah's words: 'Sending down [of this revelation] from the Lord of Mercy, the Giver of Mercy;' (Fussilat: 2) that the imposition of obligations He revealed to you is not for the purpose of burdening you; for He is the One Who is all-merciful towards you, infinite in His mercy – His mercy encompasses all things, believer and disbeliever alike.

Now Ar-Rahim means (perpetually merciful), for His mercy extends and lasts even in the Hereafter. If then you see in the revelation an obligation that you think is onerous to you, do not think that it is from one who is harsh towards you – but rather comes from the All-Merciful towards you and the Dispenser of mercy.

He is the All-Merciful towards you, for He directs you to that which will felicitate your earthly existence and your life in the Hereafter. When He imposes upon us certain obligations that might be onerous to a typical soul, it is not that He profits in any way by this; it is all the same to Him whether you believe or disbelieve, pray or do not pray. He exists in His Omnipotence regardless of whether you disbelieve in Him or you do not pray.

Your actions therefore bear no relation to Allah Glorified is He with respect to the benefit they may have, but are simply for your own good. It is just as you might say to your child, for example, ‘If you do well this year I will buy you such and such’. Then, the True Lord says:

كِتَٰبٌ فُصِّلَتْ ءَايَٰتُهُۥ قُرْءَانًا عَرَبِيًّا لِّقَوْمٍ يَعْلَمُونَ ٣

A Scripture whose verses are made distinct as a
Quran in Arabic for people who understand [3]
(The Quran, Fussilat: 3)

He calls it: ‘…a book…’ (Fussilat: 3) since kitab (book) signifies a collection (is plural), just as katibah (battalion) is jam’a (a collection) of troops. Kitab, thus, is a word that tajma’ (gathers) words together. Al-Kitab means that things are gathered within it. In the Quran is collected all the good in this life and the Hereafter. It is also kitab (a book) in the sense that it is maktub (written) and inscribed such that you can read it.

Therefore, when they wished to codify the Quran, the one responsible for its codification laid down the criterion that they should not accept a verse unless they could find it actually written on a scrap or bone or some other writing surface used at that time; its authenticity then had to be testified to by two reciters. So, it is kitab (a book) in that it is written down, and a Quran because it is maqru’ (recited) and memorised by heart.

According to the late Sheikh Mohammad 'Abdullah Darraz,(1) (using a verse from the Quran as a metaphor) the True Lord intends thereby that ‘…the second of the two may remind the other…’ (al-Baqara: 282), that is, the written record assisted the recited form in inscribing the Book of Allah Glorified is He with great precision admitting no doubt.

(1) Mohammad ‘Abdullah Darraz, the learned Egyptian Azharite jurist, among the leading scholars of Azhar. His books include Ad-Din, an introductory study of the history of Islam. He died in 1958. (Taken from Az- Zirikli’s Al-A‘lam).

This is demonstrated by the following incident: when the codifier of the Quran found a particular written verse and called for two witnesses but could only find one to testify to its authenticity, he refrained from transcribing it. The witness in question was our master Hudhayfa(1) Allah be pleased with him. Then there approached the codifier an individual who reminded him of the Hadith of our master Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him concerning Khuzayma of whom Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'To whomever Khuzayma testifies, his testimony is sufficient.' Thus, he peace and blessings be upon him made Khuzayma's testimony worth that of two men. So, the codifier accepted the verse and wrote it down.

There is a story about this: they say that the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him took a loan from a Jew, then, repaid him without the presence of a witness. Later the Jew came again demanding payment, whereupon the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'I have repaid you.' The man denied this, but Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him repeated: 'I have repaid you.' The man said, 'Bring me a witness,' whereupon one of the Companions arose and said, 'Messenger of Allah! I was a witness to that' – so the Jew desisted, for he was lying. Afterwards the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him called the Companion over and asked him, 'How could you have witnessed our transaction when no one was there with us?' He replied: 'Messenger of Allah, how could I believe you when you speak of heaven yet disbelieve you about a few dirhams?'

Yes: we call this an excellent example of inference. It is for this reason that he was worthy of such a dignified standing with the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'To whomever Khuzayma testifies, his testimony is sufficient.'

As for His words: 'fussilat ayatuhu', '…whose verses are made distinct…' (Fussilat: 3): they call this form of the verb passive, that is, one for which the subject is not identified. The reason it is so here is because Allah Glorified is He first fassalaha (made its verses distinct) such that they, accordingly, became mufassalah (distinct). When the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him communicated them to the people, they became mufassilah (clarifying in detail) with respect to their affairs and the rulings they should abide by.

(1) The testimony of Khuzayma in favour of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him

Furthermore, '…whose verses are made distinct…' (Fussilat: 3) signifies that the Quran was partitioned or divided mufassal into chapters, each chapter standing alone in its own right, and within the chapters there are verses; each verse again standing alone in its own right. There are both long and short chapters, and likewise there are some verses that are only one word long and others that are several lines long. He also made the words distinct with respect to their subject matter. Moreover He made distinct the halal (allowed) and haram (forbidden); He made distinct acts of obedience and acts of disobedience. Has He not made distinct His promise and His threat, His reward and His punishment? The Quran, then, made all these issues distinct, or rather, all the ayat (signs) in the universe have been made distinct therein as they shall be until the last hour. Therefore, they said: 'Allah's Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him delivered a sermon to us most eloquently without failing to mention anything, or failing to mention every single leaf that had fallen until the last hour comes – those who remember will remember and those who forget will forget.'(1)

Yes, it is just as Allah Glorified is He says: '…We have missed nothing out of the Record…' (al-An'am: 38), that is, everything that happens in the world is here for you in this Book.

That is why when we were asked,(2) on one of our trips to Europe by a certain orientalist: 'You have in the Quran: "It is He who sent His Messenger with guidance and the religion of truth to show that it is above all [other] religions…" (as-Saff: 9). Also: "they wish to put His light out with their mouths. But He will perfect His light, even though the disbelievers hate it" (as-Saff: 8). Nevertheless, though fourteen centuries have passed since the appearance of Islam, Jews, Christians, apostates and idolaters still exist without Islam prevailing over them.'

---

(1) Narrated by Abu Sa'id Al-Khudri Allah be pleased with him who stated: 'Allah's Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him addressed us from afternoon to sunset; those of us remember it who remember it and those of us who have forgotten have forgotten. But – praise be to Allah – he spoke of what shall be until the Day of Resurrection' [Ahmad, (Musnad), 3/19].

(2) The story of the orientalist who asked sheikh Ash-Sha'rawi Allah rest his soul about the meaning of the verse 'He it is who has sent forth His Apostle with [the task of] spreading guidance and the religion of truth, to the end that He makes it prevail over all [false] religion…' (as-Saff: 9)

Our answer which Allah Glorified is He granted us to respond with was: Islam has in fact prevailed over them despite their continued existence, for what is meant here by prevail is the making of a conclusive argument. So, Islam has prevailed over them with an argument that its enemies cannot counter.

There is a difference between an argument being made by one who believes it, and it being made by one who does not. How? Scholars said: certain situations shall come into the world that are created by mankind and have no solution except through recourse to the dictates of the Quran. Thus, the Quran prevailed over them, over their ideas, norms, and civilisation – otherwise they would not have referred to it.

We then used the example of divorce in Islam, one of the most high-profile issues whose treatment in Islam they used to object to and criticise. Yet, afterwards, the Vatican itself was forced to allow divorce as well. This is part of Islam's prevailing, not by them converting to Islam, but simply by its arguments prevailing among them and those who do not believe in it still vouch for its efficiency.

He says: '…as a discourse in the Arabic tongue…' (Fussilat: 3) that is: in the Arabic language and for an Arabic-speaking nation. Yet, how could that be so when it is a universal message for all mankind, whatever language they speak? Why was not it revealed in every language? They said that this is because there was not yet Esperanto; thus, the Quran was revealed to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in his Arabic-speaking community, for Allah Glorified is He wished to reveal this religion to an illiterate nation by the tongue of an illiterate Messenger – Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him – so that none could say that the Quran is merely a product of civilisation.

The Arabs were a nation that ruled no state of their own, unorganised and without a system of law, being only a group of different tribes each with its own law and every man for himself. Despite this, a nation of such modest standing was able to unite the entire world and its sophisticated states, from the Persian Empire in the east to the Byzantine Empire in the west.

How could this nation bring such a thing about? They were obliged to understand that the law of heaven came from above – they would never have played this role were it not for the message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

So there is no way we can say that Islam is a product of civilisation. Thus, when the True Lord wished to advance His religion, He caused Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to proclaim it in Mecca. Why Mecca specifically? Because the people of Quraysh were settled there; it was the seat of authority for the entire peninsula, and valiant men were there whom no one dared to face.

It was among these people that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him proclaimed Islam. Yet it was not these chiefs and leaders that succoured the faith, but rather, the slaves and the oppressed of the city. As we have said, there is a reason for this – it was so that no one could say that tribal partisanship in support of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was what created belief in Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him but rather that belief in Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was what inspired partisanship towards him.

So, the Quran is in Arabic, for the Arabs were the standard-bearers for the call to Islam, spreading the faith into all the regions of the world. The Arabs were a nation accustomed to nomadism; they had no houses, they did not live in villas or buildings, but had only their tents which they carried with them wherever they went. Their homeland, therefore, was the whole world, with their homes on the backs of their camels. They were likewise a tribal nation, each person loyal only to his own tribe, and thus were frequently at war with each other; some of these wars even lasted forty years.

These wars trained them to fight and planted in them courage and self-sacrifice for the sake of their principles. Thus, when the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wished to prepare an army, he did not have to open a military school, for he found a whole generation of men prepared and ready to fight and well versed in the art of war – men who would rush off to fight whenever they heard of any commotion.

These are the men that would receive the faith from the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and would spread his message. Thus, the Quran must necessarily have been given in their language, and the call made in their language, that they might be able to bear it.

For this reason Allah Glorified is He says in another place: ‘We have never sent a messenger who did not use his own people’s language to make things clear for them…’ (Ibrahim: 4). Yes, because they were the ones to hear it from him first.

Yet, what about the universality of the faith! They said that when his people heard him they believed in him and then carried his call to mankind not as a body of words but as a path and code of behaviour and a model for emulation. It is well known that such codes of behaviour are the same across languages. Therefore, the Muslims conquered the whole world not with the Quran and its verses directly but rather with the principles and the way of life inculcated by the Quran.

Thus, the Quran was revealed in the Arabic language because the Arabs were ready for this undertaking, capable of seeing it through and taking it all over the world; given their status as a nomadic nation residing in no fixed place, as well as a nation of fighters, and an illiterate nation we cannot possibly accuse them of fabricating such a religion as this, or say that it is simply a product of civilisation.

His words: ‘…for people who understand,’ (Fussilat: 3) mean: with knowledge of the ways of the Arabic language, or rather, are absolutely fluent in them and at the peak of eloquence and rhetorical finesse such that you cannot find a nation on earth comparable to the Arabs in their production of literary and verbal excellence, as demonstrated in the markets of 'Ukazh, Al-Marbad, Dhu al-Majaz and Al-Majanna. There, they used to perform and critique their literary productions, and what was deemed most excellent they would honour by placing it on the curtains of the Ka‘ba.

Thus, ‘…for people who understand,’ (Fussilat: 3) refers to the Arabic language in which they excel to the extent that the inimitable Quran was revealed in their language. Inimitability is meaningless with respect to those who do not excel in the field this inimitability challenges. You may not say to one who is ignorant of a thing, ‘I excel you in this thing.’ The claim of inimitability is only valid with respect to one who also excels in the skill in which one claims to be superior since the ignorant can always say to you: ‘By Allah, had I known such a thing I would have beaten you in it. It is in this sense then that Allah Glorified is He challenged the Arabs with the Quran.

Therefore, the True Lord does not reveal a sign through which a messenger’s call is proved valid except when it fits the skill in which his people excel. Thus, the miracle of our master Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was expressed in terms of medicine: he healed al-akmah (the blind) and al-abras (the leprous) by Allah’s leave. The miracle of our master Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was expressed through his staff because his people excelled in magic. Likewise, the miracle of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was expressed in terms of rhetorical finesse and eloquence of expression; challenging his people with the Quran. In this way inimitability is realised.

We hear some say that the Arabs were beaten by the Quran. This is incorrect – the Arabs were not beaten, but rather vindicated by the Quran. How? Because those whom Allah Glorified is He challenges in this sense are strong themselves, so Allah’s challenge to them is simply proof that they were strong, they had power with respect to eloquence of expression, they had total command of their language.

بَشِيرًا وَنَذِيرًا فَأَعْرَضَ أَكْثَرُهُمْ فَهُمْ لَا يَسْمَعُونَ ﴿٤﴾

Giving good news and warning. Yet most of them turn away and so do not hear [4] (The Quran, Fussilat: 4)

He says: ‘giving good news and warning…’ (Fussilat: 4). This is the first element in the process of distinguishing between things; as we said, it distinguishes between truth and falsehood, between permitted and forbidden – here, between bashiran (giving good news) and nadhiran (giving warning). ‘…Yet most of them turn away and so do not hear’ (Fussilat: 4) – this turning away of the majority indicates that it is the minority that believed: the oppressed minority. The majority, however, were people of authority and power who did not accept the new call that would make them equal with such weaklings and slaves.

Our master Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him having assumed the caliphate, a group of leaders sought his audience, when a group of the poor who had been the first embracers of Islam were already with him. He delayed meeting with the important men until he had finished with the others. This irritated them, and they found themselves thinking: why has Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him given slaves and weaklings precedence over us? Abu Bakr As-Siddiq said: 'What is upsetting them? Each one is angry that I have given so-and-so precedence over him. I wonder how they will react when Allah Glorified is He gives the others precedence over them in paradise on the Day of Resurrection.'

Then, what is the reason of their turning away, according to His statement: '…Yet most of them turn away…' (Fussilat: 4)? Scholars said that the reason of their turning away is their understanding the goal of the new religion. It asks them to say: 'There is no deity but Allah.'

They understood that authority would now only belong to this phrase, that control would now only belong to this statement, and that all men would be equal before it. How, then, could they bring themselves to say: 'There is no deity but Allah,' knowing as they did its import? They did not say it. Had it been merely a word to be uttered, they would have uttered it, but they knew its meaning and accordingly refused.

He says: '…and so do not hear' (Fussilat: 4). That is, they cannot hear it in such a way as to profit from it, being aware and accepting its message. Therefore, as He says: '…Yet most of them turn away…' (Fussilat: 4) indicating that they hear the call of Allah's Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him but hear only with their ears and do not profit thereby. Therefore, the True Lord says of them: 'Some of these people listen to you [Prophet], but, once they leave your presence, they sneer at those who have been given knowledge, saying, "What was that he just said?"…' (Muhammad: 16)

Thus, people differ in the way they receive the Quran. One may hear it and be moved, and accordingly prostrates for the majesty of the Quran; another may hear it and says in mockery and derision: 'What was that he said?' This is because he does not hear with the ear of respect and consideration. Why? Because the portals of his heart are locked by his mind in reaction to what the faith wants of him. Being accustomed to authority, then, they turned away the instant they heard that which opposed their temporal authority and power.

We mentioned in recounting the story of Umar's embracing Islam that when he first heard the Quran he opposed it and rebelled against it, for his heart was not ready to properly receive it. Then, when he struck his sister and caused her to bleed, his heart softened and became pliant, and the locks fell away. Then, when he heard the Quran, he was much moved by it and believed.

وَقَالُوا۟ قُلُوبُنَا فِىٓ أَكِنَّةٍ مِّمَّا تَدْعُونَآ إِلَيْهِ وَفِىٓ ءَاذَانِنَا وَقْرٌ
وَمِنۢ بَيْنِنَا وَبَيْنِكَ حِجَابٌ فَٱعْمَلْ إِنَّنَا عَـٰمِلُونَ ﴿٥﴾

They say, 'Our hearts are encased against [the faith] you call us to; our ears are heavy; there is a barrier between us and you. So you do whatever you want, and so shall we' [5]
(The Quran, Fussilat: 5)

The meaning of 'fi akinnah' is 'encased' that is, under a covering which is the plural of kinan (covering). A covering is wrapped around a thing such that light cannot penetrate it. In another verse He says: 'We have put covers over their hearts, so they cannot understand the Quran…' (al-Kahf: 57). In one case these covers are put there by Allah Glorified is He and in the other case they themselves put them there. Whose action precedes then? Does Allah Glorified is He first put covers upon their hearts, upon which they are stricken with heedlessness, or is it their turning away from the religion of Allah Glorified is He that puts these covers upon their hearts?

We said that when a man is comfortable in and attached to his disbelief, Allah Glorified is He lets it increase in him and puts a seal on his heart such that belief cannot enter it nor can disbelief leave.

Thus, disbelief comes from them initially, after which Allah Glorified is He puts a seal on their hearts. It is the same with the issue of these covers – it originates from the disbelievers initially, after which Allah Glorified is He multiplies the covers in them. He puts covers upon their hearts, giving them disease upon their disease.

Thus, what is meant by al-akinnah (the coverings) is that they prevent them from understanding and contemplating what they hear and what is recited to them. They said: 'wa fi adhanina waqr', '…our ears are heavy…' (Fussilat: 5). Waqr means: a deafness that obstructs hearing. In the chapter of al-Baqara Allah says: 'Deaf, dumb (and) blind…' (al-Baqara: 18).

It is well known that dumbness originates from deafness, for how can a deaf person speak when he cannot hear? This is because language is a social phenomenon, and it is the product of imitation – what the ear hears the tongue speaks. So, if the ear hears nothing, the tongue can say nothing. Language is not a stand-alone skill, but is subsequent to hearing and imitating. Thus, one can put an English little boy or girl in an Arabic-speaking environment and, after a while, they will speak Arabic.

A deaf person is capable of speaking since he makes various unintelligible sounds similar to those we might hear from a mute person, for example. Even a perfectly healthy and articulate person cannot say a word he does not know from his own language. How does he learn it? He learns by hearing it first.

We have taken from this issue material proofs of the existence of The Most Exalted Creator. We ask someone, how do you know how to speak? He says, I can speak because I heard my parents and everyone around me talking, so I began to speak like them. Thus, language is only established through hearing.

The same was the case with our ancestors. Trace this line back to Adam peace be upon him and ask how he was able to speak when there was no one before him whom he could hear? He definitely heard, but whom did he hear? He heard from Allah Glorified is He when He taught him all the names.

Thoughts are communicated to us through our ears and are expressed through our tongues. Because these people (mentioned in the verse) were deaf and could not hear, they did not take in any of what was said to them. Thus, they did not produce anything in response. That is why Allah says clarifying what they said: '…"Our hearts are encased"…' (Fussilat: 5) that is, covered over and prevented from benefitting, and '…our ears are heavy…' (Fussilat: 5). Why is no mention made here of their tongues? Because they would not speak of faith since they had not heard what was said to them about it. The fact that the True Lord does not refer to speech here indicates that they will not hear and so will not speak. Consider how precise the verse is here, for it is the speech of Him: the Lord.

They said in the verse: '…there is a barrier between us and you…' (Fussilat: 5). That is: a thick screen veils you. When you and your companion sit conversing with each other, you hear him and he hears you, you see him and he sees you, sociable and comfortable in each other's company and so on. By contrast, were there to be a barrier between you two, it would prevent any such interaction.

This barrier may be a spiritual one. We say (in Arabic), for example: 'there is a disagreement between two people – that is, a small misunderstanding that may be quickly resolved. If we say: 'there is a disagreement bayna (between) so-and-so and bayna (between) so-and-so', that is repeating the word 'between,' this indicates that it is a serious disagreement that will not be easily resolved.

They say likewise: 'wa min baynina wa baynika hijab', '…there is a barrier between us and you…' (Fussilat: 5). That is, a thick and heavy barrier that hides everything and prevents communication, filling in the whole space between us. They said: when our master, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to speak to the people and introduce Allah's religion to them, Abu Jahl would take his robe and put it over his face so as not to see the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

So, as long as there remains a barrier between us and you, we will never come to agreement, both of us on a separate path; and as long as we are on separate paths: '…So you do whatever you want, and so shall we' (Fussilat: 5). The True Lord has clarified this matter in the chapter of al-Kafirun (the Disbelievers): 'Say [Prophet], "Disbelievers: I do not worship what you worship, you do not worship what I worship, I will never worship what you worship, you will never worship what I worship: you have your religion and I have mine"' (al-Kafirun: 1-6). This is the natural result of this barrier between them.

When some people read this chapter they think that it contains repetition. This is not repetition; rather, this chapter speaks about cutting off relations. Such a cutting off of relations is determined by place and time. Consider two countries that have cut off relations with one another, and then the air cleared between them; their relations are restored and even become better than before. Diplomatically, there is a difference between the past and the present.

However, with respect to belief and disbelief it is different, for they are absolutely opposed to each other and cannot ever meet halfway, no matter what happens in the future, and so their relations cannot be restored. That is why He says: '…I do not worship what you worship; you do not worship what I worship…' (al-Kafirun: 2-3) – that is, now in the present. '…I will never worship what you worship, you will never worship what I worship,' (al-Kafirun: 4-5) – that is, in the future. So, do not imagine that relations between us will ever improve, that our relation shall ever be restored – no: we shall never have common ground, not in the present nor in the future.

This is the cutting off of relations: as long as there remains a barrier and a wall between us, we will each go our own way, 'everyone has their own horse to ride'.

'…So you do whatever you want, and so shall we' (Fussilat: 5). Do whatever makes you happy and whatever you get from your Allah and your Islam, and we will proceed according to our gods, our religion and our way of worshipping. Work for your Deity Who sent you and we will work for our gods that we worship. Work for your Hereafter and we will work for our present life. In short, what we have here is insistence on the part of the Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and enmity on their part, until such time as Allah wills and Allah Glorified is He will not but bring His light to perfection.

Thus, we see how Islam grew and spread slowly. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him commanded his followers to immigrate to Ethiopia and then to Medina, leading them progressively until they became powerful. It began weakly with the weak, then, grew strong such that the powerful joined; it started out confined to Mecca, then, its sphere widened, increasing every day as the lands of Islam grew and those of disbelief shrank.

When Khalid ibn Al-Walid and 'Amr ibn Al-‘As Allah be pleased with them saw how Islam was spreading in this manner, Khalid Allah be pleased with him said to ‘Amr Allah be pleased with him ‘wa Allah, laqad istaqam al-maysam’, meaning: ‘By Allah, the path has become clear’ – that is, this religion is doing well, so let us embrace Islam.(1)

Even the leading disbelievers began to re-examine their position and embrace Allah’s religion. Among them was ‘Ikrima ibn Abi Jahl Allah be pleased with him who led the opposition in the battle for Mecca’s conquest, known as the battle of Al-Khan amah;(2) he subsequently became Muslim and proved himself brave in the cause of Islam such that he died in one of the battles. Just before he died, he said: ‘Will such a death make Allah’s Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him pleased with me?’

Then, the True Lord says:

---

(1) In his biography of the Prophet, Ibn Hisham relates the story of the conversion of ‘Amr ibn ‘Al-‘As Allah be pleased with him and Khalid ibn Al-Walid Allah be pleased with him. It begins with An-Najashi convincing him that Muhammad was speaking the truth, saying to him: ‘Woe to you, ‘Amr! Obey me and go follow him, for by Allah he speaks the truth, and he shall triumph over those who oppose him just as Musa (Moses) peace be upon him triumphed over Pharaoh and his army.’ So I [‘Amr] said, ‘Will you accept in his stead my pledge of allegiance to Islam?’ An-Najashi responded that yes, he would, and opened his hand; so I pledged to him my allegiance to Islam, and my companions kept my conversion secret. I then left him to seek out the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to become Muslim [at his hand]. I met Khalid ibn Al-Walid Allah be pleased with him coming from Mecca – this was shortly before its conquest – and I asked him, ‘Where are you going, Abu Sulaiman?’ He said, ‘By Allah, the brand has become clear – I am going to the Prophet, by Allah, to become Muslim. How long Will you do so too?’ I said, ‘By Allah, I also have come for no other purpose.’ So we came to the Prophet in Medina. Khalid ibn Al-Walid Allah be pleased with him approached him first and pledged his allegiance, after which I drew near and said, ‘Messenger of Allah, I pledge allegiance to you on the condition that my previous sins be forgiven, nor do I mention the most recent.’ Said the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘Make your pledge, ‘Amr, for Islam cuts off what went before it, and emigration cuts off what went before it.’

(2) Al-Khandama: a mountain from which Mecca was built [Az-Zamakhshari, (Al-Amkina wa-l-miyah)]. It is one of the mountains around Mecca, rising above Mount Abu Qubays from the east and composed of red rock. On it there is a great white stone that appears to be suspended [Ibn ‘Abd Al-Mun‘im Al-Himyari, (Ar-Rawd Al-mi‘tar fi khabar Al-'atar)].

قُلْ إِنَّمَآ أَنَا۠ بَشَرٌ مِّثْلُكُمْ يُوحَىٰٓ إِلَىَّ أَنَّمَآ إِلَـٰهُكُمْ إِلَـٰهٌ وَٰحِدٌ
فَٱسْتَقِيمُوٓا۟ إِلَيْهِ وَٱسْتَغْفِرُوهُ ۗ وَوَيْلٌ لِّلْمُشْرِكِينَ ﴿٦﴾
ٱلَّذِينَ لَا يُؤْتُونَ ٱلزَّكَوٰةَ وَهُم بِٱلْـَٔاخِرَةِ هُمْ كَـٰفِرُونَ ﴿٧﴾

Say [Prophet], ‘I am only a mortal like you, [but] it has been revealed to me that your God is One. Take the straight path to Him and seek His forgiveness. Woe to the idolaters [6] who do not pay the prescribed alms and refuse to believe in the world to come!’ [7] (The Quran, Fussilat: 6 -7)

‘Say…’ – that is, in responding to what they said: ‘…“I am only a mortal like you, [but] it has been revealed to me that your Allah is One Allah”…’ (Fussilat: 6) – that is, why are you taking such a hostile position towards me and my call? Why do you put these barriers between us, when I am one of you, an Arab like you, someone whose trustworthiness and history you knew well when I lived among you previously? It is an instance of Allah’s mercy that He has sent me to you as a man like yourselves, rather than sending an angel. ‘Indeed, if We had sent an angel as messenger, We would still have sent him in the form of a man, so increasing their confusion’ (al-An‘am: 9). That is, you know how he behaved among you before – with honesty, integrity and virtue. So had he come to you as an angel, would you have been able to emulate him in his angelic state? For an angel is not the proper model for human beings.

So learn courtesy and humility from the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in his saying: ‘…“I am only a mortal like you”…’ (Fussilat: 6) that is, without any sense of pride or superiority – He singled me out from among you simply in that ‘…it has been revealed to me…’ (Fussilat: 6), and the purport of this revelation is ‘…your Allah is One Allah…’ (Fussilat: 6). As long as it is revealed to me I am simply its transmitter, and not guilty of any sin you might blame me for. I am but a human being like you and am one of you. I have no distinction above you except insofar as Allah Glorified is He has distinguished me with His revelation.

That is why the True Lord often corrected His Messenger, adjusted his judgments, and even rebuked him – it is Allah’s Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him himself who has told us of this. Such is the proof that he was faithful in conveying from his Lord. The True Lord says: ‘if [the Prophet] had attributed some fabrication to Us, We would certainly have seized his right hand. And cut off his lifeblood’ (al-Haqqa: 44-46). He says also: ‘…Your Allah…’ (Fussilat: 6). He did not say ‘your Lord’ because they believe in the existence of Allah Glorified is He the Creator and All-Sustainer. The problem with them concerns Allah Who is to be worshipped, for that Allah has certain commands and prohibitions that demand obedience. So, they are Muslims with respect to His Lordship, but idolaters with respect to His Divinity. He wished to clarify the matter for them: ‘…your Allah is One Allah…’ (Fussilat: 6) not multiple. Sometimes Allah says: ‘ilahun wahid’, ‘…is one Allah…’ (Fussilat: 6), while in the chapter of al-Ikhlas (Sincerity) He says: ‘Qul howa Allahu Ahad’, ‘Say: He, Allah, is One’ (al-Ikhlas: 1). Wahid means He has no second, and ahad means one in His essence, not composed of different parts; His essence admits of no division.

The disbelievers had taken multiple gods in order to satisfy a religious impulse in their souls, and to have an object of worship that placed no demands on them in terms of responsibilities and conduct. For this reason, we say that part of our religion’s policy of wasatiyya (moderation) is its insistence on believing in one Deity (Allah) since on the one hand some people believe in multiple gods, and on the other some people deny the existence of any deity. Thus, the Islamic religion came and made it clear that Allah Glorified is He is one.

Given that He is one Allah, ‘…Take the straight path to Him and seek His forgiveness...’ (Fussilat: 6). Istaqimu (take the straight path) means: go directly and uprightly without swerving here and there. Scholars said(1) that there was a man of the Tayyi’ tribe; His name was Ibn Baar; He saw a young man taking a circuitous route back to his house rather than going directly: going around by all the village’s roads.

Ibn Bandar knew by this that the young man in his roundaboutness intended something suspicious, so he said to him: ‘You there – go to your house directly!’– that is, go there by a direct route. Right then the young man knew that the man had seen through him and understood his dishonourable plan, and was thus deterred.

(1) The story of a man from Tayyi’ tribe with a youth called Ibn Bandar

Likewise, His statement, '…Take the straight path to Him…' (Fussilat: 6), means make for Him by the path of uprightness, whose path is called the straight path. Science has demonstrated that the shortest route between any two points is a straight line. Furthermore, the straight path may either be narrow, forcing you to walk uprightly, or may be wide, permitting you to swerve to the right or left, like highways.

Yet, even if it is wide, go directly on it anyway so as to shorten the distance of your trip and arrive more quickly; for when you deviate from this the distance increases. That is why He calls it: '…the straight path…' (al-Baqara: 108), that is, the middle of the path without deviation, such that what is on your right and left sides is equal. Sometimes He says: 'Guide us to the straight path' (al-Fatiha: 6), and sometimes '…the right path' (al-Baqara: 108).

So His words: '…Take the straight path to Him…' (Fussilat: 6) mean: to begin with, and if you are then distracted from the proper path and commit any sin, '…seek His forgiveness…' (Fussilat: 6), that is, ask forgiveness from Him.

'…Woe to the idolaters Who do not pay the prescribed alms…' (Fussilat: 6-7); for seeking forgiveness involves a request that a previous act be effaced. The legal principle here states that preventing corruption takes precedence over acting in the public good. An example of this is a situation in which someone wants to throw you an apple, while someone else wants to throw a stone at you. What should be done first in this case? It is a priority to avoid the stone. Then, He says: '…seek His forgiveness…' (Fussilat: 6) that your sins may be effaced and that you may initiate a new relationship with Allah Glorified is He based on obedience and uprightness.

The word wayl '…Woe…' (Fussilat: 6) means perdition '…to the idolaters, who do not pay the prescribed alms…' (Fussilat: 6-7). Was the payment of alms prescribed to idolaters? Alms payment was not even prescribed to the believers at that time. Scholars said that what is meant by alms payment here is the purification of one's income in case it is increasing. The idolaters used to do that in fact, but they did so, on the basis of generosity and to acquire a good reputation, not out of any consideration of Allah Glorified is He.

Thus, it was related that Al-Mut’im ibn 'Adi(1) had a pot with which he used to provide food to anyone who needed it such that the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘I used to take refuge from the sun’s blaze in the shade of the pot of Al-Mut’im ibn 'Adi.’(2)

Other examples include Hatim At-Ta’i(3) and his like from among the Arabs, who were famous for their generosity. The True Lord says: ‘who do not pay the prescribed alms…’ (Fussilat: 7); for man typically loves his money. The True Lord says: ‘…And whoever is protected from the stinginess of his soul…’ (al-Hashr: 9), for a man has many needs and demands in this life.

Buying and selling, at that time, was a form of exchange, meaning: you give me a commodity and I give you another commodity in return. When there was yet no money in use, a person would give another person some wheat, for example, and in exchange the latter would give the first some dates. Thus, each thing was a commodity as well as a price: wheat was considered by one a commodity, while dates were considered the price. Thus, every one of us is a buyer and seller.

The True Lord says, speaking of the story of our master Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him: ‘And the one from Egypt who bought him said to his wife, “Make his residence comfortable”…’ (Yusuf: 21). He says, ishtarah meaning: he bought him and took him home. Of the others He says: ‘And they sold him for a small price, a few pieces of silver, and they showed no desire for him' (Yusuf: 20), that is, they sold him. This, then, is exchange, both individuals acting as buyer and seller at once.

(1) Al-Mut‘im ibn 'Adi ibn Nawfal, of the Quraysh, was the chief of the Banu Nawfal tribe in the Jahiliyya (period of ignorance before the Prophet came) and leader in the battle of Fijar in the year 33 BH. It was he who protected the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him after his mistreatment at the hands of the people of At-Ta’if, and he also was among those who did away with the Quraysh’s boycott against the Banu Hashim despite his being a disbeliever. He died before the battle of Badr, ninety-some years of age, in 2 AH [Az-Zirikli, (Al-A‘lam)].

(2) What I have found on this subject is that the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘I used to seek refuge in the shade of ‘Abdullah ibn Jud‘an’s bowl at midday’, also with the phrase ‘at ‘Umayy’s high noon’ [that is, in the most intense heat of the day]’ [Ibn Kathir, (As-Sira An-Nabawiyya), 1/117; As-Suhayli, (Ar-Rawd Al-unuf), 1/244].

(3) Abu ‘Adu Hatim ibn ‘Abdullah at-Ta’i Al-Qahtani, of Najd, was a horseman and poet of the Jahiliyya; his generosity is proverbial. He went to Syria and married Mawiya bint Hajar Al-Ghassaniyya. He died in the mountains of the Tayyi’ region in the year 46 AH. Much diverse material is related about him in works of literature and history [Az-Zirikli, (Al-A‘lam), 2/151].

The True Lord says: 'who do not pay the prescribed alms and refuse to believe in the world to come!' (Fussilat: 7) This might be a general statement, and thus indicates that it is through their idolatry that they fail to apply Allah's ruling concerning almsgiving, and, consequently, their environment and their communities were not improved through them. For Allah Glorified is He intends that belief should propagate a servantly (being servants to Allah) attitude among human beings aimed at seeking a better way such that the strong should help the weak, and the healthy the sick, the rich the poor, the learned the ignorant.

The most important aspect of life is its preservation through nourishment. Nourishment requires money, and so when the True Lord speaks about this point concerning al-mu'alafti qulubuhum (the new converts to Islam whose hearts and allegiance to the Muslims need to be won over or retained through the provision of material incentives), He clarifies that they are people for whom we wish to cause a softening in their hearts towards the religion of Allah Glorified is He and to attract them to it, so they may study it closely and make an informed decision – not that we simply buy them for the religion, as some claim.

Among the ways to achieve this goal is to treat them kindly. That is why Allah Glorified is He has included them among those who are to receive Obligatory Alms. Being given from Allah's money, their hearts become softened.

When you do good towards another person, what is it you are doing to him? First, you are diffusing any hate he might have, and as long as you are doing so he will not be averse to you or spiteful towards you; he will, at the very least, listen to you. This is what happened in the case of al-mu'alafti qulubuhum.

After the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him died, a number of Arabs apostatised from the faith – why? The initial reason for their apostasy was the imposition of paying the Obligatory Alms; this provoked the Ridda wars. Thus, we heard about Sajah,(1) the imposter prophetess, as well as Musaylima. The first issue they mentioned in their calls was: We will abolish the Obligatory Alms. They said this in order to induce acceptance of their assertions of prophethood, seeking to lighten the obligations that are onerous for the soul.

(1) She is Sajah bint Al-Harith ibn Suwayd Al-Tamimiyya of the Banu Yarbu', known as Umm Sadir, the well-known false prophetess. She claimed prophet hood after the death of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and she knew how to write,=

Others – among those who claimed to be prophets – said: We will abolish half of the Prayer. Everything that lightens the rulings of Allah is invalid and harmful because it fell from being among the rulings of Allah's Path to being among the rulings of the method of lightening and making things easy. When Allah Glorified is He intends to make things easier He will do so Himself – Allah's Path is not to be, in any way, corrected.

There are many rulings, in Allah's law, that signify just such an easing, like the rulings concerning the fasting of the sick or the traveller, the prayer of the sick or the traveller, and many other such provisions in the law. Allah Glorified is He – the One Who legislates for you – is the only One Who may stipulate terms of easement, not you since He knows best the level of hardship which necessitates a legal easement.

We hear of those who say: 'We want to renew Islam.' We say: Glory be to Allah. O people who fear Allah, how can we renew Islam? How can we claim to correct Allah's rulings? We say: renew as much as you want, but Muslims will not don (embrace) whatever new things with which you come up. The reason for this is that the garment of piety comes from The Creator; He does not create just so that one of His creatures renews this garment – so spare yourselves the trouble.

Why has Allah made some people rich and others poor and needy? Why did He not make them all equal, thus obviating the need for Obligatory Alms? Scholars said: it is because Allah Glorified is He wishes to spread compassion and loving kindness among His creatures. So, when a rich man comes across a poor man, he is not to tower above him by reason of his wealth, but rather is to approach him and volunteer his services, and give him his due from Allah's money, upon which the poor man will love the rich man and love the fact that he is rich, without wishing him ill or hoping that he loses his wealth.

Thus, when you give you remove anger and resentment from people's hearts, thereby making your money a site of increase. The True Lord is fully capable of making everybody rich; however, wisdom dictates that there should be rich and poor, and that this situation should be general and persist – though the rich do not always remain so, likewise the poor, for everyone's state is constantly liable to change; so that people may be attached to one another through the bond of love and affection. The bond here is not one of graciousness but rather one of necessity.

Were we all to be college graduates, who would sweep the streets, who would drive the taxis, who would manufacture x and y? You say, perhaps we could agree that each person would do a specific task on a specific day.

We reply: fine – but this would make it a matter of graciousness, and graciousness is compulsory on no one – only necessity is. Allah Glorified is He wills to tie human welfare to necessity. Thus, you see a man with a difficult job, possibly even a painful one that you would be incapable of doing, perhaps you consider it wretched work, – so what makes him endure it? Necessity makes him endure it, the demands of life force him to endure it – daily bread and family responsibilities, raising children – otherwise he would not demean himself thus.

By Allah Glorified is He I have seen a cobbler living in the same house with his brother, a perfumer: just think how each of them smells all day.

Our teacher Sheikh Musa Allah be pleased with him often used to supplicate saying, 'O Allah, impoverish the craftsmen and enrich the scholars'. I used to get upset at this supplication and say to him, Master, what are you saying? How can you say that? He would reply: Were Allah to impoverish the scholars their ability to adjudicate would be compromised, and were Allah to enrich the craftsmen none of us would profit from them at all.

Yes: we have in fact seen a craftsman who refuses to work as long as he has ten pounds in his pocket and will do nothing till he has spent it all. Therefore, necessity must be the motivation to take care of matters of human welfare.

The True Lord Glorified is He has made the infusion of money into society the most important matter in Islam, and has therefore included it among the Pillars of the Faith. The True Lord has not exempted anyone from the duty to extend economic support to others: one must give if one has enough money, and if one does not have money one is to find encouraging words to give to those who have.

The True Lord says: ‘but there is no blame attached to the weak, the sick, and those who have no means to spend, provided they give advice in the cause of Allah and His Messenger – there is no reason to reproach those who do good…’ (at-Tawba: 91).

If a person has neither money nor words that soften the heart, he may, at least, do so within his own heart: ‘And there is no blame attached to those who came to you [Prophet] for riding animals and to whom you said, “I cannot find a mount for you”: they turned away with their eyes overflowing with tears of grief that they had nothing they could contribute’ (at-Tawba: 92).

So if one has money, he should spend out of it in the cause of Allah. If not, let him then encourage those who have it to spend out of it. When a believer can do neither, sorrow brims his heart to the extent that he sheds tears, for there is nothing he can give in the cause of Allah. Islam shows great care regarding monetary matters, for money is one of the main sources of provision in society.

Allah concludes the verse by saying: ‘…and refuse to believe in the world to come’ (Fussilat: 7). They disbelieve in the Oneness of Allah by associating partners with Him, and they also deny the Hereafter.

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَعَمِلُوا۟ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ لَهُمْ أَجْرٌ غَيْرُ مَمْنُونٍ ﴿٨﴾

Those who believe and do good deeds will have a reward that never fails [8] (The Quran, Fussilat: 8)

One of the stylistic features of the Quran is explaining things through contrast. After mentioning the polytheists, Allah mentions those who believe and do good deeds. He does not present one side without presenting the other for each to be quite clear in the minds of the addressees. Examples of this are numerous in the Quran, like the following verses: ‘The good will live in bliss and the wicked will burn in the Fire’ (al-Infitar: 13-14). Here is another example: ‘Let them, then, laugh a little – for they will weep a lot…’ (at-Tawba: 82). Such comparisons serve a good purpose in adding vividness to the cases and situations being compared, for the mind to absorb them and the heart to feel them.

Now, the verse tells that the reward of those who believe and do good will never be cut off. What does that mean? Some say it simply means that it will be given to them generously, as Allah says in another verse: ‘You will have a never-ending reward’ (al-Qalam: 3). Others say it means that their reward for good deeds will still be continuous even when they are prevented by their circumstances from continuing to do them. When someone is prevented from an act of devotion by a force out of his control – like illness or poverty – Allah continues to reward him for what he used to do. His reward continues even after his death and until the Day of Resurrection.

قُلۡ أَئِنَّكُمۡ لَتَكۡفُرُونَ بِٱلَّذِي خَلَقَ ٱلۡأَرۡضَ فِي يَوۡمَيۡنِ
وَتَجۡعَلُونَ لَهُۥٓ أَندَادٗاۚ ذَٰلِكَ رَبُّ ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ٩

Say, ‘How can you disregard the One who created the earth in two Days? How can you set up other gods as His equals? He is the Lord of all the worlds!’ [9] (The Quran, Fussilat: 9)

The verse is meant to direct attention to the signs of the universe, for they are the proofs that if we ponder must lead us to faith in Him Who has created everything. The universe is wondrous and incredibly precise in its construction and organisation. It operates according to a system that never breaks down, nor is it susceptible to anything that might affect its precision. All that spells the Majesty of the Creator since man never interfered in the creation of this amazing world. This is why the Quran often addresses people with the signs of creation to attract their attention to the One Who has made them. Numerous verses of the Quran start with: ‘Among His signs are.…’

In the verse we are considering, Allah speaks about the origin of creation and the emergence of the earth: ‘How can you disregard the One who created the earth in two Days? …' (Fussilat: 9). The interrogation here denotes condemnation. Allah reproaches them for their manifest error of denying the Creator Who has made this spectacular universe. They not only deny Him, but also '… set up other gods as His equals…' (Fussilat: 9). They dare make such allegations about Allah even though they know well He is the One God and Creator of all things, as Allah exposes them in several verses of the Quran. An example is this verse: 'If you [Prophet] ask them who created them they are sure to say, "Allah," so why are they so deluded?' (az-Zukhruf: 87). Allah also says: 'If you ask them who created the heavens and earth, they are sure to say, "Allah." Say, "Praise belongs to Allah," but most of them do not understand' (Luqman: 25). This is a truth they believe and cannot but acknowledge, but they persist in their stubborn denial.

His saying '…in two days…' (Fussilat: 9) refers to the normal day familiar to us, the definite period of time comprising the day and night. Allah speaks to us based on what we know.

Having condemned them for associating partners with the Lord of the worlds – Whom they acknowledge to be the Creator – Allah says afterwards:

وَجَعَلَ فِيهَا رَوَٰسِيَ مِن فَوۡقِهَا وَبَٰرَكَ فِيهَا وَقَدَّرَ فِيهَآ أَقۡوَٰتَهَا فِيٓ أَرۡبَعَةِ أَيَّامٖ سَوَآءٗ لِّلسَّآئِلِينَ ﴿١٠﴾
ثُمَّ ٱسۡتَوَىٰٓ إِلَى ٱلسَّمَآءِ وَهِيَ دُخَانٞ فَقَالَ لَهَا وَلِلۡأَرۡضِ ٱئۡتِيَا طَوۡعًا أَوۡ كَرۡهٗا قَالَتَآ أَتَيۡنَا طَآئِعِينَ ﴿١١﴾

He placed solid mountains on it, blessed it, measured out its varied provisions for all who seek them — all in four Days [10] Then He turned to the sky, which was smoke — He said to it and the earth, 'Come into being, willingly or not,' and they said, 'We come willingly' [11] (The Quran, Fussilat: 10 - 11)

Allah speaks here about the creation of the earth, informing us that He created it in two days. That does not mean creation itself was a process that took Him two days to perform. The case is quite different, and let me illustrate this by an example. What does it take to make yoghurt? It takes the simple process of adding a certain kind of bacteria to some milk then leaving it at a specified temperature for a specified length of time, say a few hours, after which the yoghurt will be ready. Does this mean that the process of making it took hours? No, only the minutes you spent adding the bacteria and storing it. You may go to a tailor to have a shirt made, and he will tell you to come back in a week to pick it up. Does it take him a week of constant work to make the shirt?

After Allah had created the earth, He placed firm mountains on it to preserve its stability, as He says: 'Did We not make the earth smooth, and make the mountains to keep it stable?' (an-Naba': 6-7) Were the earth naturally stable, it would not need mountains, but the earth spins and needs what makes it stable.

The verse then says: '… blessed it, measured out its varied provisions…' (Fussilat: 10). Blessing something means increasing it so that it yields more benefit than is reasonably expected. When food that normally suffices only five people is found to be sufficient for ten, we say Allah has blessed that food.

This translation of the verse tells us that Allah here speaks about the earth. The pronouns 'it' and 'its' refer to the earth. However, the pronouns used in the original Arabic text can refer to either the earth or the mountains, so which of the two is meant as the referent of these pronouns the earth which was mentioned first or the mountains as the more immediate referent? I am of the view that they refer to the mountains.

Science has proved that mountains are the main source of the elements required for fertility of the soil and producing food. Nutritious elements in the soil get depleted and need to be renewed from time to time. Rains fall on mountains and break their top layers. They are then carried by the flow of water and spread over the flat lands around. Fertile soil comes with the stream of the Nile from its springs in mountaintops. The water of the Nile used to be a little thick with the fertile soil it carried and remained like that up to where it emptied into the Mediterranean. The Nile delta was formed through alluvial build-up.

The same applies to the valleys around mountains: the top layers of the mountains are washed down into the valleys, thereby renewing the soil and increasing its fertility. It is indeed as though mountains are the storehouses of the earth's sustenance. This is why I believe the verse means: '…blessed them [the mountains], measured out their varied provisions…' (Fussilat: 10). The ways mountains and valleys are formed are wondrous. It is as if mountains provide valleys with an increase of elements in the course of time that corresponds to the increase of populations and demand for the requirements of life.

Allah has blessed the earth with resources that renew themselves to cope with the increase in human needs. There is no need to be apprehensive about the future; rest assured, for Allah has guaranteed your daily sustenance. This is why He then says: '…measured out their varied provisions…' (Fussilat: 10).

So Allah: '…placed solid mountains on it, blessed them, measured out their varied provisions for all who seek them – all in four Days…' (Fussilat: 10). The word sawa' used in the original Arabic text of the verse can be interpreted in several ways. It may mean 'equal'; that is, these four days were of equal length. The word may also denote 'completed'. That means the creation of the earth was complete in four days. Now, when we add these four days to the two days mentioned in the previous verse, it gives us six days as the total period for the creation of the heavens and the earth, as Allah says in another verse: '… who has created the heavens and the earth in six days…' (al-A'raf: 54).

He then speaks in more detail about the creation of the heavens, saying: 'Then He turned to the sky, which was smoke – He said to it and the earth, "Come into being, willingly or not," and they said, "We come willingly"' (Fussilat: 11). The verb istawa (here roughly translated as 'turned to') has caused a heated debate among scholars. They have counted the instances of its occurrence in the Quran and found that the word has been used twelve times, seven of which are associated with the Throne, and twice with the heavens and earth as in the verse we are considering. 'Then He istawa turned to the sky, which was smoke…' (Fussilat: 11). In a verse in the chapter of al-Baqara, He says: 'It was He who created all that is on the earth for you, then istawa (turned to) the sky and made the seven heavens…' (al-Baqara: 29).

Besides those nine instances, the verb estawa is mentioned in relation to the revelation in the verse where Allah says about Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him: 'It was taught to him by [an angel] with mighty powers and great strength, who istawa (stood on) the highest horizon' (an-Najm: 5-7).

Another instance where the verb estawa is used is in the following verse that refers to Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him: 'And when he (Musa) attained his maturity and estawa (became full grown), We granted him wisdom and knowledge; and thus do We reward those who do good (to others)' (al-Qasas: 14).

The last instance occurs in connection with the depiction of Muslims in the Gospel, in the verse where Allah says: '… their description in the Injeel (Gospel); like a seed-produce that puts forth its sprout, then strengthens it, so it becomes stout and istawa (stands firmly) on its stem, delighting the sowers that He may enrage the unbelievers on account of them…' (al-Fath: 29).

It is worthy of mention that the same verse also states the depiction of Muslims in the Taurat (Torah): '…firm of heart against the unbelievers, compassionate among themselves; you will see them bowing down, prostrating themselves, seeking grace from Allah and pleasure; their marks are in their faces because of the effect of prostration; that is their description in the Taurat (Torah)…' (al-Fath: 29). All these things are spiritual values that include nothing material, for the Jews had grown extremely immersed in materialism to the point that they dealt with Allah in a materialistic way when they said to Prophet Musa (Moses): '… "Make us see Allah face to face"…' (an-Nisa': 153).

As for their parable in the Injeel (Gospel), it is a material image, void of spirituality – why? Christianity entirely focused on spiritual matters and had nothing to do with the necessary laws required to deal with the materiality which is inevitably part of our life on earth. For example, when Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) was asked about the issue of inheritance, he replied, 'I was not sent to divide inheritances'. For this reason the parable of the final Prophet's nation in the Injeel (Gospel) was directly material. Allah addressed both the Jews and Christians based on what was lacking among them. The former went to an extreme with regard to materialism and the latter with regard to spirituality, so Islam came to combine both elements into one religion and restore humankind to moderation.

Those are the twelve instances where the verb istawa is used in the Quran. As we said, in seven of those instances, the verb is mentioned in relation to Allah's sitting on the Throne. The seven chapters of the Quran where these seven instances occur are mentioned in the following lines:

It is mentioned in al-A'raf then in Yunus, ar-Ra'd as well as Ta Ha – this is the count; remember it!
It comes in al-Furqan, then as-Sajda
and finally al-Hadid – let those who believe reflect!

So the verb istawa denotes 'to sit'. It is used to refer to the act of Allah's sitting on the Throne. Some try to describe this Divine act of sitting in terms of the way, for example, creatures sit on chairs. This is anthropomorphism, which is prohibited in Islam. The verb istawa is also used in relation to the heavens. It means He turned His purpose and His Attention towards the heavens.

The word 'throne' denotes power and domination. If a ruler faces dissension among his subjects, it means he is not firmly stationed on the throne nor does he possess authority in an orderly fashion. To say that a ruler istawa on the throne means all his subjects surrender themselves to him. The Quran speaks about Bilqis, the Queen of Sheba(1): '… and hers is a mighty throne' (an-Naml: 23). It means power was firmly in her hands. So the phrase 'He istawa (sat down) upon the Throne' indicates that the entire universe is at His service and does His Bidding and none is out of His Control. This is why He says here about the heavens and earth: '… He said to it and the earth, "Come into being, willingly or not," and they said, "We come willingly"' (Fussilat: 11).

So scholars have a number of different opinions concerning the meaning of istawa, some of which have been summed up in the following lines:

They hold four views on the word istawa that have been explained for those of acuity:
To be steadfast; to be elevated; similarly,
to rise; and to ascend – such are four.

---

(1) Bilqis, the Queen of Sheba, was discovered by the hoopoe of Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon). The Prophet sent the hoopoe with a message exhorting her to embrace monotheism, for Bilqis and her people worshipped the sun. She was of the Banu Ya'far ibn Saksak of Himayr, a Yemenite from Ma'rib; she was buried in Palmyra [Az-Zirikli, Al-A'lam 2/73].

The verse we are reflecting on says: ‘Then He istawa (turned to) the sky…’ (Fussilat: 11). It means Allah turned His Purpose towards them and directed His Will to them. As for istawa on the Throne, it means His Command became established, for everything in existence is subject to His Will and Control.

Allah says to anything, ‘Be!’ and it is, for He knows everything is completely under His Control. Nothing can escape His Will and Decree. He says about the sky: ‘obeying its Lord as it rightly must’ (al-Inshiqaq: 2). It has but to hear the summons and it immediately responds. Allah has testified to Himself of this fact that He is the One Lord and everything in under His Control: ‘Allah bears witness that there is no god but Him, as do the angels and those who have knowledge…’ (Al-‘Imran: 18). Since He is the One God, He says to anything, ‘Be!’ and it is. The angels provide a corroborating testimony, as do those who are endowed with knowledge.

Allah says about the sky: ‘... which was smoke…’ (Fussilat: 11). The sky was in the form of smoke that resembled mist. The universe then was in a gaseous state, and the earth and its rocks and mountains were formed from smoke. After the heavens and earth were completed, the Creator commanded them to come into being, and they responded: ‘... “We come willingly”…’ (Fussilat: 11). This response spells the complete submission and obedience of the universe to its Creator. It is as if they meant: do we have any choice but to obey? Why should we come unwillingly? They show total deference and obedience to their Creator and have no desire or whim that can mislead them or cause them to stray; Allah says: ‘... and there is not a single thing but extols His limitless glory and praise: but you [O men] fail to grasp the manner of their glorifying Him...’ (al-Isra’: 44).

As for man, however, each person has different desires. This is why Prophet Muhammad said, ‘None of you has attained true faith until his personal desires conform to what [the divine revelation] I have delivered to you.’(1) When we all comply with what Allah has revealed and ordained, where will conflict and disagreement emerge? However, people will still differ, yet the universe does not follow their desires, as Allah says: ‘But if the truth were in accord with their own likes and dislikes, the heavens and the earth would surely have fallen into ruin...’ (al-Mu’minun: 71).

(1) This Hadith is cited by Ibn Abu ‘Asem in his Kitab As-Sunnah (1/12) on the authority of ‘Abdullah ibn ‘Amr. It is also cited by Ibn Rajab Al-Hanbali in his Jami‘ Al-‘Ulum wa Al-Hikam (460) he classified it as da’if (literally ‘weak’; a Hadith whose chain of narrations has a certain defect).

It is worthy of note that the Arabic word used in the original text of the verse to mean ‘willingly’ is an adjective. Adjectives in Arabic take plural, dual or singular and masculine or feminine forms. Dual adjectives are used when the number of the modified things/people is two. Now, the words for ‘sky’ and ‘earth’ are feminine in Arabic. This means the adjective should have been feminine and in the dual form, for the modified things are two: the sky and the earth. However, the adjective comes in the masculine and plural form instead of the feminine and dual form. Why? This is because both nouns can be considered collective nouns in the sense that the word itself is singular and feminine, but it includes many creatures, which makes its adjective plural and masculine. In other words, the adjective includes the sky, the earth, and all that is in them.

Another example of this use of adjectives is found in the following verse: ‘Hence, if two groups of believers fall to fighting, make peace between them...’ (al-Hujurat: 9). Verbs in Arabic come in the singular, dual or plural forms, too. The subject in the aforementioned verse is the noun phrase ‘two groups of believers’, which means the verb should be in the dual form, yet the verb here translated as ‘fall to fighting’ is in the plural form in the original Arabic text of the verse. That is because when two groups fight, they are no longer ‘two’ distinct groups, but with all engaging in the fight, they become many rather than two. When it comes to making peace, the pronoun in ‘…make peace between them…’ (al-Hujurat: 9) is in the dual form, for then the two groups are clearly distinct when their leaders sit together with an arbitrator to resolve the conflict and make peace.

Allah says afterwards:

فَقَضَىٰهُنَّ سَبۡعَ سَمَٰوَاتٖ فِي يَوۡمَيۡنِ وَأَوۡحَىٰ فِي كُلِّ سَمَآءٍ أَمۡرَهَاۚ وَزَيَّنَّا
ٱلسَّمَآءَ ٱلدُّنۡيَا بِمَصَٰبِيحَ وَحِفۡظٗاۚ ذَٰلِكَ تَقۡدِيرُ ٱلۡعَزِيزِ ٱلۡعَلِيمِ ١٢

And in two Days He formed seven heavens, and assigned an order to each. We have made the nearest one beautifully illuminated and secure. Such is the design of the Almighty, the All Knowing [12] (The Quran, Fussilat: 12)

Allah has made them seven skies over a period of two days. Some would wonder: adding these two to the days mentioned previously in the aforementioned verses, it means the creation of the heavens and earth took eight days, not six as stated in other verses of the Quran. There is no contradiction. We just need to clarify one point. Allah says He created the earth in two days after which He set within it firm mountains, blessed them and measured out their means of subsistence – all in four days. In other words, the two days mentioned earlier are part of the four days mentioned later. So, all the creation of the earth took four days. If we then add two days for the creation of the sky, the total comes to: '... six days...' (al-A'raf: 54).

After creating the skies, Allah '... assigned an order to each...' (Fussilat: 12). This means Allah has decreed the distinct function of each sky, the messenger who shall be in it, and the role it shall have in guiding the motion of life.

Then Allah says: '...We have made the nearest one beautifully illuminated...' (Fussilat: 12). This refers to the planets and stars that illuminate the sky like lamps, including the sun and the moon. The sun's light is different from the moon's light. The former is associated with heat, whereas the moon sends only light, gentle light that involves no heat. Allah says: 'It is He who made the sun a shining radiance and the moon a light...' (Yunus: 5). He also says: '... a [radiant] lamp and a light-giving moon' (al-Furqan: 61). Allah has thus adorned the nearest sky, the one directly above the earth, which we can see.

Allah is the One Who has created all and knows best what is good for His servants. He has created the night for rest, since He knows we need this to resume the movements and activities of our lives. One is able to do effort when he has had adequate sleep.

Nevertheless, some activities must be done at night, not during the day. For this purpose, He made the moon and the stars to send light amid the stillness of the night. He says about the stars: '… and stars to guide people' (an-Nahl: 16). Allah has created Adam and made him and his offspring vicegerents on earth in order to worship Him and work for the earth's prosperity. He has endowed us with the power of the mind and the body and created resources in the earth so we can employ all to accomplish the mission for which we have been created. This is how Allah has secured the wellbeing of the universe and the precision of its system.

The stars have had another purpose of old.

Allah says in the verse that He has made the sky secure, and in anther verse He says: 'and have made them secure against every rebellious, satanic force' (as-Saffat: 7). The jinn used to eavesdrop on the assembly of angels in heaven and would take some piece of information about the affairs of the world they heard from the angels and reveal it to soothsayers, by which the latter deceived people into believing they knew the unseen. Soothsayers are imposters, and even though they seek such help from the jinn, much of what they tell people is false.(1)

That was before the advent of Islam. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent as a Messenger, Allah made the heavens secure from such eavesdropping; He says: 'We used to sit in places there, listening, but anyone trying to listen now will find a shooting star lying in wait for him' (al-Jinn: 9).

Arabs used to have recourse to soothsayers to ask their judgements, and they trusted what they told them. It has been narrated that Hind,(2) the wife of

(1) It is narrated on the authority of 'Aisha Allah be pleased with her 'Some people asked the Messenger of Allah about soothsayers, to which he replied, "What they say is nothing." They said, "Messenger of Allah, sometimes they tell us things which turn out to be true." The Messenger of Allah said, "The jinn throw in their ears a word of truth they have eavesdropped to snatch from heaven then soothsayers mix it with a hundred lies"'. [Cited by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih, section on soothsaying (kahana)]

(2) Hind bint 'Utaba: a Companion from Quraysh, of Banu 'Abd-Shams. She became Muslim in the 8th year AH, following the Conquest of Mecca. She was the wife of Abu Sufyan and the mother of Mu'awiya Allah be pleased with him. She spent the first part of=

Abu Sufyan, was married to another man previously, Al-Fakeh ibn Al-Mughira,(1) one of the leaders of Quraysh. His home was open to all the tribe and everyone in need of something would go to him. People would say, 'Go to Al-Fakeh', as his home was like the tribe's clubhouse. One day Hind came home to do her household chores when she found a man sleeping in the vestibule, so she withdrew. At that very moment, however, Al-Fakeh went in and saw the man sleeping, so he suspected his wife of misconduct. He told her to go to her father's, 'Utaba ibn Rabi'a, so she did. It became widely known among people that Al-Fakeh accused his wife of such-and-such. Her father 'Utaba said to him, 'O Fakeh, my daughter has been accused, so I see no recourse but that we seek a verdict from a soothsayer to resolve this matter. Assemble whomever of your people you wish, and I will bring my daughter, and let us go to a soothsayer and ask him.' Hind was a sensible woman, so she said 'Father, you are going to consult a mortal who misses his mark as often as he hits it; he may accuse me of something I have not done, and disgrace would remain to me and you.' He replied, 'Do not worry. Your father is not so foolish. I will not present your case to him unless he is first able to tell me what I have hidden for him to detect [as a test].' Before he arrived at the soothsayer, he dismounted from his colt in a deserted place. He whistled to it, opened the colt's water bag and placed inside a single grain of wheat, then rode on to the soothsayer.

He said to him, 'I will not present my case to you until you have told me what I have hidden.' The soothsayer said to him, 'A grain of wheat in the colt's bag.' 'Utaba said, 'Be more specific,' so he said, 'A wheat nut in a belt.' So 'Utaba told him the situation of his daughter who was sitting before them among the women. The soothsayer passed by the women clutching at their heads one after the other until he reached Hind. He stopped by her, said

He was a Companion to 'Awf ibn Abd 'Awf Al-Zuhri ('Abu 'Abd AR-Rahman), the uncle of Khalid ibn Al-Walid. He was listed by Ibn Habib in his Ashraf Al-'Umyan. It was said that he was killed at Al-Ghumaysa'.*

nothing to the other women, and then told her: ‘Get up, you are non-ugly, non-adulteress: you will bear a king called Mu‘awiya.’(1)

Such news proved to be true, but it all originated from the jinn’s eavesdropping; they do not prove in any way that a soothsayer possesses knowledge of the unseen. When Hind was cleared of the accusation and was able to hold her head up among the tribe, Al-Fakeh tried to coax her to forgive him and return home. She refused and said, ‘Indeed the news of Mu‘awiya and his kingdom has tempted you! I will beget him from another man! Get away from me!’ Afterwards she married Abu Sufyan and Mu‘awiya was born to him.

Allah prevented the jinn from that since the advent of Islam in order not to allow the jinn a chance to eavesdrop and get news of His revelations to His Messenger. This is why Allah says: ‘We used to sit in places there, listening, but anyone trying to listen now will find a shooting star lying in wait for him’ (al-Jinn: 9). Allah thus protected His Message from the caprices of the devils.

Allah concludes the verse by saying: ‘... Such is the design of the Almighty, The All Knowing’ (Fussilat: 12). Allah is the Almighty Lord Who has protected His revelations from the devils so none can eavesdrop and snatch news of the Divine Message, for He is the All Knowing Lord Who knows what is best for His servants.

Allah says in the following verse:

فَإِنۡ أَعۡرَضُواْ فَقُلۡ أَنذَرۡتُكُمۡ صَٰعِقَةٗ مِّثۡلَ صَٰعِقَةِ عَادٖ وَثَمُودَ ١٣

Ibn Hamdun also mentioned it in his At-Tadhkira Al-Hamduniyya, chapter 36 on soothsaying. In his version, the soothsayer says to Hind, ‘Rise, you non-base, non-adulteress and give you birth to a king called Mu‘awiya.’*

Creator and the Creator of the heavens and earth. None claimed that dominion for himself. None claimed to be the creator of the world, and Allah Himself testifies that He is the Lord and Creator, so who can deny that? He says: ‘Allah bears witness that there is no god but Him, as do the angels and those who have knowledge…’ (Al-‘Imran: 18). Allah declared it and none contradicted Him, so how can anyone turn away from this? No one who has understanding would do so.

‘If they turn away...’ (Fussilat: 13), after these clear signs, ‘... say, “I have warned you about a blast like the one which struck ‘Ad and Thamud”’ (Fussilat: 13). A warning comes before an alarming event to caution people against it. Its purpose is to let people take the appropriate measures to avoid what they are warned against. This is just like the good news that announces a delightful event before it happens that we may be expectant of it.

So Allah commands Prophet Muhammad to say to the disbelievers who deny Allah’s signs: ‘... “I have warned you about a blast like the one which struck ‘Ad and Thamud”’ (Fussilat: 13). Allah is The Almighty Who cannot be overcome, and when He warns people about something, it will certainly come to pass. Allah mentions ‘Ad and Thamud as proofs. So they should have heeded the warning, for the Quraysh knew the news of those nations and the punishments that were sent down on them and they saw the ruins of their homes.

When ‘Umar, Hamza and Al-‘Abbas converted to Islam, the Quraysh feared that Prophet Muhammad’s call was spreading and his influence was growing. They decided to choose one from among them who was knowledgeable in poetry, soothsaying, and sorcery – an expert in those things of which they were accusing Prophet Muhammad.

At that time, ‘Utaba ibn Rabi’a was one of the leading men of Quraysh, so he said, ‘I am the most experienced of men in all these areas, so let me go to Muhammad.’ When he went to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him he said, ‘Muhammad, who is better, you or your forefather Hashim? Who is better, you or your forefather Qusay? Who is better, you or your forefather ‘Abd Al-Muttalib? They did not disgrace us for our religion. Are you better than them that you call us to a new religion different from that of our forefathers? Muhammad, if you want money, we will gather money for you. If you want power, we will make you ruler and master over us. If you want marriage, we will marry you off to the best of our women. Only stop calling people to this matter and stop cursing our gods.' Prophet Muhammad said to him, 'Will you listen?' He said yes; so the Messenger of Allah started reciting the chapter of Fussilat – the one we are reflecting on. He reached the verse: '... say, "I have warned you about a blast like the one which struck 'Ad and Thamud"' (Fussilat: 13). At this point, 'Utaba rose and put his hand over the mouth of Allah's Messenger and said, 'I beseech you not to complete your recitation!'(1) He knew that what Prophet Muhammad said must take place, so he feared for his people. Afterwards 'Utaba isolated himself from his tribe such that they suspected that he had forsaken their religion. 'Utaba heard this talk but did not respond. Later he said to his people, 'No, I have not forsaken my religion, but I feared for my tribe that they may be struck with a thunderbolt of punishment like that which struck 'Ad and Thamud, for I know that everything Muhammad says must come to pass. I wanted to save you from this by stopping him from completing that verse.' Still, Prophet Muhammad continued reciting the chapter of Fussilat until he reached the verse of the prostration (verse number 38).

When Allah speaks of matters of the unseen, He supports them with actual examples. The Quraysh knew the stories of 'Ad and Thamud. The Arabic word sa'iqa (translated in the verse as 'blast') means a power that destroys that upon which it is sent. It may be fierce wind, sometimes accompanied by fire.

Allah says in the following verse:

---

(1) Al-Baghawi cites this Hadith in his exegesis on the authority of Mohammad ibn Fudayl. He classifies as da'if (literally, weak) part of the narration on the authority of Adh-Dhayal ibn Harmala he reported on the authority of Jabir. He cites the Hadith as, '... He reached the verse: '... say, "I have warned you about a blast like the one which struck 'Ad and Thamud."' (Fussilat: 13). At this point, 'Utaba rose and put his hand over the mouth of Allah's Messenger and said, "I beseech you not to complete your recitation!"' Al-Qurtubi cites it in his commentary on the verse, as does As-Samarqandi in his Bahr Al-'Ulum, chapter 13.

إِذْ جَآءَتْهُمُ ٱلرُّسُلُ مِنۢ بَيْنِ أَيْدِيهِمْ وَمِنْ خَلْفِهِمْ أَلَّا تَعْبُدُوٓا۟ إِلَّا
ٱللَّهَ ۖ قَالُوا۟ لَوْ شَآءَ رَبُّنَا لَأَنزَلَ مَلَٰٓئِكَةً فَإِنَّا بِمَآ أُرْسِلْتُم بِهِۦ كَٰفِرُونَ ﴿١٤﴾

When their messengers came to them, from all angles, saying, “Serve no one but God,” they said, “If our Lord had wished, He would have sent down angels. We do not believe in the message with which you have been sent” [14]
(The Quran, Fussilat: 14)

Like adjectives, verbs, pronouns, and nouns also come in the singular, dual, or plural forms in the Arabic language. This verse speaks about the two tribes of ‘Ad and Thamud. The word used in the original Arabic text of the verse for ‘Messengers’ comes in the plural, not the dual form, even though there were two Messengers that were sent to them. Why? Every Messenger was commanded by Allah to call his people to believe in the previous Messengers as well as the news of the Messengers yet to come. Had ‘Ad and Thamud believed in the two Messengers who were sent to them, it would have meant they believed in all the Messengers of Allah. Another interpretation says the word ‘Messengers’ comes in the plural because the two tribes lived in different places and each group received a different Messenger.

‘... “Serve no one but Allah”…’ (Fussilat: 14) is the essence of all the calls of the Messengers. The people of ‘Ad and Thamud responded: ‘… If our Lord had wished, He would have sent down angels…’ (Fussilat: 14). They claimed that if Allah had willed to send Messengers, He would have assigned that mission to His angels. Such a claim is itself a striking proof of their foolishness. A Messenger of Allah is assigned two missions: delivering His Message and offering an example for people to follow. Were a Messenger to be an angel, he could not serve as a model to be emulated, nor would he be in a position to command his people to do what he himself does. His people would simply object, ‘How can we act like you? You are an angel and we are only human beings!’ Thus, the Messenger had to be a human being like us. Even if Allah had sent angels, they would come to us in human form, for we cannot see them or receive any messages from them when they are in his angelic form. Thus Allah says: ‘Indeed, if We had sent an angel as messenger, We would still have sent him in the form of a man, so increasing their confusion' (al-An'am: 9). They would have remained doubtful anyway.

The disbelievers of 'Ad and Thamud then said, as the verse quotes them: '... "…We do not believe in the message with which you have been sent"' (Fussilat: 14). The verse shows that they acknowledge the mission of the Messengers and the fact that 'they have been sent with a Message'. How strange it is that after acknowledging that they were truly Messengers, the disbelievers persisted in denying the Message with which they were sent. Another interpretation says that they did not mean to acknowledge that they were truly the Messengers of Allah, but they were only mocking them by those words that apparently implied an acknowledgement: '… the message with which you have been sent' (Fussilat: 14). This is like what the hypocrites said about Prophet Muhammad and the believers: '... Give nothing to those who follow Allah's Messenger...' (al-Munafiqun: 7). Did they truly believe he was 'Allah's Messenger'? Pharaoh said the same: '... "This Messenger who has been sent to you is truly possessed"' (ash-Shu'ara': 27). Possessed! Indeed Pharaoh was the one who lost his reason! He said Musa (Moses) was a Messenger who was sent to them, yet he insisted on disbelief! Such was the case with the disbelievers: they knew the Truth but stubbornly denied it and defied their Lord and Creator. Such is madness. It is disbelief that is madness itself.

Allah then gives more detail concerning 'Ad and Thamud:

فَأَمَّا عَادٌ فَٱسۡتَكۡبَرُواْ فِى ٱلۡأَرۡضِ بِغَيۡرِ ٱلۡحَقِّ وَقَالُواْ مَنۡ أَشَدُّ مِنَّا قُوَّةًۖ أَوَلَمۡ يَرَوۡاْ
أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ ٱلَّذِى خَلَقَهُمۡ هُوَ أَشَدُّ مِنۡهُمۡ قُوَّةٗۖ وَكَانُواْ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَا يَجۡحَدُونَ ١٥

The people of ′Ad behaved arrogantly throughout the land without any right, saying, "Who could be stronger than us?"
Did they not realize that God, who created them, was stronger than them?' They continued to reject Our message[15] (The Quran, Fussilat: 15)

According to the verse, the people of 'Ad: '… istakbaru (behaved arrogantly) throughout the land without any right…' (Fussilat: 15). Does this mean that one may behave arrogantly while having the right to? Logically, this is implausible, for the word 'arrogant' has only a negative connotation, so no one can have the right to be arrogant. The problem arises due to the difference in the connotative meaning between the English 'arrogance' and the Arabic istikbar. The latter literally means 'arrogance', yet it can also mean 'sovereignty'. A person has the right to istikbar if he does that to attain the power to establish justice among people. Any group or nation must have a sovereign who exercises control to deter transgressors, restore rights to the oppressed and set things to rights. This is 'rightful' istikbar, for it is necessary to prevent anyone from overstepping their limits. A poet (1) said:

People do not prosper unless a wise leader rules.
Fools gaining sovereignty bring nations to ruins.(2)

This is rightful istikbar, not arrogance or oppression, but power and control. The wise must attain power to protect the weak and helpless and deter wrongdoers. What is blameworthy is when power is used to oppress others and serve personal interests.

They were so arrogant that they said: '... Who could be stronger than us?...' (Fussilat: 15). They were liars in this claim as well, and their ignorance became manifest, for they denied the truth that Allah is stronger than them and all creatures. This is why Allah says in reply to their falsehood: '… Did they not realise that Allah, who created them, was stronger than them?...' (Fussilat: 15) Their question is a rhetorical one. They did not wait for an answer. They held it as truth that they were the mightiest on earth and no others were in a position to compel them to obey. Perhaps none among people could defeat them, but they forgot the plain truth that Allah Who created them is the Almighty and All-Powerful. Was that not enough to make them obey

(1) These lines belong to Abu Al-Aswad Ad-Du'alI, Zalem ibn 'Amr Ad-Du'ali, a Muslim of the second generation (the one following that of the Companions). He was a grammarian, a man of the nobility, a shrewd poet and knight. He was born in 1 BH and died in 69 AH. In Subh Al-A'sha, it is stated that Abu Al-Aswad founded the branch of Arabic grammar that has to do with vocalisation. Most narrations say that he was the first to write the Quranic text with diacritic marks. He died in Basra [Al-Mawsu'a Ash-Shi'riyya].

(2) This verse is from a poem by Abu Al-Aswad Al-Du'ali. It is composed based on the simple meter and comprises three verses.

Him? Reason should have therefore called them to submit to those whom Allah sent to them and to follow them in obedience of the One Who sent them. Indeed, it does not befit the strong to submit to and obey the weak one, but here is a question worth asking: who is stronger, they or Allah? They already acknowledged that He created everything, so why did they oppose His Messengers? It is true they had power over part of creation, but they were weak and helpless before Him Who created all of creation.

They persisted in their stubbornness and '… continued to reject Our message' (Fussilat: 15). They obstinately denied the Truth for which there were many evidences, as Allah says: 'They denied them, in their wickedness and their pride, even though their souls acknowledged them as true…' (an-Naml: 14). They knew the Truth, but they were doomed to stubborn denial of it. What was their punishment for this?

فَأَرْسَلْنَا عَلَيْهِمْ رِيحًا صَرْصَرًا فِىٓ أَيَّامٍ نَّحِسَاتٍ لِّنُذِيقَهُمْ عَذَابَ ٱلْخِزْىِ
فِى ٱلْحَيَوٰةِ ٱلدُّنْيَا ۖ وَلَعَذَابُ ٱلْـَٔاخِرَةِ أَخْزَىٰ ۖ وَهُمْ لَا يُنصَرُونَ ﴿١٦﴾

So We let a roaring wind loose on them for a few disastrous days to make them taste the punishment of shame in this world; more shameful still will be the punishment of the life to come, and they will not be helped [16] (The Quran, Fussilat: 16)

The Arabic word used to describe the wind in the original text of the verse is sarsar which is derived from the same stem as sirr, yet the former is made up of two syllables to add more emphasis to the meaning. The word denotes 'violent' or 'severe'. It denotes a powerful, destructive wind that is extremely cold; due to its heavy humidity, one of the effects of this wind is to dry things out to the point of combustion. Farmers know this as a familiar winter phenomenon, when severe cold dries things out till fields catch fire.

In this way, Allah the Almighty uses water to afflict the disbelievers from among the people of 'Ad with the same kind of punishment caused by fire. He has not created the universe to operate statically and mechanically, but rather, He has created it with His Might that can reverse norms and work miracles. He commanded Prophet Musa (Moses) to strike the water with his staff, and then the water was made into two halves, each like a great mountain. Likewise, when he supplicated to Allah for drinking water, He commanded him to strike the mountain and twelve springs sprang from it. Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) was thrown in the fire, but Allah suspended its power and made it cool and safe for him.

So sirr is a powerful and destructive wind, but it strikes only once. The wind that struck the people of *'*Ad was sarsar, in the sense that it struck repeatedly, not just once. That wind continued to strike them for '... a few disastrous days...' (Fussilat: 16). The wind was decisive. It exterminated them all and left none of them. So pointed was the confrontation between the Messengers and their arrogant opponents.

The word sirr reminds me of the Arab poet (1) who said:

Light a good fire, for the night is freezing and the wind, my boy, is severe and howling (sirr)!
Maybe a traveller will notice the fire and come;
if you attract a guest, you get your freedom!(2)

Allah then says: '… to make them taste the punishment of shame in this world…' (Fussilat: 16). Some punishments are painful and some are shameful. Some punishments cause physical torture and some cause humiliation and debase pride. Such was a just punishment for their groundless arrogance. They could have endured pain, so Allah made their punishment of such a kind that humiliated and dishonoured them in order to destroy their arrogance.

That humiliation and debasement was not only in the life of this world, but '… more shameful still will be the punishment of the life to come...'

(1) These lines belong to Abu 'Adi Hatem ibn Abdullah At-Ta'i Al-Qahtani, a poet of the pre-Islamic era of ignorance and a model of chivalry and generosity. His generosity is exemplary. He was from Najd and moved to Syria where he married Mawiya bint Hajar Al-Ghassaniyya. He died in 46 BH at 'Awarid (a mountain in the Tayy region) [Al-Mawsu'a Ash-Shi'riyya].

(2) The lines comprise a poem by Hatem At-Ta'i, based on the rajaz meter. In Al-Mawsu'a Ash-Shi'riyya. The lines are attributed to Al-Afwah Al-Awdi by Ibn Hamdun in his At-Tadhkira Al-Hamduniyya and Ath-Tha'alebi in his At-Tamthil wa Al-Muhadara.

(Fussilat: 16). Shame and humiliation in this life must come to an end, but in the Hereafter, suffering and disgrace will persist forever, '… and they will not be helped' (Fussilat: 16). They will not be saved from suffering in any way. They will have no hope of help or rescue.

On the Day of Resurrection, Allah will gather all people together at once. It will not be like a queue, for example, with everyone waiting their turn, but rather, they will all be gathered together – oppressors and those they oppressed, leaders and their followers. There will be no hope of salvation for the disbelievers. Perhaps they will expect their leaders to save them, but the case will be just as Allah said about Pharaoh, '… he shall go before his people...' (Hud: 98). He will lead them to hellfire.

Allah says in the following verse:

وَأَمَّا ثَمُودُ فَهَدَيۡنَٰهُمۡ فَٱسۡتَحَبُّواْ ٱلۡعَمَىٰ عَلَى ٱلۡهُدَىٰ فَأَخَذَتۡهُمۡ
صَٰعِقَةُ ٱلۡعَذَابِ ٱلۡهُونِ بِمَا كَانُواْ يَكۡسِبُونَ ١٧

As for Thamud, We gave them guidance but they preferred blindness, so they were struck by a blast of humiliating punishment for their misdeeds [17] (The Quran, Fussilat: 17)

Here is a point that scholars of Islamic theology have reflected on. Allah says: 'As for Thamud, We gave them guidance...' (Fussilat: 17). Guidance means showing the right way. When you show people the way, some of them will listen to you and follow your directions, and others will not; to those who listen you will give additional guidance to help them more. As for those who pay no attention, you will not care about them. Allah says: 'and (as for) those who follow the right direction, He increases them in guidance and gives them their guarding (against evil)' (Muhammad: 17). Those who willingly accept the Right Path are given an increase in guidance: Allah provides them with assistance and support; He inspires them to do good and shun evil. Therefore, guidance is of two kinds: showing the Right Path, which is granted to all humankind, and assistance to follow it, which is granted only to those who accept faith. If someone asks you about the way to some place, you guide him there. If he accepts your guidance, you give him further directions and warn him about any difficulties that may arise. If he does not listen to you from the first, you will give him no further guidance.

Allah points out to everyone the way to goodness. Whoever follows this guidance is worthy of more guidance, and is also worthy of assistance in following that guidance; whoever rejects this guidance is unworthy of any assistance.

Allah gave guidance to Thamud, but '...they preferred blindness...' (Fussilat: 17). Why did they prefer blindness to guidance? They wanted to evade responsibility and obligation under Allah's Law. This is why they worshiped idols even though they knew they were helpless objects they made with their own hands. They worshiped them to have the satisfaction of having a god to worship, but they wanted a 'god' that imposed no obligations or way of conduct through commands and prohibitions. Their rejection of Allah's Message originated from a desire to be free of obligations, and their worship of false idols was only to satisfy an innate need in human beings to believe in a certain deity. This natural need stems from the covenant Allah has made with us while we were still seeds in the loins of our father, Adam: 'When your Lord took out the offspring from the loins of the children of Adam and made them bear witness about themselves, He said, "Am I not your Lord?" and they replied, "Yes, we bear witness"…' (al-A'raf: 172). Thus, religious belief has been instilled into every human since that covenant. What people differ in is their acceptance of obligations and codes of conduct. Some see Allah's laws as a shackle to their carnal desires, and therefore do not accept it. They resort to fake manmade religions that are free of what they consider to be confinement, just like those in the verse who preferred blindness to guidance. Others accept Divine Guidance and obey their Lord willingly. They know what Allah ordains is not meant to confine them but to set their life to rights, so they eagerly accept His Law and devote themselves to Him.

Something in the Arabic text of the verse is particularly worth commenting on. Allah says: '... they istahabbu blindness...' (Fussilat: 17). The word istahabba (here translated as 'preferred') is derived from the same stem as ahabba which means 'loved'. The former has a different connotation from the latter in that it denotes pretence or affectation. Istahabba does not denote 'natural love' like the derivative ahabba. Rather, it means to get oneself, to persuade oneself, to love something that is not naturally loved or lovable. This is just plausible. Who would naturally love blindness? One must deceive himself into such a preference, for blindness is not something to be loved or preferred to Divine Guidance. Even those who think they love sins are wrong. Would you like to be the victim of any sin? Would you like anyone to rob you, for example? No, which means sins are naturally hateful, but many people follow their own desires and whims.

Another textual aspect is particularly worth highlighting too. Allah says in another verse: ‘They are ‘ala (true) guidance from their Lord...’ (al-Baqara: 5). The preposition ‘ala (usually translated as ‘on’ or ‘upon’) denotes the state of being ‘above’ or ‘elevated’. So the verse portrays true guidance as something that elevates those who embrace it. It has not been sent down to cause hardship for people, but rather to elevate them to the status of righteousness and elevation before their Lord. Just as it elevates those who accept it and abide by it, true guidance also debases those who – out of faulty understanding – reject it and consider it a confinement.

When we trace the usage of the preposition ‘ala in the Glorious Quran, we will find that it conveys the meanings of ‘superiority’, ‘elevation’, ‘power’ or ‘excellence’. For example, Allah says: ‘They give food to the poor, the orphan, and the captive, ‘ala hubbihi’ (al-Insan: 8). The word hubb means ‘love’. Some exegetes(1) say that the prepositional phrase ‘ala hubbihi means ‘despite their own love of it [food]’, but this is not quite accurate. A person does not love food except when he is hungry, or else he would not care about food. The preposition ‘ala here has a wider meaning than just this. It means they need food themselves, but they transcend this need; they elevate themselves above the love of food and the desire for it and give it to others. Why? They are mindful of the reward that awaits them for their altruism.

(1) Ibn Kathir says in his exegesis of the verse [4/454]: ‘The words ‘ala hubbihi are said to mean “out of their love of Allah”, thus considering that the pronoun in hubbihi refers to Allah, which they think is supported by the context. However, it sounds more correct that the pronoun refers to food; that is, they give food while they need it and desire it.’ Such is the opinion of Mujahid, Muqatil and Ibn Jarir, who find this verse similar to: ‘... who give away some of their wealth, ‘ala hubbihi (however much they cherish it)...’ (al-Baqara: 177).

When one prefers Allah’s reward to satiating his own need for food, it means he has triumphed over his need and desire. Allah says in praise of those who do so: ‘... They give them preference over themselves, even if they too are poor...’ (al-Hashr: 9).

Another example of the use of the preposition ‘ala is found in this verse quoting Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham): ‘Praise be to Allah, Who has given me ‘ala old age Ismail and Ishaq…’ (Ibrahim: 39). The word ʿala here does not mean – as many would think – ‘despite my being old and unable to beget children’. Rather, the meaning here is that Allah’s Might was above obstacles, above old age and everything. Even though elderliness is a state of weakness in which reproduction is not possible, Allah’s Grace is higher than weakness and elderliness, just as He granted a son to Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) – Prophet Yahya (John) – despite his old age.

Here is another example. Allah says: ‘... your Lord is full of forgiveness for people, ‘ala their wrongdoing...’ (ar-Ra‘d: 6). It means that even though wrongdoing makes people deserving of punishment, Allah’s Forgiveness is higher and greater than people’s sins.

Back to the verse we are reflecting on; Allah concludes it by saying: ‘... so they were struck by a blast of humiliating punishment for their misdeeds’ (Fussilat: 17). Shameful suffering and destruction was a just punishment for them as a result of their disbelief. ‘Blast’ here is a translation of sa’iqah which refers to a destructive wind, fire, or sound. They faced that destiny as a just recompense, not through injustice or enmity.

Allah says in the following verse:

وَنَجَّيْنَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَكَانُوا۟ يَتَّقُونَ ﴿١٨﴾

We saved those who believed and were mindful of God [18] (The Quran, Fussilat: 18)

Quite often in the Quran things are made clearer through presenting their contrasts. For example, Allah says: ‘The good will live in bliss and the wicked will burn in the Fire’ (al-Infitar: 13-14). Likewise, in the verses we are reflecting on here, Allah speaks about the recompense of the disbelievers and follows this with a verse about the reward of the believers.

Allah says afterwards:

وَيَوْمَ يُحْشَرُ أَعْدَآءُ ٱللَّهِ إِلَى ٱلنَّارِ فَهُمْ يُوزَعُونَ ﴿١٩﴾
حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَا مَا جَآءُوهَا شَهِدَ عَلَيْهِمْ سَمْعُهُمْ وَأَبْصَٰرُهُمْ وَجُلُودُهُم بِمَا كَانُواْ يَعْمَلُونَ ﴿٢٠﴾

On the Day when God's enemies are gathered up for the Fire and driven onward [19] their ears, eyes, and skins will, when they reach it, testify against them for their misdeeds [20]
(The Quran, Fussilat: 19 - 20)

On the Day of the Gathering, all creatures will be brought together. People will all be gathered, followers and leaders, those who were misguided and those who misguided them. Allah will bring them together all in the same place, and the disbelievers will be packed together with their leaders. Allah says: 'We shall seize out of each group those who were most disobedient towards the Lord of Mercy' (Maryam: 69). Those who mislead people will precede them to the fire. They will be the first to be punished so their followers will know they have no hope of being saved.

On that Day, even beasts will be gathered: 'And when all beasts are gathered together' (at-Takwir: 5). Allah has created beasts along with domestic animals to let us understand that were it not for His Might, we would not be able to benefit from any creatures. Allah has subjected them to our powers; otherwise, they would all be wild. He has made the camel – despite its hugeness – surrender to the will of people, whereas a small snake may be out of control. These are manifestations of the Might and Bounty of Allah the Exalted. He says: 'Can they not see how, among the things made by Our Hands, We have created livestock they control, and made them obedient so that some can be used for riding, some for food...?' (Ya Sin: 71-72)

By Allah, had Allah not subjected these creatures to us we would not have been able to use them at all, and so we say of those creatures that have not been subjected to us that they are wild animals. Consider how the infant or a small child leads the huge camel around, makes it carry loads, kneel down, or drives it wherever he pleases, yet the tiny flea in your bed prevents you from sleeping. This is a message from The Creator Glorified is He that such subjection is done only by Allah. 'Hence, [warn all men of] the Day when the enemies of Allah shall be gathered together before the fire, and then shall be driven onward' (Fussilat: 19). In the world, wild animals flee from people, and we flee from wild animals; in the Resurrection, however, Allah will gather everyone and everything together in one place. How? Because no one will have the power to move: '...With whom will sovereignty rest on that Day? With Allah, The One who holds absolute sway over all that exists!' (Ghafir: 16) So when sovereignty is Allah's there will not remain to us any power to assert ourselves.

His saying, '...and then shall be driven onward' (Fussilat: 19), that is, they will be driven forward as a group into the fire, from first to last 'till, when they come close to it, their hearing and their sight and their [very] skins will bear witness against them, speaking of what they were doing [on earth]' (Fussilat: 20).

Now hearing is the function of the ear; sight is the function of the eye; smell the function of the nose and touch the function of the hand – each member of the body has its importance in life. Yet the True Lord Glorified is He only mentioned three of them here: hearing, sight, and skin, but not mentioning hand and nose. They say that this is because legal responsibility with respect to the nose is extremely limited, as when for example you smell the odour of wine and take refuge in Allah, or smell the scent of a perfumed woman. Thus the smell has a limited role. The hearing, however, is the most important of the senses, for it is through it that you respond to the summons to Allah, and sight is what allows you to see Allah's signs and marvels in His Creation.

As for skin, it has to do with hearing and sight and indeed all the senses, as though it were the most universal of things to the senses. Thus when they looked into the function of the bodily members to determine the importance of each to a person, they found that the most important one is the skin because it is the means for sensing pain in particular at the surface of the body. Consider for example how when you get a shot with a needle you feel pain when it enters your body, piercing the skin; it causes pain to the extent it penetrates the skin. The skin being the site of sensation, then, it comprises all the senses.

Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '...[and] every time their skins are burnt off We shall replace them with new skins so that they may taste suffering [in full]...' (an-Nisa': 56). Thus the skin is the site of tasting suffering – we take refuge with Allah! – And it comprises all the senses.

وَقَالُوا۟ لِجُلُودِهِمْ لِمَ شَهِدتُّمْ عَلَيْنَا ۖ قَالُوٓا۟ أَنطَقَنَا ٱللَّهُ ٱلَّذِىٓ أَنطَقَ
كُلَّ شَىْءٍ وَهُوَ خَلَقَكُمْ أَوَّلَ مَرَّةٍ وَإِلَيْهِ تُرْجَعُونَ ﴿٢١﴾

They will say to their skins, 'Why did you testify against us?' and their skins will reply, 'God, who gave speech to everything, has given us speech – it was He who created you the first time and to Him you have been returned [21]
(The Quran, Fussilat: 21)

They are amazed at how their own skins – a part of them – testify against them. Now the question here should be as to how this is – how can you testify against us? – Rather than as to the cause. The question however does not come in this form in order to indicate a contradiction in speech. The answer comes: '..."Allah...has given speech to us"...' (Fussilat: 21). Now the question is about one thing, but the response is about another. Had they answered the question, 'Why did you testify against us?' they would have answered, we testified against you because we are your staunchest guardian at every moment. '..."Allah, who gives speech to all things, has given speech to us"...' (Fussilat: 21), that is, the matter is not in our own power; we did not testify of our own volition – the True Lord made us speak the truth, and we had no way of avoiding this.

The meaning of '..."who gives speech to all things"...' (Fussilat: 21) is that everything in existence has a language peculiar to it by which it speaks and by which it may be understood, as we have seen in the story of Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him when the ant spoke to warn its people, saying: '..."Get into your dwellings, lest Sulaiman (Solomon) and his hosts crush you without [even] being aware [of you]!"' (an-Naml: 18)

The ant's speech indicates that the ants have a language they understand among themselves, that they have awareness, and that they have a sense of justice, given that the ant said: '..."without [even] being aware [of you]!"' (an-Naml: 18)

Likewise, the speech of the hoopoe in the same story, when it said: '..."I have encompassed [with my knowledge] something that you have never yet encompassed [with yours] – for I have come to you from Bilqis (Sheba) with a tiding sure!"' (an-Naml: 22). It then proceeded to speak of the central point of the creed: 'And I found her and her people adoring the sun instead of Allah' (an-Naml: 24). Thus, the hoopoe does not simply speak a language, but also understands the most important article of faith and Allah's oneness.

Thus, everything has a language, but only one whom Allah has taught it can understand it; this is a grace Allah gives to whomever He chooses. Therefore, Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him said: '..."We have been taught the speech of birds"...' (an-Naml: 16) – had Allah not taught him he would not have been able to understand the hoopoe.

Inanimate objects also have a language, as He says: '[and for this,] behold, We caused the mountains to join him in extolling Our limitless glory at eventide and at sunrise' (Sad: 18).

Therefore, He the Exalted says in general reference to this point: '...and there is not a single thing but extols His limitless glory and praise: but you [O men] fail to grasp the manner of their glorifying Him!...' (al-Isra': 44)

It is related that pebbles glorified Allah (1) in the hand of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him though it should be said that this is one of His miracles. We said in clarification of this issue that the pebbles were glorifying Allah in the hand of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him just as they were in the hand of Abu-Jahl, but it is more reflective of the miraculous nature of the event to say that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him heard the pebbles' glorification of Allah while in his hand – we should put it thus.

(1) Al-Isbahani quotes this in his Dala'il An-Nubuwwa [1/47, (fasl fi tasbih al-hasa fi yadihi)]. It is narrated that Abu Dharr, Abu Bakr, 'Umar and 'Uthman Allah be pleased with them were alone together with the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and the Prophet took seven (or nine) pebbles; they began glorifying Allah such that a buzzing was to be heard like the buzzing of bees. He put them down and they fell silent, then took them up again and placed them in the hand of Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him whereupon they began glorifying Allah again with the same buzzing sound. He put them down and they fell silent. [The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him] took them up again and placed them in the hand of 'Umar Allah be pleased with him and the same thing happened, and the process was repeated with 'Uthman Allah be pleased with him. Then he put them down and they fell silent once more.

Some scholars say of this glorification of Allah that it is simply an indication of the pebbles' Creator, not an actual act of glorification in reality. This opinion, however, contradicts the text of the Holy Quran, since if it was simply as you say then you are able to understand it, whereas Allah Glorified is He says: '...but you [O men] fail to grasp the manner of their glorifying Him!...' (al-Isra': 44) Thus the pebbles were glorifying Allah in reality, glorifying Him in a language no one knows but their Creator and those whom Allah has taught it through a special act of grace.

The amazing thing in the story of the hoopoe is that it only mentions one reason that might impel faith in Allah the Exalted and His oneness. He says, '[for they have come to believe] that they ought not to adore Allah – [although it is He] who brings forth all that is hidden in the heavens and on earth, and knows all that you would conceal as well as all that you bring into the open' (an-Naml: 25), thus mentioning the action peculiar to Allah, that is His bringing forth the hidden things of the earth. It is of course well known that the hoopoe has a long beak with which it extracts worms from underneath the surface of the soil in order to eat them.

His saying, '...for He [it is who] has created you in the first instance – and unto Him you are [now] brought back' (Fussilat: 21) – that is, do not suppose that Allah simply created you to leave you to your own devices, but rather, He created you for a term – you must return to Him, and stand before Him to be judged for even the minutest of your deeds (those as small as the mark on a date pit or its pellicle) as well as the greatest, and He will reward you for your works. You will not be able to escape Him Glorified is He but will stand in His presence and He will enumerate His acts of grace towards you, to see who gives Him thanks and who denies.

وَمَا كُنتُمۡ تَسۡتَتِرُونَ أَن يَشۡهَدَ عَلَيۡكُمۡ سَمۡعُكُمۡ وَلَآ أَبۡصَٰرُكُمۡ وَلَا
جُلُودُكُمۡ وَلَٰكِن ظَنَنتُمۡ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يَعۡلَمُ كَثِيرٗا مِّمَّا تَعۡمَلُونَ ﴿٢٢﴾

Yet you did not try to hide yourselves from your ears, eyes, and skin to prevent them from testifying against you. You thought that God did not know about much of what you were doing [22] (The Quran, Fussilat: 22)

That is, you neglected and were not aware of something important, which is that you used to hide your disobedience from people but forgot that Allah was watching over you and could see your actions, even what you used to hide from yourselves and your bodily members, forgetting that your bodily members will testify against you on the Day of Resurrection.

So the hand with which you did things, the leg with which you walked, your tongue, your ear, your eye, all your members will testify against you on the Day of Resurrection – these same members which Allah commanded to follow your desires in this world and obey you in all that you wished will on that day be freed from this restriction and you will no longer have power over them when they testify against you.

So they obey you in your acts of disobedience in this world, since Allah subjected them to you, but they obey you unwillingly and are innocent of responsibility. But when everything returns to Allah, and all dominion is His – '...With Whom will sovereignty rest on that Day? With Allah, The One who holds absolute sway over all that exists!' (Ghafir: 16) – it is no wonder that your members will testify against you, and will be your adversary before their Creator Glorified is He.

We previously compared this matter to a captain of a battalion in the army, who commands his troops and they do as they are commanded, carrying out his orders even if they are bad. When the troops come to the general, however, they complain to him of their captain's arbitrariness and misconduct, saying that he used us for such and such.

Likewise a person's bodily members, Allah commanded them to obey even in acts of disobedience, and to respond to the person's desires. Thus your members obey you in everything you wish, whether for good or for ill.

As to His saying, '...but you thought that Allah did not know much of what you were doing' (Fussilat: 22), the True Lord Glorified is He says in a Qudsi Hadith: 'My servants, if you think that I do not see you then your faith is faulty, and if you think that I see you then why do you consider Me the least of your observers?'(1) If you are unable to do something to a man like yourself that he will find bad when he sees it or hears of it, then how can you do so with Allah the Exalted?'

وَذَٰلِكُمْ ظَنُّكُمُ ٱلَّذِى ظَنَنتُم بِرَبِّكُمْ أَرْدَىٰكُمْ فَأَصْبَحْتُم مِّنَ ٱلْخَٰسِرِينَ ﴿٢٣﴾

So it was the thoughts you entertained about your Lord that led to your ruin, and you became losers [23]
(The Quran, Fussilat: 23)

His saying, 'and that very thing...' – that is, the deeds you have committed – '... [is the] thing which you thought about your Lord...' – that is, you have thought that He Glorified is He does not know what you do – '...has brought you to perdition...' – that is, this thought has destroyed you, '...and so now you find yourselves among the lost' (Fussilat: 23).

فَإِن يَصْبِرُوا۟ فَٱلنَّارُ مَثْوًى لَّهُمْ ۖ وَإِن يَسْتَعْتِبُوا۟ فَمَا هُم مِّنَ ٱلْمُعْتَبِينَ ﴿٢٤﴾

The Fire will still be their home, even if they resign themselves to patience, and if they pray to be allowed to make amends, they will not be given permission to do so[24]
(The Quran, Fussilat: 24)

That is, if they endure patiently in their former manner and persist in their disbelief and their wrangling with the Messengers, what will happen? '...The fire will still be their abode; and if they pray to be allowed to make amends, they will not be allowed to do so' (Fussilat: 24). Here there are two options:

---

(1) Reference to books of Hadith does not turn up any sound version with this wording, but only a phrase from it as found in the works of certain Sufis. In the Hilyat Al-Awliya' [8/142] it is narrated that a man says to Wuhayb ibn Al-Ward, 'advise me', to which he responds, 'Fear Allah properly lest you consider Him but the least of your observers'. In the book Jami' Al-'Ulum wa Al-Hikam [1/36] the saying is attributed to a certain Sufi: 'Fear Allah properly lest you consider Him the least of your observers'.

when a man contravenes his Creator's commands and a messenger comes to him and says do not do that, he will be fine if he desists, but if he persists then the fire will be his abode.

The meaning of '...they pray to be allowed to make amends, they will not be allowed to do so' (Fussilat: 24): to pray to be allowed to make amends is to seek pardon. They say, he rebuked so-and-so, that is, blamed him for failing to do something expected of him. One might say, for example, I fell sick and you did not visit me – this is a rebuke. The other person might respond, please pardon me, I was busy doing such and such. As soon as it becomes apparent that he is truly begging pardon, you pardon him, that is, cease rebuking him. This will not be the case in the Hereafter – when they seek rebuke they will not be rebuked. Thus it is narrated in the Hadith of the Messenger peace be upon him that he was returning from At-Ta'if after being driven out by its residents, and He peace and blessings be upon him said, confiding in his Lord: 'You have the right to rebuke until You are satisfied' (1) – that is, if anything that I do makes you angry, I will cease it and acknowledge that I am weak and accept Your rebuke. For this reason a poet (2) said:

As for rebuke, it is more fitting for friends for love is restored and made sincere through rebuke(3)

Therefore you are not rebuked unless you are beloved to the one who is rebuking you, concerned to protect your relationship with him. We say, I was rebuked but he pardoned me, that is, ceased rebuking me. As for those in the Hereafter, Allah will not accept from them their pleas for pardon nor will He remove His censure. (The initial hamza in the term i'tab (rebuke) is called the hamza of removal; such 'removal' may either be through the use of a hamza or through the doubling of a consonant: tamrid means to remove someone's sickness (marad), taqshir means to peel a fruit's rind (qishra).)

---

(1) Narrated by Ibn-Hisham in his biography of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him (2/419-20) and Al-Bayhaqi in his Dala'il An-Nubuwwa (2/415).

(2) The poet is Ahmad Shawqi, poet laureate, who was born in Cairo and died there in 1932. He grew up under the care of the royal family in Egypt, and the Khedive Tawfiq sent him to France in 1887. His preferred poetic genres include panegyric, lyric, elegiac and descriptive [(Al-Mawsu'a Ash-Shi'riyya)].

(3) The verse is by Ahmad Shawqi, from a 12-verse poem of the meter Al-Kamil.

وَقَيَّضۡنَا لَهُمۡ قُرَنَآءَ فَزَيَّنُواْ لَهُم مَّا بَيۡنَ أَيۡدِيهِمۡ وَمَا خَلۡفَهُمۡ وَحَقَّ عَلَيۡهِمُ ٱلۡقَوۡلُ
فِيٓ أُمَمٖ قَدۡ خَلَتۡ مِن قَبۡلِهِم مِّنَ ٱلۡجِنِّ وَٱلۡإِنسِۖ إِنَّهُمۡ كَانُواْ خَٰسِرِينَ ﴿٢٥﴾

We have appointed, for the disbelievers, companions who make their past and present seem fair and right to them, but the sentence has already been passed on them, along with generations of jinn and men before them: they were losers[25] (The Quran, Fussilat: 25)

The sense of '...We have appointed for them...' means 'We enumerated for them and prepared for them' '...comrades...' as close and constant companions. Now the original sense of the term exchange (muqayada) is in the context of buying and selling, where you pay a price and get a commodity, for Allah the Exalted desires that His servant travel on the path of good which He has laid down for him; so the path of good is delineated for you by Allah, Who desires by this to confirm your sincerity in your attentiveness toward Him. So He brings you peers who object to your path and attempt to turn you aside from it.

Now if you follow these peers, you will swerve because of them and miss your way that Allah has chosen for you. But if you refuse them, you are saved, and the wiles of Iblis (Satan) fail, those things he has made appear attractive to you, and whether it be human devils or devils of the jinn.

It is as though Iblis (Satan) comes only to test the faith of a believer. He whispers his temptations to everyone, and makes evil appear attractive to everyone, but those who are strong of faith consider these temptations and know their source, and so do not obey him. But the weak of faith are drawn in by him and fall into disobedience. Were it not for Iblis (Satan) everyone's faith would seem the same without anything to challenge it, but there is a challenger, and despite this those who believe have their faith confirmed by it.

His saying, '...made fair seeming to them what is before them and what is behind them...' (Fussilat: 25). 'What is before them': an emotional affect prompted by the passions? 'What is behind them,' that is, that which awaits them in terms of the Day of Resurrection and Judgement. '…And the word proved true against them – among the nations of the jinn and the men that have passed away before them – that they shall surely be losers' (Fussilat: 25).

وَقَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ لَا تَسْمَعُوا۟ لِهَٰذَا ٱلْقُرْءَانِ وَٱلْغَوْا۟ فِيهِ لَعَلَّكُمْ تَغْلِبُونَ ٢٦

The disbelievers say, 'Do not listen to this Quran; drown it in frivolous talk: you may gain the upper hand' [26] (The Quran, Fussilat: 26)

The Arabs of old were characterised by an innately Arab disposition that revels in language and excels at its technical and stylistic arts. This may be seen in the fact that they held congresses and market displays for the spoken word – when the other nations held market displays for promoting their goods, the Arabs had no goods other than speech and eloquence. Thus they had presentations in which the best specimens of their poetry were recited and judged to determine the most superior of all, which were then hung on the curtains of the Ka'ba, the noblest place on earth. This did not happen in any other nation.

For this reason the True Lord Glorified is He chose the Arab nation to receive His directive. Thus His summons reached His creation, His Quran came down to them for they were the only nation that would understand His language and revel in it.

Thus the Quran came down to a nation with a gift for language and expression to serve as a challenge. Given that they were defeated by the challenge of the Quran, it is obvious that this applies to other nations even more so; for Allah did not give the Arab nation precedence in anything except in language and expression. Thus the key of religion and the miracle of the Prophetic mission would come to be the Quran.

Had this nation been a nation of progress and civilisation in any other field apart from language, they would have said that Islam represented a cultural revolution. But no, it is not a civilised nation but an unlettered nation, and its messengers were also unlettered.

On this basis, then, the illiteracy of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him served to ennoble and distinguish him, but it is not ennobling for us because the illiteracy of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him meant that he did not receive knowledge by way of man – for all knowledge is from Allah. So who cultivated him, who educated him, who taught him? It is Allah the Almighty.

So if this nation was unlettered, and its messengers were unlettered, this indicates that everything good about this nation does not come through the agency of man.

This nation was also distinguished by its not having a homeland. The Arab's place of residence is his tent, which he stakes wherever water and grazing may be found, and carries it on the back of his camel somewhere else when the water there dries up or the grazing runs out. He has no homeland or any house dear to him that would prevent him from leaving it, for his house is on the back of his camel. For this reason He the Exalted said: '...dwellings out of the skins of animals – easy for you to handle when you travel and when you camp...' (an-Nahl: 80).

There is another, more important element to this which is that the Arabs were always in a state of war, with a single war between the tribes sometimes lasting up to forty years. These wars made them all experts in the arts of fighting and battle. Thus when the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him needed forces to spread his call, no one had to train for battle – troops were already at the ready. Thus there were no army schools for training in war. So when we consider that the Arabs had no attachment to place and were expert in the art of war, we see that it was easy to raise an army at a moment's notice, and to send groups of people here or there bearing the banner of Islam. And indeed, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him sent them to Persia and to Byzantium and to Ethiopia and so on, and it was easy for them.

For this reason the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him did not have a formal army reserved for fighting since he had no need of such an army. Whenever he needed to fight he had only to give the summons 'come to war!' and the Companions would rally around him – the young men among them would especially compete among themselves for the privilege of going out to fight with the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him such that The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him had to choose among them, saying, 'This one goes and this one stays'. Whoever did not get chosen by the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him would become upset and perhaps even cry because he would not get to go to war along with the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him.

Thus this nation had a number of characteristics that qualified it to serve as a locus for the Path of Allah and the spreading of His Message. First, they were a nation of eloquence and fine speech. Second, they were a nomadic nation with no settled homeland. Third, they were expert in the art of war and fighting and needed no training in army camps, but were ready to fight at a moment's notice; whenever they heard the call to war they would fly toward it. On this basis, then, they were inherently prepared to carry out this mission.

His saying in relating about the disbelievers of the Quraysh: 'Now those who are bent on denying the truth say [unto one another]: "Do not listen to this Quran"...' (Fussilat: 26) – this comes in response to the Arabs' proficiency and discernment with respect to language, and their understanding of its subtleties; had they let the people listen to Muhammad when he was reciting the Quran, they would not have been able to help being affected by it and being attracted to it. So what was the solution?

For them the solution was '..."Do not listen to this Quran"...' (Fussilat: 26) since they knew for certain that were they to listen to it, the Quran would take them in with its beauty of style, its grandness of meaning and its forcefulness – had they thought otherwise they would not have forbidden their people from listening to it.

Now, they did not stop simply with forbidding them to listen to it, but encouraged them to try to fluster him when he would recite: '..."but rather talk frivolously about it, so that you might gain the upper hand!"' (Fussilat: 26) Thus their strategy for defeating him was to not listen to the Quran, and to disturb him while he was reciting it so as not to give the opportunity for those who were listening to dwell on it properly. Their saying '..."so that you might"...' indicates the possibility that they might win if they carried out this strategy, not that it was certain to work.

The evidence for this is that they believed in the eloquence of the Quran and its inimitability, and in the end when all their stratagems had failed they said of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him that he was possessed. Allah Glorified is He replied to them, saying to His Messenger: 'for, behold, you keep indeed to a sublime way of life' (al-Qalam: 4) – does a crazy person have any kind of proper behaviour, much less sublime behaviour?

They said that while knowing of the truthfulness and trustworthiness of Allah's Messenger peace be upon him and his admirable comportment among them – they called him a sorcerer. Now to answer that charge is easy: if Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had simply entranced those who believed in him, then why did he not entrance them as he had entranced others and be done with the matter? And they called him a poet, lying in this as well, for they were a nation of rhetoric and expression, and knew very well what constituted poetry; but they had never heard poetry from Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Finally they had to acknowledge the veracity of the Quran and its eloquence and inimitability, but refused to believe that it had actually been revealed to Muhammad himself, saying, 'And they say, too, "Why was not this Quran bestowed from on high on some great man of the two cities?"' (az-Zukhruf: 31)

Now the problem was not with the Quran itself since it is obviously what it is said to be, but rather with its revelation to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him a poor man among the common people of the tribe, not a leading man of its notables, such men as 'Utba, Shayba and others. In this they confirmed and testified to the Quran, that it was indeed a perfect Book comprising all goodness and perfect morals necessary for one's welfare in this world and in the Afterlife. So their objection was only to the person of Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him himself, not to the Quran per se.

However, they did not realise that, from the Prophet's point of view, it was much preferable that they testify to the Quran and confirm its inimitability rather than testifying to him; for those who believe in Allah and believe in His revelation are closer to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him than those who deny Him.

Now the Byzantines did not believe Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him but they believed in a Book and in revelation and in messengers; the Persians did not have this belief that the Byzantines had. Thus the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and the believers inclined in their hearts toward the Byzantines, since they were people of the Book and believed in Allah. This is because the partisanship of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him towards his Lord was greater than his partisanship toward himself. Consider how the Muslims were saddened at the defeat of Byzantium and rejoiced at its subsequent victory

فَلَنُذِيقَنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ عَذَابًا شَدِيدًا وَلَنَجْزِيَنَّهُمْ أَسْوَأَ ٱلَّذِى كَانُوا۟ يَعْمَلُونَ ﴿٢٧﴾

We shall certainly give the disbelievers a taste of severe punishment. We shall repay them according to their worst deeds [27]
(The Quran, Fussilat: 27)

The True Lord Glorified is He has not reserved the punishment of sins solely for the Hereafter, so as not to let vain people deteriorate further in their vanity – rather, Allah hastens for the vain some part of their punishment in this world before that of the next; and the punishment of the Hereafter is far more severe. Thus He the Exalted said, addressing His Messenger: '…whether We show you part of what We have promised them in this life or whether We take your soul back to Us first, it is to Us that they will be returned' (Ghafir: 77).

The True Lord says:

ذَٰلِكَ جَزَآءُ أَعْدَآءِ ٱللَّهِ ٱلنَّارُ ۖ لَهُمْ فِيهَا دَارُ ٱلْخُلْدِ ۖ جَزَآءًۢ بِمَا كَانُوا۟ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَا يَجْحَدُونَ ﴿٢٨﴾

That is the reward of the enemies of God – the Fire will be their lasting home, a payment for their rejection of Our revelations [28]
(The Quran, Fussilat: 28)

'That'–meaning what was mentioned previously about punishment; 'knowingly rejected,' that is, forcefully denied. So when those who disbelieve understand their position relative to Islam, and the untruthfulness of those who called them to error becomes apparent to them, they will then seek vengeance not against the believers but against those disbelievers who led them astray and removed them from belief. On the Day of Resurrection they will search out such people to revenge them, and to trample them under their feet. At that time a battle and controversy will ensue between two parties, followers, and leaders.

وَقَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ رَبَّنَآ أَرِنَا ٱلَّذَيْنِ أَضَلَّانَا مِنَ ٱلْجِنِّ وَٱلْإِنسِ
نَجْعَلْهُمَا تَحْتَ أَقْدَامِنَا لِيَكُونَا مِنَ ٱلْأَسْفَلِينَ ﴿٢٩﴾

The disbelievers will say, 'Our Lord, show us those jinn and men who misled us and we shall trample them underfoot, so that they may be among the lowest of the low' [29] (The Quran, Fussilat: 29)

The True Lord Glorified is He in more than one place in the Quran describes for us this battle of words which will ensue between those who led others into error and those who are so led, and how representatives of the two groups will cast blame on each other and divest themselves of responsibility.

For this reason, Iblis (Satan) will have the upper hand over those whom he led into error, and will have the more convincing argument. As Allah the Exalted says in relating about him: '...Yet I had no power at all over you: I but called you – and you responded unto me. Hence, blame not me, but blame yourselves. It is not for me to respond to your cries, nor for you to respond to mine...' (Ibrahim: 22).

That is, not on the basis of an argument that swayed you, nor on the basis of some power to convince you to act. How strange it is that the disbelievers will say on the Day of Resurrection 'O our Lord, Show us those of the invisible beings and humans that have led us astray...' (Fussilat: 29) – Now they call Him their Lord and acknowledge His Lordship. And the meaning of '...we shall trample them underfoot, so that they shall be the lowest of all' (Fussilat: 29) is, we will ourselves punish them first before You, O Lord, punish them. 'Underfoot' – that is, punishment by humiliation, not by inflicting pain. Allah says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ قَالُوا۟ رَبُّنَا ٱللَّهُ ثُمَّ ٱسْتَقَٰمُوا۟ تَتَنَزَّلُ عَلَيْهِمُ ٱلْمَلَٰٓئِكَةُ أَلَّا
تَخَافُوا۟ وَلَا تَحْزَنُوا۟ وَأَبْشِرُوا۟ بِٱلْجَنَّةِ ٱلَّتِى كُنتُمْ تُوعَدُونَ ﴿٣٠﴾

As for those who say, 'Our Lord is God,' and take the straight path towards Him, the angels come down to them and say, 'Have no fear or grief, but rejoice in the good news of Paradise, which you have been promised [30] (The Quran, Fussilat: 30)

They say Our Lord is Allah; here there are two terms, Lord and Allah. Now each term has a certain semantic range: a Lord is one who raises, trains and takes it upon himself to show us excellence and good; we say, ‘We took care of him’, meaning that we gave him what he needed. Now Allah is a Lord Who created creatures in need and helped those who were non-existent, and still takes care of us with tender concern until such time as we become strong and our limbs firm, whereupon He gives us certain responsibilities in His capacity as God.

Therefore, the gift that comes from His being Lord is universal and encompasses both believer and disbeliever, obedient and rebellious. Allah is the Lord of all, and His Grace reaches to all His creation. He created you, and created all the basics you would need for your life before He created you, and gave you a mind with which to discern and choose between alternatives. If you use your mind well with respect to what He gave you in the basics of life, then you will be able to reap their fruits, but if you do not use it well, then you will lose. Thus, the gift of the Lord is for all, and the necessities of life are granted to all and given to those who deserve them, even if they are disbelievers.

For this reason you find in the story(1) of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him that episode where he said: ‘...“O my Lord! Make this a land secure, and grant its people fruitful sustenance – such of them as believe in Allah and the Last Day”...’ (al-Baqara: 126), thus making a request for daily sustenance only for those who believe. Allah Glorified is He corrected him on the matter, and said, ‘and whoever shall deny the truth...’ (al-Baqara: 126), for my sustenance is for all of my creatures, whether or not they believe because they are My creation and of My fashioning. I am The One Who called them into being, and so it is My duty to provide their sustenance and their basics of life – this is the gift of The Lord.

Now someone knocked on Prophet Ibrahim’s (Abraham) door one night seeking to stay the night with him; he first asked him his religion, and when he learned that he was not a believer he locked the door in his face, and the man went away. Allah Glorified is He reprimanded His prophet Ibrahim (Abraham), saying to him, Ibrahim (Abraham), he belongs to My dominion, and I have not withheld from him My sustenance despite his lack of belief in Me – yet you want to change his religion on a night you invite him to be your guest.

(1) The story of the guest of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him with his disbelieving guest

So Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him went running after the man until he had caught up with him, and took him in as a guest. The man was surprised and said, ‘I came to you and you rebuffed me!’ Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him replied, ‘Yes, but my Lord reprimanded me for doing that to you’. The man said, ‘Your Lord reprimanded you on my account?’ ‘Yes’, said Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. He said, ‘how wonderful a Lord Who reprimands His prophets for the sake of His enemies.’ He then said, ‘I witness that there is no god but Allah, and that you are the Messenger of Allah.’

Therefore, we often wonder at how Allah’s gift encompasses unbelievers, and they possess all the goods of this world and its glories, while the believer is deprived. Yet this is not strange, for this is the gift of the Lord, and those people used their resources wisely and reaped the benefit – were you to similarly use your resources wisely you would achieve the same.

Now read Allah’s saying: ‘And were it not that [with the prospect of boundless riches before them] all people would become one [evil] community, We might indeed have provided for those who [now] deny the Most Gracious roofs of silver for their houses, and [silver] stairways whereon to ascend, [33] and [silver] doors for their houses, and [silver] couches whereon to recline, [34] and gold [beyond count]...[35]’ (az-Zukhruf: 33-35).

Consider what these ascending stairways might be: they are those escalators which we have only come to know in the twentieth century. The Quran is here informing us about them fourteen centuries before their time, one of the miracles of the Quran which it divulges to us from time to time.

And His saying, ‘[But] behold, as for those who say “Our Lord is Allah”...’ (Fussilat: 30) – that is, they acknowledge Him Glorified is He that it is His Nature to sustain, and confirm that He Glorified is He is The One Who created us and nurtured us and gives us good things. It is amazing that He does not give us responsibilities until we become strong adults, that is, He left me playing in the world and enjoying its good things for fifteen years without requiring anything of me. Why?

Because He does not impose responsibility on you until after your formation is complete and your powers are at their full, for were He to impose such responsibility on you and then you suddenly found yourself changing and some of your limbs becoming larger, you would say to Him, O my Lord, You imposed this responsibility on me, but then these changes happened to me, and I am no longer able to fulfil that responsibility.

And when do you reach maturity? They say that you are an adult when you become capable of producing another human being like yourself, at which point your nature is complete and your manhood in place. We see the same thing happening with fruits: the ripe fruit gives its seed, and if this is placed in the soil it produces a tree. Take a melon, for example – before it is ripe you find that its pulp is whitish and its taste is watery and bland. Why? Because it is not yet ripe, and if you were to plant its seeds they would not produce anything.

It is as though Allah is protecting the fruit so its seeds can ripen and become capable of producing a new tree. We call this perpetuation of the species, without which it would go extinct. Were a melon to ripen and become sweet before its seeds ripened, we would eat it without paying attention to the seeds and their inability to create a new tree, and the species would die out.

Thus if you ignore the fruit until it has matured on its stalk and do not pick it, it falls for you on the ground of its own accord. It is as though it is saying to you, take me, since it will both give you the pleasure of its taste and will produce a new tree of the same species.

Now creation is of two kinds: original creation, and secondary creation. Original creation is when the fundamental properties of things were created; secondary creation is when everything that derives from these fundamental properties is created. Therefore, when Yusuf (Joseph) the carpenter said to Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her after it became apparent that she was pregnant, ‘Maryam (Mary), does a tree emerge without a seed?’ she answered, ‘Yes, that tree which produced the first seed.’ This then is the original creation, like the creation of Adam peace be upon him who was first created and then all mankind descended from him.

Therefore, the imposition of responsibility does not occur until after one attains to maturity and manhood, and the One Who so assigns us responsibility is Allah. The Lord creates and provides and nurtures, while Allah assigns responsibility and commands us to worship – thus Allah is our object of worship, that is, the One Whose commands and interdictions are obeyed. But before His commands and interdictions are obeyed, He gives to you as the Lord. It is as though He first gives you good before He commands you to worship Him; in view of this good it is the least you can do to obey the One Who has nurtured you.

For this reason He assigned a special status to parents, and commanded us to honour them and forbade us from disrespecting them – indeed, He has made disrespect of one's parents one of the major sins. Why? They say that it is because He wanted to teach you to honour those who were the direct cause of your coming into existence. This in turn should lead you to honour the One Who is the indirect cause of your coming into existence, that is, Allah Glorified is He. Thus He said, 'And worship Allah [alone], and do not ascribe divinity, in any way, to aught beside Him. And do good unto your parents...' (an-Nisa': 36).

Now when the True Lord Glorified is He commanded us to honour our parents, He was training us to acknowledge Allah's right. Allah brought the original creation into being, while one's parents were responsible for one's secondary creation. Honouring the latter then becomes a means for honouring the former.

Thus we associate gifting with Allah's status as Lord, and the imposition of responsibility with His status as God. But He first gives you responsibility because you are in the world, and one's lifetime in the world is that part of one's existence in it. You have no say in how long your lifetime will be in the span of history between Adam peace be upon him and the Hour of Resurrection, for this whole time period does not concern you. Allah decides how long each person will live: this one lives ten years that one lives fifty years, another one lives a hundred – no one has any say in how long they will live.

After the True Lord Glorified is He alludes to the rebellious nations which reject their Messengers and the punishment they will receive, He Glorified is He proceeds to touch on their counterparts, people who do believe and who tread the Straight Path. He the Exalted says: '[But,] behold, as for those who say, "Our Lord is Allah," and then steadfastly pursue the right way...' (Fussilat: 30). Now we say that actions comprise both word and deed: words are the actions of the tongue and correspond to other deeds, the actions of the rest of the bodily members: the eye sees, the ears hear, the hands touch, the feet walk and so on. So all words and deeds are called actions

But what is the action of the heart? From the physical point of view it is the vessel responsible for the circulation of the blood, pumping life to all the other parts of the body. It is also the vessel of faith and belief; if it is built up through certainty and faith they will spread throughout every cell of the body. For this reason we say that the heart's action is belief. An item of belief is something that is so tied together that it cannot be dissolved, something that is established in the heart such that it cannot be exposed to the intellect's quibbles anymore.

We have said that thought is first presented to the intellect to be evaluated and criticised, and if it finds it to be sound it passes it on to the heart to be established as a firm item of belief. Thus the heart only accepts proven items of belief, and these beliefs serve you as the basis for all the actions of your life.

From this we know the importance and danger of the tongue's role. It is responsible for fully half of one's actions, with the rest being apportioned to the other members of the body. This is because it is what expresses who you are, reveals eloquently what you have inside you. All the members must interact in a positive sense with the universe – the ear hears, the eye sees, the nose smells, the hand touches – and by so doing they give me a basis for thought; through them the believer arrives at the signs of Allah in the universe, through them he recognises what is helpful and what is harmful, taking what is helpful and avoiding what is harmful. The ear hears everything, but it is up to you to focus it on hearing what is good and avoid hearing what is bad: '...and [who], whenever they pass by [people engaged in] frivolity, pass on with dignity' (al-Furqan: 72).

You see with your eye the wondrousness of Allah's handiwork in His creation, and lower your gaze lest you look on what is forbidden. Behold the universe is laid open before you like a book – all that you are to do is to read the signs and miracles that are in it. The heavens and everything in them, sun, moon, stars, celestial bodies, galaxies, they all move according to a minutely specified order; the earth and everything on it, the various elements and the good things they give rise to.

Now when the True Lord Glorified is He speaks to us about these good things and bestows upon us these bounties, He is reminding us of His Power to abolish and do away with them, and how if He Glorified is He wished He could deprive us of them – indeed, He could even replace them with His Wrath, Allah forbid. Thus we pause to consider His statement about farming: ‘is it you who cause it to grow – or are We the cause of its growth?’ (al-Waqi‘a: 64) Yes, we plough the field and irrigate and tend it, but who causes the growth of plants? He Glorified is He then reminds us of His Power to do away with this bounty: ‘[For] were it Our will, We could indeed turn it into chaff, and you would be left to wonder [and to lament]’ (al-Waqi‘a: 65).

He then speaks to us of the bounty of water, and how He could do away with it: ‘Have you ever considered the water which you drink? [68] Is it you who cause it to come down from the clouds – or are We the cause of its coming down? [69] [It comes down sweet – but] were it Our will, We could make it burningly salty and bitter: why, then, do you not give thanks [unto Us]? [70]’ (al-Waqi‘a: 69-70)

But when He Glorified is He speaks to us about the bounty of fire, He simply mentions it without stating what does away with it: ‘Have you ever considered the fire which you kindle? [71] Is it you who have brought into being the tree that serves as its fuel – or are We the cause of its coming into being? [72]’ (al-Waqi‘a: 71-72)

Thus it is without any mention of what does away with it, unlike the previous instances – why? They say that it is because it is the type of fire that is beneficial for us and does not cause us harm, the fire we light to use; every other kind of fire is harmful. For this reason the True Lord Glorified is He did not say, for example, had We wished We would have made it embers, in order that fire may remain a reminder of the fire of the Hereafter.

Now you should observe the greatness of the Quranic method and the subtlety of its expression. When it speaks of farming it says, ‘[For] were it Our will, We could indeed turn it into chaff...’ (al-Waqi‘a: 65), using the particle of emphasis – why? In order to affirm His Power to destroy it, whatever it is. Now man has a role in this and must intervene – he ploughs and irrigates and tends. It is only when it speaks of man's creation and of water that it does not have this particle of emphasis; this is because man has no role in creation or in the raining down of water from heaven.

Now the signs in Allah's universe are many; scholars have classified them according to three categories:

Signs in the universe: these establish the Power of The Creator Glorified is He for example, night and day, sun and moon. Signs and wonders: these accompanied the Messengers of Allah in order to confirm their veracity in their message from Allah. Finally, signs of the law: these are the signs of the Holy Quran which express Allah's path for mankind. All of these serve to make us certain and believe firmly in Allah.

If a man partakes of the creed of faith he proclaims it joyfully with his tongue. Here may be seen the role of the tongue in expressing what is in the heart, thus leading the other bodily members. For this reason it comes in the Hadith that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Not a day goes by but the members call out to the tongue saying, Fear Allah for our sakes, for we are dependent on you: if you go rightly we do too, and if you swerve from the straight path so do we.'(1)

His saying, '[But,] behold, as for those who say, "Our Lord is Allah"…' (Fussilat: 30) makes reference to the saying of believers in whose hearts belief is firmly rooted, their tongues expressing saying that '..."Our Lord is Allah"...' – our Creator, our Nurturer, Who created us from nothing and supplied us in our deprivation, giving to us safety and security, for He is The One Who says [of Himself], '...Neither slumber overtakes Him, nor sleep...' (al-Baqara: 255).

Now when a man wishes to guard something he hires a guard, but what use is the guard if he sleeps? As for you, believer, you are in the guardianship of Allah, so sleep at peace in your heart, for your guard is not overtaken by slumber or by sleep.

---

(1) Ahmad, (Musnad) [3/96]. In his Sunnan, At-Tirmidhi gives the same Hadith as from Abu-Sa'id Al-Khudri, 'When a man wakes in the morning his members take his tongue to task, saying, "Fear Allah for our sakes, for we are dependent on you: if you go rightly we do too, and if you swerve from the straight path so do we"'.

Now when a believer takes account of all this bounty, and when he sees everything he needs for his life in easy reach, whether food and drink, safety and peace, air to breathe and earth to give him everything he desires, he delights in the gift of Allah to him and can only say ‘Our Lord is Allah’ because it is a belief that has become established in his heart.

Given that your Lord is Allah, do not grieve or worry over the matters of this life – Allah will take care of your affairs. Consider how the child does not have a care during the lifetime of his father, and does not think about how expensive things might be, nor of daily sustenance and goods and clothes, and so on, for his father is there. How much more so if Allah is the One Who takes care of you? By Allah, the true believer should be ashamed to worry about daily sustenance, given that he knows that his Lord is Allah.

Given that ‘...“Our Lord is Allah”...’ no harm will befall you. Your Lord will still take care of your affairs, and keep evil away from you, and provide you sufficiency in all that concerns you.

You recall the story of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him with Pharaoh. When Pharaoh followed him with his troops, ‘...the followers of Musa (Moses) exclaimed: “Behold, we shall certainly be overtaken [and defeated]!”’ (ash-Shu'ara': 61) since this is what seemed to be inevitable: in front of them was the sea and behind them were Pharaoh’s troops, with no escape. But what did Musa (Moses) peace be upon him say? He said, ‘…“Nay indeed!”...’ (ash-Shu'ara': 62), that is, they will not overtake us nor catch any of us. He said this from the point of view of his belief and his trust in his Lord and His protection of him. Allah never sent one of His Messengers and then abandoned him to his enemy.

‘He replied: “Nay indeed! My Lord is with me, [and] He will guide me!”’ (ash-Shu'ara': 62) And thus relief came to him from his Lord immediately: ‘thereupon We inspired Musa (Moses) thus: “Strike the sea with your staff!” – whereupon it parted, and each part appeared like a mountain vast’ (ash-Shu'ara': 63).

Consider here Allah's protection of His allies, consider this miracle, and consider such sustaining. No sooner had Musa (Moses) peace be upon him said this with sincerity of faith but that he received an answer; Allah took away from the water its liquidity and it became solid on either side, each like a great mountain, and between them an entirely dry path by which Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and his troops passed. Once he had reached the opposite shore, he wanted to strike the sea again to make it return to its fluidity, thus closing off the path in the face of Pharaoh. But his Lord guided him and corrected him in this – and Allah's is the ultimate control – for the time was not yet right. Allah Glorified is He said to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him: 'and leave the sea becalmed [between you and Pharaoh's men]: for, verily, they are a host destined to be drowned!' (ad-Dukhan: 24)

After Allah Glorified is He had saved Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and his tribe and had brought them to the desert, He gave to Musa's (Moses) staff another function: 'And [remember] when Musa (Moses) prayed for water for his people and We replied, "Strike the rock with your staff!" – whereupon twelve springs gushed forth from it...' (al-Baqara: 60). Now the staff was the same staff with which he had struck the water to make it a mountain, and now he struck the mountain and made it water; the effect was in each case different for The Actor was Allah, The fully Capable.

His saying, '..."Our Lord is Allah"...' (Fussilat: 30) – This gives us a general idea of the Lord's giving on the plane of the physical and of values. Now your Lord is the One Who supplies all your material needs, so why would he leave you without your spiritual needs? Just as you accept His provision in terms of food and drink and housing, so too accept His provision with respect to religious obligation, for it is through such obligation that He instils values within your spirit.

Here we must contemplate for example His saying: 'O Children of Adam! Indeed, We have bestowed upon you from on high [the knowledge of making] garments to cover your nakedness, and as a thing of beauty: but the garment of Allah-consciousness is the best of all. Herein lies a message from Allah, so that man might take it to heart' (al-A'raf: 26).

Now Allah the Exalted has given you what is necessary in terms of clothing, which is what covers your nakedness, and has also given you certain luxuries in your dress – ornamentation and such – on account of which people pride themselves over their neighbours.

Thus we say ‘so-and-so is overly elegant.’ But do not forget that the garment of Allah-consciousness is better. That is superior to the first kind of clothing. Material clothing covers your nakedness in this world, but the garment of God-consciousness covers you both in this world and in the next.

Therefore it represents an eternal and perpetual gift in the Hereafter, and is thus the best clothing for all those who are intelligent and understanding. In His capacity as our Lord, He has given us what elevates our material life and makes happy our time in this world; nor has He Glorified is He deprived our hearts of those spiritual elements that will make us happy in the Hereafter.

Now read if you will His saying: ‘Alluring unto man is the enjoyment of worldly desires through women, and children, and heaped-up treasures of gold and silver, and horses of high mark, and cattle, and lands. All this may be enjoyed in the life of this world – but the most beauteous of all goals is with Allah’ (Al-‘Imran: 14). Now what exists with Allah in the Hereafter is eternal, whereas all that is material perishes and passes away. This world in its entirety is simply a staging point to prepare for the eternal Hereafter, and Allah gives you the true gift that will remain in perpetuity. Consider how we teach a small child in various stages (elementary, preparatory, high school, college) – why all this work? Because we hope that it will make him a productive member of society. Likewise in this world we work towards a higher goal, the Hereafter, wherein is the eternal good which nothing can spoil.

Now consider this assertion on the part of the believers when they say ‘…“Our Lord is Allah”…’ (Fussilat: 30). It is an assertion which combines both an acknowledgement of the gift of the Lord and that of Allah.

Allah is Himself both the God Who gives and the God Who requires of us obedience. Now whoever receives from his Lord the Lord’s gift, accepting His provision as Creator out of nothingness and Supplier of what we lack, it does not befit him, that he then shirks the obligations He lays upon him, especially as these obligations are for the sake of a person's happiness in this world and in the Hereafter, not to cause him any hardship.

Now the gift of the Lord is present also in what He gives in His capacity as Allah. It is well known that obligation is couched in the form 'Do this, do not do that,' and that it is incumbent upon you to carry out what you are commanded and to refrain from what you are told to avoid. As for anything that the text of revelation does not mention, you are free to do or not do as you like.

He the Exalted then relates what happens with those believers who after they say 'Our Lord is Allah' and affirm both Allah's divinity and His Lordship, this creed becoming firmly rooted with them: '…and then steadfastly pursue the right way…' (Fussilat: 30) – That is, action follows words.

Consider here the conjunctive particle 'then': in grammar it is used to sequentially order statements. There is a specific reason why He Glorified is He did not simply say '…and so they steadfastly pursue the right way…' (Fussilat: 30) which is that the True Lord Glorified is He wished to give you an opportunity to stop and contemplate this creed so that you might gladly believe in it and act according to it fully convinced, such that you might develop such a love for it that it brings you to the point of passion for uprightness, for the pursuit of the right way.

Now the meaning of uprightness is taking something as it is meant to be taken; it demands that one proceed along a straight line, which Allah has called the Straight Path. Allah wants you, O believer, to use as a means to the goal obedience to the dictates of your obligation, the path from which you will not deviate by even a hair's breadth.

Now when you travel along a very wide road you might go here and there, and indeed this is quite possible on a road like that, but do not forget that this will lengthen the distance of your journey and make it harder. For this reason Allah Glorified is He called His path that brings one to His paradise '...the Straight Path...' (al-Fatiha: 6), and in another place He calls it '...the right path...' (al-Baqara: 108) – that is, right in the middle of the path, without swerving to either side.

Now if the goal is far off, it is necessary to make haste in order to reach your destination. So what about those whose goal is paradise? They will undoubtedly hurry towards it without sparing any effort on the route that leads in the correct direction.

For this reason we say that a believer does not need to hate death since it is what will bring him to his goal. Rather, he should only hate death if his deeds are not righteous – yes, in that case he will shirk from meeting Allah in such a state. With the result of their efforts in sight, for example, you ardent seekers hurrying towards it – why? Because they find peace and satisfaction there, whereas you see the lazy ambling along slowly and carelessly

Therefore, our Lord the Exalted teaches us: 'and vie with one another to attain to your Lord's forgiveness and to a paradise as vast as the heavens and the earth, which has been readied for the God-conscious' (Al-'Imran: 133).

He also says in describing the believers: '…these [three] would vie with one another in doing good works…' (al-Anbiya': 90). In other words, beware of allowing this life to preoccupy you – let all your steps be towards the Hereafter, compete with each other in running in that direction, for you do not know how much of the path you will be able to travel before death overtakes you.

It is an example of His justness toward His servant that He keeps for Himself the length of His servant's life, yet leaves to him two other dimensions, breadth, and depth. How so? They say that with respect to duration, no one but Allah knows how long your life will be, and Allah only controls its end; but He leaves it up to you to expand your life in terms of breadth as you will. Thus you may take advantage of the moment you have and make the most good you can out of it; by so doing the breadth of your life will be greater than its length. For the important thing is not the length of life, but the amount of good you are able to do in it.

Now there are those who accomplish amazing things in a short lifetime, things that someone who lives much longer than them never accomplishes. For this reason, when Allah describes paradise for us He says: 'and vie with one another to attain to your Lord's forgiveness and to a paradise as vast(1) as the heavens and the earth, which has been readied for the God-conscious' (Al-'Imran: 133).

---

(1) Al-Bazzaz related from Abu-Hurayra that a man came to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and said, 'Have you seen His saying, "…a paradise as vast as the heavens and earth…" (Al-'Imran: 133) – but where is the hellfire? He replied, have you seen how=

The verse mentions the breadth of paradise. When the breadth is equal to the heavens and the earth, then, how long is its length? Also, Allah mentions another dimension which is the depth or the span. The believer gains more depth and increases his life span, (in terms of the good deeds which determine how much reward a person will be given) after death and when their work in this world comes to an end, by the good effects of their actions that keep running throughout time even after their death.

When the True Lord Glorified is He commanded us to journey along the straightway, and to hurry to do good, He intended by this that we should proceed along the easiest and most direct of routes that will bring us to the noblest of destinations with the least amount of effort. It is well known to engineers that a straight line is the shortest path between any two points.

Indeed, Allah does not want us to take the long road and walk it in vain. Meanwhile, He commands us to vie with each other in order to maintain the vigour necessary to reach our goal. Therefore, Allah says at the beginning of the chapter of al-Kahf (the Cave): 'All praise is due to Allah who has bestowed this Divine scripture from on high upon His servant, and has not allowed any deviousness to obscure its meaning: [1] [a Divine scripture] unerringly straight...[2]' (al-Kahf: 1-2).

The uprightness that Allah wants of us has certain basic principles that have been elucidated by the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him

= when the night descends it covers all – where then is the day? The man said, "Wherever Allah wills". He replied, so it is with the hellfire – it is wherever Allah wills it to be.' In his commentary [1/404] Ibn-Kathir says: 'This can have two meanings. The first: When the day comes and we do not see the night, it does not follow that it does not exist anywhere, even if we do not know where; likewise with hellfire, it exists wherever Allah wills. This is the more straightforward meaning. The second meaning: When the day covers one face of the earth, night covers the other face; likewise with paradise: it exists at the highest level of existence, above the heavens and under the Throne, with its dimensions as described by Allah, while hellfire exists at the lowest level of existence. This setup does not prevent hellfire from existing even though paradise encompasses the heavens and the earth.'

in his Hadith: ‘Islam is founded on five (Pillars): the Testimony that there is no Allah but Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah, the prayer, obligatory alms (zakat), fasting the month of Ramadan, and Pilgrimage to the Ka‘ba for those who are able to make the journey.’(1)

One should not suppose that the religion consists only of these five things and nothing more; no, these are simply the foundations upon which the edifice of the religion is erected. The comprehensive religion of Islam covers every movement and detail of our life.

This issue is clarified by the noble Hadith: ‘Belief consists of some and sixty (or some and seventy) branches, the highest of which is the statement “There is no Allah but Allah,” and the least of which is to remove an obstacle from the road; modesty is also a branch of belief.’(2)

So, these basic Pillars are not the entirety of Islam; rather, they are the bases and foundations of Islam. The two Testimonies affirm Allah’s Divinity, obedience to Him Glorified is He and believing in His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Prayer, which is performed five times a day, is the declaration of a Muslim’s constant devotion to Allah Glorified is He.

Giving Alms is a moral training for the human soul to get accustomed to giving, cooperation and caring about the poor that is, those who are actually poor because of incapacitation, not those practising the profession of the poor, which is beggary. Moreover, zakat (obligatory alms) is a demonstration of solidarity among members of society. Today, you happen to be strong and in a position to give; then you may become weak and incapacitated, in which case you will find someone in society who is stretching out his hand to help you.

As well, zakat (obligatory alms) cures the society from social diseases such as resentfulness, envy and jealousy. How can a poor man envy a rich man or be resentful towards him when the latter gives the former part of the fruit of his effort and a share in his wealth? Therefore, zakat (obligatory alms) is the best kind of insurance a believing individual can have.

---

(1) A sound Hadith related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [8] and Muslim in his Sahih [16], on the authority of a statement by ‘Umar’s son Allah be pleased with them: The Messenger of God said: ‘Islam is founded on five things: the Testimony that there is no god but Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah, prayer, obligatory alms, the Pilgrimage, and the fast of Ramadan.’

(2) A sound Hadith related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [9] and Muslim in his Sahih [35], on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

Thus, we have said, regarding the issue of a faith-based society, that an individual does not take pains in work only as much as is necessary to secure their needs; rather, they work as much as they can. This way, a person can satisfy their own needs, and if there is a surplus in their resources, they give it out as charity to the weak and poor ones. Give charity, go directly yourself to the house of a poor man to give to him, since this way you will preserve his dignity, and relieve him of the humiliation of having to ask you; in this way you will gain such a rank.

Then, comes the pilgrimage to add to these aspects another feature of faith: your Lord, Who created you, provided your needs and granted you power and capability, does not He deserve from you that you visit the house He has chosen to be attributed to Himself, if only once in your lifetime?

This visiting does not depend on the will of the visitor, but rather on the invitation of the host. Thus, when you go to the house of your Lord in fulfilling this religious duty, you present yourself for another gift, one without bounds. In the pilgrimage are further benefits pertaining to both this life and the next, as is obvious to the thoughtful people.

As for the fast, it gives you another dimension for obedience; before dawn you may eat and drink, but after dawn you are not permitted to do so. It is a moment that parts between what is permitted and what is forbidden. When you fast, you fast from something that Allah has permitted for you before fasting. So, you are fasting from something completely permissible, rather than from those things like wine for example, which Islam declares totally forbidden.

Praise to Allah, we do not drink wine, nor ever contemplate drinking it, such that this attitude becomes second nature to us. However, Allah Glorified is He wishes to dislodge us from the things we are familiar with and instil in His servant a sense of the sweetness of the duties imposed by Allah, with respect to something which is perfectly permissible one moment and forbidden the next. Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He replaces our ordinary habits with the honour of worship.

As for that permanent pillar of Islam which always applies to a believer except in the case of madness, it is the ritual salat (prayer). It involves five separate prayers per day whose purpose is to make for one's constant presence with Allah; in its constancy and frequency it differs from the other religious duties. The zakat (obligatory alms) is dependent on one's annual income, the fast is dependent on a single month in the year (Ramadan), and the pilgrimage needs only be done once in a lifetime, based on the ability to afford the requirements.

The fact that the ritual prayer is performed five times a day is a mercy from Allah to His servants. You, the creation of Allah, are summoned by Him to His moral presence five times a day to set right what has gone awry in you; how good would the status be of a product which is examined by its manufacturer five times every day?

An engineer, for example, fixes a machine with replacement wires or parts; likewise your Lord fixes the trouble with you. But whereas the engineer uses material things to fix something material, Allah is immaterial and fixes your immaterial part. Therefore, do not tire yourself attempting to delve into this matter; just leave it to Allah. Your responsibility is only to present yourself to Him in the five prayers at their appointed times, and to perform properly their bowings, prostrations and other requirements.

Certainly, you will observe an improvement in yourself, in your spirit and in your physical being, in your finances and in your family. You will feel that prayer has a distinct effect on your life and eases your body. For this reason, the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to Bilal Allah be pleased with him: 'O, Bilal, put us at ease by it!'(1) Make us comfortable through prayer, not put us at ease away from prayer!

Due to its importance in the life of a Muslim, the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him called it the very fountainhead of righteousness as well as its banner. Read if you will Allah's words: '...for, behold, prayer restrains [man] from loathsome deeds and from all that runs counter to reason...' (al-'Ankabut: 45).

---

(1) This Hadith is given by Ahmad ibn Hanbal in his Musnad [5/364] and Abu Dawud in his Sunnan [4985] as referencing one of the Companions.

And in the Noble Hadith, 'The first thing the servant will be judged for on the Day of Resurrection is his performance of the prayer, for if it be done properly, all his other acts will be good, and if it be done improperly, so too will his other acts.'(1)

Prayer, therefore, has a special status. You see that the poor man is not obligated to give alms or perform the pilgrimage, and the sick man is not obligated to fast. On the contrary, prayer is incumbent upon the Muslim both in sickness and in health, in poverty and in wealth, in travel and at home; only the insane are excused from the obligation to perform prayer.

Thus, it is the pillar that is always incumbent upon you. Hence, prayer has a special quality in its status as a religious duty; all the acts of worship are enjoined by revelation, except prayer, which was imparted to our Prophet Muhammad directly during his night journey and ascent. This indicates its exceptional importance among the acts of worship. We previously explained this by comparing it to the behaviour of your boss at work: he may send you a memo or call you on the phone to inform you about some task, but for more important or sensitive tasks, he will call you into his office to tell you directly. This was the case with prayer; it takes its value from the directness with which it was imparted as an obligation.

(1) This Hadith is given in many different versions and wordings, including:

- As related by Abu Hurayra, 'I heard the Messenger of God say: "The first of a servant's acts that he will be judged for on the day of resurrection is his performance of the prayer, for if it be done properly he will have succeeded, and if it be done improperly he will have lost out."' At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [378] states that this is a good but irregular Hadith, as does An-Nasa'i in his Sunnan [461].

- Another as related by Abu Hurayra, 'The first thing the servant will be judged for on the day of resurrection is his performance of the prayer, for if it be found to be perfect, his record will be judged as perfect, but if it be lacking in any way, He will say (to angels): "Look to see whether you can find other instances of his obedience that will make up for his lack of obedience in this duty" – so will all his other acts be judged.' Thus, in An-Nasa'i's Sunnan [462, 463], Ibn Majah's Sunnan [1415], and Ahmad in his Musnad [9130].

- The wording as it is given by Ash-Sha'rawi is given by At-Tabarani in his Al-Mu'jam Al-awsat, Hadith [1929], related by Anas ibn Malik via Al-Qasim ibn 'Uthman. Al-Bukhari states that he has Hadiths that are not agreed upon. So too Isma'il ibn 'Isa, identified as weak by Al-Azdi. It is a weak method according to Al-Albani, but after enumerating all the Hadith methods, he says that it is a sound Hadith according to all methods.

Moreover, prayer is a pillar that comprises all the other pillars of Islam. It includes the two Testimonies of Faith; it suffices that these two Testimonies, representing the pinnacle of faith and creed, be said once by a Muslim. However, in prayer it is said several times. It also entails a kind of fasting, one more extensive than the fast of Ramadan; in Ramadan, you abstain from food, drink and certain natural functions, whereas in prayer you fast from more than this; you fast from movement and from speech.

It also includes a type of pilgrimage; to perform prayer, you must orient your face towards the direction of the holy house of Allah, visualizing it in front of you, as though you were gazing upon it. Prayer also includes almsgiving, since, in prayer, you sacrifice what is more precious than money; you sacrifice time.

Therefore, the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him clarified the difference between the believer and the disbeliever as being the act of prayer, saying: ‘the covenant that distinguishes between us and them is the salat (prayer); whoever abandons it has committed disbelief.’(1) So, if your Lord summons you to prayer and you do not respond, you are in a state of rebellion. What do you think would happen if your boss at work called you into his office and you ignored him?

Part of the greatness of this religious duty is its nature as a meeting with Allah. You, despite being a servant of Allah, have total freedom and possess all the necessary elements to hold this meeting; you set the time and place of meeting, you decide what you will talk about during it, and when to finish it. The case is that you hear the call to prayer, upon which you go and perform the ablution, then raise your hands to heaven saying: Allahu Akbar (Allah is the Greatest). You are then in the presence of your Lord and your Creator; you are with Him via a 'direct line,' and there is no doorman or guard or any other mediator between you and Him. For this reason a pious man said:

Iam amazed at myself – I am but a servant
Who is received graciously by my Lord whenever I choose

---

(1) Related by Ahmad in his Musnad [5/346], Ibn Majah in his Sunnan [1079] (the section on prayer), At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [2621] from the Hadith of Abu Musa Al-Ash‘ari; he states that this Hadith is good and sound but irregular.

He in His most exalted holiness, yet
He meets me where and when I say

Now, your Lord does not wait for you to come to Him, but calls you to visit Him; He approaches you before you approach Him. Indeed, He said in the Qudsi Hadith: ‘Whoever remembers Me inwardly, I remember him inwardly; whoever remembers Me in an assembly, I remember him in better assembly. Whoever comes to Me walking, I come to him running; whoever draws near to Me by a foot, I draw near to him by a fathom.’(1) Thus, the control is in your own hands. How wonderful a Lord Who treats His servants in such a way and showers such kindness upon them.

Part of His generosity is His rewarding His servant for every act of good done in his life, for such acts are requirements of belief. For this reason, He Glorified is He says in the chapter al-Jumu‘a (The day of congregation): ‘O you who have attained to faith! When the call to prayer is sounded on the day of congregation, hasten to the remembrance of Allah, and leave all worldly commerce...’ (al-Jumu‘a: 9).

As for after prayer, He says: ‘And when the prayer is ended, disperse freely on earth and seek to obtain [something] of Allah’s bounty...’ (al-Jumu‘a: 10). So, He takes you away from work and then restores you to it; work is in itself a form of obedience to Allah; the believer must take part in life in order to have a positive and constructive impact.

Islam is, thus, not limited to these five pillars of faith, but extends to every act one does in life. For example, when you build a house, first you erect it on pillars, and then you divide it into a bedroom, a dining room, a living room, a kitchen and so on.

Islam aims for a healthy equilibrium in life and the absence of tension and conflict; it strives to bolster social life, not set it at odds (with religious obligations). It does not want one person to build and another to demolish; rather, it wants all of us to build and no one to tear down. The True Lord Glorified is He has given to us this universe in which we live in good condition, characterised by beauty and harmony, and has commanded us to preserve it and indeed to increase its goodness, or at least to leave it as it is without damaging it.

(1) Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [7405, 7505, 7537], Ahmad in his Musnad [2/251, 354, 405], At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [3603] as a Hadith of Abu Hurayra; At-Tirmidhi identifies it as a good and sound Hadith.

He taught us that when we try to improve things we should do so with a view to the consequence of our actions, and that we should not involve ourselves in something whose outcome we cannot guess, and that we should not let the appearance of things deceive us. These are the characteristics of rational people who act according to wisdom, who weigh good and bad in order to use what is good and avoid what is bad.

We may cite an example from the present age; that is the cotton worm that destroyed most of Egypt's important cotton crop. It took some time until scientists invented a pesticide called DDT, and everyone rushed to use it, thinking that it would get rid of the worms permanently and solve the problem for good. But after a few years the worms developed a resistance to this pesticide and returned to their full strength. Along with the worms, there remained terrible side effects afflicting water, crops, and the soil. Everything in our life had become polluted; we are still suffering greatly because of these pesticides. For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He warns us against thoughtlessness in invention and being misled by apparent benefits without considering the consequences. So, beware lest you become involved in a trouble you will not be able to fix later. Consider Allah's saying when reminding His servants of His graces in the verse: 'And [it is He who creates] horses and mules and asses for you to ride, as well as for [their] beauty: and He will yet create things of which [today] you have no knowledge' (an-Nahl: 8).

Indeed, we used not to know any means of transportation besides horses, mules and donkeys, but then man created what he had not known previously such as cars, planes, and rockets. There is no doubt that such means serve mankind and make life easier, but they also have bad and destructive effects that were not anticipated by their creators.

Back when cars first appeared, we used to go to Damietta by car, and the roads were not paved then as they are now. The driver would drive at high speed on the dirt road and raise a large cloud of dust in his wake; this dust caused harm to the pedestrians and the fields, not to mention the exhaust fumes and the respiratory problems the cars cause.

Then, there began to be many accidents and collisions resulting in the death and injury of people, thus filling society with tragedies. As well, when a car runs out of gas it stops wherever it is and will not move.

So, when you compare this means of transport with the natural means that Allah created, we find that Allah's creation is better and safer. Camels or donkeys get you where you need to go and carry your things without having these destructive effects, and their waste is a fertiliser for the soil, and when they are hungry they do not stop but carry you to your destination. Moreover, have you ever seen two camels get into an accident? Therefore it is our responsibility to consider the consequences of something before we create it, and whether its benefits outweigh its detriments.

The True Lord Glorified is He then, explains what the reward is for those believers who say: '..."Our Sustainer is Allah," and then steadfastly pursue the right way...' (Fussilat: 30). What is their reward? '...Upon them do angels often descend, [saying:] "Fear not and grieve not..."' (Fussilat: 30). The angels of Allah who are in heaven, created from light and have no work but to glorify Allah; they do not disobey Allah whatever the command is and actually do what they are commanded. So, when a believer is afflicted by tribulation or suffers discomfort, these angels descend upon him to strengthen him so that he can keep the patient endurance that he must have in such situations. Such a believer would say, 'There is no worry ever while I am believing in You, my Lord; my Lord is the Almighty who will relieve my cares and my distress.'

Such is the state of a believer when afflicted by misfortune: he takes refuge in The Causer Glorified is He and there comes to him an inspiration from Allah in the words he reminds himself with: 'Endure it patiently and resign yourself to the disposition of Allah. The affliction may be a test from Allah, or expiation for sins that I committed and for which Allah is punishing me now in order to forgive me in the Hereafter. This is a sign of Allah's love for His servant exposing him to punishment in this world so as to forgive him in the Hereafter.'

For this reason, the disbelievers used to rejoice when the believers were stricken with some affliction. But Allah Glorified is He taught His Prophet to say: ‘Say: “Never can anything befall us save what Allah has decreed!”...’ (at-Tawba: 51) So, you (disbelievers) rejoice when we are struck with affliction, and we also rejoice since it is from Allah. Affliction for the believer indicates either that Allah is covering over his errors or that He is raising him up a corresponding measure in rank.

How strange it is to see someone who is afflicted by a calamity or going through something unpleasant not addressing the reasons for it or thinking how to avoid it in the future, but rather, he takes refuge in forgetfulness and goes to drink some intoxicating beverage that will help him forget.

This is a grave error. Forgetting will not solve the problem, only thinking about its causes and how to address them will. Drugs and intoxicants do away with your reason and corrupt it precisely at the moment you need it most. When one of us experiences a problem he needs to think hard. Why would you get rid of your reason at a time when you need it most? Do you not usually seek other people’s help and advice to solve your problems when circumstances are difficult?

Therefore, consider what caused your affliction; if you have a part in it and it is simply a result of bad behaviour on your part, in which case you are to blame and must rectify your behaviour and consider its consequences. This is the first step on the path of improvement. This is like the student who goes to find out his grade at the end of the year and is told that he failed; the blow awakens him, and he cries out at the top of his voice with the cry of understanding, ‘I am the cause of this, I am lazy, I deserve it!’

But, if the affliction is beyond your control like the student who memorises his lessons and labours hard, yet when the exam time comes he freezes up or forgets and thereby fails. Then, this is simply Allah’s decree and is so for a good reason. This is an evil in which good lies hidden. We must be content when suffering comes from Allah, and ascribe to Him wisdom in afflicting us.

So, we always circle around the question seeking out the Divine wisdom behind our circumstances, whether or not we arrive at an answer. Say, perhaps I was conceited and Allah wished to break my conceit, or perhaps, if I succeeded, I would have become envied, or perhaps I could not get the mark for which I hoped. All of these are examples happening in real life.

An action cannot be dealt with by itself but must be considered in conjunction with the doer; we must ask: who is the doer? For instance, when your child comes to you with a cut bleeding in some part of his body, you are not concerned so much with the blood as with who caused the bleeding. Indeed, you ask first: who did this to you? If he says, for example, that his uncle did it, you will calm down and tell him, you must have done something wrong to deserve it. But if he tells you someone else did it, you will get furious and not let things alone until you get to the bottom of it.

We say, therefore, consider the action in conjunction with the doer of the action. If it is from Allah, be content and look for His reason in doing it; you will certainly find it and will praise Allah accordingly. Be like a molar tooth firmly rooted in its place, which chews without being pained by sweet food or bitter. If the suffering is in yourself, be trained by it, and if it happens to someone else, learn from it. Allah certainly has His reasons.

You have heard the story(1) of the Chinese man who used to contemplate events to see the wisdom behind them. They say that this man loved to raise horses and had a horse farm. One day one of his best horses escaped, a stallion, and was lost in the fields. People came to him to console him for his loss, but he said to them, ‘Do not you understand that perhaps there is a good thing in this, and I find relief that I am not the cause for the loss of this horse?’

After several days, the horse returned to the farm accompanied by a herd of horses. His neighbours came to congratulate him on this, but he said to them, ‘What makes you think that this is a blessing?’ A short while later his son went to ride this horse as he was quite attached to it, and the horse threw him to the ground, breaking his leg. The people came to console the man, but he said to them, ‘Perhaps there is a good thing in this.’ Immediately after this an army recruiter came for the young man, but found that he had broken his leg and, therefore, left him. Therefore, we should understand that Allah makes His dispositions wisely and fairly enough. Some of us may understand the reasons, and others may not. Therefore, we say, take heed not to force things, since you do not know what is best for you, and remember always: '... and it may well be that you love [a thing the while it is bad for you]... (al-Baqara: 216) and '...it may well be that you hate [a thing the while it is good for you]...' (al-Baqara: 216). Thus, the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him taught us this lesson, saying: 'Seek matters out with self-respect, for they go according to certain measures.'(1)

(1) The story of the Chinese man who bread horses

A holy man says to Allah in his private prayers: 'I praise You for everything You order and the beauty of Your disposition; it is a praise coupled with contentment about Your rule and certainty about Your wisdom.' Thus, a person soothes himself and soothes the world around him. All of this guidance is from the angels' descents as referred to in Allah's saying: '[But,] behold, as for those who say, "Our Sustainer is Allah," and then steadfastly pursue the right way – upon them do angels often descend, [saying:] "Fear not and grieve not"...' (Fussilat: 30).

Another kind of angelic descent occurs when the believer enters the hour of his death and is fearful and sorrowful, for he is leaving the comfort of the world. The angels descend upon him and reassure him by giving him tidings of another, perpetual kind of comfort in the Hereafter, which does not vanish like the comfort of this world.

'...Upon them do angels often descend, [saying:] "Fear not"...' about those things you are approaching in the Hereafter, even if your works are lacking, for you are approaching a forgiving and merciful Lord; so do not fear nor grieve, '...but receive the glad tiding of that paradise which has been promised to you!' (Fussilat: 30)

---

(1) Al-'Ajluni mentions this in his Kashf Al-khafa' (Hadith 399) with the wording: 'Seek things out with self-respect, for matters go according to certain measures.' He says that it is related by Tamam and Ibn 'Asakir with a weak transmission from 'Abdallah ibn Bisr but is strengthened by what is related by At-Tabarni and Abu Nu'aym from the Hadith of Abu Amama: 'The holy spirit inspired my mind: A soul shall not die until its sustenance be completed; so fear God and seek with propriety.' This is also related by Al-Bazzar from Hudhayfa. In the section via Jabir it is thus as given in the Musnad Al-Firdaws of Al-Hafizh ibn Hajar Al-'Asqalani.

We said that good tiding is good news told before something actually takes place. So, who is giving you glad tidings of paradise? By Allah, if it were simply a man like yourself, you would doubt his authenticity; but given that the one who is giving you glad tidings is Allah Himself, trust in what you have been told. Indeed, the One Who promises paradise is alone capable of true faithfulness, since there is no power that can interfere with His ability to make good on His tiding.

نَحۡنُ أَوۡلِيَآؤُكُمۡ فِي ٱلۡحَيَوٰةِ ٱلدُّنۡيَا وَفِي ٱلۡأٓخِرَةِۖ وَلَكُمۡ فِيهَا مَا
تَشۡتَهِيٓ أَنفُسُكُمۡ وَلَكُمۡ فِيهَا مَا تَدَّعُونَ ﴿٣١﴾

We are your allies in this world and in the world to come, where you will have everything you desire and ask for [31] (The Quran, Fussilat: 31)

That is, we are your close supporter, advocating for you in this worldly life and the Hereafter. Some scholars said that angels have been created innately disposed to obedience; for this reason when Adam was created they said: '...They said: "Wilt Thou place on it such as will spread corruption thereon and shed blood – whereas it is we who extol Thy limitless glory, and praise Thee, and hallow Thy name?"...' (al-Baqara: 30). Allah responded to them: '[Allah] answered: "Verily, I know that which you do not know" ' (al-Baqara: 30).

That is, I created the angels innately disposed to obedience, '...who do not disobey Allah in whatever He has commanded them, but [always] do what they are bidden to do' (at-Tahrim: 6). Those whom I wish to be obedient cannot disobey; but I wish for another creature, one that will come to Me without being forced to do so. Rather, they will come to me in obedience and approach near to Me through love while having the ability to disobey; they will come to Me by choice, not by compulsion or force.

Previously, I gave an example of a person having two servants, one of whom is chained and directed by his master with that chain and the other is free. When you summon them and they come running to you, which of them will be more obedient?

Now, His saying, ‘We are close unto you...’ (Fussilat: 31), that is, we come to you in times of hardship to assist you and in distress to help you attain perseverance and patience.

It is related in the Hadith that one of the Companions(1) of the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sitting and reciting the Quran, and a horse was nearby. He suddenly heard it emit a strange cry like a growl and move about in an unusual way, and saw above its head a light. He went to our master the Messenger Muhammad and told him about this. The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘those were the angels come to listen to your recitation; by Allah, had you but waited a while longer they would have greeted you.’(2)

This is part of the angels’ guardianship over us in this world; and in the Hereafter they will also be close to us, for they will be charged by Allah with the work on the Day of Resurrection and judgment, and with receiving the people of paradise with a greeting of peace, as the True Lord Glorified is He states: ‘...“Peace be upon you! Well have you done: enter, then, this [Paradise], herein to abide”’ (az-Zumar: 73).

He says also: ‘Peace be upon you, because you have persevered! How excellent, then, this fulfilment in the Hereafter!’ (ar-Ra‘d: 24) This is the greeting of the angels, and Allah will then greet them likewise, as is stated in the chapter of Ya Sin: ‘Peace and fulfilment through the word of a Sustainer who dispenses all grace’ (Ya Sin: 58).

(1) He is Usayd ibn Hudayr, one of the patricians among the Ansars (Supporters). The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said of him: what a good man is Usayd ibn Hudayr. It is related by Anas that Usayd and ‘Abbad ibn Bishr were with the Prophet on a dark night; when they departed from him one of their staves illumined the way and they walked in its light, and when they parted ways, both of their staves lit up [Ad-Dhahabi, Siyar A‘lam An-Nubala’, 1/299].

(2) Usayd Ibn Hudayr said that once he was reciting at night from the chapter of al-Baqara, with his horse tied next to him. Suddenly, the horse began to get restless and so he stopped reciting, upon which the horse calmed down; he resumed reciting and again his horse grew restless; he stopped and it calmed down again. Thus, when he resumed reciting again and the horse grew restless he desisted and left. When morning had come he told the Prophet, who replied, 'Recite, O Ibn Hudayr!' I turned my face toward heaven and lo, something like a canopy in which there were things like lamps; they then departed till I could see them no longer. The Messenger of God said, 'Do you know what that was?' He said, 'No.' 'Those were angels that drew near at the sound of your voice; had you kept reading they would have become visible to everyone' the Prophet replied [Al-Bukhari, Sahih, chapter on the descent of the Sakina and the angels; Muslim, Sahih, 1327, Hadith of Abu Sa‘id Al-Khudri].

‘...and in that [life to come] you shall have all that your souls may desire, and in it you shall have all that you ever prayed for’ (Fussilat: 31). Scholars say that whatever thing a person's soul desires will immediately appear before him, simply by thinking about it. What luxury! I have been to many countries and have stayed in the best hotels there, and the most they can give you is that you can press a certain button and it will give you coffee, for example, or on another button and it will give you tea. Is there anything greater than what Allah has prepared for you in paradise? You have only to think about something and it will appear before you. Paradise also includes other luxuries: ‘what the eye has not seen, nor the ear heard, nor has occurred to the heart of man.’(1)

Therefore, when Allah Glorified is He wished to create a picture of paradise for us, He did not describe it literally; He only said: ‘...the parable of the paradise which the Allah-conscious are promised...’ (Muhammad: 15); its parable, not paradise itself, why? Scholars say that it is because expressions in a language apply to certain meanings and objects; there must first be a meaning which is then given an expression that references it. But that which does not exist has no expression that references it. ‘Television,’ for example, what was its name before they invented it? It had no name because it did not yet exist.

Likewise, the pleasures of paradise; the language does not currently have expressions that refer to them, for we do not know them nor do we know the names of these things. They are things which no eye has seen, no ear has heard and which have not occurred to the heart of man. How, then, could there be expressions to indicate them?

His saying, ‘....and in that...’ that is, in paradise, ‘...you shall have all that your souls may desire...’ (Fussilat: 31). What is meant here is souls filled with faith which proceed uprightly on the path of Allah. Now, in paradise there is nothing that is forbidden, and in paradise there is no one who desires forbidden things. The soul desires what is permissible; even when the forbidden things of this life appear in the Hereafter, they will be different, being purified from qualities that make them forbidden.

---

(1) Given by Muslim in his Sahih [2824], Ahmad in his Musnad [2/466], and Abu Nu‘aym in his Hilyat Al-Awliya’ [2/262] on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

Wine in this world is well known for disturbing one’s reason and for not being enjoyable to drink; as for the wine in the Hereafter, Allah says of it: ‘...and rivers of wine delightful to those who drink it...’ (Muhammad: 15).

For example, you see how they drink in films? They pour it into their mouths all in one go. Why? Because its taste is unpleasant and they want to get it passed their tongues quickly. But, those who drink a cup of mango juice, for example, you see them savour every mouthful because it tastes pleasant and has a pleasant smell.

Likewise, with every pleasure in paradise that has one similar in this world, the True Lord Glorified is He purifies it from any deleterious qualities and removes any harmful effects as we know them in this world. Consider His saying about the water in the Hereafter: ‘...rivers of water which time does not corrupt...’ (Muhammad: 15), that is, it does not change or become putrid like the water in this world. Of milk, He says, ‘...and rivers of milk the taste whereof never alters...’ (Muhammad: 15), and of honey, He says, ‘...and rivers of honey of all impurity cleansed...’ (Muhammad: 15).

Therefore, do not say that wine is like the earthly wine, nor water like earthly water, nor milk like the milk you drink now. No, these are pleasures of another type which The Creator Glorified is He has purified of their flaws.

‘...and in it you shall have all that you ever prayed for’ (Fussilat: 31), that is, in paradise you will have all that you ever hoped for or desired.

نُزُلًا مِّنْ غَفُورٍ رَّحِيمٍ ﴿٣٢﴾

As a welcoming gift from the Most Forgiving, Most Merciful One [32] (The Quran, Fussilat: 32)

The Arabic word ‘Nuzulan’ is translated into ‘ready welcome’; the Arabic word means a place which is prepared for a guest’s lodging. It is necessary that such a place be prepared so that one’s guest finds there everything he needs. It is a place of hospitality. For this reason, we use this term for hotels, a type of ready and welcoming lodging that human beings prepare for other human beings. But paradise is a type of welcoming lodging that the Lord and Creator of mankind has prepared for them; it is the lodging prepared by the Much-Forgiving and the Dispenser of Mercy towards them.

Therefore, I have said that when I went to San Francisco, I found there extremely tall and luxurious hotels and saw that my colleagues were quite impressed with them. I wanted to make this a lesson about faith, so I said to them: you are impressed by what you see, but consider it meditatively: this is what men have prepared for other men, so how much greater will be what Allah, the Lord of mankind, has prepared for men?

With such a point of view, a person may prevent himself from falling into envy, covetousness or objection. Every fine thing that you see and every beautiful thing your eye falls upon should remind you of the pleasures of the Hereafter.

Often, when we see, for example, a large building or beautiful villa, we ask ourselves where all this property comes from? We are gripped by a certain amount of envy towards its owner, or envy the owner for the blessing they are granted by Allah. But, if we were to consider the subject from a different point of view, we would see that Allah Glorified is He has subjected this man and subjected his wealth to the service of society as a whole: he wearies himself making money and accumulating property then disburses it to workers, craftsmen and other tradesmen from all the different walks of society.

Thus, this person participates in building up society, and participates in its movement. For this reason, our Lord Glorified is He has taught us that when we see something that we like we should say: '..."Whatever Allah wills [shall come to pass, for] there is no power save with Allah!"...' (al-Kahf: 39)

That is, this is the gift and the grace of Allah that He gives to whomever He wills of His servants. When you are happy for a blessing that is given to someone else and are glad he received it, the blessing itself will love you; for the blessing loves the one whom it is bestowed upon more than the latter loves it. But, if you begrudge other people because of their blessing, the blessing will itself begrudge you, saying: by Allah, a blessing for which you begrudge other people will certainly not come to you.

Moreover, blessings are preordained, and it is the believer's duty to be content with Allah's decree and not to object to it; he must be aware that every preordained thing contains in it a purpose that is construable through faith.

Allah's saying, 'As a ready welcome from Him who is much-forgiving, a dispenser of mercy!' (Fussilat: 32) indicates that this 'ready welcome' and this pleasure is not attained by the servant through his own works, but rather through the forgiveness and mercy of Allah towards him. This explicates for us the Noble Hadith, 'None will enter paradise through his works.' They asked him, 'Not even you, Messenger of Allah?' He said, 'Not even me except that Allah has encompassed me(1) with His mercy.(2)'

However, the term 'ready welcome' may also have a sarcastic sense; it can mean a hotel, but it can also mean a prison. Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter al-Kahf: '...Verily, We have readied hell to welcome all who [thus] deny the truth!' (al-Kahf: 102).

وَمَنۡ أَحۡسَنُ قَوۡلٗا مِّمَّن دَعَآ إِلَى ٱللَّهِ وَعَمِلَ صَٰلِحٗا وَقَالَ إِنَّنِي مِنَ ٱلۡمُسۡلِمِينَ ٣٣

Who speaks better than someone who calls people to God, does what is right, and says, 'I am one of those devoted to God'? [33] (The Quran, Fussilat: 33)

After The True Lord Glorified is He speaks of the essential perfection of the believer who has perfected his faith and declares: 'My Lord is Allah', and then walks uprightly on the way, He then says that, after a believer has welcomed faith and tasted its sweetness in his heart, the good effects of this faith will overflow to other people. This is one of the concerns of the believer: to transmit his faith to others and bring good to them.

The believer wants for his brother what he wants for himself,(3) and seeks to guard the welfare of society around him; he does not simply look out for himself, nor is he ever selfish.

---

(1) The phrase 'encompassed him with His mercy' means covered and inserted him in it and inundated him with it. Abu 'Ubayd says 'encompassed me' means covered or wrapped me [(Lisan Al-'Arab), s.v. (root).

(2) A trusted Hadith given by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [6463] and likewise Muslim in his Sahih [2816] on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

(3) A sound Hadith given by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [13] as well as Muslim in his Sahih [45] (the book on belief as narrated by Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him with the wording: 'By He in Whose hand is my soul, a servant is not a believer until he wants for his neighbour (or, for his brother) what he wants for himself.'

The True Lord Glorified is He praises the practice of calling others to Allah (Da'wah), calling it the best of speech: 'and who(1) could be better of speech than he who calls [his fellow-men] unto Allah...' (Fussilat: 33).

Thus, the noblest work that one whose heart is saturated with faith can do is to communicate and represent that faith to others. A believer, thereby, does good both for himself and for other people; an individual must be affected by the actions of people around him whether they are good actions or bad ones.

Therefore, it is in the interest of a believer that everyone believes. It is in the interest of you who travel uprightly on the path, that everyone travel uprightly too. For this reason, Allah entrusted the charge of Da'wah to every believer because He wishes belief to be transferred from those who have tasted it to those who have not yet tasted it, so the compass of belief may be expanded and good extended to all.

The first element of calling people to Allah's (Da'wah) is that we first call them to the creed and to belief in Allah; we say: our Lord is Allah, acknowledging and announcing this sincerely and categorically. We, then, are to direct their attention to Allah's signs in the universe, such signs as they might not have considered, and to the signs constituted by the miracles accompanying the Messengers such as they might not know, and to the verses of the Quran which explain Allah's path, consisting of commands and prohibitions.

Consider Allah's saying: 'And who could be better of speech...' (Fussilat: 33). The True Lord Glorified is He wishes to show us how high is the position of

(1) In his Commentary, Al-Qurtubi refers to a number of different opinions as to who is meant in this verse: 1) It is the Messenger of God: this is an opinion held by Ibn Sirin, Al-Sudayy, Ibn Zayd, and Al-Hasan Al-Basri. The last named used to say whenever he recited this verse: 'This is the Messenger of God, the beloved of God, the friend of God, the most sincere to God, the best to God, the most beloved to God of all the denizens of the earth, whose prayer God answers and who calls mankind to what he has given.' 2) It was revealed in reference to the mue'dhdhins, an opinion held by 'Aisha, 'Ikrima, Qays ibn Abu Hazim and Mujahid. Ibn Al-'Arabi says: The former opinion is more correct, since this is a Meccan verse and the call to prayer was revealed in Medina; it only seems to correspond to a development of the later period, but this was not the intent of the original statement. 3) The verse refers generally to all those who call people to God, an opinion held by Al-Hasan and Qays ibn Abu Hazim. Al-Qurtubi says that this last opinion is the preferable one [Tafsir Al-Qurtubi, 9/6026].

Da'awa to Allah and the excellence of those who practise it. Yet, He did not say this in a straightforward way, but rather expressed it in the form of a rhetorical question, ‘And who could be better of speech...’, communicating His negative intent, that is, that there is no one better than he who calls to Allah, and there is no better speech than his.

The True Lord Glorified is He said it this way in the form of a question because He knows that there is no answer for it but that we say: there is no one who speaks better than he who calls to Allah; this makes us declare and affirm the truth ourselves, and affirmation is the foremost mode of demonstration.

The first summoner to Allah is our master the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and every summoner after him draws of his spring and travels in his footsteps. Given the fact that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the last of the Prophets, he has bequeathed to his ummah this mission, the mission of summoning people to Allah with wisdom and good counsel. The goodness of the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is not cut off, but extends after him through his ummah, such that every summoner after him takes station from Muhammad's station.

Part of Allah’s mercy to this ummah is that He gave it an internal check, which is a group of people in it that remain committed to the truth, their job being to straighten the crooked ones, command what is good and forbid what is evil. This group will remain until the Day of Resurrection. For this reason, our master the Messenger Muhammad said, ‘There shall remain among my ummah a group that adhere to the truth, who shall not be afflicted by those who oppose them until the command of Allah comes and finds them thus.’(1)

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘You are indeed the best community that has ever been brought forth for [the good of] mankind: you enjoin the doing of what is right and forbid the doing of what is wrong, and you believe in Allah...’ (Al-‘Imran: 110).

(1) Given by Muslim in his Sahih [1920], (Book of Imara), from a Hadith of Thawban Allah be pleased with him as well as by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [7311], and likewise in Muslim [1921] from a Hadith of Al-Mughira Ibn Shu‘ba.

This is the defining characteristic by which Allah singled out the community of Muhammad, inasmuch as he is the seal of the Messengers. For this reason, evil will not overcome this community, nor will it be overwhelmed by corruption; it is inherently protected. The previous nations became overrun with corruption, and had none commanding good and forbidding evil. Thus, it was necessary that a new messenger be sent to return the people to the Straight Path.

As for the community of Muhammad, no new messenger will come to it. Therefore, Allah instilled in it this protection and made it the vicegerent of the Messenger of Allah in summoning people to Allah, making it faithful in this mission. For this reason, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘Good is in me and in my community until the day of resurrection.’(1)

Allah Glorified is He explicated that the Messenger Muhammad will testify that he communicated this Divine mission to his community, and that this community will testify that it communicated the summons of its Messenger to all the nations. He says: ‘And thus have We willed you to be a community of the middle way, so that [with your lives] you might bear witness to the truth before all mankind, and that The Apostle might bear witness to it before you...’ (al-Baqara: 143).

Thus, our witnessing to the nations is a proof that goodness remains in us and will never be cut off.

Our Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him urges and encourages us to assume and maintain this trust when he says: ‘Allah flourishes(2) a man who hears my speech and understands it, and then communicates it to those who did not hear it. Maybe the recipient of knowledge understands it better than the one who has heard it!’(3)

(2) (Nadra): bounty, wealth, pleasant life. The phrase ‘God flourished his face’ means that it became handsome and bright. Al-Hasan Al-Mu’addib states: this does not come from handsomeness in the face, but rather, it means that God beautified a person's face through the goodness of their manners, that is in majesty and power [(Lisan Al-‘Arab), (root).

Da'wah (calling people) to Allah is a task of great scope, involving words, deeds, and being a noble example. It is practised through explaining items of doctrine, the rites of worship and the Divine rulings to people in an attractive and interesting manner that does not put them off, nor cause them to despair of the mercy of Allah.

Da'wah to Allah is an art. Read Allah's saying in which He addresses His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: '...for if thou hadst been harsh and hard of heart, they would indeed have broken away from thee...' (Al-'Imran: 159).

How do our summoners compare to Allah's statement: 'Call thou [all mankind] unto thy Sustainer's path with wisdom and goodly exhortation, and argue with them in the most kindly manner...' (an-Nahl: 125).

We must know that summoning to Allah is not simply the concern of only the specialist scholars of religion, but rather the concern of every Muslim in every age and in every place. Everyone can be a summoner at his workplace; yes, a summoner through his actions, discipline, dedication, and sincerity.

The scholars of the community are of a consensus that Islam did not spread by the sword or through force with nearly the same effectiveness as by the good example of Muslims endowed with tolerance and love for others; they are a model for us.

Calling people to Allah is the concern of every Muslim who has tasted the sweetness of belief and the religious duties and who wants for others the good things he wants for himself, and, therefore, is keen to bring about good to them. When the True Lord Glorified is He charged us with good tasks, He did not leave aside anyone or debar anyone from taking part in that good. For example, we now find an economic problem, war on the economy, fighting over bread and water; how do we solve these problems from an Islamic point of view?

The True Lord Glorified is He constantly prompts the rich to be gracious towards the poor. After imposing the obligation of alms for the rich to the poor, He left the door open for the generosity of the rich and their love of giving, making charity a supererogatory act for those who have tasted the sweetness of religious duty.

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘and in whose possessions there is a due share, acknowledged [by them], [24] for such as ask [for help] and such as are deprived [of what is good in life] [25]’ (al-Ma’arij: 24-25). ‘a due share’ here means the prescribed obligatory alms. He says in the chapter of adh-Dhariyat: ‘and [would assign] in all that they possessed a due share unto such as might ask [for help] and such as might suffer privation’ (adh-Dhariyat: 19) using the same word ‘a due share’, without the word ‘acknowledged’ which means here the non-obligatory charity beyond the obligatory alms. These are supererogatory acts: whoever does them receives their reward, whoever does not do them is not penalised.

Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of adh-Dhariyat by way of explicating for us the high rank of doing good excellently: ‘[But,] behold, the Allah-conscious will find themselves amid gardens and springs, [15] enjoying all that their Sustainer will have granted them [because], verily, they were doers of good in the past [16]’ (adh-Dhariyat: 15-16). He did not say here ‘they were believers’; so what is the rank of doing good deeds? They say that the excellent doer of good (muhsin) is the one who abides by doing something which is not required of him but which is similar to that which is required of him by Allah. Thus, the rank of doing good excellently is higher than the level of belief. The obligatory ritual prayer is five prayers, but the excellent doer of good performs these five and then performs more beyond them; or if the requisite percent of alms from one’s income is 2.5%, he will give 5%; and so on with respect to all types of good.

In the verses of the chapter of adh-Dhariyat, there is an explanation of what this extra is which excellent doers of good impose on themselves.

He Glorified is He says: ‘[But,] behold, the Allah-conscious will find themselves amid gardens and springs, [15] enjoying all that their Sustainer will have granted them [because], verily, they were doers of good in the past: [16] they would lie asleep during but a small part of the night [17]’ (adh-Dhariyat: 15-17). Does Allah obligate you to keep praying at night and only sleep a small part of it? No, you may pray the evening prayer and sleep until dawn.

As for the excellent doer of good, he has another kind of business with the night. He has tasted the sweetness of staying awake and praying for Allah; he feels waves of spiritual inspiration coming down upon him, and the mercy of Allah covers him; passion for worship and ecstasy therein is his delight and his comfort. Likewise, ‘and would pray for forgiveness from their innermost hearts; [18] and [would assign] in all that they possessed a due share unto such as might ask [for help] and such as might suffer privation [19]’ (adh-Dhariyat: 18-19). He did not say here ‘...a due share, acknowledged [by them]’ (al-Ma’arij: 24) since the latter refers to the obligatory alms, whereas the former is the general voluntary charity which is based on people’s varying degrees of love for giving and generosity.

When a believer loves worshipping he prefers it to anything else. Thus, if you were to tally up those who go on pilgrimage to Mecca, you would find that the number of returnees is three to one the number of first-time pilgrims. This is simply due to the fact that people love performing this religious duty.

Therefore, Allah instituted among His servants an incitement to do good, each according to his level. The Holy Quran gives us a picture of the believer who loves to give even though he does not have money. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘[But] no blame shall attach to the weak, nor to the sick, nor to those who have no means [to equip themselves], provided that they are sincere towards Allah and His Apostle: there is no cause to reproach the doers of good, for Allah is much-forgiving, a dispenser of mercy. [91] Nor [shall blame attach] to those (1) who, when they came unto thee [O Prophet, with the request] that thou provide them with mounts, were told by thee, “I cannot find anything whereon to mount you” – [whereupon] they turned away, their eyes overflowing with tears out of sorrow that they had no means to spend [on their equipment] [92]’ (at-Tawba: 91-92).

This verse makes it clear that Allah Glorified is He has distributed good among all mankind; the rich are obliged to give, and the poor may advise the rich and encourage them to give. If the poor person is unable to do either, it is enough for him that they love giving charity and long to do it; indeed, they weep that they are not given the opportunity to do so. For these, their charity is their longing to give and their weeping for being unable to give. This way, the Creator Glorified is He has not excluded anyone from His good, nor has He locked the door in anyone's face.

(1) Al-Qurtubi says: It is said that this verse was revealed in reference to ‘Arbad ibn Sariya. It is also said that it was revealed in reference to ‘A’idh ibn ‘Amr. Or, as most commentators hold, in reference to the Banu Muqarrin, seven brothers who were Companions to the Prophet. There are many other opinions on this subject which Al-Qurtubi mentions in his Commentary [4/3153].

There is a certain issue that appertains to summoning people to Allah; that is there could be a Muslim person who may be disobedient to his Lord in a certain respect where he commits some kind of sin. Does this disobedience prevent him from being a summoner to Allah? Scholars say that disobedience is not a reason to prevent a Muslim from summoning people to Allah. Perhaps a person whom you call to Allah will do what you yourself have not done, and this may be some way of setting right your omission.

A story (1) is told of a man who was circumambulating the Ka'ba when he heard someone else saying, 'O Allah, You know that I am disobedient to you, but I love those who are obedient to You. O Allah, make my love for those who obey You an intercessor in the matter of my disobedience.'

They say that even with those who neglect the ritual prayer out of laziness, this does not prevent them from calling others to prayer, for it is a good that he spreads to others; he will still receive his reward for this. All those who spread good, will have their 'commission' (reward) from Allah. Thus, not a single creature exists but that it has its share in the vast grace of Allah, and no creature exists but that it has this quality of goodness for itself or for another. In fact, this spreading of good is in itself a way of summoning to Allah.

His saying: '...and does what is just and right... (Fussilat: 33), that is, calls people to Allah first with speech and then with deeds. The Quran always draws this connection between speech and deed. We know that giving a practical example has a stronger impression on people than talking about an example. It is not right, moreover, that you call someone to do something which you yourself avoid doing. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Do you bid other people to be pious, the while you forget your own selves – and yet you recite the Divine book? Will you not, then, use your reason?' (al-Baqara: 44).

(1) The story of a man who circumambulated the Ka'ba regularly

He also says in the chapter of al-'Asr: 'Consider the flight of time! [1] Verily, man is bound to lose himself [2] unless he be of those who attain to faith, and do good works, and enjoin upon one another the keeping to truth, and enjoin upon one another patience in adversity [3]' (al-'Asr: 1-3).

Admonition is a kind of interaction between people; each one should admonish his fellow; the obedient should admonish the disobedient. Every one of us may be an admonisher in one situation, and be admonished in another. The emotional reaction towards obedience or disobedience is not constant; when you are inclined to obedience, you may admonish the disobedient, and when you are inclined to disobedience, you will find someone to admonish you in turn, and so on. This is because the soul does not experience a constant flow of any emotion. Thus, each of us is in a position to put right the inclinations of his fellow human beings. This is the meaning of 'enjoin upon one another', that is, between yourselves '...the keeping to truth, and enjoin upon one another patience in adversity' (al-'Asr: 3).

The True Lord Glorified is He swears here by the time of afternoon which is an estimated period of time. But He swears by what? 'Verily, man is bound to lose himself' (al-'Asr: 2), that is, the human species as a whole is in a state of loss and error, from which state none is exempt 'unless he be of those who attain to faith, and do good works, and enjoin upon one another the keeping to truth, and enjoin upon one another patience in adversity' (al-'Asr: 3).

It is as though the True Lord Glorified is He is saying to us: examine time and consider history, investigate the civilisations that passed away in ancient times; where are they? What remains of them? Take for example the civilisation of the Pharaohs in Egypt and everything they achieved in terms of scientific progress; we still have not penetrated their secrets until now, even though we are in an age of scientific progress; even the Americans are incapable of penetrating their secrets.

Despite this, all of these ancient sciences vanished because their practitioners did not find a way of preserving them and guaranteeing their survival. The tyranny of this people was the cause of their destruction: 'and with Pharaoh of the [many] tent-poles? [10] [It was they] who transgressed all bounds of equity all over their lands, [11] and brought about great corruption therein: [12] and therefore thy Sustainer let loose upon them a scourge of suffering: [13] for, verily, thy Sustainer is ever on the watch! [14]' (al-Fajr: 10-14)

There are in fact civilisations even greater than the civilisation of the Pharaohs, but they too are buried under the dirt; we know nothing about them. Even when the Quran tells us about them, it gives us only a general picture to express their greatness: 'Art thou not aware of how thy Sustainer has dealt with [the tribe of] 'Ad, [6] [the people of] Iram the many-pillared,(1) [7] the like of whom has never been reared in all the land? [8]' (al-Fajr: 6-8).

Yes, these were civilisations that once upon a time were the greatest on earth and talked about by everyone, yet they did not possess the means whereby they could guarantee their survival despite the progress they achieved. Thus, it is enough that Allah says of them: 'the like of whom has never been reared in all the land' (al-Fajr: 8). So how were they then? Ahmad Shawqi speaks accurately when he says,

If knowledge is not ennobled by good character
it becomes but a tool for failure(2)

Therefore, when your work is erected upon everlasting bases, it is constant and everlasting; when you build it on perishable elements, it perishes.

The remaining bases are the Divine values; just as we take Allah's gift in material things, we must take His gift on the level of values, for it is that which will preserve our works and make them eternal, giving them meaning and value.

'..."Verily, I am of those who have surrendered themselves to Allah" ' (Fussilat: 33); this is a declaration and boasting by a Muslim, a badge on his chest that says: I am Muslim, and my Islam is the point of departure for every action in my life. This in itself is a calling to Allah and a way of spreading His religion and a means of aggrandising the word of Allah; that is true when you are not preoccupied with yourself but rather with your religion.

(1) Most commentators say that Iram was one of the great cities of 'Ad located in Yemen. Mohammad b. Ka'b says that it is Alexandria, while Ibn Al-Musayyib says that it is Damascus [Ibn 'Abd Al-Mun'im Al-Himyari, (Ar-Rawd Al-mi'tar fi khabar Al-aqtar)].

(2) The verse is by Hafizh Ibrahim, not Ahmad Shawqi, from a qasida (poem) in the meter Al-Kamil, 46 verses(also lines) in length; this is the 13th verse. Hafizh was born in 1871 in Dayrut, Egypt, and grew up in Cairo as an orphan. He would compose verse during his studies, and graduated from the Harbiyya (Military) school. When he was put on provisional retirement, he started work as an editor at the Al-Ahram newspaper. He was called 'the poet of the Nile'. He died in 1932 (Al-Mawsu'a Ash-Shi'riyya).

So, when you accomplish a piece of work that you attribute to your observance of Allah's religion; you say: I did it because Allah has so commanded me. Thus, you raise up Allah's religion among the people without being concerned with yourself as the actor; and when you raise up Allah's religion, be sure that it will exalt you with it.

Therefore, it is one of the believer's characteristics that he attributes his good and his righteousness to his religion and his Islam.

For this reason we often dwell on the saying of Qarun (Korah) in response to Allah's giving him wealth, glory, and power. Allah reported his saying: '..."This [wealth] has been given to me only by virtue of the knowledge that is in me!"...' (al-Qasas: 78) But Allah answered him: given that you were given it through the knowledge that you have, keep it with that knowledge! But the result was: 'And thereupon We caused the earth to swallow him and his dwelling...' (al-Qasas: 81). So, when you attain some breakthrough, invention or something good in this world, consider it as deriving from a religious way of life and attribute it to your religion.

Recall the Noble Hadith: 'Whoever makes the Hereafter his goal, Allah makes his heart rich, and organises his affairs, and the world comes to him whether it wants to or not.'(1)

For this reason I am always surprised when I hear high-sounding names for charitable associations and groups led by prominent figures in society. Yes, we see them offering assistance and doing much charity, yet when you ask them about their point of departure in doing what they do, you hear different terms like 'Masonry'.

---

(1) Given by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [2465] from the Hadith of Anas ibn Malik, with the wording: 'Whoever makes the Hereafter his goal, Allah makes his heart rich, and organises his affairs, and the world comes to him whether it wants to or not. And whoever makes the world his goal, Allah puts his poverty right before his eyes, and disorganises his affairs, and the world does not come to him, except what has been decreed for him.'

Then, when they discover that Masonry has Jewish roots, they call it 'Rotary'; one of them says: I do this because I am a Rotarian. Say instead, for Allah's sake: because I am Muslim, my Islam compels me to do this. Why do you not elevate yourself through the nobility of your religion? Why do you throw away the reward of your efforts in the Hereafter? We say, good deeds can be done either for Allah's sake or for people's sake. Good deeds done for Allah's sake have a condition of their own which is that the intent must be sincere, and you will be given your reward by Allah in the Hereafter. As for good deeds done for people's sake, these will give you a high standing and prestige in people's eyes; this is your reward, you have already taken it in this life and will have none for it in the Hereafter. After all, a man seeks his wage from the one he works for.

For this reason, when we are asked about those scientists who serve humanity with their ideas and inventions, whether they will have a share in the Hereafter? We respond: no, they will not have a reward in the Hereafter, since they work for the good of people and of humanity in general and for the progress of society, and take their reward through public acknowledgement, fame, perpetual remembrance of their achievements and so on.

As for Allah, they never have a thought of Him when they do all of these things. Read His saying in reference to such individuals: 'for We shall have turned towards all the [supposedly good] deeds they ever wrought, and shall have transformed them into scattered dust' (al-Furqan: 23). In another verse, as well, He says: 'But as for those who are bent on denying the truth, their [good] deeds are like a mirage in the desert, which the thirsty supposes to be water – until, when he approaches it, he finds that it was nothing: instead, he finds [that] Allah [has always been present] with him, and [that] He will pay him his account in full – for Allah is swift in reckoning!' (an-Nur: 39)

The good deeds of the disbelievers will be in the Hereafter like a mirage: you think it is something, but when you go towards it you find nothing there. If only they could stop there! But no, they are startled by the truth which they always used to deny in this life: 'but finds Allah before Him' (an-Nur: 39). Yes, Allah, Whom he denied or disbelieved in. He Glorified is He will make him stand before Him and reckon his account: you did such and such, and you have no reward with Me; there remains to you only the reward of your denial and obstinacy.

Therefore, we say that the moment you declare that you do the good deeds and invent what you invent because of your Islam, the moment you say I have done this because I am a Muslim; you elevate the goals of Islam and turn non-Muslims to the beauty of this religion. Such actions call people to Allah and you will be on the path of your Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. If you encounter some difficulties, be patient, for your Messenger suffered in the course of carrying out his mission and was patient nevertheless.

The one who takes up this trust of calling people to Allah and announces it by saying, ‘I am a Muslim,’ and my Islam regulates all of my actions in life – when he is afflicted with something bad he knows that he is simply participating in the Prophetic legacy. There has never been a prophet but that he suffered and had enemies. Those who bear this responsibility will necessarily have enemies who will abuse, vilify and heap accusations on them. This is only to be expected in the course of calling people to Allah.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And thus We have made for every prophet an enemy – devils from mankind and jinn, inspiring to one another decorative speech in delusion’ (al-An‘am: 112).This means that those who call to Allah who remain safe from such suffering are missing out on a part of the Prophetic legacy. Therefore, be patient – is any follower of Muhammad better than Muhammad himself that he should be saved from suffering?

If you do not encounter enemies in the course of calling to Allah, know that you are not following the path laid out for you, and that you must reevaluate your position.

I am speaking here about calling people to Allah with truth, directness, sincerity and about the profession of faith that should be uttered on such a path, not in the quest for fame or power or some remuneration with worldly goods that perish. Calling people to Allah should never be simply a means to some other end. For this reason, we say, what is it that protects those who call to Allah today, given that we talk very loudly and write in every media outlet? Allah – He is the One Who protects us. Praise be to Allah that we are not arrested or imprisoned, and that no one can object to us. There are many scholars of religion who declare the word of truth free of any self-interest. Sometimes the ruler gives them his ear and they tell him things which make him tremble; yet despite this we hear of the suppression of men of religion.

We say, if a man of religion is suppressed, it must be because he used forbidden means of communication in calling people to Allah, like those who prefer to solve problems through killing and spilling blood. Say you are in disagreement with a government minister, for example – do you try to shoot him? Is this the solution? What is the fault of the guards whose blood you spill and whose children you orphan?

Your tool is the word. Say what you wish and repair through good words; make them hear what they do not like. I myself previously talked to them in a way that no one used to be able to do, for the courage that is born of faith in calling people to Allah is not a word of truth spoken to just any authority, but only to an unjust authority – yes, spoken to his face.

This is the practical application of the statement of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘The greatest jihad [struggle] is speaking the word of truth to an unjust authority.’(1)

We do not trade in this word, but only confront with it every oppressive ruler. We say to him we do not object to you personally nor do we want what you rule over, but we love you and wish to help you fulfill your objectives; we simply wish of you that you rule us by the standards of Islam. I wish to be ruled by Islam, not to be subjected to Islam as an excuse.

وَلَا تَسۡتَوِى ٱلۡحَسَنَةُ وَلَا ٱلسَّيِّئَةُۚ ٱدۡفَعۡ بِٱلَّتِى هِىَ أَحۡسَنُ
فَإِذَا ٱلَّذِى بَيۡنَكَ وَبَيۡنَهُۥ عَدَٰوَةٞ كَأَنَّهُۥ وَلِىٌّ حَمِيمٞ ٣٤

Good and evil cannot be equal. [Prophet], repel evil with what is better and your enemy will become as close as an old and valued friend [34] (The Quran, Fussilat: 34)

After Allah Glorified is He spoke to us about the objective of calling people to Allah, and that it is a Prophetic legacy bestowed on us after the Prophet. He then informs us here of one technique and one model example of carrying this out. It is that you respond to evil with good: ‘And not equal are the good deed and the bad.’ Indeed, no one thinks good and evil to be equivalent, as the intellect itself states. Go to the thief who steals the property of others, who steals the fruit of the sweat of their brows, and say to him, would you like for others to steal from you? He will say, ‘No.’ I say, so, do not wish for them what you do not wish for yourself. But he will say, ‘You are limiting my freedom – I am free.’

(1) Related by Ahmad in his (Musnad) [3/19, 61], At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [2174] (who deems it reliable), and Abu Dawud in his Sunnan [4344] from the Hadith of Abu Sa‘id Al-Khudri. In At-Tirmidhi the wording is as follows, ‘Pertaining to the greatest jihad is speaking the word of justice to an unjust authority.’

I then say to him, do not forget that Allah Himself has limited your freedom in stealing from others, and you are only a single individual. He has also limited the movement of the entire world from stealing from you. So, who benefits from this? Likewise, with every other matter in the Divine law in which Allah has forbidden you from trespassing on the rights of others; He has also forbidden them from trespassing on your rights. He responds, do not look at what Allah has made forbidden for you with desire. He has commanded all mankind not to look upon your maharim (women who other men are allowed to marry from, while you cannot).

The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gives us a model of wisdom in making this summons, when a sincerely believing young man came to him who was nevertheless beset by a certain matter he was unable to renounce; that is, cupidity in looking at and desiring women. He came to the Messenger of Allah and said, ‘Messenger of Allah, I am afraid I will commit fornication.’

Consider here the Prophet’s wisdom in responding to this. He responded to the young man without scolding him or being harsh with him, but rather smiling at him and reassuring him that he is confronting a sickness for which there is a cure. This of course assumes that the young man was sincere in his faith in coming to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for his cure, without deceiving the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him or himself. For this reason, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him described for him the cure which would tear out this sickness from its roots. The young man then left and fortified that which would make fornication distasteful to him.

What the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said to him was this, ‘Would you like such a thing to happen to your mother?’ He said, 'No, Messenger of Allah.' He said, 'Would you like this for your sister?' He said, 'No, Messenger of Allah.' He said, 'Would you like this for your wife?' He said, 'No, Messenger of Allah.' He said, 'Would you like this for your daughter?' He said, 'No, Messenger of Allah.' He continued to mention to him various female relatives until he came to the paternal and maternal aunt, and the young man said: 'No, Messenger of Allah, may I be made your ransom!' The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Likewise without everyone else, brother of the Arabs – they do not want this for their mothers or their sisters.'(1)

Whereupon the young man said, 'Now when I want to look at anything I remember my mother, my sister, my wife, my daughter.'

Therefore, the religion requires that one summon people to it with gentleness, wisdom and good counsel so that what you say will be accepted, since the person you are advising in a religious matter, whether he is of a different religion or of the same religion as you but accustomed to disobedience and finds obedience burdensome, it is incumbent upon you to help him out of such a state in a manner that will not be repugnant to him, so that you do not make it seem too difficult to him when you divest from him what he loves, without speaking to him in a harsh or blunt manner. It suffices that you help him disavow what he loves in a way that is not repugnant to him. By such means, you leave him no justification for ill-tempered debate or strong and belligerent opposition.

Likewise, with your treatment of people – you are to counter what is evil with what is good: 'Repel [evil] by that [deed] which is better;' that is, respond with gentleness and good treatment, ‘and thereupon the one whom between you and him is enmity [will become] as though he was a devoted friend’ (Fussilat: 34). Destructive enmity is that which exists between two enemies, each hates the other. In such a situation, enmity becomes entrenched and we cannot find any solution. But what if the sharpness of such enmity could be dulled? Its sharpness is dulled when it comes from only one of the two parties – the enemy on the one hand and the tolerant person on the other side who does not return evil for evil, but rather pardons and forgives. In this situation, the soul of the enemy grows quiet and finds no purchase for his enmity. This is the first step in effecting reconciliation – you bring your enemy over to your side. For this reason, they say, you can counterbalance the one who disobeys Allah with respect to you by obeying Allah with respect to him. By this method, the enemy may be transformed into ‘a devoted friend;’ how? Do not ask how – for it is through the power of Allah, the Creator of all these souls and the Transformer of all these hearts.

(1) A Hadith narrated by Abu Umama has it that a man came to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and said: 'I am afraid that I will commit fornication. Now someone who was nearby the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him became indignant and insisted that he be punished, but the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, "Let him speak." He then said to the young man, "Would you like for someone to do this to your sister?" He said, "No." He said, "Your daughter?" He said, "No." He continued in this vein mentioning different examples, to all of which the young man responded, "No." The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him then said, "So hate what Allah hates and desire for your brother what you desire for yourself."' The Hadith is quoted by Al-Muttaqi Al-Hindi in his (Muntakhab Al-Kanz) [2/397]; he traces it to Ibn Jarir At-Tabari.

A man once came to me complaining about the harshness of one of his relatives. I told him, dear sir, be patient with him and respond to him gently, and treat him with affection – perhaps Allah will reconcile between you. Sometime later, he came back to me and said, ‘I responded to him gently, but he only became meaner and harsher than he was before.’ I told him to search himself, for the word of Allah is entirely trustworthy; look for the cause of it in you. You may have thought that you responded gently, whereas in reality you did not. Or perhaps you wanted to test Allah – and Allah Glorified is He is not to be tested, for it means that you doubt Him. Had you trusted Allah, He would have trusted you. How lovely is the poet’s (1) verse in this regard,

You who are bothered by others’ actions whether this or that respond (may I be your ransom) with what [is better] till you [him become a true friend]

---

(1) The verse is by Ash-Sha‘rawi himself.

وَمَا يُلَقَّىٰهَآ إِلَّا ٱلَّذِينَ صَبَرُواْ وَمَا يُلَقَّىٰهَآ إِلَّا ذُو حَظٍّ عَظِيمٍ ﴿٣٥﴾

But only those who are steadfast in patience, only those who are blessed with great righteousness, will attain to such goodness [35] (The Quran, Fussilat: 35)

That is, this characteristic and this status, that of responding with something that is better, is not attained except by those who are patient in suffering. It is only attained by those 'having a great portion [of good],' that is, an overflowing share of giving. Why? Because he restrains himself from responding in kind, and when he restrains himself for the sake of Allah, Allah makes it turn out well for him in the end, and gives to him lavishly.

We observe here the Quranic technique of repeating a phrase: 'none is granted it.' It is suggested that this phrase is repeated because the context is different; the first is given for patience in adversity, the second given as a reward. Orientalists and perceptive people generally, often focus on such instances of repetition in the Book of Allah in an attempt to search out the reason for it – for Allah's Book is perfect and exact, without a single unnecessary word or slip.

Those who are patient when suffering harm, they are patient in self-restraint, they are patient in standing up to Satan who tempts them with the pleasure of revenge and makes attractive to them the prospect of repaying them with the like. And the end result of patience is a reward and abundant good fortune.

We must not be heedless of Satan's role in this matter – his concern is to ignite the fires of enmity between people and to drum up discord so as to turn them aside from Allah's objectives. He whispers to you insinuatingly, 'Why be forbearing with him when he treated you so badly? Why do you accept humiliation? Is he better than you?'

This is because ever since the devil was commanded to prostrate to Adam and he refused, with the result that he became cursed and cast out from the mercy of Allah from that time, he has been in a state of enmity with the human race. He will not leave them be until he has brought them to a position like his own.

For this reason he swore: '[Iblis (Satan)] said, 'By Your might, I will surely mislead them all. Except, among them, Your chosen servants' (Sad: 82-83).

That is, O Lord, I have rebelled against You only in the matter of the seed of Adam. The one whom You wish to be obedient I cannot beguile, for I have no power over Your true servants. Part of the devil's failure is that he divulges his secret and discloses the means whereby he beguiles the sons of Adam. Now it is obvious that someone with a plot or devising a conspiracy would keep the details of his plan to himself, but the devil has divulged his details – thereby Allah secured for us the upper hand.

Allah Glorified is He says, relating the devil's statement: 'I will surely sit in wait for them on Your Straight Path' (al-A'raf: 16), that is, along the path of uprightness and doing good so as to distract them from it and to make it seem useless to them. For this reason, we say that Satan does not go to the pub, for example, but rather goes to the mosque.

In another instance, Satan continues: 'Then I will come to them from before them and from behind them and on their right and on their left' (al-A'raf: 17).

Allah says:

وَإِمَّا يَنزَغَنَّكَ مِنَ ٱلشَّيۡطَٰنِ نَزۡغٞ فَٱسۡتَعِذۡ بِٱللَّهِۖ إِنَّهُۥ هُوَ ٱلسَّمِيعُ ٱلۡعَلِيمُ ٣٦

If a prompting from Satan should stir you, seek refuge with God: He is the All Hearing and the All Knowing [36]
(The Quran, Fussilat: 36)

Part of Allah's Mercy towards us is that He Glorified is He has not left us as spoils to this enemy who lies in wait to catch us, but has instead given us a defence where we may take refuge. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And if there comes to you from Satan an evil suggestion, then seek refuge in Allah;' remind him of Allah, the All-Powerful. If you find yourself weak before him seek help against him from, the All-Powerful, Allah. The moment he sees you by the side of Allah, he will not dare to make an attempt on you, because you are thereby included among those whom he has exempted: 'except Your sincere servants among them' (Sad: 83).

Beware of the fact that he will not come to you except when you are on the straightway, so as to corrupt it for you. He comes to you during your prayer, and reminds you of something about which you were not thinking. So, it is with the most important matters of yours in this life – the only thing he cares about is obstructing you from the Hereafter at any price.

If you find in yourself any hint of this prodding and insinuating, say, 'I take refuge in Allah Glorified is He from Satan, the accursed.' Say this every time the devil comes to you while you are performing the prayer, or while you are reciting the Quran, or while you are carrying out any other act of worship.

You must speak this phrase! It will not by any means void your act of worship. When you persist in saying this, he will despair of you and stay away; and he will know that you are firm and resolute, strong with power extended to you by Allah. He will turn away from you – why not, since you know his games and have discovered his tricks?

But the problem is that many of us are drawn after Satan and surrender our reins to him. What Satan does is that he pulls them in the direction he wants and then lets them continue by themselves without any effort or trouble on his part; they are those whom Satan debases and subjugates, those who form his retinue unthinkingly and uncomprehendingly.

Say that a thief comes to your house and circles it. You make a sound that he can hear to indicate to him that you are there and are awake; he will leave. Perhaps he considers that it was simply a coincidence, so he comes back another time; but you make a sound again so he realises it was not a coincidence. You are observing him and perfectly awake. He therefore leaves without coming back again. It is likewise with Satan.

We say that it comes from the devil's foolishness and heedlessness that he announces his plans to us to entice people as well as the means by which he will do so. Yet, how much greater the foolishness of those who know these plans and these means but still allows themselves to be drawn after them without taking precautions.

Now when we contemplate the devil's statement: 'Then I will come to them from before them and from behind them and on their right and on their left,' (al-A'raf: 17) you see that he left out two directions he will not approach you from them; from above and from below. Why? They say that it is because the top is the direction towards Allah, the direction of the dignity of lordship, and the bottom represents the humility of being a servant as when you prostrate to Allah in humility to Him. Thus, Satan does not come from these two directions.

His saying: ‘Indeed, He is the Hearing, the Knowing’ (Fussilat: 36) is the One from Whose Hearing nothing escapes; thus He Hears and Knows what Satan whispers to you.

After the Quran elucidates this for us, it returns again to describing certain signs of Allah in the universe by which we may extrapolate the existence of the Creator and His Power, such that even if they are revealed by disbelieving scientists, we profit by them. By Allah, how impoverished are those scientists from whose work all mankind benefits yet they themselves do not benefit, for (as we have said) they do not have faith in Allah Glorified is He as their point of departure in creating all of these things. They are like pack animals by whom people benefit but they do not benefit at all – except that the goods of this life are perishable.

The Lord says:

وَمِنۡ ءَايَٰتِهِ ٱلَّيۡلُ وَٱلنَّهَارُ وَٱلشَّمۡسُ وَٱلۡقَمَرُۚ لَا تَسۡجُدُواْ لِلشَّمۡسِ وَلَا لِلۡقَمَرِ
وَٱسۡجُدُواْۤ لِلَّهِۤ ٱلَّذِى خَلَقَهُنَّ إِن كُنتُمۡ إِيَّاهُ تَعۡبُدُونَ ٣٧

The night, the day, the sun, the moon, are only a few of His signs. Do not bow down in worship to the sun or the moon, but bow down to God who created them, if it is truly Him that you worship [37] (The Quran, Fussilat: 37)

His saying: ‘And of His signs,’ here we see a particularisation, that is, these are certain of His signs in the universe, given that they are many and indeed infinite. An awe-inspiring sign is in its makeup which speaks of the Power and Wisdom of Allah and the wonderfulness of His Fashioning.

‘Night and day’ are two of Allah’s signs in the universe, and they together constitute a full day as we know, a full rotation of the clock. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Which Allah imposed upon them for seven nights and eight days in succession’ (al-Haqqa: 7).

These signs of the universe mentioned here ‘night and day and the sun and moon,’ enjoy a large share in the procession of prophetic missions and in creedal beliefs. In the story of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him when he was searching for the truth while looking at the universe around him, when he saw a star, he said: ‘So when the night covered him [with darkness], he saw a star. He said, “This is my lord.” But when it set, he said, “I like not those that disappear.” And when he saw the moon rising, he said, “This is my lord.” But when it set, he said, “Unless my Lord guides me, I will surely be among the people gone astray.” And when he saw the sun rising, he said, “This is my lord; this is greater.” But when it set, he said, “O my people, indeed I am free from what you associate with Allah”’ (al-An‘am: 76-78).

The sun and moon are linked to day and night and have a part to play in introducing one to belief in Allah. This thing is rendered an indicator to believe in a matter about which the Arabs were still in doubt when the Quran was revealed to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. These signs in the universe are in the first place an introduction to belief in Allah, and in the second place an indicator that inspiration was not cut off from the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him.

You know the story of the descent of inspiration to the Messenger of Allah for the first time in the cave of Hira’, and that He peace and blessings be upon him was suffering from his meeting with the angel given the difference between human and angelic natures. He peace and blessings be upon him would then go to his people sometimes saying ‘Enwrap me, enwrap me’ and other times, ‘Cover me, cover me’ because of the change that had been effected in his nature. In the beginning, the inspiration weighed heavily on the Messenger of Allah; as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Indeed, We will cast upon you a heavy word’ (al-Muzzammil: 5).

The Companions relate that the Prophet’s brow used to drip with sweat at what the angel revealed to him, and the companion who was sitting next to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and resting his leg against him found that when the inspiration descended, it was so heavy he could not bear it.(1)

---

(1) Al-Bukhari relates in his (Sahih) [(Kitab As-Salat, bab ma yudhkar fi al-fakhidh), 12] the statement of Zayd ibn (Thabit): ‘Once Allah revealed to His Messenger when his=

For this reason, the Lord Glorified is He wished to lessen the suffering of His Prophet and stopped the inspiration for a period of six months so that the Messenger of Allah could rest and the weariness of the first encounter could be relieved, so that he would long to meet with the angel once again and to hear the words of Allah which had been cut off from him; doubtless it is this longing which gave him the capacity to bear the inspiration and the summons thereafter.

Now, the disbelievers in Mecca saw an opportunity in the inspiration ceasing to come to the Messenger of Allah, so they said, 'The Lord of Muhammad has gone off him;'(1) that is, has abandoned and left him. They did not know that the abatement of the inspiration was not abandonment, but rather the farewell of a lover for his beloved until the next, longer meeting. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He revealed: 'By the morning brightness. And [by] the night when it covers with darkness, Your Lord has not taken leave of you, [O Muhammad], nor has He detested [you]' (ad-Duha: 1-3).

This is the proof in that the Lord Glorified is He swore to them by the bright morning hours, (that is, day) and by the night when its darkness comes, thus making of these two signs an indication that the inspiration had not been cut off, but that Allah simply wished to allow His Messenger to rest from his labour and renew his strength to once more receive inspiration, just as you labour and grow tired during the day and rest at night.

It is well known that the bright morning hours belong to the sun and the night belongs to the moon. Thus, the period during which the inspiration abated from the Messenger of Allah was intended to lighten his burden, as He says: 'Did We not expand for you, [O Muhammad], your breast? And We removed from you your burden. Which had weighed upon your back' (ash-Sharh: 1-3).

This means, We have opened up your heart for the revelation of the Quran and you long for it, and have the capacity to receive it. It is as though the Quran takes them from the sensible signs in the universe to their underlying = leg was upon mine, and it became extremely heavy upon me such that I feared my leg would be crushed' [(Fath Al-bari), 1/478].

(1) It is related from Jundab ibn 'Abdullah Al-Bajali that he said: 'Jibril (Gabriel) kept the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him waiting, and the polytheists said, "Muhammad's Lord has bid him farewell."' [Ibn Kathir, (Tafsir), 4/522] meanings, making what they see a proof of what they deny. Given that in your daily activity you need the night in which to be still and rest from the toil of the day, likewise the Messenger of Allah needs this period to rest from the labour and burden of inspiration so as to renew his energy and cause him to long again for the meeting with the angel. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He then says: ‘And the Hereafter is better for you than the first [life];’ (ad-Duha: 4) for the return of the inspiration will be greater and better than what it was at first since its return will be longer and more powerful.

Just as the signs in the cosmos – night and day, sun and moon – are held to be relevant in the creedal statement in the story of Ibrahim (Abraham) and in the inspiration revealed to the Messenger of Allah, so too are they relevant in solving a certain problem in social issues with which Islam is concerned such as the issue of equality between men and women.

This issue is quite controversial, and biased persons use it as leverage to attack Islam, although Islam is the religion most concerned with doing justice to women and giving them their rights, and requiring society to respect them. Islam views men and women as two types of a single species.

They must necessarily share a measure in common. But when they were divided into two parts, male and female, each developed its distinctive feature. Thus, in order to clarify for us the Quranic context of this issue, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘By the night when it covers. And [by] the day when it appears, And [by] He who created the male and female. Indeed, your efforts are diverse’ (al-Layl: 1-4). Just as the day and night complete each other and cooperate with each other and do not oppose one another, each having their proper purpose in life, the one for work and the other for rest; likewise it is with man and woman; they are two elements of a single thing, they complete each other and cooperate with each other and do not oppose one another, just like the day and night. When you observe men and women, you do not see them as two different types within a species that might be at cross-purposes with each other, since they are of a single species, and a single kind does not clash with itself. It has a single mission. All members participate in carrying this mission out, each according to his or her capacity as created by Allah and with the powers and abilities given by Allah.

Now this is a controversial issue, especially among the unbelievers who look at the species but not at the underlying genders of male and female; despite the differences between the two types, they want them both to have the same purpose, thus removing any difference between man and woman. For this reason, the Lord Glorified is He gives us this explanatory example of the day and night: is the purpose of the night like that of the day? To each is its own purpose and nature, and whoever opposes this nature wearies themselves in life. Likewise, the man was created for work, power and toil, while the woman for kindness, affection and the care and rearing of children – keeping in mind that the infancy and childhood of the human being is the longest of its kind in nature; only women are capable of such upbringing, not men.

The Lord Glorified is He teaches us by this example to refer what we differ on back to that on which we agree. Just as we do not differ as to what the purpose of the day or the night is, likewise we should not differ as to what the purpose of man or of woman is, nor simply repeat the word ‘equality’ without understanding the respective natures of man and woman and the roles Allah created them for.

In another place, the Lord Glorified is He teaches us the wisdom expressed in the creation of day and night. He Glorified is He says: ‘Say, “Have you considered: if Allah should make for you the night continuous until the Day of Resurrection, what deity other than Allah could bring you light? Then will you not hear?” Say, “Have you considered: if Allah should make for you the day continuous until the Day of Resurrection, what deity other than Allah could bring you a night in which you may rest? Then will you not see?” ’ (al-Qasas: 71-72)

After this, He Glorified is He made further categorisations of time beyond day and night: periods of time such as hours, minutes, and seconds, with which time is regulated. Now the hour which regulates your time would not serve this purpose unless it itself is totally regular. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He made the sun and moon serve another purpose, the regulation of time, making them dependably regular in their movements.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘The sun and the moon [move] by precise calculation;’ (ar-Rahman: 5) that is, according to a precise and sure measure that never changes or alters. From the movement of the sun and moon, we calculate time, especially religious affairs which we cannot determine except by this movement.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘that you may know the number of years and account [of time]’ (Yunus: 5). From the movement of the sun, we know day and night, and from the movement of the moon, we know the beginning and end of months. Therefore, from the movement of the sun and moon and from day and night, we are able to determine exactly the movements whereby to discharge the obligation of ritual prayer at its different appointed times, the times which perpetually testify to faithfulness to Allah Glorified is He at all times and in every place; and which result from the different times of sunset and sunrise in a given 24-hour period.

The Lord Glorified is He then gives us another perspective on the sun and moon, since they are among the greatest created things, and are associated with stability and precision and grandeur in the creation, to the extent that some people have worshipped the sun or the moon. The Lord Glorified is He here wishes to turn the attention of His creation to the grandeur of the Creator Who is more deserving of worship than His creations.

But he made the sun and moon subject to a change such as solar and lunar eclipses. Whatever the sun is, and whatever the moon is, they are still mutable creations, which means they cannot ever be worshipped. He Glorified is He said in the verse we are discussing here: ‘Do not prostrate to the sun or to the moon, but prostate to Allah, who created them, if it should be Him that you worship’ (Fussilat: 37).

This grand creation must be honoured through Allah’s own honouring of it, but it is not permitted to transgress beyond such honouring to the point of worship, to the point of prostrating oneself to a created thing however great, for it is created and therefore mutable. Allah does not change because of His servants – His servants change because of Him. This matter explicates for us the issue of the angels’ prostration to Adam peace be upon him which was not a prostration of worship, but simply in obedience to Allah Who commanded them to prostrate to Adam. But why did Allah Glorified is He make them prostrate to Adam? They say that it is because Adam would descend to earth to build it up, and the angels were to be his help and would assist him in carrying out his purpose on earth. The angels were entrusted with the affairs of men and made administrators of them, as Allah Glorified is He described them: 'For each one are successive [angels] before and behind him who protect him by the decree of Allah' (ar-Ra'd: 11).

Now the angels which were commanded to prostrate did not include all angels, but only those who would have some connection to mankind. It is as though the Lord Glorified is He was acquainting them with this new creature in whose service they were destined to be; so they were made to prostrate to him as a display of humility and obedience, to know that they are in his service and administrators of his affairs.

For this reason, there is the following Hadith,(1) 'Angels come to you in succession by day and night, gathering together during the dawn prayer and the afternoon prayer. Those who have passed the night with you ascend to Him and He asks them (though He knows you well), how did you leave My servants? They reply, "When we came to them they were praying, and when we left them they were praying." '

There is another type of angel that has nothing to do with human beings and no connection to them. They know nothing of this world of ours. They are the exalted ones of which Allah speaks in talking of the devil: 'Are you too proud (to fall prostrate to Adam) or are you one of the high exalted?' (Sad: 75)

Thus, when our ancestors honoured the sun and moon to the point of prostrating to them, they were made aware that their Creator is more deserving of such prostration: 'Do not prostrate to the sun or to the moon, but prostate to Allah, who created them, if it should be Him that you worship' (Fussilat: 37). That is, if you heed His command.

We may note something else about the sun which gives us to understand a strange feature we were unaware of previously. In the chapter of al-Kahf, the Quran tells us the story of Dhul-Qarnayn (the two-horned one); Allah Glorified

(1) Related by Muslim in his (Sahih) [632] and Al-Bukhari in his (Sahih) [555] on the authority of Abu Hurayra... An-Nawawi says in his commentary on Muslim's, 'Their being gathered together at dawn and in the afternoon is part of Allah's graciousness and kindness to [His servants]. He has the angels gather with them and leave them precisely at their prayer times when they are obeying their Lord, and [the angels] testify of the good they have witnessed.' (Sahih) [3/139, Beirut, Dar Al-Qalam edn]

is He says: ‘And they ask you, [O Muhammad], about Dhu Al-Qarnayn. Say, “I will recite to you about him a report.” Indeed, We established him upon the earth, and We gave him to everything a way. So, he followed a way. Until, when he reached the setting of the sun, he found it [as if] setting in a spring of dark mud, and he found near it a people. Allah said, “O Dhu Al-Qarnayn, either you punish [them] or else adopt among them [a way of] goodness”’ (al-Kahf: 83-86).

That is, the setting of the sun is simply so in the eye’s perspective, for if you were to arrive at that dark, turbid, sea you would find that the sun is still far off: ‘and he found near it a people. Allah said, “O Dhu Al-Qarnayn, either you punish [them] or else adopt among them [a way of] goodness.”’ This is because he was a powerful man on the earth, of great rank and authority.

Now the purpose of powerful men is to enforce the balance of justice and standards of right and punishment, for the actions of people in this world do not proceed aright except if the good-doer is rewarded and the evildoer is punished.

‘He said, “As for one who wrongs, we will punish him. Then he will be returned to his Lord, and He will punish him with a terrible punishment. But as for one who believes and does righteousness, he will have a reward of Paradise, and we will speak to him from our command with ease” ’ (al-Kahf: 87-88).

He then speaks of the point of sunrise, and says: ‘Until, when he came to the rising of the sun, he found it rising on a people for whom We had not made against it any shield’ (al-Kahf: 90). He says nothing further about the sunrise, unlike with what He mentions in the previous lesson taken from the sunset. It has a function and role with respect to those who do good and those who do evil. As for the sunrise, He simply says, ‘We had not made against it any shield,’ and nothing more. It is as though the point here is that we understand that Dhu Al-Qarnayn had arrived at a place whose day was very long and the sun was not hidden at any point.

After scientists discovered the longitudinal and latitudinal lines, we know that certain places around the poles experience long days that may last up to three months or even six months – this being a small example of the scientific inimitability of the Quran.

You may ask how one lives in such places; how can one pray or past properly? We say that in this case, one should measure out a normal day and a normal night and then divide the time into a normal day and night, and likewise when the night lasts three or six months.

Another observation may be made with respect to the wording of the verse and its evident rhetorical precision. The Lord Glorified is He begins the verse by mentioning the night and then the day, and then begins the next phrase with the sun followed by the moon. Assumingly, it would have been more fitting to link the moon with night and the sun with day.

But the wording of the Quran has its own wisdom and rhetorical precision. The Lord Glorified is He begins with that which is more important for daily life; the night is for rest while the day is for work, for The Creator Glorified is He created mankind to build up the earth and to strive in its territories. Now there is no cultivation on earth without action, and action requires two phases of time: a time for rest, and a time for work.

He thus mentioned night first because you will not produce anything unless you first get enough rest. It is as though rest is the basis on which work can be carried out – a weary, exhausted person cannot produce anything. Likewise, He mentions the sun before the moon because it is greater and more important, and from it all the stars and planets derive their light.

As long as we are talking about night and day, someone will certainly ask us which of them was created first. Some say that night was first, given that we determine, for example, the arrival of Ramadan in its first night, not its first day; when we see its crescent, we announce Ramadan is tomorrow. Those who hold that night was created first are supported in their position, namely that day does not usurp the night.

The Lord Glorified is He resolves this issue, for He Glorified is He says: ‘It is not allowable for the sun to reach the moon, nor does the night overtake the day, but each, in an orbit, is swimming’ (Ya Sin: 40).

We thus arrive at the cosmic reality that the Lord Glorified is He has established the day does not usurp the night, nor does the night usurp the day, for as we have explained they were created together at the beginning of creation simultaneously, and thereafter each cycles together with the other.

فَإِنِ ٱسۡتَكۡبَرُواْ فَٱلَّذِينَ عِندَ رَبِّكَ يُسَبِّحُونَ لَهُۥ
بِٱلَّيۡلِ وَٱلنَّهَارِ وَهُمۡ لَا يَسۡـَٔمُونَ ۩ ﴿٣٨﴾

If the disbelievers are too arrogant, [remember, Prophet, that] those who are with your Lord glorify Him tirelessly night and day [38] (The Quran, Fussilat: 38)

His saying, 'But if they are arrogant,' that is, too proud to obey Allah's command and prohibition given in the previous verse: 'Do not prostrate to the sun or to the moon, but prostate to Allah, who created them, if it should be Him that you worship' (Fussilat: 37). The concept of being too proud here indicates a lack of belief in Allah, the Commander and the Prohibiter, because they prostrate to the sun and prostrate to the moon as an act of worship, and worship connotes the obedience of a worshipper to the worshipped. But the sun and the moon do not give orders or issue prohibitions, and so to worship them is futile, and indicates only the ignorance of those who worship them and their dishonesty in worshipping them, as they do not reward those who obey them nor punish those who rebel against them.

We have said that the word worship as used here is a misnomer and is false, a delusion; that is, such people only want to have an object of worship to satisfy their desire to be religious, and nothing is simpler than for someone to take as a god that which does not impose any requirements or obligations. For this reason, when they say: 'We worship them for no other reason than that they bring us nearer to Allah' (az-Zumar: 3), we respond: the term 'worship' here is falsely used because you would not seek refuge in any of them but only with Allah: 'And when adversity touches you at sea, lost are [all] those you invoke except for Him' (al-Isra': 67). He says also: 'And when adversity touches the people, they call upon their Lord, turning in repentance to Him' (ar-Rum: 33).

Now His saying: 'But if they are arrogant – then those who are near your Lord exalt Him by night and by day, and they do not become weary' (Fussilat: 38). The meaning here is that the Lord Glorified is He is not in need of the obedience of those who are too proud to worship Him, just as He is not in need of His servants. He Glorified is He has angels that glorify Him, and they do not disobey what Allah commands them and they do as they are told, praising Him day and night without cease; indeed, they have no other work but to praise Him, and never grow weary of it nor bored.

About the word ‘near’ as used here in ‘then those who are near your Lord’, they say that it denotes the ‘nearness of standing’, not that of place. It is the kind of nearness of ennoblement and honour. As He Glorified is He says of the martyrs: ‘And never think of those who have been killed in the cause of Allah as dead. Rather, they are alive near their Lord, receiving provision’ (Al-‘Imran: 169). He Glorified is He says also: ‘Indeed, the righteous will be among gardens and rivers. In a seat of honour near a Sovereign, Perfect in Ability’ (al-Qamar: 54-55).

Now these angels are not with Allah in a single place, nor do they sit with Him, but rather, they are just like us in that they cannot see Allah, and just like us they believe in Him without seeing Him; Allah is invisible to them. Some commentaries hold (and I subscribe to this view) that Allah Glorified is He does not have a (specific) location because He is everywhere, and every place is with Him. For this reason, read the saying of Allah Glorified is He: ‘Then why, when the soul at death reaches the throat. And you are at that time looking on. And Our angels are nearer to him than you, but you do not see’ (al-Waqi‘a: 83-85). Some say that the ‘nearness’ referred to here is that of knowledge. But if this were the case, then He would not have said, ‘but you do not see’. Given that He said so, it refers to an absolute kind of nearness that pervades every place.

وَمِنۡ ءَايَٰتِهِۦٓ أَنَّكَ تَرَى ٱلۡأَرۡضَ خَٰشِعَةٗ فَإِذَآ أَنزَلۡنَا عَلَيۡهَا ٱلۡمَآءَ ٱهۡتَزَّتۡ
وَرَبَتۡۚ إِنَّ ٱلَّذِيٓ أَحۡيَاهَا لَمُحۡيِ ٱلۡمَوۡتَىٰٓۚ إِنَّهُۥ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ قَدِيرٌ ﴿٣٩﴾

Another of His signs is this: you see the earth lying desolate, but when We send water down on to it, it stirs and grows. He who gives it life will certainly give life to the dead. He has power over everything [39] (The Quran, Fussilat: 39)

The Quranic context continues to deal with signs in the universe which prove the Power of the Creator Glorified is He. ‘And of His signs’ used here to indicate items in a larger series, that is, these are some of the signs of Allah in the universe which indicate His Power. These signs being things which are astounding and that point to the marvelousness of their fashioning, 'You see the earth stilled,' that is, fallow and packed down without any growth upon it, for earth was created to provide ground for plants. It is as though earth without any growth upon it is sorrowful and humiliated, quiet and motionless because it has not yielded plants; in this it perhaps resembles a woman who is barren. 'But when We send down upon it rain, it quivers and grows.' It stirs, swells and puffs up. You see a bean, for example, which appears dry and unchanging, but when you sprinkle some water on it swells in size and puffs up. What is meant here is that the ground stirs and moves with the plants growing out of it. 'Indeed, He who has given it life,' that is, He brings this dormant earth to life with plants, changing its terrain to a verdant expanse – 'is the Giver of Life to the dead'. Therefore, take this sensible and visible sign as a proof of what is hidden to you, as through it Allah is informing you of the resurrection of the dead. Those who deny the resurrection of the dead do not understand the lesson of the resurrection of the desolate and barren earth with plants.

'Indeed, He is over all things competent.' Allah's power is absolute, for He Glorified is He is not incapable of anything, and the One Who created everything out of nothing is certainly able to restore it; for to resurrect a dead person is to deal with something that exists, and this is easier – if indeed we may speak of 'easy' and 'easier' with respect to Allah, though we understand what is meant here. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Did We fail in the first creation? But they are in confusion over a new creation' (Qaf: 15).

The Lord Glorified is He informs us how He created man – and the one who built something knows how to destroy it since, as we say, it is the opposite of building. What is first built is destroyed in the end. Now the last thing to happen in building is the first thing to happen in destruction, and here is where spirit comes in.

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يُلۡحِدُونَ فِيٓ ءَايَٰتِنَا لَا يَخۡفَوۡنَ عَلَيۡنَآۗ أَفَمَن يُلۡقَىٰ فِي ٱلنَّارِ خَيۡرٌ أَم مَّن
يَأۡتِيٓ ءَامِنٗا يَوۡمَ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِۚ ٱعۡمَلُواْ مَا شِئۡتُمۡ إِنَّهُۥ بِمَا تَعۡمَلُونَ بَصِيرٌ ٤٠

Those who distort the meaning of Our message are not hidden from Us. Is he who is hurled into the Fire better, or he who comes through safely on the Day of Resurrection? Do whatever you want, God certainly sees everything you do [40]
(The Quran, Fussilat: 40)

They divert the signs of Allah away from their true meaning to a false meaning they themselves think is right, or interpret the signs in accordance with their desires. For the signs of Allah have many meanings, but they distort those meanings. It is in this sense that we hide the dead person underground, someone who used to walk on top of it. So they hide such realities to satisfy their disbelief and their desires.

Part of this act of hiding or distorting Allah’s signs is certain people’s falling into the mistake of over identifying Allah’s Names and Attributes with human attributes. When they understand by one of Allah’s attributes something that exists in human beings, they likened Him to us. But Allah’s hearing is not like our hearing, and His hand is not like our hands, and His sight is not like our sight. Thus, we should not take these attributes as applying generally to all His signs: ‘there is nothing like unto Him’ (ash-Shura: 11).

This includes their saying that Prophet Musa’s (Moses) miracles with Pharaoh were only instances of magic. The difference between a miracle and a magical act is that miracles are actual physical transformations in reality, whereas magic is a visual illusion. It is true that Prophet Musa’s (Moses) miracles appeared to resemble the magicians’ acts, but these miracles were not visual illusions.

When the Pharaoh’s sorcerers’ threw their ropes, Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him saw these ropes as snakes. However, the sorcerers themselves still saw them as ropes. Magic gives you the illusion that a particular item resembles another object, although this illusion is only a figment of your imagination. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...their ropes and staffs seemed to him to be moving rapidly,' (Ta Ha: 66). They were an illusion, and not elements of reality.

When Prophet Musa (Moses) threw down his staff, it was transformed into a real serpent, as Allah says: 'And in his heart, Musa (Moses) became apprehensive,' (Ta Ha: 67). Prophet Musa (Moses) could not have been afraid of his own staff if it had remained a staff. Thus, we know from this that the staff transformed into a real snake and Prophet Musa (Moses) saw it as such. Additionally, Pharaoh's sorcerers, who were experienced in the various magical techniques, were able to distinguish between their magical illusions and the reality of the staff's transformation. That is why they surrendered to Prophet Musa (Moses) and believed in him, after they witnessed his miracle. Had Prophet Musa (Moses) effected an illusion, Allah Glorified is He would not have said to him: 'Said He (Allah), "Take hold of it (the staff), and fear not: We shall restore it to its former state,"' (Ta Ha: 21).

Just as the earlier disbelievers described Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him as a sorcerer, the later disbelievers also described Prophet Muhammad as a magician. Had Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him been a sorcerer who put a spell on those who believed in him, why did he not put a spell on the ones who disbelieved in his message?

The disbelievers tried to distort Allah's signs by claiming that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was possessed. They made these claims although they had never experienced any misconduct from him. Indeed, they knew that he was honest, trustworthy and of noble character. Those who have good morals cannot be possessed. Allah Glorified is He responded to their claims by saying to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'You (O Muhammad) are not, by your Lord's grace, a madman' (al-Qalam: 2).

The disbelievers also tried to distort and hide the true nature of the Quran by claiming that it was formed of poetry. This was a strange claim to come from them because they clearly knew the styles of poetic diction and expression. They also knew that the Quran was inimitable and that it was unlike anything else of that kind. Nevertheless, they denied its true status, and this was their distortion.

Part of the greatness of the noble Quran is its inimitable style and special literary taste. The Prophetic Hadiths had their own literary taste and the Qudsi Hadiths also had a literary flavour of their own. Thus, comparatively, each of these styles gives a different effect than the other styles. Allah Glorified is He responded to the disbelievers' false accusations in the verse in which He says: '…and (the Quran) is not the word of a poet – little do you believe' (al-Haqqa: 41).

One of their malicious methods of disbelief was changing the words of Allah's revelation. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Among those of the Jewish faith there are some who distort the meaning of the (revealed) words, taking them out of their context and saying (as it were,) "We have heard, but we disobey," and "Hear (the revelation) without paying attention," and, "Listen to us (without being heedless) (ra'ina), (O Muhammad)" – thus making a play with their tongues, and implying that the (true) Faith is false,' (an-Nisa': 46).

The Jews of Medina used the word ra'ina when talking to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. This word has two different meanings in the Arabic usage. The first meaning of the word is, 'listen to us,' but this was not the meaning these people intended. The second meaning of the word ra'ina comes from the word ru'oona (heedlessness), and thus, they used it as a play on words to insult the status of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Allah Glorified is He forbade the believers from using this word of disrespect when talking to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. He Glorified is He says in the chapter of al-Baqara: 'O you who have believed! Do not say (to the Prophet), "Listen to us (without being heedless) (ra'ina)," but rather say, "Have patience with us," and listen (to him), since grievous suffering awaits those who deny the truth,' (al-Baqara: 104).

Another form of their distortion of the truth was their manner of greeting Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Instead of saying, 'peace (salam) be upon you,' they used to say, 'death (sam) be upon you.' Therefore, they employed many ways to distort Allah's words. Allah Glorified is He informed us that they had forgotten a portion of what they were taught. Even those of them who did not forget their knowledge actually distorted it, and those who did not change it concealed its reality. Their brazenness against Allah Glorified is He reached such an extent that they dared to fabricate the verses in the scripture with their own hands. Thereafter, they claimed that their fabrications were revelations from Allah Glorified is He. These were their many methods of changing the truth.

Allah Glorified is He informed us that: ‘Verily, they who distort the meaning of Our messages are not hidden from Us,’ (Fussilat: 40). Indeed, the literal meaning of this verse, which is that they are not hidden from Allah’s encompassing knowledge, is a commonly known concept. However, this verse has an additional meaning. Allah Glorified is He revealed the previous verses to inform these disbelievers of their crime before punishing them and taking them to task for it. This is because a crime and its punishment are two distinct entities. The legists say that a crime should be defined before its punishment can be rightful and that there is no crime without a prior legal text.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Hence, which (of the two) will be in a better state – he that is (destined to be) cast into the fire, or he that shall come secure (before Us) on Resurrection Day?’ (Fussilat: 40) Allah Glorified is He knows that our answer to this question will be as He wishes, and that all sane people will want security on the Day of Resurrection. Through this question, Allah Glorified is He is ordering us to strive in carrying out His commands, and to avoid those actions which are forbidden. This is the path of safety and salvation from the hellfire.

The previous verses discussed how the disbelievers tried to distort Allah’s words. Then, this question was posed to signify that anyone who distorts the verses of Allah Glorified is He will be cast in the fire on the Day of Resurrection. On the other hand, those who believe in Allah’s verses will be granted a safe return. Indeed, after this comparison, it is a form of sheer idiocy for a person to disbelieve in Allah’s words in order to achieve temporary power or a transitory status in this world, after which they will find an agonizing fate in an eternal fire.

A person may be enjoying the greatest levels of luxury in this life, in the form of extended wealth or extreme power, authority and dignity. However, a major factor that disturbs their enjoyment of these luxuries is that these pleasures will not last. Indeed, wealth and power may desert them while they are still alive, or they may themselves die and leave the world itself behind them.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him informed us of the eternal fate of those disbelievers who enjoy their temporary luxuries in this life. He said: 'One of them (the disbelievers) will be dipped a single time in the fire. The angels will ask him, "Did you ever see luxury in the previous world?" He will reply, "No, by Allah Glorified is He I never saw any luxury there!" '(1)

No sane person would choose to abandon an eternal and everlasting pleasure in the Hereafter for an adulterated and transitory pleasure in this world. You experience pleasure in this world based on the extent of your own abilities and capacities, but in the Hereafter, you will experience pleasure in accordance with Allah's power and generosity. The garden will contain things which no eye has seen, nor ear heard of, nor has occurred to the mind of man.

We are thus confronted with two very contrasting options, and although the correct choice is clear, we are still free to choose for ourselves. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Do what you will: verily, He sees all that you do' (Fussilat: 40). Here, Allah warned us and provided a caution for the people. They can do what they please in this world, but Allah Glorified is He sees them and observes all their actions. Afterwards, He is able to reward or punish them accordingly. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

(1) Anas ibn Malik narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him said: 'On the Day of Resurrection, the most opulent individual from among the disbelievers will be brought forward, and it will be said, "Dip him in the fire a single time." He is dipped in the fire, and then asked, "Have you ever experienced any luxury?" He will say, "No, I never experienced pleasure." And a believer who suffered the most pain and harm will be brought forward, and it will be said, "Dip him in paradise a single time." He is dipped in paradise, and then asked, "Have you ever experienced pain or harm?" He will say, "I never experienced pain or harm."' This Hadith was narrated by Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (Hadith 4312).

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ بِٱلذِّكْرِ لَمَّا جَآءَهُمْ ۖ وَإِنَّهُۥ لَكِتَٰبٌ عَزِيزٌ ﴿٤١﴾ لَّا يَأْتِيهِ
ٱلْبَٰطِلُ مِنۢ بَيْنِ يَدَيْهِ وَلَا مِنْ خَلْفِهِۦ ۖ تَنزِيلٌ مِّنْ حَكِيمٍ حَمِيدٍ ﴿٤٢﴾

Those who reject the Quran when it comes to them – though it is an unassailable Scripture [41] which falsehood cannot touch from any angle, a Revelation sent down from the Wise One, Worthy of All Praise [42] (The Quran, Fussilat: 41 - 42)

The literal meaning of the word kafaru (disbelieved) means 'those who covered'. These disbelievers have covered their belief in the Necessary Existent Deity. A cover implies that something has been concealed. In this case, the concept that these people have concealed is the concept of faith in Allah Glorified is He. This means that belief in Allah Glorified is He is an innate concept in the minds of people, while disbelief is an emergent fabrication that conceals the true nature of the pure heart. Therefore, in this regard, the lexical connotation of the word kufr (disbelief) is a reference to the truth of faith in Allah Glorified is He.

The word 'reminder (dhikr)' is a reference to the Quran which was revealed to Prophet Muhammad's heart. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Behold, it is We Ourselves who have revealed, step by step, this reminder (dhikr): and, behold, it is We who shall truly guard it (from all corruption)' (al-Hijr: 9). The word dhikr is also used to describe the previous scriptures that were revealed before the Quran. Allah Glorified is He says: '...and if you have not (yet) realised this, ask the followers of the (earlier) reminder (dhikr)' (an-Nahl: 43).

Allah Glorified is He also says: 'and, indeed, We vouchsafed (Our revelation) unto Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) (as) the standard by which to discern the truth from the falsehood, and as a (guiding) light and a reminder for the pious (people),' (al-Anbiya': 48). The word dhikr (reminder) also connotes reputation and high standing. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And, verily, this (revelation) shall indeed become a reminder for you and your people' (az-Zukhruf: 44). He also says: '(O men!) We have now bestowed upon you a Divine book containing all that you ought to bear in mind (in remembrance for you (dhikrukum))' (al-Anbiya': 10).

The word dhikr also applies to the praise of Allah Glorified is He as Allah says: ‘By means of intoxicants and games of chance (gambling), Satan (Iblis) seeks only to sow enmity and hatred among you, and to turn you away from the remembrance (dhikr) of Allah and from Prayer’ (al-Ma‘ida: 91). The word dhikr is also used to mean our remembrance of Allah Glorified is He through our obedience, and the remembrance of Allah’s graces and forgiveness to His servants, as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘So remember Me, and I shall remember you’ (al-Baqara: 152).

Allah Glorified is He described the Quran by saying: ‘...for, behold, it is a sublime ('aziz) book’ (Fussilat: 41). The word 'aziz (sublime) has a number of meanings. The first meaning is ‘a valuable rare object.’ The second meaning is ‘a person who has absolute authority, and who cannot be vanquished.’ For instance, the second meaning can be found in Allah’s words: ‘…for Allah is Almighty ('Aziz), an avenger of evil’ (Al-‘Imran: 4).

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He described the Quran as being a victorious and a supreme book that takes hold of hearts and achieves dominance over them. This refutes the hopes of the disbelievers who say:(1) ‘Do not listen to this Quran, but rather talk frivolously about it, so that you might gain the upper hand’ (Fussilat: 26). Indeed, those who listen to the words of the Quran with pure hearts and a tender sensitivity will necessarily be amazed by it.

We have seen this effect in the story(2) of our master ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him. He was one of the staunchest opponents of Islam until the day in which he learned that his sister and her husband(3) had become Muslims. He immediately went to her house and beat her until blood ran down her face. It was this blood that induced tenderness in his heart, and this newfound tenderness overcame his ignorance. He started listening to her recitation of the

(1) That is, the disbelievers of Mecca. Abu Jahl said, ‘When Muhammad reads (the Quran), shout in his face to make him lose his place.’ (Tafsir Al-Qurtubi, 9/6021)

(2) The story of ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab’s conversion to Islam

(3) Her husband was Khabbab ibn Al-Aratt ibn Jandala ibn Sa‘d, from the Tamim tribe, known as Abu Yahya At-Tamimi. He is one of his esteemed earlier companions, and he participated in Badr. It is said that he died during the caliphate of ‘Umar Allah be pleased with them who performed his funeral prayer. However, he actually died in Kufa in 37 A.H. and ‘Ali performed his funeral prayer. It is also said that he lived 73 years [Az-Zirikli, (Al-A‘lam), 2/323].

Quran, but this time, he heard the verses with a pure heart-felt attitude. This had an overwhelming effect on him, and he embraced Islam that day.

Therefore, the Quran is a powerful and victorious book. That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him once said, ‘This religion is strong. So, pursue it ardently but with gentleness, for the traveller who pushes his camel beyond its capacity, in his haste to arrive to his destination, will not reach his destination nor will he keep his camel (healthy and alive).’(1) He also said, ‘Anyone who shall pull vehemently upon this religion will be vanquished.’(2)

If you want to make a choice between two options, you must allow your mind to be clear and your heart to be devoid of whims. Then, you should make the choice with a balanced logical approach. If you feel relieved with one of these options, then pursue it. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Never has Allah endowed any man with two hearts in one body’ (al-Ahzab: 4). Therefore, if ‘Umar had evil in his heart, he would not have approached faith and good deeds. Thus, it is necessary to primarily expel evil from our hearts before it accepts the good, as the evil will prevent the reception of the good.

Allah Glorified is He described how the hypocrites and disbelievers received the Quran. He says: ‘now among those (hapless sinners) are those who (pretend to) listen to you, (O Muhammad,) and then, as soon as they leave your presence, say (with scorn) to those who have knowledge (of your message): “what is it that he has said just now?” ’ (Muhammad: 16) They are not affected by the Quran and do not understand it, due to their pride and obstinacy. Allah Glorified is He replied to them by saying, ‘Say: it is a guidance and a source of health to the believers; but as for those who will not believe – in their ears is deafness, and so it remains obscure to them' (Fussilat: 44).

(1) Given by Al-Bayhaqi in his Sunnan Al-Kubra [3/18] from narration of Jabir ibn ‘Abdullah that Prophet Muhammad said, ‘This religion is strong... So, pursue it ardently but with gentleness, and do not make the worship of Allah Glorified is He hated by yourself. The traveller who pushes his mount beyond its capacity, in his haste to arrive to his destination, will not reach his destination, or keep his mount.’ Al-Bayhaqi also narrates it in the section on the people of faith [3728] from the narration of ‘Aisha, and [3729] from the narration of ‘Abdullah ibn ‘Amr ibn Al-‘As.

(2) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [38] from the narration of Abu Hurayra that Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him said, ’This religion is that of ease, and anyone who shall pull vehemently upon this religion will be vanquished; therefore focus on your goal, draw near and rejoice.’ It was also narrated by An-Nasa’i in his Sunnan [4948].

Indeed, the same Quran has different effects according to the receptive ability of the listener. It is a book of guidance and healing to the believers, but the people of disbelief and hypocrisy will be blinded by its truth. Allah Glorified is He wanted us to choose logically and fairly between the two options presented in the verse. If fairness is employed in this judgement, the Quran will necessarily triumph, as nothing can compete or contest with it if it is properly received. At that point, a healthy sentiment can easily comprehend what the mind cannot understand. For this reason, we said that the influence of the Most Merciful cannot be deflected by the influence of Satan (Iblis). The mother of Prophet Musa (Moses) did not protest against the message of the Most Merciful when He said to her: '…and then, when you have cause to fear for him (Musa), cast him into the river, and have no fear and do not grieve...' (al-Qasas: 7). Pure reason does not comprehend this action, but a pure instinct can accept it. Thus, those who hear the Quran but are not affected by it are occupied with concepts that oppose its healthy reception.

Therefore, we are in need of justice in order to make our free choices, just as we are in need of protection and security after we make the choice. Some people claim that Islam spread with the sword, but this is not true because in the history of Islam, the sword was not used to impose a dogma, but rather to protect the peoples' freedom of choice. It also protected the freedom of the religion to proclaim itself. Freedom of belief is an obligation in Islam, and this was evident as many people remained as disbelievers in Muslim territories. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Let, then, him who wills, believe in it, and let him who wills, reject it' (al-Kahf: 29).

Islam's launching point was the concept of freedom of belief. It has made the choice of religion a personal choice. Some people have used the issue of the legally prescribed punishment against apostasy(1) in their attempts to defame Allah's religion. They claimed that Islam is at odds with the freedom of belief and forces people to accept it. However, this is a false accusation. Those who consider the matter more closely will find that Islam declares, to any person thinking of embracing Islam, that apostasy is punished in this way. Thus, anyone who wants to embrace Islam should think and contemplate their choice carefully before announcing it because the legally prescribed punishment will be executed if they publicly denounce it later. So, in fact, this ruling aims to place obstacles in the path of a disbeliever wanting to embrace Islam, as Islam wants their conviction to be solid and firmly established in their hearts before they embrace it. Thus the penalty of execution for apostasy does not interfere with their right of free choice. It only warns them to avoid embracing this religion before adherently and sincerely acknowledging it as the truth.

(1) Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him said: 'Execute whoever changes his religion.' This Hadith was narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [2794, 6411], Abu Dawud in his Sunnan [3787] and At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [1378]. At-Tirmidhi mentioned it as a sound narration and this ruling is issued by the scholars regarding=

Allah Glorified is He says: 'No falsehood can ever attain to it openly, and neither in a stealthy manner' (Fussilat: 42). This means that no falsehood will ever overcome it from any direction. For instance, some orientalists made the preposterous attempt to seek out what they thought were defects in the Quranic verses. They pointed out the similarity between two verses in the Quran. Allah Glorified is He says in the first: '...and do not kill your children due to poverty – (for) it is We who shall provide sustenance for you as well as for them...,' (al-An'am: 151) and then He says in another verse: 'Hence, do not kill your children for fear of poverty: it is We who shall provide sustenance for them as well as for you...' (al-Isra': 31).

Some orientalists observed this repetition in the two verses, and claimed that if one of them is eloquent, then the other one cannot be so. They considered that one of the two verses is futile. Unfortunately, these orientalists did not have the basic faculty that would help them to understand the words of Allah Glorified is He and receive His Gift properly. Were they to observe the context surrounding each of the two verses, they would have found that each verse is particularly suitable to its context. Each verse is eloquent in expressing the issue it is discussing.

---

= apostates. Likewise, it was narrated by An-Nasa'i in his Sunnan [3991, 3992, 3993, 3994, 3995], Ibn Majah in his Sunnan [2526] and Ahmad in his Musnad [1775, 2420, 2421, 2813, 21007]. This narration is sound, and the majority opinion is that the apostate is to be asked to repent over a period of three days, and some hold the opinion that he is given a period of a month, to give him ample opportunity to contemplate his choice. Therefore, each apostate has his specific state upon which basis he is to be judged.

In the first verse, Allah Glorified is He says: '...and do not kill your children due to poverty – (for) it is We who shall provide sustenance for you as well as for them' (al-An'am: 151). The person this verse is talking to is a person living in poverty, and so, is occupied with supporting himself before thinking about supporting his children. It is for this reason that the verse ended with Allah's statement, '...it is We who shall provide sustenance for you as well as for them' (al-An'am: 151).

As for the second verse, Allah Glorified is He uses the term: '...for fear of poverty,' (al-Isra': 31) instead of the phrase, 'due to poverty.' This second verse is directed to a person who is not afflicted by poverty, but they fear that it will afflict them when a child comes in their lives. Thus, Allah Glorified is He reassures this person that the child will come along with its appointed sustenance. Allah Glorified is He says: '...it is We who shall provide sustenance for them as well as for you' (al-Isra': 31). Therefore, every verse is eloquent in its proper place.

Likewise, these orientalists pointed out the similarity between two verses in the chapter of al-Baqara. Allah Glorified is He says in the first verse: 'And remain conscious of (the coming of) a Day when no human being shall in the least avail another, nor shall intercession be accepted from any of them, nor ransom be taken from them, and none shall be succoured' (al-Baqara: 48). Then, in another part of the chapter, Allah Glorified is He says in an apparently similar verse: 'And remain conscious of (the coming of) a Day when no human being shall in the least avail another, nor shall ransom be accepted from any of them, nor shall intercession be of any use to them, and none shall be succoured' (al-Baqara: 123).

A hasty glance will not detect a great difference between the two verses, but people with a higher linguistic ability who consider their meanings more closely will be able to observe the difference. Each verse is describing a different type of soul on the Day of Judgment. The first verse is speaking of a righteous soul that has the ability to intercede for the souls of sinners. On the other hand, the second verse is describing the soul of the sinner waiting for a righteous person's intercession in order to avail itself.

On the Day of Judgment, the soul of the sinner will acknowledge its crimes and offer a ransom to escape the punishment. However, the verse mentions that a ransom will not be accepted on that day. Therefore, the sinner will search for a better soul to intercede on its behalf, after the ransom has been refused.

The better soul that will try to intercede for the sinner and will stand before Allah Glorified is He and say: 'O Lord. I intercede for this sinner. If my intercession is not accepted, then take the ransom from me.' Therefore, each verse is eloquent in its proper place.

Unfortunately, some people do not understand what Allah Glorified is He intended in His Revelation and do not receive His Words with a good heart. In fact, they accuse the Quran of having faults and say, 'We do not understand the verses that your Lord said.' Indeed, He is our Lord, praise be to Allah Glorified is He and we wish that they see Him as their Lord as well.

Another verse they point out is the verse in which Allah Glorified is He says: 'They aim to extinguish Allah's light with their utterances: but Allah has willed to spread His light in all its fullness, however hateful this may be to all who deny the truth' (as-Saff: 8). The orientalists rejected this verse because they said that Islam did not prevail over all religions, as after fourteen centuries there are still Jews, Christians, atheists and adherents of other religions in the world. This statement also indicates their lack of comprehension of the holy Quran's methods and meanings.

The verse: '...that He (Allah will) make it prevail over all (false) religions,' (as-Saff: 9) does not mean that all the people will become Muslims because the word 'prevail' here is only referring to the strength of the Islamic argument over all the other religions. So, in this verse, Allah Glorified is He was declaring the power of His Revelation's argument, after which the people have the freedom to believe or deny the truth.

Additionally, if the person who rejected this verse read the Quran with some insight, they would have noticed that the precise Quranic words actually pointed out that the other religions of polytheism and disbelief will continue to exist in the presence of Islam. Allah Glorified is He says that the Islamic argument will prevail: '...however hateful the polytheists may be' (as-Saff: 9) and '...however hateful the disbelievers may be' (as-Saff: 8). Therefore, these two classes of disbelievers will still be present alongside the believers in Islam.(1)

Islam may even prevail over the other religions through the widespread acceptance of its judgements and rulings even if those who accept these rulings are not Muslims. Their life circumstances may compel them to take refuge in the rulings of Islam to find solutions for their problems. This is another great way in which Islam will prevail.

For instance, the Vatican used, for a long time, to reject the possibility of divorce, and divorce is a concept that Islam put forward as a lawful solution to marital problems. However, with the passage of time and the multitude of problems they encountered, the Vatican was forced to accept this approach as a solution to their issues as well. Thus, they adopted the ruling of Islam even though they were not Muslims. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He speaks truthfully when He says: '...Had it been issued from any source but Allah, they would surely have found in it many an inner contradiction' (an-Nisa': 82).

These and other verses indicate the integrity of the words of Allah Glorified is He and that they are not afflicted with falsehood or contradiction, as Allah Glorified is He says: 'No falsehood can ever attain to it openly, and neither in a stealthy manner,' (Fussilat: 42) for falsehood can only occur if the speaker is not truthful, and who is more truthful than Allah Glorified is He the One Who revealed the Quran.

Allah Glorified is He then says: '...(since it is) sent down by the One Who is truly wise (hakim), and the One Who is ever to be praised (hamid)' (Fussilat: 42). The Arabic adjectives hakim (wise) and hamid (ever to be praised) indicate the intensified forms of wisdom and praise. Wisdom entails the placement of effort in its proper place, and praise means that Allah Glorified is He is praised for all of His Acts, Decrees, and Power. The phrase, 'Praise be to Allah Glorified is He' combines all of these meanings together. Allah Glorified is He says: 'All praise is due to Allah alone, The Lord of all the worlds' (al-Fatiha: 2).

(1) Islam will not eradicate them, and they will not all become Muslims.

We previously said that part of Allah's mercy toward us is that He taught us the form in which we are to praise Him for His Favours towards us. This praise is lexically formed of a subject and a predicate: 'Praise is to Allah.' If Allah Glorified is He did not set down for His servants the form in which they are to glorify Him, they would differ as to the correct way to do so, and people would contend in this matter. The articulate litterateur would then praise Allah Glorified is He in a way of which an illiterate person or a simple shepherd would be incapable. Had the matter been left to the differing aptitudes of people, there would not have been any sort of equivalence in people's praising of Allah Glorified is He.

Therefore, it is from His Mercy to us that He has commanded us, to raise our hands and praise Him in this manner. He has prescribed this for us so that all people will praise and glorify Him in an equivalent way. Everyone is to utter the same phrase: 'All praise is due to Allah alone.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him taught us to praise Allah Glorified is He with the following saying, 'Glory be to You (Allah)! We cannot count your blessings. You are as You have praised Yourself.'(1)

It is incumbent upon the one who has been taught and guided to the correct manner of praising Allah Glorified is He using the phrase, 'All praise is due to Allah alone,' to praise Him in this way without fail. In this way, the servant will keep praising his Lord countless times.

Then, in the verse we are studying, Allah used the word '…sent down (tanzil)' (Fussilat: 42). When you hear the word tanzil (sending down), you should understand that it refers to an object sent down from above, even if that term refers to material objects descending upon the earth. For instance, Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of al-Hadid: '...and We sent down (upon you) iron, in which there is awesome power as well as (a source of) benefits for man' (al-Hadid: 25). Thus, even though iron is extracted from the ground, Allah Glorified is He told us that He sent it down from the skies, for the service of mankind upon the earth.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad ibn Hanbal in his Musnad [6/58, 120], and likewise Muslim in his Sahih [486], from a Hadith of 'A'isha Allah be pleased with her who said, 'One night I noticed the absence of the Messenger of Allah from the bed, so I went to look for him until my foot came into contact with the soles of his feet. He was praying in the mosque and his feet were propped up. He was saying, "O Allah, I take refuge from Your Wrath in Your Good Pleasure, and from Your Punishment in Your Forgiveness; I take refuge from You in You. I cannot recount Your Praise, You are as You have praised Yourself.'"

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

مَّا يُقَالُ لَكَ إِلَّا مَا قَدْ قِيلَ لِلرُّسُلِ مِن قَبْلِكَۚ إِنَّ رَبَّكَ لَذُو
مَغْفِرَةٍ وَذُو عِقَابٍ أَلِيمٍ ﴿٤٣﴾

[should remember that] you [Prophet] are not told anything that the previous messengers were not told:
your Lord is a Lord of forgiveness, but also of painful punishment [43] (The Quran, Fussilat: 43)

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He consoled His Messenger, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and lightened his sorrows. These sorrows were the result of the polytheists' denial of the truth and their resistance to Allah's revelation. Allah Glorified is He told Prophet Muhammad that he was the master of all the messengers, and that all the messengers before him had encountered trouble and harm. If the level of harm were to correspond to the level of the messenger in Allah's sight, then indeed, the people's attacks on Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would simply be more severe than the attacks suffered by the previous messengers.

Now, the phrase, '…nothing is being said to you,' in this verse could have one of two meanings.

The first meaning of this phrase is that no new words of consolation were said to Prophet Muhammad. This is because similar consolations were also revealed to the messengers before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to be patient in the face of the adversaries and harm directed by the disbelievers. Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: 'For, long ago has Our word gone forth unto Our servants, the message-bearers, that, verily, they would be succoured, and that, verily, Our hosts would (in the end) be victorious!' (as-Saffat: 171-73) Since Prophet Muhammad was one of those messengers, therefore, in this verse, Allah Glorified is He sent him glad tidings of timely victory with his army and followers.

The second meaning of this phrase could be that no new words of disbelief were uttered by the enemies and opponents of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as they were only repeating what the previous disbelievers had said to their messengers. In other words, this was also an order directed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him not to be discouraged by the disbelievers' actions, for this is the customary attitude of disbelievers towards those who deliver Allah's messages to them. According to this meaning, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was being told not to bear a burden that is heavier than his mere responsibility of delivering the message, irrespective of the consequences.

Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: 'and whether We show you (in this world) something of what We hold in store for those (deniers of the truth), or whether We cause you to die (before that retribution takes place – know that, in the end), it is unto Us that they will be brought back' (Ghafir: 77).

Another cause of sorrow in Prophet Muhammad's heart was that he had tasted the sweetness of belief in Allah Glorified is He and he wanted the same blessing for everyone. He wanted to guide all the people to Allah's way without failure. For this reason, he used to push himself beyond the limits of his obligation, and his Lord often blamed him for doing so in the way one might blame his beloved. Allah blamed him for overburdening himself in the following verse: 'But (why) would you (Muhammad), perhaps, torment yourself to death with grief over them if they are not willing to believe in this message?' (al-Kahf: 6) Allah Glorified is He also says to him: '...but no more is an apostle bound to do than clearly deliver the message (entrusted to him)' (al-'Ankabut: 18).

We often find that the Noble Quran has stories of the previous prophets and messengers to reassure Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of the strength of his message and to lighten his burden.

For instance, Allah told him the story of Prophet Nuh (Noah), who called his people to Allah Glorified is He over the course of nearly 950 years. Yet, only a small number of people believed in him. Allah Glorified is He says: '(And after a time, Nuh (Noah) said, "O my Lord! Verily, I have been calling unto my people night and day, but my call has only caused them to flee farther and farther away (from You). And, behold, whenever I called unto them with a view to You granting them forgiveness, they put their fingers into their ears, and wrapped themselves up in their garments (of sin), and grew obstinate, and became (yet more) arrogant in their false pride"' (Nuh: 5-7).

Prophet Nuh's (Noah) saying, '..."they put their fingers into their ears,"…' (Nuh: 7) is lexically meant to emphasise the strength of their rejection and indicate that they went to full lengths to stop their ears from hearing his call. They did not simply want to put their fingertips into their ears, but figuratively wanted to use their whole fingers to block the delivery of the message. Furthermore, they '..."wrapped themselves up in their garments"' (Nuh: 7). This means that they covered their faces with them, thereby blocking every aperture of comprehension and understanding, as though they did not want to hear or even see the truth. Thus, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was also told to be patient, as he was not the first to experience either this trouble or this kind of obstinacy and rejection.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'Behold, your Lord is indeed full of forgiveness – but He has also the power to punish (the disbelievers) most grievously' (Fussilat: 43). Upon contemplation, this statement appears to be a 'diplomatic statement'. The scholars call this a statement combining an incentive with a punishment. Here, Allah Glorified is He mentions the different states of those who opposed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and so addresses them in a manner appropriate to any of their possible reactions. For those who return to Allah Glorified is He and to the Straight Path, the gate of repentance is always open, but for those who persist in their opposition, Allah Glorified is He has the power to punish them severely.

You can observe that the promise of forgiveness in this verse preceded the threat of punishment. Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He promises those who truly believe that He will forgive their sins and even graciously give them good deeds instead of their evil deeds. This is as an expression of His Graciousness and Magnanimity, as though Allah Glorified is He is trying to put His servants at ease even though He is in no need of them.

The history of Islam is full of people who viewed Islam and its call with hostility and opposed Prophet Muhammad and the believers with him. They were indeed its grimmest of enemies at one point, but then, subsequently, they became its partisans and supporters and gave their lives to the way of Allah.

Had the door been shut in their faces, such individuals would never have embraced Allah's religion. This has occurred in the famous stories of the conversion of ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab, Hamza, ‘Ikrima ibn Abu Jahl, Khalid ibn Al-Walid and ‘Amr ibn Al-‘As Allah be pleased with all of them as well as others who were champions of disbelief.

The Quran even justly described the Jews and Christians who upheld Allah's Commandments and considered them a part of their religion, instead of a mere temporal authority. Allah Glorified is He says about the righteous people of the Book: ‘And among the followers of earlier revelations there are people who, if you entrust one of them with a treasure, will (faithfully) restore it to you; and there are among them many who, if you entrust them with a tiny gold coin, will not restore it to you unless you keep standing over them’ (Al-‘Imran: 75).

The Quran then told Prophet Muhammad that certain disbelievers will never be guided to the true faith, even though they were still in the expanse of this world and in their period of free choice. These people did remain in their disbelief refusing to pay the slightest testimonies to this religion, even if hypocritically to distort the Quranic truth.

These people included Abu Lahab, the uncle of Prophet Muhammad, who used to walk behind the Messenger of Allah and falsely describe him as a liar. Allah Glorified is He therefore passed His Judgement against him that he will die in his disbelief, and that his fate will be the hellfire (we take refuge with Allah Glorified is He from it). The following chapter was revealed about him: ‘Doomed are the hands of Abu Lahab, and doomed is he! What will his wealth avail him, and that entire he has gained? (In the life to come) he shall have to endure a fire fiercely glowing, together with his wife, that carrier of evil tales, (who bears) around her neck a rope of twisted strands!’ (al-Masad: 1-5).

Abu Lahab heard about the revelation of this chapter. It was within his power to stand in front of the people's assembly and proclaim with a hypocritical loud voice, ‘I testify that there is no deity but Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah,’ if he wanted to prove the chapter as false. However, he did not do so because Allah Glorified is He had passed the judgement against him that he would never testify to faith.

Allah Glorified is He is thus '...full of forgiveness...' (Fussilat: 43) for every disbeliever, denier and opponent who returns to the right path and repents. However, He also has '...the power to punish most grievously' (Fussilat: 43) those who persist in their disbelief, opposition and hostility to the call of Allah Glorified is He.

It is obvious that the juxtaposition of a meaning with its opposite in one place is one of the features of the Quranic style because referring to opposites clarifies each term in the pair. All things are distinguished by their opposites. Therefore, your Lord informed you of the gravity of the situation and left it up to you to choose for yourself, whether to opt for forgiveness or look forward for punishment, Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَوْ جَعَلْنَٰهُ قُرْءَانًا أَعْجَمِيًّا لَّقَالُوا۟ لَوْلَا فُصِّلَتْ ءَايَٰتُهُۥٓ ۖ ءَا۬عْجَمِىٌّ وَعَرَبِىٌّ ۗ قُلْ هُوَ
لِلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ هُدًى وَشِفَآءٌ ۖ وَٱلَّذِينَ لَا يُؤْمِنُونَ فِىٓ ءَاذَانِهِمْ وَقْرٌ
وَهُوَ عَلَيْهِمْ عَمًى ۚ أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ يُنَادَوْنَ مِن مَّكَانٍۭ بَعِيدٍ ﴿٤٤﴾

If We had made it a foreign Quran, they would have said, 'If only its verses were clear! What? Foreign speech to an Arab?' Say, 'It is guidance and healing for those who have faith, but the ears of the disbelievers are heavy, they are blind to it, it is as if they are being called from a distant place' [44] (The Quran, Fussilat: 44)

Allah Glorified is He started this verse with the words: 'If We had willed this (Divine book)…' (Fussilat: 44). This Divine book is the Quran which is called as such because it is meant to be read, as Qara'a is the Arabic word for 'read'. Then Allah Glorified is He continued: if He had '(willed this Divine book) to be a discourse in a non-Arabic tongue ('Ajamiyun)' (Fussilat: 44), '...they (who now reject it) would surely have said, "Why is it that its messages have not been spelled out clearly?"' (Fussilat: 44) The disbelievers would have still wondered about it and asked, 'Why was it not revealed in Arabic?' For instance, the Taurat (Torah) was revealed in Hebrew, which is the language and origin of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. Some of the disbelievers asked why the Quran was not in the Hebrew language, like the Taurat (Torah). The answer was that Prophet Muhammad was an Arab by origin and by language. Therefore, it was fitting for the Quran to be revealed to him in his people's language. In this verse, Allah Glorified is He made it clear that had the Quran been revealed in a non-Arabic language, they would have demanded and wished it to be in Arabic.

Additionally, aside from the language in which it was revealed, the Quran is in its essence a guidance and a source of health, as Allah Glorified is He described it: 'Say (O Muhammad): "This (Divine book) is a guidance and a source of health to all who have believed; but as for those who will not believe – in their ears is deafness" ' (Fussilat: 44). That is, the ears of those who do not believe in it are impaired, and so, they cannot hear what is beneficial and fruitful for them. '…and so it remains obscure to them' (Fussilat: 44). To them, the Quran is a dark and suspicious text in which they become lost.

Thus, the Quran is one, but the fruits of its reading vary, for the way the Quran is received varies according to the intention of the one who receives it. The one who listens to it with a conscious ear and a pure unbiased heart, unoccupied by its opposing concepts, will find in it guidance and a source of health.

On the other hand, those who are blind to its truth will be lost, not knowing where they are headed. This person reads or hears the Quran without understanding it and without becoming affected by it. Allah Glorified is He described these people in another verse: 'now among those (hapless sinners) are those who (pretend to) listen to you, (O Muhammad,) and then, as soon as they leave your presence, say (with scorn) to those who have knowledge (of your message): "what is it that he has said just now?'' ' (Muhammad: 16)

We have previously explained the idea of the active subject and the object. When the active subject does an action, the object will become affected by the actions in accordance with its nature. For example, the difference between a peasant striking the soil with an axe, and striking a rock with the same axe, is that the soil becomes affected by the axe and gives its fruits, whereas the hardened rock does not comply with the active axe and does not become affected by it.

Therefore, do not make judgments regarding the active subject except after looking at the receiving object. You have to observe this interaction between both elements. We previously gave an example concerning a cup of hot tea. Blowing air upon the hot cup cools it down, whereas if you are in a freezing cold environment, blowing air upon your hands will warm them. Thus, the act of blowing air is one, but the effect is different because of the difference between the objects.

Allah Glorified is He says about the inattentive disbelievers: '…and so it (the Quranic message) remains obscure to them: they are (like people who are) being called from a distant place' (Fussilat: 44). They have heard the Quran and have not been affected by it, and so Allah Glorified is He compared them to a person being called from a distant place and so cannot hear the call clearly, Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَقَدْ ءَاتَيْنَا مُوسَى ٱلْكِتَٰبَ فَٱخْتُلِفَ فِيهِ ۗ وَلَوْلَا كَلِمَةٌ سَبَقَتْ
مِن رَّبِّكَ لَقُضِىَ بَيْنَهُمْ ۚ وَإِنَّهُمْ لَفِى شَكٍّ مِّنْهُ مُرِيبٍ ﴿٤٥﴾

We gave the Scripture to Moses but disputes arose about it – if it were not for a decree that had already been issued from your Lord, they would already have been judged – and still they are doubtful and suspicious of it [45] (The Quran, Fussilat: 45)

This verse narrated to Prophet Muhammad the events that occurred to the revelation bestowed upon Prophet Musa (Moses). This verse is still describing what has been mentioned in a previous verse as, '…nothing is being said to you but what was said to all (of Allah's) apostles before your time,' (Fussilat: 43).

Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was among those prophets who endured his people's cruelty and obstinacy. His story is thus a consolation for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'Thus, too, have We previously bestowed revelation upon Musa (Moses),' (Fussilat: 45). This previous revelation was the Taurat (Torah), '...and thereupon disputes arose about it,' (Fussilat: 45). This means that the people disagreed upon the message of Prophet Musa (Moses). Some of them altered it, while others forgot parts of it. Some of them even wrote parts of it by themselves, claiming that these verses had been sent by Allah Glorified is He.

‘Had it not been for a decree that had already gone forth from your Lord’ (Fussilat: 45). This Divine decree and decision refers to the eradicating punishment that annihilated some previous nations of disbelievers such as the extermination of the people of ‘Ad and Thamud, as well as the people of Prophet Nuh (Noah) and the people of Prophet Lut (Lot). Allah’s Decree was different for the following nations, as He did not subject their disbelievers to such tortures in this world, leaving their punishment until the Day of Resurrection. ‘Had it not been for a decree that had already gone forth from your Lord, all would indeed have been decided between them (from the outset)’ (Fussilat: 45). Were it not for this different decree, Allah Glorified is He would not have given them time until the Hereafter. He would have punished them in this world from the outset of their disbelief, just as He has done with the preceding nations who called their Prophets liars.

Allah Glorified is He then described the people of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as being in: ‘...grave doubt, amounting to suspicion, about what it (the message) entails’ (Fussilat: 45). This means that their indecision made them worried and uncertain.

Doubt is one of several ways of dealing with occurrences and events. The first of these ways is the way of knowledge. This is when you have certitude about the event and are able to bring evidence in support of it.

The second way is relying upon another person’s authority, or emulating that person. This is when you know that an event happened in reality and are convinced by it, but you are unable to bring an argument to support it. This is like the case of small children who are taught by their parents that Allah Glorified is He is one. The children will emulate and believe that concept not because they understand it, but because they trust their parents or teachers, knowing that their parents wish them good. The parent, however, is unable to bring an argument that would prove the Oneness of Allah Glorified is He to the immature mind of the child. Therefore, in this case, the child will be emulating the parent or teacher.

The third scenario is the case of ignorance. This is when a person falsely believes that an event has occurred. Thus, the event did not coincide with reality, but that person is wrongly convinced that it is true. That is why we previously pointed out that it is more difficult to teach an ignorant person than an unaware illiterate person. This is because an ignorant person believes in something which is untrue, and may require an increased effort to correct their thoughts. Firstly, we need to free their minds from the wrong information, and secondly, we still need to teach them the truth of the matter. On the other hand, an unaware illiterate person has an open and a free mind that does not defend any positions. That is why you will find them obedient, and able to accept much of what is taught to them without wrongful disputes.

The fourth and final scenario is that of doubt, which is when you have a real case in which your belief equals your disbelief, leaving you undecided. When your confidence and conviction prevail, this is called a suspicion, but when doubt prevails over certainty, this is known as a delusion.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘As it is, behold, they (who will not believe in this Divine book) are in grave doubt, amounting to suspicion, about what it entails’ (Fussilat: 45). This means that they have not reached the degree of faith, or the degree of relying on authority, or the degree of ignorance. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

مَّنْ عَمِلَ صَٰلِحًا فَلِنَفْسِهِۦ ۖ وَمَنْ أَسَآءَ فَعَلَيْهَا ۗ وَمَا رَبُّكَ بِظَلَّٰمٍ لِّلْعَبِيدِ ﴿٤٦﴾

Whoever does good does it for his own soul and whoever does evil does it against his own soul: your Lord is never unjust to His creatures [46] (The Quran, Fussilat: 46)

In this verse, Allah Glorified is He affirms an existing truth which He wants His servants to believe in and wants this concept to be firmly established in their minds. This concept is that when each one of them does something, they are only benefiting themselves. Their belief and obedience does not benefit Allah in any way.

Similarly, the disobedience of the sinners and the denial of the disbelievers do not harm Allah Glorified is He for He had all the qualities of Magnificence, Beauty, and Perfection before He created this world. It is the servants who will be harmed by their evil deeds.

Therefore, the legal obligations are expressions of Allah’s care for His creation. Every maker wants his creation to be in the best form, and thus, guards it from corruption and from causes of failure.

Allah Glorified is He says in a Qudsi Hadith, ‘O My servants, if the first of you and the last of you, the human among you and the jinn among you, those of you present and those absent, were as pious as the most pious heart of any one man of you, this would not add anything to My Kingdom. If the first of you and the last of you, the human among you and the jinn among you, those of you present and those absent, were as immoral as the heart of the most immoral man of you, that would not decrease My Kingdom more than a needle decreases the sea when placed therein. For I am generous and praiseworthy, I give by uttering a word and I make you suffer by uttering a word. When I will a thing to be, I but say unto it, “Be” – and it is.’(1)

Thus, Allah Glorified is He affirmed the concept that everybody is free to believe or disbelieve because every person will be rewarded or punished according to his or her deeds. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Whoever does what is just and right, does so for his own good’ (Fussilat: 46). Allah Glorified is He does not earn anything from them. Similarly, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...and whoever does evil, does so to his own hurt’ (Fussilat: 46). Surprisingly, even after knowing this, human beings still commit acts that may lead to their own demise. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He has described most of mankind as wicked and foolish.(2)

When Allah Glorified is He warns us from His Punishments, He does not want to punish us, but wants to divert us from these harmful sins that will bring these punishments upon us. He wants to frighten us from these crimes due to their dangers. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He is free from any injustice: '...and Allah is not a transgressor against His servants' (Fussilat: 46). Therefore, Allah Glorified is He frightened you to protect you! Indeed, when He says: 'Whoever kills shall be killed,' He does not want to kill people, but wants to prevent bloodshed. Whoever contemplates murder, then, will have a greater fear that they will be killed for it!

(1) At-Tirmidhi quotes the Hadith in his Sunnan [2495] from Abu Dharr Allah be pleased with him stating that it is sound. It is also quoted by Ahmad in his Musnad [154, 5/77] and Ibn Majah in his Sunnan [4257].

(2) Allah Glorified is He said in the chapter of al-Ahzab: ‘Verily, We did offer the trust (of reason and volition) to the heavens, and the earth, and the mountains: but they refused to bear it because they were afraid of it. Yet man took it up – for, verily, he has always been prone to be most wicked, most foolish’ (al-Ahzab: 72). Ibn ‘Abbas said, ‘Trust means obedience, and religious duties.’ Zayd ibn Aslam said, ‘Trust means three things: prayer, fasting, and ablution after ritual impurity.’ Ibn Qatada said, ‘Trust means “religion,” “religious duties,” and “limits”.’ Ibn Kathir has said in his Tafsir [3/522], after quoting these previous explanations: ‘There is no contradiction between any of these words. They agree with one another and refer to the acceptance of commandments and prohibitions, with the condition that if one fulfils them he will be rewarded and if he abandons them he will be punished. Man has accepted them with the help of Allah Glorified is He despite his weakness, ignorance, and transgression.’

The Quran says about military power: 'Hence, make ready against them whatever force and war mounts you are able to muster so that you might terrify thereby the enemies of Allah, who are your enemies as well' (al-Anfal: 60). It is bizarre that Islam's enemies use this verse as an argument for proving that Islam advocates terrorism just because the Quran mentions the word 'terrify.' This is a mistaken interpretation of the Quranic style. Preparing a force that terrifies enemies means that I do not want battle and do not want confrontation. When my enemy learns that I am prepared to fight, he will refrain from combat.

On the issue of military force, it is said that the balance of power preserves peace in the international community of nations. In the days when there were two equal powers, namely the Soviet Union and the United States of America, there was military peace. Each of them feared the other's power, so the war between them was called a 'Cold War'. However, the Soviet power collapsed and America became dominant. So, now, there is only one great military power, and it does whatever it pleases without any deterrent from another force.

Thus, we say that when Allah Glorified is He commanded us to prepare military force, this does not mean that He pushed us towards the battlefield, but rather, He wanted to preserve peace between us and our opponents. Clearly, you never attack someone who is stronger than you. The verse thus wants peace, and not terror as is claimed by those who reject this verse.

Allah Glorified is He says: '...and Allah is not a transgressor (zhallam) against His servants' (Fussilat: 46). The word zhallam (transgressor) follows the fa'al lexical pattern. This means that it is the intensified active form of the word zhulm (wrongdoing), just as the word qattaal (fighter) is the intense active form of the word qatil (killer).

The Arabic language deals with sentences of affirmation in a different pattern than sentences of negation. In the case of affirmation, mentioning the intense quality implies the less intense quality still exists. For instance, when you say that a person is allaam (a very knowledgeable scholar), you are intrinsically implying that he has the basic attribute of being 'alim (a scholar). Traditionally, however, in the case of negation, negating the intense quality does not automatically imply the negation of the lesser basic form of the quality.(1)

Now, does this mean that the verse we are studying only negated that Allah Glorified is He has the intense quality of transgression (zhallam), while not negating the basic attribute of transgression (zhalim)? Indeed, the answer is no, as Allah Glorified is He is glorified above any wrongdoing. The explanation is that, in the verse, Allah says: '...against His servants' (Fussilat: 46). The verse used the plural word 'servants' instead of the word 'servant'. Therefore, the verse negated that Allah Glorified is He is a transgressor (zhallam) against all his servants, so using the intensified word zhallam is suitable with using the plural word 'servants'. So, the rejection of this meaning of zhallam (transgressor) still implies the negation of any form of wrongdoing by Allah Glorified is He.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Whoever does what is just and right, does so for his own good; and whoever does evil, does so to his own harm' (Fussilat: 46). Therefore, Allah is a just judge between us and our own selves. This means that we are not opponents to Him, as He will issue rulings with or against every soul according to a just scale. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

إِلَيۡهِ يُرَدُّ عِلۡمُ ٱلسَّاعَةِۚ وَمَا تَخۡرُجُ مِن ثَمَرَٰتٖ مِّنۡ أَكۡمَامِهَا وَمَا تَحۡمِلُ مِنۡ أُنثَىٰ وَلَا تَضَعُ
إِلَّا بِعِلۡمِهِۦۚ وَيَوۡمَ يُنَادِيهِمۡ أَيۡنَ شُرَكَآءِي قَالُوٓاْ ءَاذَنَّٰكَ مَا مِنَّا مِن شَهِيدٖ ﴿٤٧﴾

Knowledge of the Hour belongs solely to Him and no crop comes out of its sheath, nor does any female conceive or give birth, without His knowledge. On the Day He asks them, 'Where are My partners?' they will answer, 'We admit to You that none of us can see [them]' [47] (The Quran, Fussilat: 47)

Allah Glorified is He says: 'To Him alone returns the knowledge of the Hour,' and this means that only Allah Glorified is He knows of the time of the Hour. The

---

(1) For instance, negating that a person is a very knowledgeable scholar (allaam) does not negate that he is still a scholar ('alim).

Hour is the Day of Resurrection, and His Knowledge is the knowledge of when it will happen. This is one of the examples of the knowledge that Allah Glorified is He has reserved for Himself and has not disclosed to anyone. Allah Glorified is He says in another chapter: '…"None but He (Allah) will reveal it in its time. Heavily will it weigh on the heavens and the earth; (and) it will only fall upon you suddenly." They will ask you – as if you could gain insight into its (mystery) by dint of persistent inquiry!(1) Say: "Knowledge thereof rests with my Lord alone; but (of this) most people are unaware" ' (al-A'raf: 187).

There are great wisdoms in the concealment of the Last Hour. The most important objective is to prevent people from becoming careless, and to prevent the deceitful, the whimsical and the lustful people from persisting in their lust. Instead, Allah Glorified is He prepares everybody for it so that everybody hurries to do good deeds. Indeed, no one is assured of the time he will leave the abode of deeds in this worldly life, to enter the Abode of Reckoning in the Hereafter. In fact, a person's reckoning and resurrection start when he dies.(1)

This is why we have said that fulfilling religious obligations is connected to a specific time span. For example, the noon prayer is performed from the moment the sun is at its zenith to the moment when the shadows are twice as long as their objects. So, whoever prays during this period, will have fulfilled his duty. Why is it then preferable to perform these prayers as early as possible? This is because a person is not guaranteed to live until the end of the given period of prayer. If a person dies a second after the period begins, without intending to hurry for prayer, they will have sinned. This is why, when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked about the most virtuous action, he replied, 'Prayer in its time.' Allah Glorified is He also says: 'Verily, for all believers, Prayer is indeed a sacred duty linked to particular times (of day)' (an-Nisa': 103).

---

(1) This Hadith has been narrated on the authority of Anas ibn Malik may Allah be pleased with him in 'Ajluni's book Kashf Al-khafa', under the number 2618. Its full version is, 'Remember death frequently, for if you remember it in prosperity, its remembrance will make you loathe the prosperity, and if you remember it in poverty, it will ease the poverty for you. Death is Resurrection; when someone dies, his Resurrection comes.' Ad-Daylami has narrated this Hadith on the authority of Anas in Musnad Al-firdaws [1117] with the following wording, 'When one of you dies, his Resurrection comes; so worship Allah Glorified is He as if you were seeing Him, and repent before Him every hour.'

(2) Muslim, in the Kitab Al-Iman of his Sahih (no. 85) has rnarrated the following Hadith, from 'Abdullah ibn Mas'ud: 'I asked the Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him about the most virtuous action. He said: "Prayer in its time".'

The same concept is true for pilgrimage. Sometimes you may see a man who is affluent and is able to spend on the expenses of pilgrimage, yet he does not perform it, wishfully delaying it to a later time. Is that person sure of living until that time?

Allah Glorified is He has concealed the time of the Hour and the time of each person's death. He kept this knowledge concealed from all of His creation for a wise purpose. Resurrection and death are a reality. Death is like an arrow that is imminently destined to hit you, and your life will last for as long as the arrow travels and until the time it reaches you.

Therefore, the concealment of the knowledge of the Hour is the clearest of demonstrations of this world's fragility. Announcing that it might come at any time will make you prepared for it. Thus, you should anticipate it and expect it in every instant. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: 'Blessed is He (Allah) in whose hand all dominion rests, since He has the power to will anything: It is He who has created death as well as life, so that He might put you to a test (and thus show) which of you is best in conduct,' (al-Mulk: 1-2).

He has made death more important for His creatures than life, although life comes first. This is because it will always reside in every person's mind and thoughts. Therefore, you must accept life with caution and not be deceived by it. Expect death to arrive at any moment. It is out of Allah's Mercy for His servants that He has made great and small signs that indicate that the Hour is drawing near. This will frighten people and awaken them from their ignorance of the Resurrection.

Allah Glorified is He then continued in the verse we are studying: 'And no fruit bursts forth from its calyx,' (Fussilat: 47). The word 'calyx' denotes the green cover that envelops the fruit. Then it gradually splits until the fruit emerges from it. For example, you may see a rose hidden in a green sheath before blossoming, as if keeping its eyes closed before finally opening its lids and emerging from its cover.

‘And no female ever conceives, nor ever gives birth, except with His knowledge’ (Fussilat: 47) – these are all things which are hidden from people but are not hidden from Allah Glorified is He. Female conception is a well-known phenomenon, where a female’s ovum is fertilised with a male spermatozoon, and this meeting results in conception, which is Allah’s gift in any case. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…He bestows the gift of female offspring on whomever He wills, and the gift of male offspring on whomever He wills’ (ash-Shura: 49).

Even barrenness and infertility may constitute a Divine gift in the eyes of a person who ponders and seeks wisdom. When you look at a child who has killed one of his parents, or a child who has brought so much shame upon his family that they wish that death frees them from him, or when you look at the disobedience of some children, you should understand that infertility itself can be a blessing and a gift from Allah Glorified is He that requires gratitude. Thus, a servant should be grateful if they are infertile, just as another servant is grateful for the birth of children.

You may observe that the Quran puts the female first in this verse. This is because Arabs in ancient times did not desire female daughters. This is why the Quran has assigned a lofty reward for the man who raises daughters and treats them well, and for those who respect Allah’s preordainment to bear daughters. It is as if a voice from Allah Glorified is He were calling to him, ‘My servant, for as long as you accept My gift, blessing, greatness and majesty, I shall bestow upon each of your daughters a husband who will fulfil your hopes in her, and will be more faithful to you than your own sons.’

We have seen wonders in the issue of bearing children that illustrate and affirm Allah’s absolute Power. We have seen married couples who are unable to conceive, and were then separated by divorce. Then, the man married another woman and had children with her, and the woman married another man and conceived from him. Thus, conception was impossible between these two individuals in particular.

Contemplating the phenomenon of conception from a rational point of view, it can be found that Allah’s Omnipotence has encompassed it in its four ways. The natural conception occurs between a male and a female. However, Allah Glorified is He with His Absolute Omnipotence, created Adam peace be upon him without a husband or a wife. Hawwa' (Eve) was created from a father but had no mother; whereas 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him had a mother but was fatherless. At times, there may be a husband and wife and yet the conception does not occur. All such cases affirm the Absolute Omnipotence of Allah Glorified is He as regards the creation of beings.

In the Quranic verse: '...On the Day He asks them, "Where are My partners?"...' (Fussilat: 47) It is Allah Glorified is He Who says: '...My partners...' which refers to those false deities ascribed to Him. In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says: '...whom you imagined...' (al-An'am: 22), to which they reply: '...We confess to You...' (Fussilat: 47) that is, we have told and informed You. The Arabic word 'adhannaka (told and informed you) is derived from the word udhun (ear) which is the organ of hearing, which receives speech signals and through which knowledge is acquired, thereby it is deemed as the first means of acquiring knowledge.

Similarly, Allah Glorified is He says about the earth: 'obeying its Sustainer, as in truth it must' (al-Inshiqaq: 2) that is, it listened to the commands. '...[T]hey will answer, "We admit to You"…' (Fussilat: 47) that is, we informed You: '...that none of us can see [them]' (Fussilat: 47), that is, none of us witnesses that You have partners. Instead of Allah Glorified is He declaring Himself far from having partners, He Glorified is He says: '...My partners...' (Fussilat: 47) leaving it to them to reject the existence of His partners. They only believe that Allah Glorified is He has no partners when it is too late, as though the word 'partner' has never crossed their minds.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَضَلَّ عَنْهُم مَّا كَانُوا۟ يَدْعُونَ مِن قَبْلُ ۖ وَظَنُّوا۟ مَا لَهُم مِّن مَّحِيصٍ ﴿٤٨﴾

The gods they invoked before will have vanished away; they will know that there is no escape [48] (The Quran, Fussilat: 48)

The Quranic phrase: '...will have vanished away...' (Fussilat: 48) indicates that they will turn away and get lost from them. 'The gods they invoked before...' (Fussilat: 48) alludes to the false deities whom they ascribed as partners to Allah Glorified is He. They will know for certain and be assured, as maintained in the verse: '...they will know…' (Fussilat: 48) that '...that there is no escape' (Fussilat: 48). They will find neither retreat nor flight that would save them from chastisement; one looks here and there but does not find a place of refuge or a hideout. After all, the disaster is imminent and there is no rescue from it. Then, Allah Glorified is He states:

لَّا يَسْـَٔمُ ٱلْإِنسَـٰنُ مِن دُعَآءِ ٱلْخَيْرِ وَإِن مَّسَّهُ ٱلشَّرُّ فَيَـُٔوسٌ قَنُوطٌ ﴿٤٩﴾

Man never tires of asking for good, but if evil touches him he loses all hope and becomes despondent [49] (The Quran, Fussilat: 49)

This verse clarifies that 'man,' which refers here to the disbeliever, is never weary of '…asking for good…' (Fussilat: 49). He keeps supplicating for good things for himself; such as obtaining wealth, children, and health. A person may ask Allah to help him have an apartment to live in, for instance. Yet, once he is granted the apartment, he prays for a small villa. Even as Allah Glorified is He fulfils his wish, he desires for a tower!

Man is created with a yearning for material wealth and is motivated by greed. 'Only dust can fill man's eyes, but Allah Glorified is He will forgive those who repent.'(1) Indeed, few are those who are satisfied with what they are given.

Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him was given abundant wealth. However, when one day, sitting on the roof of his house, he found a flock of golden locusts, he tucked his cloth and began to collect the locusts in it. Allah Glorified is He called to him and said, 'O Dawud (David), did I not give you enough?' He replied: 'Yes, Lord, but I cannot get enough of Your favours.'(2)

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih, The Book of Tendering Hearts, Hadith no. (6438), and by Abu Nuaym Al-Asbahani in Hilyatu-Awliya (1/337). Both mentioned the narration of Abdullah ibn Az-Zubayr who said in his sermon given in Mecca, 'O people, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to say, "if man is given a valley filled with gold, he will wish for a second, and if he is given a second, he will wish for a third; only dust can fill man's stomach, and Allah will forgive those who repent."'

(2) peace be upon him. It was narrated by Imam Rafi'i in his book At-Tadwin fi Akhbar Qazwin, on the authority of Abu Hurayra, that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Once, when Ayyub (Job) was bathing naked, golden locusts fell on =

If this were the condition of Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him how would it be then for the ordinary believer? On the other hand, how could it be for the disbelievers, and whoever has similar traits, about whom the following verse was revealed: 'And neither do I think that the Last Hour will ever come. But even if [it should come, and] I am brought before my Sustainer, I will surely find something even better than this as [my last] resort!' (al-Kahf: 36) In another verse, they are mentioned to have said: '..."the ultimate good awaits me with Him"...' (Fussilat: 50).

Thus, 'man' here alludes to the unbeliever,(1) whereas for the believers they are required to be satisfied with what they are given. Guiding us to have contentment as one of our traits, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him instructed his uncle Al-'Abbas ibn 'Abd Al-Muttalib*:* 'The little that makes you satisfied is better than the abundant that makes you restless.'(2)

In another Hadith, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'We are a people who do not eat until we feel hungry, and when we eat, we do not eat to our fill.'(3) Further, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him also said, 'One third of it (one's stomach) is for eating, one third is for drinking, and one third should be left for breathing air.'(4)

= him, so he began to collect them into his clothes. Allah Glorified is He called him and said, "Oh Ayyub (Job), did I not give you enough, more than what you see?" He said, "Yes, my Lord, but I cannot get enough of your goods."'

(1) This is the opinion of As-Suddi. It is said that 'man' here refers to Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughira, or to 'Utba and Shayba, the sons of Rabi'a, and Umayya ibn Khalaf. (This is narrated by Qurtubi in his Tafsir [9/6039]). See also Ibn Al-Jawzi's interpretation of the verse in his Zad Al-Masir.

(2) Narrated by At-Tabari in his Tahdhib Al-Athar [5/478, Hadith no. 2494] on the authority of Abdullah ibn Bisr Al-Mazini, who said, 'Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told his uncle Al-Abbas, "O uncle, the little that exhausts you is better than the abundant that makes you restless,"' that is, the little that tires you. Al-Bayhaqi, in his Dalai'l An-Nubuwwa [5/375], narrated on the authority of Abu Umama al-Bahili who narrated, 'Tha'laba ibn Hatib came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said, "Oh Allah's Messenger, ask Allah to make me wealthy." Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, "woe on you, Tha'laba, the little that makes you grateful is better than the abundant which you cannot forbear."'

(3) This is a well-known saying, falsely attributed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him but its meaning is correct.

(4) Miqdam ibn Ma'di Yakrib narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'man has never filled a container more evil than his own stomach. A few morsels=

Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He in a Qudsi Hadith says: ‘I will provide – according to My measure – him who is content with what I have preordained for him.’(1)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him teaches us different ways of preventing many diseases, and gives us solutions for developing the economies of nations. In earlier times, physicians did not understand the relation between heavy breathing and the stomach. They believed that only the lungs were responsible for breathing, while food, which rests in the stomach, had no bearing on the rate of respiration. In modern times, nonetheless, they understand that both are intimately related, for if the stomach is filled with food, it exerts pressure upon the diaphragm, suppressing the lungs and weakening the heart.

However, their prior fallacious perception was corrected by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who taught us how to combine the various components of life such as food, water and air, guiding Muslims not to be voracious, ‘Man has never filled a container worse than his own stomach.’(2)

Returning home from work so hungry that you cannot wait until the food is ready, you may eat whatever leftovers you find, be it even a loaf of bread, some watercress and some cheese. Surprisingly, you find this simple food

= that keep his back upright are sufficient for him. If, however, he cannot help doing it, let him keep one third of it for food, one third for drink, and one third for his breathing.’ This Hadith was narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad [4/132], At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [2380], and Ibn Majah in his Sunnan [3349].

(1) In his book Ihya Ulum Ad-Din [4/344], Abu Hamid Al-Ghazali recorded several Hadiths regarding contentment with Allah’s Decree and Predestination, some of which are the following: ‘When someone is content with a little provision from Allah, Allah Glorified is He will be content with little of his work.’ Another Hadith states, ‘If Allah loves one of His servants, He tries him; if the servant forbears, Allah chooses him, but if he is happy, Allah makes him one of the elect.” There is no firm proof, however, that the Hadith mentioned by the Sheikh is authentically attributed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him neither is it ever mentioned in the reliable books [Adil Abu Al-Maati].

(2) This is the previously mentioned Hadith on the authority of Miqdam ibn Ma'di Yakrib. It was narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad [4/132], At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [2380], and by Ibn Majah in his Sunnan [3349].

tasty because of eating while hungry, which makes you agreeably accept everything that you can eat.

Once an Arab man of healthy nature stated, ‘Hunger is a condiment.’(1) It is also said, ‘A hungry person’s food is wholesome and a tired person’s bed is cosy,’ that is, comfortable. Surely, a tired person falls into deep sleep, even if he is lying on pebbles or on a mat, whereas he who is not tired, rolls in his bed unable to fall asleep, even if he is lying on silk material. Therefore, pondering on the principles of Islam, one can find solutions for our economy’s difficulties and for our endless troubles.

Islam teaches one to be content with what one possesses and not to strive towards what is beyond one’s possibilities. Yet if one does, one will be like the one who drinks seawater, the more one drinks, the thirstier one becomes.

Reporting the other side of the disbeliever’s nature, Allah Glorified is He states: ‘...but if evil touches him he loses all hope and becomes despondent’ (2) (Fussilat: 49). If evil fortune befalls the disbeliever, ‘…he loses all hope…’ (Fussilat: 49). To reveal how much depression he feels, the exaggerated form of the word ya’s (despair) is used. It signifies the person who has lost all hope and optimism, and ya’s (despair) is a trait of the soul. Nonetheless, the word: ‘…despondent’ (Fussilat: 49) (qanut) represents an exaggerated form of the word qanit, but it is a quality of the body. This is because giving oneself up to qunut (despondence) is the outward expression of despair reflected on the body, especially on the face. Hence, a person dust-stained, sullen, and shivering is likely to be of the same condition as the despondent disbeliever mentioned in the verse. As for the believer, his face radiates wellness, light, and faith; and thus he is merry, joyous, openhearted, smiling, and happy.

(1) Mentioned by Al-Asm'ai on the authority of 'Uthman Ash-Shahham, who narrated it from Abu Raja Al-Ataridi, who said, ‘When we heard that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him started killing, we ran away and grilled the leg of a hare by burying it. Then, we let our camels kneel down on the buried hare, and I will never forget that meal.’ Whenever Al-Asm'ai was reminded of this incident, he would say, ‘Yes, hunger is a condiment, and moderation is surely the slogan of Muslims.’ It was narrated by Al-Jahiz in his Al-Bukhala' [1/76].

(2) The word ‘evil’ (sharr) in the verse refers to poverty and sickness [(Tafsir Al-Qurtubi), 9/6039]. According to Ibn Kathir, it refers to trials and poverty [4/104].

Then, Allah Glorified is He states:

وَلَئِنْ أَذَقْنَٰهُ رَحْمَةً مِّنَّا مِنۢ بَعْدِ ضَرَّآءَ مَسَّتْهُ لَيَقُولَنَّ هَٰذَا لِى وَمَآ أَظُنُّ
ٱلسَّاعَةَ قَآئِمَةً وَلَئِن رُّجِعْتُ إِلَىٰ رَبِّىٓ إِنَّ لِى عِندَهُۥ لَلْحُسْنَىٰ ۚ فَلَنُنَبِّئَنَّ
ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ بِمَا عَمِلُوا۟ وَلَنُذِيقَنَّهُم مِّنْ عَذَابٍ غَلِيظٍ ﴿٥٠﴾

Whenever We let him taste some of Our mercy after he has been afflicted, he is sure to say, 'This is all my own doing: I do not think the Hour will ever come, but even if I were to be taken back to my Lord, the best reward would await me with Him.' We shall most certainly inform the disbelievers of what they have done and give them a taste of severe torment [50] (The Quran, Fussilat: 50)

The Quranic verse states: '…he is sure to say, "This is all my own doing"…' (Fussilat: 50), that is, 'this is my right, I have deserved it with my work and effort,' so, he denies Allah's Favour upon him. The same words were uttered by Qarun (Korah), as stated in the verse: '…"This [wealth] has been given to me only by virtue of the knowledge that is in me"...' (al-Qasas: 78). In reply, it is as though Allah Glorified is He told him that if he were given it only by virtue of his knowledge, then let him keep it by virtue of that knowledge! As a consequence, Allah Glorified is He states: 'And thereupon We caused the earth to swallow him and his dwelling…' (al-Qasas: 81).

Further, Allah Glorified is He states: 'Nay, surely, man becomes grossly overweening[6] whenever he believes himself to be self-sufficient'[7] (al-'Alaq: 6-7).

Gaining in arrogance, man will say, as stated in the Quran: '…but even if I were to be taken back to my Lord…' (Fussilat: 50) that is, in the Hereafter. It means, the disbeliever maintains that even with the assumption that there will be resurrection and recompense, '…"the best reward would await me with Him"...' (Fussilat: 50). He thinks that just as Allah Glorified is He granted him good things in this world, He will give him even more abundantly in the Hereafter.

Informing the wrongdoer of his evil deeds is the first stage of his torment, as stated in the verse: '…We shall most certainly inform the disbelievers of what they have done…' (Fussilat: 50). He will be reminded of his misdeeds, which will be counted, in preparation for his reckoning. In the meantime, he knows that there is no return to the worldly life to make amends to his Lord.

This is mentioned elsewhere in the Quran: '…he prays "O my Sustainer! Let me return, let me return [to life] [99] so that I might act righteously in whatever I have failed [a foretime]!"[100]' (al-Mu'minun: 99-100), to which Allah Glorified is He replies: '…Nay, it is indeed but a [meaningless] word that he utters: for behind those [who leave the world] there is a barrier [of death] until the Day when all will be raised from the dead!' (al-Mu'minun: 100)

Allah Glorified is He also says: '…and if they were brought back [to life], they would return to the very thing which was forbidden to them…' (al-An'am: 28).

The Quranic verse: '…and give them a taste of severe torment' (Fussilat: 50) refers to harsh punishment which is given various descriptions in the Quran. It is at times described as: '…grievous suffering…' (al-Mulk: 28), and at other times as: '…shameful suffering…' (al-Mujadala: 16), that is, suffering inflicting shame and humiliation. Thus, painful suffering fits the crime and nature of some of those punished, whereas for others, shameful suffering is more fitting, for it demolishes their arrogance, even without physical pain.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

وَإِذَآ أَنۡعَمۡنَا عَلَى ٱلۡإِنسَٰنِ أَعۡرَضَ وَنَـَٔا بِجَانِبِهِۦ
وَإِذَا مَسَّهُ ٱلشَّرُّ فَذُو دُعَآءٍ عَرِيضٖ (٥١)

Whenever We are gracious to man, he goes away haughtily, but, as soon as evil touches him, he turns to prolonged prayer [51] (The Quran, Fussilat: 51)

The Quranic verse: '…he goes away haughtily…' (Fussilat: 51) means, he turns away from Allah Glorified is He being granted what he asked for and no longer in need of Him. Many people possess this quality. Someone in need of your help regarding some issue or difficult situation may wait outside your door day and night. Once his need is fulfilled, he may forget to even say 'thank you'! The poet(1) has artistically put it:

---

(1) These verses were composed by Sheikh Ash-Sha'rawi Allah rest his soul.

Those who need you, follow you meekly,
But when they get what they need, they leave you and hasten away,
When someone reviles you, the best among them
Will stand still, not rejecting, but [also] not inventing lies [about you],
Do not abandon righteousness however much they hide,
For Allah's reward is greater and more abundant.

Remember that those who refuse to acknowledge your help are of most profit to you, for the one who rewards your charity is Allah Glorified is He Who gives rewards according to His measure, unlike people's gifts, which are according to theirs.

Hence, Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him said to his people, as stated in the Quran: 'O my people! No reward do I ask of you for this [message]…' (Hud: 51). It means, I deserve to get rewarded for what I do, but I only want to be rewarded from my Lord, for He is the One Who can reward me and evaluate my work.

In the course of this verse, the action of turning away is gradual: '…he goes away…' (Fussilat: 51) meaning that he turned his face away, then turned his back '…haughtily …' (Fussilat: 51). Thus, he first turned his face away, and then turned his side and his back. The same order is observed in the Quranic verse: '…But as for all who lay up treasures of gold and silver and do not spend them for the sake of Allah – give them the tiding of grievous suffering [in the life to come]: [34] on the Day when that [hoarded wealth] shall be heated in the fire of hell and their foreheads and their sides and their backs branded therewith, [those sinners shall be told:] "These are the treasures which you have laid up for yourselves! Taste, then, [the evil of] your hoarded treasures!"[35]' (at-Tawba: 34-35)

These verses are said to have been revealed regarding the one who turns away from the needy with his face first, then his side, and then turns his back towards him. Compensation, then, is paid according to one's deeds and branding is to be inflicted to the degree of one's hoarded wealth.

As the disbeliever is touched by evil, he recourses to prolonged supplication, as stated in the verse: '…but, as soon as evil touches him, he turns to prolonged prayer' (Fussilat: 51). His prayers are described as 'Arid (prolonged and continuous),(1) as can be noticed in the verse, rather than 'long'. Everything has length and width, the former is known to be greater than the latter. Though, the Quran uses width to refer to greatness, as stated in the verse describing paradise: '…a Paradise as vast as the heavens and the earth…' (Al-'Imran: 133). If its width is as vast as the heavens and the earth – which is the greatest measure possible – how great its length is!

Then, Allah Glorified is He states:

قُلۡ أَرَءَيۡتُمۡ إِن كَانَ مِنۡ عِندِ ٱللَّهِ ثُمَّ كَفَرۡتُم بِهِۦ
مَنۡ أَضَلُّ مِمَّنۡ هُوَ فِي شِقَاقِۭ بَعِيدٖ ﴿٥٢﴾

Say [Prophet], 'Have you ever thought, what if this revelation really is from God and you still reject it? Who could be more astray than someone who cuts himself off so far [from God]?' [52] (The Quran, Fussilat: 52)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is ordered in this verse to say to the disbelievers: '…Have you ever thought…' (Fussilat: 52). Think for yourselves and tell me: '…what if this revelation really is from God and you still reject it?' (Fussilat: 52) When you deny the Giver of bounty: '…Who could be more astray than someone who cuts himself off so far [from Allah]?' (Fussilat: 52) This is to say, no one is more astray than he who does not attribute Favours to the Bestower of Favours, thereby enjoying His Blessings and acting ungratefully towards Him. Hence, the 'who' clause, in the verse, stresses surprise and rejection, for bounty requires gratitude and praise to its Giver.

In other verses, Allah Glorified is He demonstrates favours bestowed upon us in a generous and graceful manner, saying: '…and should you try to count Allah's Blessing, you could never compute them…' (Ibrahim: 34).

(1) Ibn Manzur in Lisan Al-'Arab on the stem of '-r-d states, ''arid means "abundant," but it is used instead of "abundant" because each of them denotes a different measure.' This view is also maintained by Al-Qurtubi in his Tafsir [9/6040]. Ibn 'Abbas upheld that the word 'arid in the verse: '…he turns to prolonged prayer' (Fussilat: 51) alludes to supplication with humility and pleading.

In the verse, the Arabic word in (should) denotes doubt, for man never undertakes the calculation of anything unless it is possible to count. Even with the assumption that you would try to count Allah’s Blessings, you would never be able to compute them. Allah Glorified is He refers to His Blessings using the singular form of the word ‘blessing’ rather than the plural ‘blessings’ because when you contemplate just one of Allah’s blessings, you will find it encompassing many other hidden blessings.

This verse is mentioned twice but with different endings; one is: ‘… [And yet,] man is indeed most persistent in wrongdoing, stubbornly ungrateful!’ (Ibrahim: 34), and the other is: ‘…God is indeed much-forgiving, a dispenser of Mercy’ (an-Nahl: 18).

Giving blessings has three elements: the blessing itself, its giver, and the one who receives it. The blessing is abundant and incalculable, its Giver Glorified is He is much forgiving, and a dispenser of mercy, and he who receives it is persistent in wrongdoing, stubbornly ungrateful.

It is as if Allah Glorified is He is telling His servants not to despair of His Mercy and not to disincline to praying to Him, however much engaged in wrongdoing and stubbornly ungrateful they are, for He is much forgiving, a dispenser of mercy.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

سَنُرِيهِمۡ ءَايَٰتِنَا فِي ٱلۡأٓفَاقِ وَفِيٓ أَنفُسِهِمۡ حَتَّىٰ يَتَبَيَّنَ لَهُمۡ أَنَّهُ
ٱلۡحَقُّۗ أَوَلَمۡ يَكۡفِ بِرَبِّكَ أَنَّهُۥ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ شَهِيدٌ ﴿٥٣﴾

We shall show them Our signs in every region of the earth and in themselves, until it becomes clear to them that this is the Truth. Is it not enough that your Lord witnesses everything? [53] (The Quran, Fussilat: 53)

The Arabic particle sin ‘shall’ in the phrase: ‘…shall show them …’ (Fussilat: 53) denotes the future tense. Therefore, this saying remains truthful and in effect until the Day of Resurrection. In the verse, ‘…Our signs…’ (Fussilat: 53), this refers to the cosmic signs proving His Power and His marvellous creation. The word afaq '…In every region of the earth…' refers to the farthest place that could be seen with one's eyes.

In this verse, afaq (literally horizons) alludes to the heavens and the earth. Hence, the saying 'such and such has a broad horizon,' is used to mean he has deep insight into abstract matters; the wider one's view, the broader one's vision.

Does the Quranic verse: '…shall show them Our signs …' (Fussilat: 53) – by its reference to the future – mean that in the past Allah Glorified is He has not shown them His signs? No, He did in fact show them many signs, but they ignored and turned a blind eye to them. They were heedless of the verse: 'for, long ago has Our word gone forth to Our servants, the message-bearers, [171] that, they – they indeed – would be succoured, [172] and that, Our hosts – they indeed – would [in the end] be victorious! [173]' (as-Saffat: 171-173)

This is the way Allah treats His servants, whom He sends as Messengers. He Glorified is He promises to grant them help and victory. Allah Glorified is He has neither partners nor opponents to come between Him and His promise.

This verse also teaches us the essentials of warfare and the conditions for victory. Fulfilling such conditions leads to victory, whereas violation of them results in defeat, as Allah's Way necessitates. Therefore, when Muslims lose a battle, it is as a consequence of violating these conditions. When they are vanquished, we do not say, 'Islam has been vanquished,' but rather, 'Muslims were defeated owing to violating the commands of their leader and the conditions of victory.' Defeat is necessary in order to give them a lesson and teach them to obey the commander's orders, for had they become victorious after violating the rules of warfare, they would be careless in executing the commands of their leader.

We learned this lesson in the Battle of Uhud, when the archers disobeyed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who told them to stay in their positions whatever the outcome of the battle is.(1) They craved for temporary material gain, and were allured by the booty when they saw the signs of victory; so they descended and left their positions. In turn, Khalid ibn Al-Walid Allah be pleased with him had to simply turn around and encircle the Muslim army from behind, and thereby they were defeated, or at least did not win. Can we, then, say that Islam was defeated?

(1) Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him appointed 'Abdullah ibn Jubayr as the commander of the archers, who numbered fifty on that day. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told him, 'Shoot arrows at the cavalry lest they could attack us from behind – whether they are for us or against us – and hold firm on to your place lest=

Thus, we should correct our understanding of this issue. The army of the Muslims, among whom Prophet Muhammad is present, may be defeated, for it did not follow the means of victory. On such an occasion, we do not say that Islam was defeated, but Muslims disobeyed the orders and thereby deserved to be defeated. So, in case you, O Muslims, search for the reasons for your defeat and backwardness, you will reach the conclusion that your deviation from the Divine Way of Guidance is the main reason behind all of that. This is the true reason for defeat. It is well proven throughout history.

In the battle of Hunayn, some Muslims said, (1) 'we shall not be defeated today, not on account of our being few.' Who said this? Abu Bakr himself said it when he saw the numbers of Muslims reaching ten thousand. A bit vain with their great numbers, Allah taught them a lesson, so they were defeated in the beginning; but then Allah's Mercy descended upon them, reviving their morale, and giving them victory in the end.

In this regard, Allah Glorified is He states: '…on the Day of Hunayn, when you took pride in your great numbers and they proved of no avail whatever to you – for the earth, despite all its vastness, became [too] narrow for you and

---

= they could approach us from your side.' [(Sirat Ibn Hisham) 3/10]. Al-Bayhaqi, in his Dalai'l An-Nubuwwa [3/229], narrated that the archers, after the defeat of the idolaters, left their positions to collect booty and Ibn Jubayr told them, 'Have you forgotten what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told you?' They replied, 'We shall go to take our share of booty.' The unbelievers then attacked the Muslims, so Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was left with only twelve men.

(1) In his Dalai'l An-Nubuwwa [5/123], Al-Bayhaqi narrated that Rabi ibn Anas said that on the day of Hunayn someone said, 'we shall not be defeated because of our small number' (they numbered twelve thousand). Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him being displeased with that, Allah revealed to him the verse: '...on the Day of Hunayn, when you took pride in your great numbers…' (Al-'Imran: 25). This was also narrated by As-Suyuti in Asbab An-Nuzul [p. 138].

you turned back, retreating: [25] whereupon God bestowed from on high His [gift of] inner peace upon His Apostle and upon the believers, and bestowed [upon you] from on high forces which you could not see, and chastised those who were bent on denying the truth: for such is the recompense of all who deny the truth! [26]' (at-Tawba: 25-26)

The defeat that Muslims almost experienced in this war was a lesson, not an expression of Allah's hatred toward His servants, as a poet (1) puts it:

He became harsh only to hold himself back; he who is decisive,
May he sometimes become harsh over him whom he pities.(2)

Therefore, we maintain that if Allah promises victory, He does not come short of fulfilling it, but it is the Muslims who fail to have His promise fulfilled by failing to follow the route to the victory with which they are promised.

However, why do the idolaters persist in their disbelief and obstinacy, closing their eyes to Allah's signs which are so clear? It is because they are masters with temporary power, of which Islam seeks to strip them, putting an end to their mastery and declaring all people equal like the teeth of a comb, where there is no supremacy of an Arab over a non-Arab, nor a non-Arab over an Arab, except in piety.(3)

Salman the Persian, Suhayb the Roman and Bilal the Abyssinian Allah be pleased with them were all first rank leaders in Islam, that Prophet Muhammad

---

(1) He is Abu Tammam Habib ibn Aws ibn Al-Harith At-Taai. He was born in Hawran in Syria in the year 188 AH, then he went to Egypt and settled there. Al-M'utasim brought him to Baghdad and made him a leading poet of his time. In his poetry is power and eloquence. The books he wrote include Fuhul Ash-Shu'ara and Diwan A-Hamasa. He died in Mawsil in the year 231 AH, forty three years of age.

(2) This is a line from Abu Tammam's poem composed in the kamil meter, consisting of six lines.

(3) Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad [5/411] from Abu Nadra, who heard it from one of the Companions of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. It was also narrated by Abu Nuaym in his Hilyatul-Al-Awliya' [3/100] on the authority of Abu Nadra, who heard it from Jabir ibn 'Abdullah, who said, 'Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gave a sermon in one of the Tashriq days (three days following the Feast of Sacrifice), saying, "Verily, your Lord is One, and your Father is one, and verily no Arab is privileged over a non-Arab, a non-Arab over an Arab, a red man over a black man, a black man over a red man, except in piety." '

peace and blessings be upon him even said, ‘Salman is one of us, the people of (my) household.’(1)

Thus, kinship and lineage should be related to Islam. At the time when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him declared Salman as one of the people of his House, Abu Lahab, his uncle, was banished from Allah’s mercy due to his disbelief!

We learned this lesson from the story of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him with his son. In spite of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him being eager for the salvation of this son and invoking Allah for him, Allah Glorified is He teaches him the lesson: ‘[God] answered: “O Nuh (Noah), he is not of your family, for, surely, he was not righteous in his conduct. Therefore, do not ask of Me that of which you have no knowledge: thus, do I admonish you lest you become one of those who are unaware [of what is right]”’ (Hud: 46).

It is clear in the verse that filiation and kinship are not based on family and blood ties, but on religion, guidance, and belief. Filiation is based on a mutual desire to do good and to follow the true path.

The group who attacked and fought against Islam were protecting their sovereignty and high position in the Arabian Peninsula. Therefore, they gathered and united against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his followers. This can be observed during the period of the siege which they imposed upon Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in Shi‘b, closing all the windows on him and his followers, cutting from them all sources of livelihood, until they were forced to eat carrion and tree leaves.(2)

---

(1) It was narrated on the authority of ‘Amr ibn ‘Awf Al-Muzani who said, ‘Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him drew the trench in the year when the Battle of the Trench took place. It extended from Ajam As-Samar near the stationary place of Banu Harith to Midad. Being fit and strong, each of the Immigrants and the Helpers sought to claim Salman Al-Farisi [the Persian] as their own. Thereupon, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, “Salman is one of us, the people of (my) Household.”’ This was rnarrated by Al-Bayhaqi in Dalai'l An-Nubuwwa [3/418], and Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak [3/598]. Adh-Dhahabi, nonetheless, deemed its chain of narrators as weak, having Kathir ibn ‘Abdullah as one of the narrators.

(2) Al-Bayhaqi narrated this story in his Dalai'l An-Nubuwwa [1/315], recounting the terrible suffering that befell them, saying, ‘... until one could hear the voices of their children screaming behind the Shi‘b from hunger.’

Then they tried to kill him more than once and harshly persecuted him, his family, and his Companions. Yet, far were they from harming him when Allah watches over and protects him. It is as if Allah Glorified is He wanted to tell them not to think that their efforts to hinder the call to Islam in the Arabian Peninsula would be fruitful! Surely, the call would spread not only over the Peninsula but also over all the horizons of the world! 'We shall show them Our signs in every region…' (Fussilat: 53).

The call to Islam was competent enough to prevail for several reasons. Most importantly, the Arabs by their nature were people of war and combat and did not need to be trained in the art of warfare. Accordingly, when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wanted to fight, he did not establish a military academy, nor did he train anyone in fighting. Instead, he found people who were already prepared to go to war, knowledgeable in its ways and methods. Whenever one of them heard a war cry, he would rush towards it; this is because Arab tribes were in perpetual war. One of their wars, for example, lasted for forty years.(1) Secondly, the Arabs were wandering nomadic people. They knew no homeland and no rest. An Arab's house was on his camel's back; he would pitch it wherever he stopped and anywhere water and grass could be found. Not connected to a homeland, the Arabs were ready to take Islam to all horizons of the earth and all regions of the world.

It is also not by chance that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him happened to be illiterate, born into an illiterate nation who did not know how to read and write and who were uncivilised and had no culture. Although these traits represent shortcomings for other nations, in the case of the Muslim Ummah and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they are deemed as an honour and a distinction. Had the Arabs been a people of knowledge, culture, and civilisation, Islam would have been perceived as only a civilizational leap.

(1) Narrated by Abu 'Ubayda Muammar ibn Al-Muthanna in his Dibaj, stating, 'The war of the tribes of Baghid Abs and Dhubyan because of Dahis and Ghabra' lasted for about forty years.' It broke out on account of a horse race between two horses named Dahis and Ghabra'; the stakes were one hundred camels, according to Ibn Abd Rabbuh in Al-Aqd Al-Farid.

These three things paved the way for the victory and prevalence of Islam over all horizons of the world. It is as if Allah were telling the disbelievers and those who opposed His religion, resisted His Messenger and ignored His words: ‘for, long ago has Our word gone forth to Our servants, the message-bearers, [171] that, they – they indeed – would be succoured, [172] and that, Our hosts – they indeed – would [in the end] be victorious! [173]’ (as-Saffat: 171-173) Allah Glorified is He shall show them other signs which they will never forget and by virtue of which Islam will be victorious and will spread in the horizons of the world, east and west.

Hence, Allah Glorified is He depicts a situation which makes us laugh and enrages them. He Glorified is He says: ‘If anyone thinks that Allah will not succour him in this world and in the life to come, let him reach out to heaven by any [other] means and [thus try to] make headway: and then let him see whether this scheme of his will indeed do away with the cause of his anguish’ (al-Hajj: 15). The intended meaning is, let him bind himself to the sky with a rope, then cut the rope and come down like someone who has been hanged. Afterwards, let him see whether his fury will pass; the verse implies that he will die and perish, but his fury will not end.

Consider how Islam, in its beginning, started among the poor and slaves, to be followed by the powerful and the wealthy. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went to preach among the people of Ta’if, they met him with oppression and mockery. No one protected him or stood by his side except Mut'am ibn ‘Adi,(1) who was a disbeliever. Nevertheless, Allah Glorified is He used him to protect Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘And none can comprehend Your Sustainer’s forces save Him alone…’ (al-Muddaththir: 31). Similarly, during the Hijra, he took as his guide Abdullah ibn Urayqit,(2) who was also an unbeliever.

(1) Muta’m ibn ‘Adi was one of Quraysh’s allies and chiefs. It was he who sheltered Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when the latter returned from Ta’if, and rescued Sa‘d ibn 'Ubada from the hands of Quraysh after they had caught him when performing ‘Umra [Musa'b Az-Zubayri, (Nasab Quraysh)]. He also snatched and tore the document of the Quraysh related to the siege of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in Shi‘b and cutting him off from the rest of the world [An-Nuwayri, (Nihayat Al-Arab fi Funun Al-Adab)].

(2) He was the guide of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and Abu Bakr during their higra (migration) to Medina. He followed his people’s religion; I have not=

Then He Glorified is He tells them to look at the land of Islam and the land of unbelief; Islam began from Mecca, the Mother of Villages, and its surroundings; now it is conquering the entire earth, east, and west. The land of Islam is growing, and the land of unbelief is shrinking. ‘Have, then, they [who deny the truth] never yet seen how We visit the earth [with Our punishment], gradually depriving it of all that is best thereon? For, [when] God judges, there is no power that could repel His judgment…’ (ar-Ra‘d: 41). Did they not learn a lesson from that: ‘…For, [when] God judges, there is no power that could repel His judgment...’ (ar-Ra‘d: 41).

Could there be any doubt that Allah helps His Religion? Did this illiterate nation not conquer the greatest civilisations on earth of the time – the Persian civilisation in the East and the Roman civilisation in the West – simultaneously and in a short period? Despite their military techniques and skills in warfare, which the Arabs did not have and did not master, they nevertheless became victorious!

It was narrated that elephants were used in their wars, of which the Arabs knew nothing. However, Allah inspired Sa‘d ibn Abu Waqqas to do a trick by which he would overcome the elephants. He learned that the elephant’s trunk is its weak point, so he ordered special swords to be made, with which warriors would strike the elephants’ trunks, thus bringing them down.(1)

It was only a matter of half a century before Islam entered all these countries, east, and west, finding in them supporters and followers. Some embraced Islam out of piety and conviction, whereas others – because they found in it what they had been looking for: justice and tolerance, as opposed to the oppression of the rulers, and the abundance of injustice and perversion.

= seen his name mentioned among the Companions except in Dhahabi’s (Tajrid). 'Abd Al-Ghani Al-Muqaddasi stated in his Sira that he does not seem to have converted to Islam; An-Nawawi in his Tahdhib Al-Asmaa upheld the same view [(Al-Isaba fi Ma'rifati As-Sahaba) 2/100].

(1) In the section on the elephant’s trunk, in his Kitab Al-Hayawan, Al-Jahiz states, ‘On the day of Qadisiyya, Zuhara ibn Juya asked, “Is it impossible to kill this animal?” They told him that it was possible – by hitting its trunk. Therefore, he charged on them until he became close; then he approached an elephant, and each of them attacked the other. He then struck its trunk and it fell, and the enemy retreated.’

All such signs can be inferred from the verse: ‘We shall show them Our signs in every region of the earth…’ (Fussilat: 53). The Islamic conquest, which spread throughout the world, is the foremost of signs. You could not prevent this extensive spread because Allah Glorified is He promised it to the believers and the Messengers. Such promise was not made in secret, but it is declared in the Quran, to be recited and promulgated until the Day of Resurrection. Allah took it upon Himself to keep and fulfil His promise, even though people record their own rights on other people so that they will not forget them, they do not do the same concerning others’ rights on them. Being given by Allah Glorified is He such promise will be fulfilled come what may.

Another meaning inferred from the verse: ‘We shall show them Our signs in every region of the earth and in themselves, until it becomes clear to them that this is the Truth…’ (Fussilat: 53) is that victory is in the offing. Muslims, in the beginning, were persecuted and were not yet allowed to fight back, that some of them had even died before Allah’s promise of victory was fulfilled. Nonetheless, once they read the verse in question, they knew that victory was coming even if they died before witnessing its fruition.

It is clear that Allah Glorified is He did not command Muslims to fight until belief and faith struck firm roots in their souls and hearts. One of Prophet Muhammad’s Companions asked him, ‘Is it true that what stands between me and Paradise is that I fight them and they kill me?’ To which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, ‘Yes indeed!’ In turn, the man threw down the date which he had been chewing, and hurried to the battlefield, hastening to his martyrdom. It was because faith was deeply rooted in his heart, telling him that he would go to a better place, and that he was about to enter paradise, as wide as the sky and the earth.(1)

The Arabic future particle sin (shall) in the verse: ‘...We shall show them our signs...’ (Fussilat: 53) means He keeps bestowing upon us endless gifts until the Last Day, which will be the greatest sign. Allah Glorified is He shall show them His signs at all times, which will be in favour of this religion bringing about victory to its followers in every region of the earth. The Quranic phrase: '...in themselves...' (Fussilat: 53) signifies the signs found in oneself, one's person, flesh, blood, soul, limbs and organs; in every cell of one's body is a sign to contemplate.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [Hadith no. 3740] from Jabir ibn 'Abdullah who narrated, ‘A man once asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him on the day of Uhud, “Can you see where I will be if I am killed?” He replied, “In Paradise”. Thus, the man threw the dates in his hand and fought until he was killed.’ The same narration was narrated by Muslim in his Sahih [3518].

Allah Glorified is He created man from clay, and then informed us of the stages of his creation. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not a scientist nor did he know anatomy, or embryology; he was Divinely informed about these. Modern science then came to affirm what Allah Glorified is He tells us regarding the creation of man from clay, procreation through humble fluid, and developmental stages from a blood clot, then a clinging substance, then a foetus, then bones, until the bones are covered with flesh.

Wonders and marvellous things in ourselves, of which we had no idea, are revealed to us every day by virtue of knowledge. Reading the latest discoveries of science on the human body, one finds in himself a wondrous world and a firmly and delicately built structure. Truthful is what the poet composes (1):

You think that you are but a small body,
But in you, a great world is hidden.(2)

Some wonders of creation were previously discussed, such as body temperature. It is normally thirty-seven degrees for those who live on the equator and who live near the two poles alike. Notwithstanding this fact, the temperature inside the body does not change, but even each organ is kept at the most convenient temperature. For instance, the liver's temperature is always forty degrees, while the eye's does not exceed nine. Although they are in the same body, their temperatures do not affect one another.

(1) The poet is 'Abd Al-Latif ibn Ali Fath Allah, a litterateur from Beirut. He worked as a judge and a mufti, and is known as Al-Mufti Fath Allah. He composed fine poetry, published in a Diwan (book containing a collection of poems), poetic stories, and a collection of poems in his own handwriting, composed in his youth in the year 1200 AH. He died in the year 1260 AH [(Al-Mawsua Ash-Shi'riyya)].

(2) The line is quoted from a poem written in the Mutaqarib meter, consisting of six lines.

Consider how blood, the liquid of life, preserves its degree of fluidity in the body, which, if it exceeds, causes haemorrhage; but if it fails to reach that degree, it may cause a clot or paralysis, Allah forbid!

Ponder over how mysterious, powerful, and wondrous the kidneys are. If one of them fails to function properly, the other takes over its task, making up for the lost one. Accordingly, one can live with one kidney if the other one is lost. On this basis, transplantation of kidneys from one person to another is forbidden. The Creator Glorified is He has given us two kidneys; each has one million cells, ready to function. Only a hundred thousand of them function, if they stop working, the other hundred thousand take over, and so on.

How do kidneys fail? The scientist explains that it happens when the one hundred thousand cells stop working, but the next hundred thousand do not function and substitute them. Therefore, taking a kidney from one person to another is a crime and a suicide, in my viewpoint. In such case, if the donor's other kidney stops working, he will die.

One of the wonders and Divine signs in man's creation is the skin and whatever it conceals of secrets revealed in the verse, speaking of the punishment of the unbelievers: '…every time their skins are burnt off We shall replace them with new skins, so that they may taste suffering [in full]…' (an-Nisa': 56).

It is deduced from this verse that skin is the organ of feeling, if it burns, the sense of feeling gets lost. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He replaces their skins so that they taste the chastisement which never ceases. It was not until before the World War that this fact was known worldwide. The Germans discovered that the skin is the organ of feeling, based on the evidence that when you receive an injection, you only feel pain the moment your skin is pierced by the needle, and then you stop feeling it. The Quran told us about this wonder long before the whole world could know it.

Furthermore, one of Allah's wonders is the natural pharmacy in our bodies, which cures every emerging illness. This is inferred from the verse: '...out of an embryonic lump complete [in itself] and yet incomplete...' (al-Hajj: 5). Al-Mudgha Al-Mukhallaqa (the formed lump of flesh) is that from which man's internal and external body organs have been formed and is referred to as ‘complete’; whereas ‘incomplete’ refers to that which remains in the body as a substitute, making up for what it lacks and curing its illnesses. For example, one of the modern ways to cure wounds and ulcers is for them to be left to the natural healing ability of the body, without recourse to chemical substances that leave traces on the skin.

Observe one of your limbs, or any of your body’s systems. Consider how balanced and straight man is made, how balanced, and erect he becomes. Look at the palm of your hand, at its fingers, symmetry, regularity, and flexibility.

Ponder over the digestive or respiratory system. Reflect on how your heart, which is merely a muscle not exceeding the size of your fist, works unstoppably from birth to death. These signs, wonders, and mysteries show the Omnipotence and marvellous creation of the Creator Glorified is He.

Allah will keep showing His signs at all times as stated in the verse: ‘…We shall show them Our signs…’ (Fussilat: 53) so that every day we discover and contemplate more marvellous signs in His creation, in every region of the earth and in ourselves. On reading the Quran, one finds it encompassing past, present, and future: ‘Have, then, they [who deny the truth] never yet seen how We visit the earth [with Our punishment], gradually depriving it of all that is best thereon...’ (ar-Ra‘d: 41). With respect to the future, Allah Glorified is He states: ‘We shall show them Our signs in every region of the earth and in themselves until it becomes clear to them that this is the Truth…’ (Fussilat: 53).

The Arabic particle sawfa (shall) is used in the Quran to signify the distant future, alluding to the incidents occurring in the Hereafter. This is clear in the verse: ‘But in time you will come to know who it is that [in this world] shall be visited by suffering which will cover him with disgrace, and upon whom long-lasting suffering shall fall [in the life to come]!’ (Hud: 39)

The future tense of a verb whose subject is Allah Glorified is He is different from one whose subject is man. For Allah Glorified is He Time whether past, present, or future – is one and the same. Look at the verse: ‘Allah’s judgment is [bound to] come: do not, therefore, call for its speedy advent...’ (an-Nahl: 1); it implies the Day of Resurrection despite the past tense in the Arabic text.

Some orientalists accused the Quran of being inconsistent, claiming that it uses the verb ‘come’ in the past tense, whereas the verb ‘...do not, therefore, call for its speedy advent!’ is used in the future tense. It should be noted that Allah Glorified is He to whom belongs time in its entirety, is the One speaking here. He Glorified is He uses the past form of the verb ‘come’ on account of His Omnipotence and Unity, given that no one can prevent Him from doing it. Hence, the Resurrection being undeniable truth, He Glorified is He uses the past tense to allude to it, as if it has already happened.

The Quranic verse: ‘...We shall show them Our signs...’ (Fussilat: 53) is true for all times, therefore each generation finds in the Quran a new gift. Thus, today we know of such Divine signs – in the universe and in humans – which were unknown to people in the Prophet’s time, although they existed and the Quran spoke about them.

I once asked some economists, ‘when was the lift invented?’ They replied, ‘In the year such and such,’ that is, in the twentieth century. Now, read the following verse: ‘And were it not that [with the prospect of boundless riches before them] all people would become one [evil] community, We might indeed have provided for those who [now] deny the Most Gracious roofs of silver for their houses, and [silver] stairways whereon to ascend’ (az-Zukhruf: 33). The word ‘stairways’ indicates what is known at present as the lift!

Likewise, the steamboats and the gigantic many-storied ships, which appear in the sea as if they are moving cities! Although they did not exist at the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they are mentioned in the chapter of ar-Rahman: ‘And His are the lofty ships that sail like [floating] mountains through the seas’ (ar-Rahman: 24). Thus, Allah Glorified is He created and He knows what will happen to His creation in the future.

A question may be raised as to why these signs did not appear at the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his Companions. The answer is that had it happened, the Quran would have become depleted of its miracles and wonders in one century. In this way, the following centuries receiving the Quran will be left with no wondrous gifts or marvellous signs to dazzle and show them the Omnipotence of the Creator Glorified is He.

Allah Glorified is He wants each new generation to receive the Quran in a new way, taking a share of its gifts so as to be assured that He Glorified is He Who sent it down in the past contained therein what will happen in the future. This is also to prove that Allah Glorified is He is One, with no partner to object to what He says.

Allah Glorified is He says: '…until it becomes clear to them that this is the truth…' (Fussilat: 53) which means they will understand that the Quran is the Truth and that Allah is the Truth. Truth indicates something steady and unchangeable, the opposite of which is falsehood, which is unstable and untrue; truth glitters, falsehood falters.

Allah Glorified is He portrays truth and falsehood in a material, observable way, saying: '[Whenever] He sends down water from the sky, and [once-dry] river-beds are running high according to their measure, the stream carries scum on its surface; and, likewise, from that [metal] which they smelt in the fire in order to make ornaments or utensils, [there rises] scum. In this way does Allah set forth the parable of truth and falsehood: for, as far as the scum is concerned, it passes away as [does all] dross; but that which is of benefit to man abides on earth' (ar-Ra'd: 17).

Allah Glorified is He is the Truth, and what He says is truthful. Some people see the reason for the truthfulness of His speech, while others doubt, as the signs are hidden from them for some time, until incidents show and prove, by actions and deeds, that it is the truth from Allah Glorified is He.

At some point, falsehood may prevail, but in the end, truth must triumph, hence the saying, falsehood rules for an hour, whereas truth rules until the last Hour. The believer who is knowledgeable and who firmly believes in Allah's help does not care if falsehood prevails, for he knows that its victory is transitory. He will patiently wait for the hour when truth prevails, and falsehood departs.

The believer knows that falsehood, when it rises, is one of truth's soldiers. Falsehood is a means of revealing truth to whoever does not know it, for it is through the contrast of opposites that goodness is perceived. Were it not for the suffering and disasters which falsehood inflicts on people, they would not know truth nor yearn for it.

Reflecting on the Quranic formulation: '…brought utterly low the cause of those who were bent on denying the truth, whereas Allah's Cause remained supreme…' (at-Tawba: 40), one understands that truth is stable, being the foundation upon which all creation rests. Although the word of the unbelievers might rise high, it ends up being lowest, for Allah brings it down.

On the other hand, in the phrase: '...whereas God's Cause remained supreme…' (at-Tawba: 40), the word kalamat (God's cause) stands as the subject of the sentence, which means it is fundamentally supreme – rather than made as such. Unlike 'the cause of the disbelievers,' it is never the lowest. Thus, not only did Allah make His cause supreme, it is supreme by its nature. Falsehood rises, afflicting people with disasters, to remind and guide people to the truth.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says: '…Is it not enough that your Lord witnesses everything?' (Fussilat: 53) Indeed, it is enough that He Glorified is He sees and knows, and that nothing can hide from Him. It is as if Allah Glorified is He were telling them that it is not befitting that you should wait for signs in order for you to believe in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. You should rather believe immediately because what he tells you is from Allah, Who is a witness over him, and no one can dispute with what He says, or overrule what He commands.

When asked as to why Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him was called (As-Siddiq), that is one who confirms the truth, we answer that it is because when he was told that his friend claims prophecy, he merely said without arguing, 'if he says so, then it is true.' Similarly, when he learned about Prophet Muhammad's heavenly ascension, he said the same thing, without waiting for the Quran to be revealed and reassure him of that.

The Quran was revealed to convince the adamant unbelievers and the doubters, but As-Siddiq has the highest degree of certainty and belief. It was enough for him to have known how truthful Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was throughout his earlier life, which stands as evidence of his truthfulness in the meantime.

The word 'witnesses' (Fussilat: 53) here alludes to a witness who affirms truth, a judge who judges with it, and an executive power enforcing rulings.

Then Allah Glorified is He states:

أَلَآ إِنَّهُمۡ فِي مِرۡيَةٖ مِّن لِّقَآءِ رَبِّهِمۡۗ أَلَآ إِنَّهُۥ بِكُلِّ شَيۡءٖ مُّحِيطُۢ ٥٤

Truly, they doubt that they will meet their Lord;
truly He encompasses everything [54]
(The Quran, Fussilat: 54)

The Arabic word ala (truly) is used to introduce a new idea. Not to surprise the listener, the speaker uses this linguistic device, alerting him to what he is going to tell, lest anything should escape him, as if he were saying, ‘be prepared, and listen to what I will tell you, for it is important!’

The important part then is: ‘...they doubt that they will meet their Lord…’ (Fussilat: 54), that is, the unbelievers doubt resurrection after death, thinking that Allah created them in this world, and with that it all ends! They doubt the return after death, punishment, and reward, and do not pay heed to the Day of Judgment. Why? It is because they did not send ahead good deeds for this meeting, therefore they act heedlessly towards it. Some of them, with false desire, think this meeting is a lie, thereby denying resurrection, punishment, and reward. Others – acknowledging the truth of this meeting – are full of haughtiness, claiming: ‘…if [it should come, and] I should indeed be brought back to my Sustainer, then, the ultimate good awaits me with Him...’ (Fussilat: 50). Yet others say: ‘…if [it should come, and] I am brought before my Sustainer, I will surely find something even better than this as [my last] resort!’ (al-Kahf: 36)

Thus, they are in ‘doubt’ about this day, that is, they are suspicious, distrustful, and uncertain. The Arabic root for the word mirya (doubt) implies dispute with false argument, stubbornness, and pride, directed against accepting and submitting to the truth. Therefore, the word jadal (dispute) signifies a discussion that brings two sides to an agreement, to a satisfactory outcome. On the other hand, the word mira’ (quarrel) suggests a discussion where each side wins for itself, not caring whether it reaches truth or not.

Allah Glorified is He teaches us how to disagree, argue and dispute in the Quranic verse: ‘Say: “I counsel you one thing only:”...’ (Saba’: 46) – and what is that, Lord? '..."Be [ever-conscious of] standing before God, whether you are in the company of others or alone; and then ponder [within yourselves that] there is no madness in [this prophet,] your fellow-man"…' (Saba': 46). That is to say, do not decide on a matter collectively in front of the masses, rather do it alone or in pairs. The judgment of crowds is not disciplined, as every side there wants their view to prevail, unwilling to lose the dispute in front of others, thus persisting in their falsehood.

We have previously stated that the clamour of crowds drowns individual voices making them indistinct. For example, The poet Ahmad Shawqi depicts this situation in his play about Cleopatra, after she had been defeated in the battle of Actium(1):

Listen to people Dayun
How they inspire him!
They have filled the air with shouts which demand the lives of his two murderers.
Lie has left its mark on him,
and falsehood has covered him.
Oh what a parrot,
whose intellect is in its ears!

It is shameful that they doubt, not paradise for instance, but: 'Truly, they doubt that they will meet their Lord…' (Fussilat: 54).

This is great shame and a disgrace! As the saying goes, the flesh of their faces falls off from shame before Allah Glorified is He. When they return to Allah, full of regret, they find themselves standing before Him, after having disbelieved, rejected and denied Him in the worldly life. This reality, then, takes them by surprise: '…he finds [that] Allah [has always been present] with him, and [that] He will pay him his account in full – for Allah is swift in reckoning!' (an-Nur: 39)

---

(1) This battle took place in September, in the year 31 BC; here, Octavian defeated Julius Caesar's heir [Wikipedia].

Had they doubted their Lord’s bliss, it would have been acceptable because people vary as to the degrees and levels of the good deeds they accomplish. Some do good fearing the fire, while others do it out of longing for paradise. Yet others do good deeds out of love for Allah Who imposed upon them performing good deeds, seeking His pleasure. It is not fear of His fire nor longing for paradise that motivates them, it is rather Allah Himself.

Rabi’a Al-‘Adawiyya was reported to have said to Allah Glorified is He during one of her meditations, ‘O Lord, if I worship You in hope of paradise, deprive me of it. If I worship you for fear of hellfire, burn me in it. Nay, I love You because You deserve to be loved.’ Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…whoever looks forward [with hope and awe] to meeting his Sustainer [on Judgment Day], let him do righteous deeds, and let him not ascribe to anyone or anything a share in the worship due to his Sustainer!’ (al-Kahf: 110) In the verse, the word ‘anything’ encompasses paradise.

In the verse: ‘...truly, He encompasses everything’ (Fussilat: 54) another truth is affirmed by the introductory device ala (truly). It means that Allah’s knowledge completely encompasses everything and no one escapes from Him. Not even the weight of an atom becomes absent from Him in the heavens or on the earth. Encompassing indicates covering something from all sides.

the chapter of

ash-Shura

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of as-Shura[1] (Consultation):

Allah Glorified is He states:

حمٓ ﴿١﴾ عٓسٓقٓ ﴿٢﴾

Ha Mim [1] '*Ayn Sin Qaf [2]
(The Quran, ash-Shura: 1-2)

These opening letters are one of many instances in which individual, unconnected letters appear at the beginning of several chapters throughout the Noble Quran. Although such letters have already been discussed in several places, it is worth remembering here that the entire Quran is connected and unified – verses are connected to other verses, chapters to other chapters, all united from beginning to end. Thus we read, for example: 'from all [temptation to evil by] invisible forces as well as men' (an-Nas: 6), the last verse in the Quran, in which the final kasra (vowel) connects back to: 'In the Name of Allah, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy' (al-Fatiha: 1) in the chapter of al-Fatiha.

With regard to how to read letters such as these, they are each pronounced separately; in this particular chapter, they are read: 'Ha. Mim. 'Ayn. Sin. Qaf.'

(1) The chapter of ash-Shura comes forty-second (42) according to the order of chapters in the Noble Quran, having been revealed immediately after the chapter of Fussilat. It is a Meccan chapter, according to Al-Hassan, 'Ikrama, 'Ata and Jabar. Ibn 'Abbas and Qatada maintain that only four verses from it were revealed in Medina. They start with the verse: '…Say [O Prophet]: "No reward do I ask of you for this [message] other than [that you should] love your fellow-men"…' (ash-Shura: 23) up to and including the verse: 'and responds to all who attain to faith and do righteous deeds…' (ash-Shura: 26).

We read the individual letters: 'Alif. Lam. Mim.' in the beginning of the chapter of al-Baqara, as well as the beginning of the chapter of ash-Sharh, in different ways in spite of the letters being the same. In the chapter of ash-Sharh, we read them as one word: 'Alm' 'Have we not opened up your heart?' (ash-Sharh: 1) These and other separate letters show up in various chapters, in order for the reader to understand that the Quran is unlike any other book; and, moreover, to learn that its recitation depends on the fact that a person who recites it has heard it recited before. This is the intended meaning of the verse: 'Thus, when We recite it, follow its wording [with all thy mind]: [18] and then, surely, it will be for Us to make its meaning clear [19]' (al-Qiyama: 18-19).

Given such reflection on these letters, it becomes clear that there is wisdom in reciting the Quran with a mind to its overarching interconnectedness, while at the same time focusing on the separate pronunciation of individual letters. Indeed, it is individual letters which provide the building blocks for words, and, subsequently, broader linguistic constructs such as expressions and phrases. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him expounded the importance of pronouncing these letters from the Quran individually, 'I do not pronounce the letters Alif-Lam-Mim as one letter; rather, I pronounce Alif as one letter, and Lam as another letter, and Mim as another.'(1)

The letters which appear in a language can be divided into two major types. The first type involves letters utilised as building blocks to create broader linguistic constructs, such as words and phrases. For example, the word 'to write' (kataba) in Arabic is made up of three consonants – Kaf, Ta, and Ba – which only have meaning when grouped together and arranged to create words. The second type of letters entails those which carry meaning individually. A good example of this type is the Arabic letter Kaf, which may act as a preposition of comparison when placed at the beginning of words. In the phrase, 'the soldier is like a lion' (al-jundi kal-asad), the individual letter Kaf stands at the front of the word 'like a lion' (kal-asad) as a means of pointing out the similarity between a soldier and the feline predator. However, it is clear from this instance that even though letters of this second type carry meaning in and of themselves, they must still be attached to other words in order to create that meaning.

(1) 'Abdullah ibn Mas'ud narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'He who recites a letter from the Book of Allah obtains a good deed therein, one good deed equals ten such good deeds. I do not pronounce the letters Alif-Lam-Mim as one letter; rather, I pronounce Alif as one letter, and Lam as another letter and Mim as another.' Narrated by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2910); he rated it as authentic.

It should also be pointed out that language is a social phenomenon, shared by a community and by which every nation and people express desires and goals and cooperates with one another. Language is, as some scholars have put it, the daughter of imitation: that which the ears hear, the tongue will surely reproduce. By way of example, if a young boy were raised in an Arab society, he would speak Arabic; if he were brought up in an English-speaking country, he would of course speak English. This is so because language is not an inherent physical trait, such as blood type or physical gender; rather, it is a social phenomenon based on hearing the spoken language, then repeating it. A native speaker of a particular language might even not understand certain words from his own language when he encounters them for the first time despite the fact that they are fully of that language simply because he has never heard them before.

It was narrated that the grammarian Abu Aqlama(1) was infatuated with pure, classical Arabic, and would speak it all the time. He would frequently employ obscure, esoteric expressions which frustrated his servant boy no end, since he could not understand his master. One night, Abu Aqlama awoke from his slumber and asked the servant, 'Hey boy! asa'akat al-atarif?'(2) (These are strange, old Arabic words.) The servant boy had no idea what this meant, and he responded in a tone of annoyance: 'ziq faylam!' (These are words the servant fabricated.) This astounded Abu Aqlama, who asked him, 'What does 'ziq faylam!' mean?' His servant boy asked, 'Well, what does 'asa'akat al-atarif' mean?' Abu Aqlama responded: 'I meant to ask: "Have the cocks crowed?"' His servant said, 'Well, I meant to say, "No, they have not."'

(1) The story of Abu Aqlama the grammarian with the maid

(2) This tale first appeared in the book Dictionary of the Literati Mu'jam al-udaba' from Yaqut Al-Hamwi, who quotes from Abu Bakr Mohammad ibn Khalaf ibn Al-Marzuban in the Book of Weighty Matters Kitab ath-thuqala'. Concerning the grammarian Abu Aqlama, also known as An-Namiri, Yaqut al-Hamwi states, 'He is of the people of Wasit.'

There is another story(1) from among various anecdotes about the vagaries of language that illustrates the point that even native speakers of a language are confounded by words which they have never heard before. A man went to the doctor, named A‘yun*,* who asked the man what was ailing him. The man said, ‘I have eaten the meat of these jawazi’, and I tasa’tu from it a tas’ah which has afflicted me with such pain that spread from al-wabilah to da’yat al-unuq. Since then, it has gotten worse, to the point that khalat al-halb, causing me pain in the sharasif,’ (all are incomprehensible words). The doctor said, ‘Would you please repeat that? I did not understand a word of what you said.’ The man repeated his complaint, after which the doctor said, ‘Take hurqufan, salqafan, sarqafan, zahraqah and zaqzaqah, then convulse it all together and dilute with dung water, then drink!’ In response, the man asked, ‘Would you please repeat that? I did not understand a word of what you said.’ The doctor exclaimed, ‘May Allah curse whichever of us is most responsible for these ludicrous misunderstandings!’(2)

As previously mentioned, these and other examples illustrate that language is the result of imitation, since all language learning is ultimately based on listening to what other people say, then repeating it ourselves. A small child learns to speak by first listening to what family members say around him; likewise, a deaf-mute person cannot speak because he is unable to hear. This is why the Most High says, ‘Deaf, dumb and blind…’ (al-Baqara: 18). Muteness follows deafness since the reason for muteness is that a deaf person cannot hear the sounds characteristic of a particular language. If we trace the chain of language learning back to its source, we find our father Adam peace be upon him:

(1) The story of A‘yun, the medicine man with a patient

(2) This story also happens to be about the grammarian Abu Aqlama, and which story Ibn Al-Jawzi recalls in the reports of Al-Hamqa and the Heedless Ones, in the chapter ‘On the Lack of Desinential Inflection in the Swimmer’s Speech’ Adam mukhatib Al-Awam bil-‘irab. Here, the phrase ‘hump-backed ungulate’ jawazim means ‘camel,’ that is the man ate camel meat. ‘I was afflicted with dyspepsia’ tasa’tu means ‘I had indigestion,’ especially as a result of eating fatty foods. The man in the story is inflicted with indigestion, which causes discomfort from the heads of his femurs that is, the top of his thighbones all the way to his nape that is, the back of his neck and back. The pain continued to spread until it reached his ureters, which cover areas between the heart and the liver, causing him pain at the outer extremities of his ribs.

we learned language from our parents, and they learned from their parents, and so on, leading all the way back to Adam peace be upon him who was taught language by his Lord, Allah Glorified is He. We understand this to be the case when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And He taught Adam all the names…’ (al-Baqara: 31) meaning the names of all things found in creation. It is clear from this explanation that Allah Glorified is He is the original Teacher of language, and the source thereof.

There is another observation to be made about the disjointed letters found throughout the Quran, which is that, through such letters, we learn to exercise faith in the Unseen. The True Lord has imbued all creation with both visible and unseen aspects, and there are times in which He uses that which is seen to imply the Unseen. For example, one of the central tenets of the true religion, we believe in, is that there is a Creator for the universe; we can give evidence of this with Allah’s visible signs, in the universe.

However, this doctrine of The Creator also involves faith in things unseen that have no visible or tangible evidence, such as the existence of angels. Likewise, the creed also has unseen matters that cannot be physically observed: as long as there are acts of obedience and acts of disobedience, there must be a paradise and a hell, and the grave stage that precedes this, with its bliss or torment. In spite of this, we believe in these unseen aspects of creation because they are made known to us by that Allah Glorified is He in whom we have faith, and in whose saying on these matters we trust.

In sum, every outward, visible aspect of true doctrines carries with it an unseen aspect at the same time. It is belief in the Unseen which is the litmus test of faith, and of the strength of one’s belief in the true religion, for anyone can believe in what is seen.

By way of example, let us suppose that a man employs a servant, whom the man requests to remove a large stone from his garden. The servant complains: ‘But it is quite a heavy stone; I do not think I can lift it!’ His master responds: ‘Well, there is a sack of money hidden under the stone; when you remove the rock from on top of it, I will pay you your wages from the money in that sack.’ The servant then rushes to the stone and easily removes it from the garden! This is a clear example of faith in what is seen, rather than what is unseen: the servant was motivated to remove the stone only after receiving the promise of a tangible reward. As this example makes clear, everyone can believe in what is clearly visible; which is why belief in the Unseen is the true test of faith. Hence Allah's description of true believers as: 'Those who believe in the Unseen…' (al-Baqara: 3).

What we have just discussed regarding belief in the Unseen also applies to the word of the True Lord and His Noble Quran that include words and letters which carry meaning, as well as letters that do not carry meaning and whose interpretation is unclear to us; such as the disjointed letters which we believe in though unseen.

As discussed previously, the disjointed letters appearing throughout the Quran comprise half of the total Arabic alphabet, namely fourteen out of twenty-eight letters in all. Further reflection confirms that the letters have been selected in a way that is anything but random or haphazard. Let us divide the Arabic alphabet into three segments: two groups of nine letters apiece, comprising the first and last nine letters of the alphabet, with a third group consisting of the remaining ten letters in the middle of the alphabet. We notice that, of the fourteen Arabic letters that appear at the beginning of Quranic chapters, only two, Alif and Ha', are taken from the first group, leaving behind seven others. Seven of the last nine letters appear disjointed throughout the Quran, leaving behind two from that group. Of the remaining ten letters from the middle of the alphabet, only those without diacritical marks appear as disjointed letters in the Quran, leaving behind those requiring such marks. From this, we see a method and a wise purpose in the selection of the disjointed letters in the Quran.

As we read the Quran, we strive to interpret what these letters mean; the mind might keep mulling over any number of explanations for their presence; sometimes it succeeds and sometimes it fails. However, we must eventually admit that only Allah Glorified is He knows their meaning for certain. Each scholar and learned man who attempts to understand them or to extract wisdom from them is deemed diligent, and he will be rewarded.

What is most important for us to remember, is that the True Lord desires for us to have faith in these letters and to accept them as they are, whether or not we fully understand them. They are like the grooves in a key, which have order and which fit perfectly inside a specific lock, even though they may look random to us. The person using the key only needs to understand its ultimate purpose and function and to trust that the locksmith understands the secrets of his trade.

It is true that we try to encompass the meaning of these letters with our understanding; as mentioned, such efforts may even bear fruit, in the form of interpretation or explanation. However, the Quran continues to be inimitable, just as these letters continue to offer us renewed, inexhaustible inspiration. When the Quran challenged the Arabs and made them stand helpless and unable to produce even one verse, some took this to mean that their prestige was diminished, since they were unable to produce such language themselves; but that challenge actually indicated their skill, eloquence, and command of the language; if not so, the Quran would not have challenged them. Thus, the challenge actually honoured and elevated them; for Allah Glorified is He set their skills as standards for language proficiency.

When the Quran came to the Arabs in its inimitability, it did not do so with words or letters unknown to Arabic before that point; the linguistic components of the Quran are the same found in the Arabic language generally. Despite this, however, the Word of the True Lord continues to be inimitable, and the Arabs who first received it were unable to come up with anything like it. It is inimitable because it is the Word of Allah Glorified is He who speaks matchless words through His own abundant Power; His incomparable words reflect His own inimitable Nature and Authority. Mortal words, by contrast, are not inimitable, since they come from us, humans, and therefore reflect our own weakness and inability.

The chapter of ash-Shura is one of several chapters known as the hawamim(1), which denote the fact that they begin with the individual letters Ha Mim.

(1) Hawamim chapters, as noted, are those in which Allah the Most High begins by saying, 'Ha. Mim.' There are seven total Hawamim in the Quran: al-Mu'minun, Fussilat, ash-Shura, az-Zukhruf, ad-Dukhan, al-Jathiya and al-Ahqaf. 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him describes them as the 'brides of the Quran'; Ibn 'Abbas calls them the 'quintessence of the Quran'. Ibn Mas'ud states that the Hawamim are the 'Quran's silk brocade' see Al-'Iqd Al-farid by Ibn Abd Rabbuh, in the section 'On their statements against the Quran'.

Quranic chapters begin with these and other such letters in any number of combinations. For example, there are some which begin with only one individual letter, such as Nun, Qaf or Sad. Others have two letters, such as Ta Sin. There are some which start with three-letter groupings, like Alif Lam Mim and Ta Sin Mim. Still, others have combinations of four letters, including Alif Lam Mim Ra, and Alif Lam Mim Sad. Finally, there are chapters beginning with five-letter groups, such as Ha Mim 'Ayn Sin Qaf,(1) and Kaf Ha Ya ‘Ayn Sad. As stated, we are unsure as to the meaning of such letters, but we believe them to come from the Unseen, in which we are commanded to have faith. As for attempts at explaining these letters, it is best to say that only Allah Glorified is He knows what they mean with any certainty.

Then, the True Lord says:

كَذَٰلِكَ يُوحِىٓ إِلَيۡكَ وَإِلَى ٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبۡلِكَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلۡعَزِيزُ ٱلۡحَكِيمُ ۝٣

This is how God, the Mighty, the Wise, sends revelation to you [Prophet] as He did to those before you [3] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 3)

The letter Kaf in the Arabic word for kadhalika (this is how) means ‘like’ or ‘as’, indicating similitude; the word dhalika is an indicative pronoun that refers back to the disjointed letters that preceded this verse: it is through such means as these letters that ‘…He Allah, the Mighty, the Wise, sends revelation to you [Prophet] as He did to those before you’ (ash-Shura: 3). The disjointed letters, along with that which comes afterward, are revelation from Allah Glorified is He to His prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

(1) In his Quranic exegesis, Al-Qurtubi quotes from Al-Hussayn ibn Fadl, who put forth the question, ‘Why are some individual letters in the Quran connected or separated in the way that they are? For example, in the group of letters ‘Ha-Mim ‘Ayn-Sin-Qaf,’ why are the first two letters separated from the last three? This is in contrast to other five-letter groupings in the Quran, such as ‘Kaf-Ha-Ya-‘Ayn-Sad,’ which are all connected in one group. The answer is that the five-letter combination ‘Ha-Mim. ‘Ayn-Sin-Qaf’ appears among other chapters that begin with the ‘Ha-Mim’ combination. It therefore also starts with ‘Ha-Mim’ in the same fashion as those other chapters. But it is also set apart from them by the ‘Ayn-Sin-Qaf’ which follow, acting as if it were the predicate of ‘Ha-Mim’ in a nominal sentence.

The concept of revelation involves surreptitious communication between a speaker and a listener, or the one who reveals and the one to whom something is revealed. If a nobleman invites a guest to his house for dinner, and that nobleman wishes to give an order to his servant without the guest knowing, he gives his servant a look or whispers to him in a way that the guest does not notice. It is as though the nobleman revealed the matter unto his servant, but not to the guest.

Thus, any instance of revealed communication requires one who reveals a message, a person to whom a message is revealed, and the revealed message itself. The True Lord informs us that He concedes His revelation to whichever of his creations He pleases. This includes revelation to angels, as in the verse: ‘Your Lord revealed to the angels: “I am with you: give the believers firmness”…’ (al-Anfal: 12). Allah Glorified is He also confers revelation upon His messengers, which we learn from the verse: ‘We have sent revelation to you [Prophet] as We did to Nuh (Noah) and the prophets after him, to Ibrahim (Abraham), Ismail (Ishmael), Ishaq (Isaac), Ya’qub (Jacob)…’ (an-Nisa’: 163). In addition, He makes His revelation known unto those servants who are truly righteous, as when he also confers revelation upon the disciples of ‘Isa (Jesus), the mother of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him the ants and even inanimate objects such as the earth: ‘because your Lord will inspire it [to do so]’ (az-Zalzala: 5).

The True Lord has also informed us that devils reveal secrets to each other, as do devilish people. We read Allah’s Glorified is He statement that ‘…The evil ones incite their followers…’ (al-An‘am: 121), that is, their followers from among humans. He also says: ‘…They suggest alluring words to one another in order to deceive…’ (al-An‘am: 112). Thus, wahy (revelation), in general, is carried out surreptitiously. Moreover, the revelation may be of what is good or what is evil.

As for lawful revelation, it is that which Allah Glorified is He made known unto His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him through the angel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him who acted as an intermediary. Allah Glorified is He states: ‘It is not granted to any mortal that Allah should speak to him except through revelation or from behind a veil, or by sending a messenger to reveal by His command what He will: He is exalted and wise’ (ash-Shura: 51).

In all, lawful revelation is that which Allah Glorified is He informs His chosen messengers peace be upon them of by such means as angelic declaration or personal inspiration. Regarding this point, it has been previously explained that what is received from Allah does not clash with what is received from Satan because what is received from Allah is far more powerful and is invincible.

In the story of the mother of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him for example, Allah Glorified is He states: 'wa awhayna ila ummi Musa*'*, 'We inspired Musa's (Moses') mother…' (al-Qasas: 7). Here, the word awhayna means that Allah Glorified is He inspired Musa's (Moses') mother to action, uttering His word to her soul. By conveying revelation to her mind, He thus made it known that she should: '…Suckle him, and then, when you fear for his safety, put him in the river…' (al-Qasas: 7). Even though this inspiration came to the mother of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him in a way which reason cannot explain, the fact that she was given Divine insight left no other choice for Musa's (Moses') peace be upon him mother but to submit to and carry out Allah's command, which she did immediately.

When the True Lord wanted to inform the Companions of His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of religious matters, He sent Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him and made him appear to the Companions in the form of a man. They marvelled as Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him began to question the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him about faith and submission to Allah Glorified is He and acts of charity, listening as he put forth queries and affirmed the Messenger's responses. When the questioning had ended, the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Indeed, Jibril (Gabriel) came today in order to teach you about matters pertaining to your religion.'(1)

(1) Quoting from 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him: 'Meanwhile, we were tarrying in the presence of the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when there appeared to us a man with an exceedingly white robe and dark hair. He showed no signs of fatigue from travel, even though he had only just come to us. Even though none of us knew who he was, he came over and sat down next to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him rested his knees together, put his hands on his thighs and leaned forward, and inquired, "O Muhammad, speak to me of true religion Al-Islam." He, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, "True=

In the verse under consideration, then, we gain insight into the nature of Allah’s role as the One Who reveals: ‘This is how He Allah, the Mighty, the Wise, sends revelation to you [Prophet] as He did to those before you’ (ash-Shura: 3). He does not use the phrase ‘your Lord’ here, and uses ‘Allah’ which places more emphasis on Allah’s Divinity, which emphasises His Divine role as the object of worship. This means that He has established the Path for us to follow, complete with accompanying obligations and commandments to those who follow the true religion. Thus, the bestowal of Divinity is that of obligation. As for the bestowal of Lordship, it includes such attributes as nurturance, protection, and the bestowal of gifts without remuneration.

In both of these bestowals of the Tue Lord, it is clear that He receives nothing in return from His servants when they follow Him. He does not benefit from their obedience to His commandments, nor is He harmed when rebellious souls struggle against Him. We therefore understand that He established the right Way and its necessary obligations for our sake alone. He gives us commands so that we might find happiness for ourselves, and peace in society. When He reveals His Will and Command to humankind, it is as if He were saying: ‘I wish for you to be happy in your association with other people. Establish a clean, pure society, free from malice or envy or hypocrisy, in which all might live in love and peace. Seek out virtue and shun vice. I give you my right Way because you are my servants and my creations, and every creator wants what is best for his creations, deeming them to deserve better than depravity and wickedness.’

= religion is this: to testify that there is no Allah but the one true Allah, and that Muhammad is His Messenger. It means supplicating the Lord in prayer, giving obligatory alms to the poor, fasting during the month of Ramadan, and performing the pilgrimage if one has the means.” The man affirmed the correctness of this response, then asked, “Speak to me of faith.” The Prophet, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, “Faith means believing in Allah, His angels, Writings and Messengers, and believing in the Day of Reckoning and the Final Judgment apportioned to every person, whether for good or ill.” The man again affirmed the correctness of this response, and then said, “Speak to me of doing good works.” The Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, “This means serving Allah as if we could see Him. For even if we do not see Him, we know that He sees us and sees our works.’’’ Al-Bukhari extracted this account for its correctness, and later reaffirmed it as a correct saying.

That is why, we said: a wise man does not envy those who in any way are superior to him, and if he encounters an aggressor, he does not supplicate to Allah against that aggressor, but rather makes supplication for this aggressor. Moreover, if this wise man witnesses any kind of depravity, he acts to set it right, and if he meets non-Muslims, he wishes for them to become Muslims. Why? Because he is pleased when these non-Muslims become righteous, and he reaps the benefits of their following the right guidance, and enjoys the good that comes from this.

In sum, when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Allah, the Mighty, the Wise…’ (ash-Shura: 3), it indicates that He is the one who reveals this message, the source of The Book, and the Giver of the Way; in other words, He is the One Who makes commands and obligations pertinent to the true religion.

The name for Allah Glorified is He Allah has been interpreted in several ways. Some believe it to be a proper name referring to the necessary existence of a deity as the object of worship. This makes sense if we take the root of the word Allah, ‘a-l-h in another form, ma’luh, meaning ‘that which is deified’. In the original sense, that which is deified is an object of worship. However, others claim that the name ‘Allah’ is indicative not of Allah’s necessary existence as the object of worship, but of Allah’s perfect Nature and Being, and to him belongs all the attributes of perfection. Indeed, He is the Strong, the Almighty, The Powerful, the Tremendous, the Merciful, The Wise, the All-Forgiving, the Bestower, and the All-Compelling Subduer. These are just a few of the names for the True Lord, all of them adjectives that describe aspects of the perfection contained in the name Allah. Hence Allah’s statement ‘…Call on Allah, or on the Lord of Mercy – whatever names you call Him, the best names belong to Him’ (al-Isra’: 110).

By revealing these names, the True Lord has taught us how to call upon Him in various times of need. Those desirous of knowledge call upon the Omniscient; those who want strength seek after the Strong; those who need wisdom say, ‘O You, the Wise, would that You give me wisdom!’ Those who strive for day-to-day sustenance supplicate to the Munificent for their daily bread, and those who want all of these things call upon Allah Glorified is He by the name ‘Allah,’ which includes all attributes of perfection.

As to the specific names found in this verse, we understand 'Al-'Aziz (The Mighty)' to mean that Allah Glorified is He is All-Powerful in the obligations which He imposes on us. 'The Mighty' is He Who conquers and is never conquered, and Who is characterised by power, might, eternal riches and is in no need of His creation.

Then, He is 'Al-Hakeem (The Wise)', meaning that Allah's Commands and Obligations are given to us in wisdom and with Divine preordination. It is important to recognise this because the Quran contains obligations and commandments which some consider arduous to obey. However, if we consider such painful tasks alongside the fruits and rewards of carrying out religious obligations, we find that they are easy to bear: the benefit obtained from obedience to Allah's Commands outweighs any hardship therein.

Do you not see that you toil and exert effort, and then you reap the benefits of this hard work; do you not see that the preciousness of the outcome is commensurate with the effort exerted? In agriculture, for example, this idea is known as the law of the harvest. A farmer must grow radishes for many days before he is able to enjoy them with a meal; cucumbers must be cultivated for at least forty days before they can be picked and eaten; rice crops require several months before they can be utilised for food; and mango orchards take years to produce edible fruit.

Thus, if Allah Glorified is He requires something difficult of us, know that the fruits and results of obedience to Him will be commensurate with it.

Be sure that He who revealed these obligations to the Prophet is Mighty and Wise: what He requires of us is for our benefit alone, not His. He is truly the Wise, meaning his injunctions will lead us to a peaceful coexistence with our fellow men in society.

Satan understood this Divine might when he said: '…"I swear by Your might! I will tempt all [82] but Your true servants'' [83]' (Sad: 82-83). By 'Your might' Satan means to swear by His being free from need of His creatures, and by the fact that He has given us the choice whether to obey or disobey Him, and thus Allah says: '…let those who wish to believe in it do so, and let those who wish to reject it do so…' (al-Kahf: 29). Otherwise, those souls desired by You, Allah and partitioned off for Yourself, I ca not get near them: '…except Your devoted servants' (al-Hijr: 40).

From this, we understand that the struggle is not between the True Lord and Satan; rather, it is between Satan and mankind. It is a struggle which extends from the time of Allah's order to prostrate before Adam peace be upon him all the way to the Day of Resurrection. However, Satan's foolishness is manifest in his conversation with the True Lord, then the conversation between him and Adam peace be upon him; for when he said: '…"I will lie in wait for them all on Your straight path"' (al-A'raf: 16), he reveals his plan to tempt the progeny of Adam peace be upon him: by attempting to divert them from the correct Path in those areas where they are required to be obedient.

The True Lord taught us how to handle these temptations from our enemy, and how to reduce his guile: Allah Glorified is He says: 'If Satan should prompt you to do something, seek refuge with Allah…' (al-A'raf: 200). As this verse indicates, we ward off the temptations of Satan by seeking refuge in Allah Glorified is He and in the mentioning of his name. Indeed, our enemy is known as Al-Khannas meaning the one who flees at the very mention of Allah's name. Let us not forget this characteristic of Satan, when we are beset by his temptations.

Satan's foolishness as well as his stultification are also made clear in his statement to Adam and Hawwa' (Eve) peace be upon them as they conversed in Paradise: '…"Your Lord only forbade you this tree to prevent you becoming angels or immortals" ' (al-A'raf: 20). If he had truly known that the tree spoken of was the tree of eternal life, he would have partaken of its fruit without hesitation, rather than asking whether Allah Glorified is He would delay eternal life until the resurrection. Adam peace be upon him also was heedless of this, hence Allah Glorified is He rightly says: 'We also commanded Adam before you, but he forgot and We found him lacking in constancy' (Ta Ha: 115). For this reason, we don not censure those who forget, since those entrusted with such commands are heedless by their very nature.

لَهُۥ مَا فِى ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ ۖ وَهُوَ ٱلْعَلِىُّ ٱلْعَظِيمُ ﴿٤﴾

All that is in the heavens and earth belongs to Him: He is the Exalted, the Almighty [4]
(The Quran, ash-Shura: 4)

This means that Allah Glorified is He possesses everything in heaven and earth by right, and that vicegerents have no authority to administer or control those things. Allah Glorified is He alone is their rightful owner, and it is forbidden for anyone other than Him to exercise authority over them. A vicegerent is only allowed to exercise his authority over other finite phenomena below this level.

When we explore the meaning of this verse and other verses like this which appear throughout the Quran, we find that Allah Glorified is He says at one point: 'To Him belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth…' (ash-Shura: 4) – repeating 'wa ma fi', 'whatever is in' before the heavens and the earth – and at another point: 'And whatever is in the heavens and the earth is His…' (an-Nahl: 52). The key difference between these verses has to do with emphasis on what is or is not shared between heavenly and earthly creations. There are created beings present in both the heavens and the earth, such as angels. However, there are also creatures found only in heaven, such as the higher angels; and some found only on earth, such as humans and the jinn. Thus, when Allah Glorified is He says: 'To Him belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth…' (ash-Shura: 4), He differentiates between celestial and terrestrial creatures; whereas when he says 'And whatever is in the heavens and the earth is His…' (an-Nahl: 52), He mentions the creatures who exist in both (the heavens and the earth).

From this, we gather that the universe in which we live is not, in truth, owned or controlled by any other than Allah. The right of ownership belongs to Allah Glorified is He alone. Thus, we may not be dazzled by our possessions. Those things over which we exercise temporary dominion ultimately belong to Allah Glorified is He. Man is but a vicegerent, and not an owner. All the earth is a field upon which we are mere players, and over which we have no final authority: 'To Allah belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth and whatever is within them…' (al-Ma'ida: 120).

Scholars said that the letter Lam in lahu ‘To Him’ indicates possession, as in the sentence, al-qalam lizayd (the pen is Zayd’s). This letter is also used to show that a thing has been set aside or partitioned specifically for someone or something, or that it belongs to a specific realm or domain. In the sentence, ‘the rope is for the mare’ we do not mean that a mare owns the rope. Rather, the signification here is that the rope belongs to the keeper of the mare, but it is specified for the mare.

In Allah’s words: ‘To Him belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth’ (ash-Shura: 4), the initial Lam takes both the sense of ownership, as well as the sense of something being specified for or exclusive to someone. The verse thus abridges its presentation of the predicate of this sentence: ‘whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth,’ which acts as the subject of the genitive possessive grammatical case; and ‘To him’ acting as the object of the genitive. The letter Lam here takes both of these meanings, thus clarifying the point that ownership belongs to Allah Glorified is He alone. In the sentence ‘To Zayd belongs the pen,’ the sense is only that the pen is for Zayd or is exclusively for his use; we might just as easily add: ‘and to ‘Umar’. However, Ha which is damir al-gha’ib (the pronoun of the hidden, absent or unseen) in lahu (to him) is a pronoun that refers to Allah Glorified is He. The absence, that the pronoun Ha indicates here, means not being seen or present to mortal senses. It is out of His Greatness that He is unseen that no vision can perceive him: ‘No vision can take Him in, but He takes in all vision. He is the All Subtle, the All Aware’ (al-An‘am: 103).

Thus, it is out of His Greatness that He is unseen. We use terms whose meanings we know but cannot identify in the physical world. For example, we use the word ‘truth’ and say ‘This is true!’ or ‘He is telling the truth’, yet what does truth look like? This applies to other abstract words and concepts, like justice or love. We utilise these terms and their meanings all the time, but we still do not know how to define them. If we cannot perceive such terms, how can we expect to perceive the True Lord Glorified is He?

In another instance, He states: ‘To Allah belongs the dominion of the heavens and the earth…’ (ash-Shura: 49) meaning the heavens and earth belong to Allah Glorified is He and that they represent a vessel in which other things are contained: 'To Him belongs whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth…' (ash-Shura: 4).

It is worth mentioning that what is contained in the heavens is more precious than the heavens itself, just as those things found on the earth are more precious than the earth itself; so it goes with any vessel, which is generally less valuable than that which it contains.

As noted, then, everything in the heavens and earth belongs to Allah Glorified is He and is profitable for use by His vicegerents, on earth. The True Lord created these things for our benefit even before He created us such that He might prepare a universe, complete with all of life's necessities, ready for our use. This point illustrates what was said previously about the bestowal of Allah's Lordship.

Your Lord instructs and leads you through the right Way he sent you from heaven by means of His messengers peace be upon them. In addition, He secured for you provisions which keep you alive: so, He provided you with water that comes from the sky, and created for you the earth that produces different kinds of food and sustenance. He created rivers and streams from which you can drink, an air that you can breathe.

The Lord created an earth which provides humans with the three major elements necessary to preserve life. Out of His Wisdom He made your need for food different from your need for water and different from your need for water your need for air. A human can survive without food for a month, but he cannot live without water for more than a few days; as for air, a person cannot last longer than a few breaths without it.

Therefore, Allah made some people possess and have control over food and the means of nourishment; and if he ordains that you cannot find what to eat, you survive depending on the stores in your own body, until you find a way to nourish yourself. Then, He made less people possess and have control over water because the time a human survives without water is less than the time he survives without food. As for air, He did not make it anyone's possession or under anyone's control. Imagine if air were possessed by somebody and that someone became angry with you! You would have certainly died before you had the chance to obtain his forgiveness.

Then, Allah Glorified is He granted humans those higher refinements and luxuries which enhance and enrich their life. Hence the Lord's statement, in reference to the sea: '…and bring out jewellery to wear…' (an-Nahl: 14). He also states: 'We have given you garments to cover your nakedness and as adornment for you…' (al-A'raf: 26). In terms of clothing, the most pressing need is to cover nakedness and protect the body, and only after this does the Lord take care of appropriate adornments and embellishments for human vestments.

The verse continues: '…the garment of Allah-consciousness is the best of all garments…' (al-A'raf: 26). Garments of this worldly life cover your 'awrah (parts of the body which nobody should see) and protect you in your mortal existence. By contrast, being conscious of Allah Glorified is He covers us up in this world and in the Hereafter, and it guarantees us a more lasting, eternal life.

All of these things which we have discussed – food sources, rivers, and the air we breathe, the ocean, and clothing – are things found on the earth, and which belong to Allah Glorified is He. If we look up, we find the air: a great blessing that contains various types of blessings within it. As we know, air is essential for sustaining life for all living species; but we also see that it provides a means for communication, as when pictures and sound move through it to create a television broadcast, for example.

Then, consider the sky and all that is in it: the sun, the moon, the stars, the planets, and the galaxies. These phenomena all belong to Allah Glorified is He who is the only One who exercises dominion over them.

The end of the verse under consideration reads: '…He is the Exalted, the Almighty' (ash-Shura: 4). The attribute Al-'Aliyy (Most Exalted) means that Allah Glorified is He is not only spatially above all else, but also that His Nature is higher than everything else in existence. Likewise, the name Al-'Azhim (the Almighty) does not necessarily mean that He is largest in size, but that He is greatest in His self-sustainability, power, and His characteristics of perfection

تَكَادُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتُ يَتَفَطَّرۡنَ مِن فَوۡقِهِنَّۚ وَٱلۡمَلَٰٓئِكَةُ يُسَبِّحُونَ بِحَمۡدِ رَبِّهِمۡ
وَيَسۡتَغۡفِرُونَ لِمَن فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِۗ أَلَآ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ هُوَ ٱلۡغَفُورُ ٱلرَّحِيمُ ٥

The heavens are almost broken apart from above as the angels proclaim the praises of their Lord and ask forgiveness for those on earth. God is indeed the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful [5] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 5)

Allah's words: 'takadu al-samawatu', 'The heavens are almost…' (ash-Shura: 5) mean, very close to experiencing something. The word yatafattarna '…broken apart…' (ash-Shura: 5) means: to split, either out of awe for His Almightiness, as it is mentioned in the Hadith: 'heaven has squeaked, and it has right to do so…'(1), or it can be a result of anger at the suggestion, put forth by some, that Allah Glorified is He took a son unto Himself.

His words: 'from above…' (ash-Shura: 5) may refer to that level of the skies which exists above the highest echelon of angels gathered in awe and exaltation of Allah Glorified is He or refer to those who are above the earth, where sinful humans who claimed that Allah has a son, reside; for the True Lord responds to this particular claim with the following: 'How terrible is this thing you assert' (Maryam: 89) meaning: something strange or abominable which reason cannot accept. Then, He says: 'it almost causes the heavens to be torn apart, the earth to split asunder, the mountains to crumble to pieces' (Maryam: 90).

Having offspring is sought either for help when one is overtaken by weakness in old age, or for maintaining one's name. However, it is unlawful to attribute such things to Allah Glorified is He? Moreover, it does not befit Him because He is in no need of offspring. Hence Allah's statement '…It does not befit the Lord of Mercy [to have offspring]' (Maryam: 92). In other words, the True Lord could very well take a son unto Himself if He desires, since He is omnipotent and nothing would prevent Him from doing what He wills, but this does not befit His Majesty and Highness. Since it does not befit Him, this proves His Perfection.

(1) This Hadith was extracted by Imam Ahmad from his collection of traceable authorities Hadith 20539; by At-Tirmidhi, from his narrations of the sayings of The Prophet 2234; by Al-Bayhaqi, from his greater narrations of the sayings of The Prophet 52/7; and by Abd Ar-Razzaq from his compilation 440/9 – Hadith 17934. The rest of this Hadith is as follows: 'for in all the heavens, there is not a space even four fingers wide in which an angel does not bow his head in prostration before Allah Glorified is He.'

Elsewhere in the Quran, we find a similar argument in reference to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'And We have not taught him poetry, nor is it meet for him; it is nothing but a reminder and a plain Quran…' (Ya Sin: 69). This verse is a response to those disbelievers who accused the Prophet of being a mere poet rather than a messenger of Allah Glorified is He. The verse means that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not compose poetry not because he could not; for he had the capability and eloquence to do so, but it did not befit him to compose and say poetry, and it was not right for him to do so, because Allah Glorified is He was preparing him for a greater purpose than poetry.

This is evident in Allah's statement: '…It does not befit the Lord of Mercy [to have offspring]' (Maryam: 92) which confirms Allah's ability to have a son if he wished; but this is something that does not befit Him, since Allah Glorified is He is free from those earthly needs and is too Exalted for such matters. This is why He states elsewhere: 'Say [Prophet], "If the Lord of Mercy [truly] had offspring I would be the first to worship [them]"' (az-Zukhruf: 81); or in other words: 'suppose He had offspring, I would be the first to believe in them.'

Continuing with the verse under consideration, the Lord says: '…as the angels exalt [Allah] with praise of their Lord…' (ash-Shura: 5). Angels belong to the world of the Unseen, while the heavens and the earth are among tangible things (can be perceived by the senses). These tangible, visible creations are agitated and rent apart in response to that claim (of Allah having offspring). As for the angels, which are unseen, they exalt their Lord with praise and set Him above such a claim. Here, tasbih (the glorification of Allah) Glorified is He comes before tahmid (praise): it is first necessary to exalt Allah Glorified is He or to refute comparisons between Him and any other being, before praising Him for blessings and endowments. This is why the angels first exalt Allah, then, they offer Him praise.

Next, the verse reads: '…and ask forgiveness for those on earth…' (ash-Shura: 5). The angels do not ask for their own forgiveness, but rather forgiveness for earth's inhabitants. It is clear from this that the angels are sinless: if they were guilty of sin, they would ask for their own forgiveness from the very start. Moreover, the angels' request for the Lord to forgive those who inhabit the earth is an all-inclusive plea, rendered on behalf of everyone on the planet, including unbelievers.

Elsewhere in the Quran we read that the angels: '…beg forgiveness for the believers…' (Ghafir: 7), while, here, they ask forgiveness for '…those on earth…' (ash-Shura: 5), that is, for everyone, their plea comprises a request for forgiveness and guidance for non-believers and for Allah Glorified is He to inspire them to have faith in Him.

There is a particular Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him which goes along with this point, 'There is never a day wherein the sun rises, but are not visited by two angels. One of them says: "O Allah! Compensate (more) to the person who gives (in charity)", while the other one says, "O Allah! Destroy the one who withholds (charity)."'(1)

Scholars said: this petition to Allah Glorified is He for the destruction of the one who withholds charity does not contradict the angels' plea for forgiveness for everyone on the earth. This is because the generous person who gives (in charity) is willing to give up his money and spends it in the cause of Allah; his love for Allah Glorified is He is therefore greater than his desire for riches. On the other hand, the one who withholds loves his money and is miserly. When the angelic herald in this Hadith wishes ill upon the miser in the form of destruction, it is because the angel wishes to free him from that which diverts the miser's attention from Allah Glorified is He namely wealth. The destruction of that wealth is therefore a blessing in the end, even though it may appear to be a major calamity. Thus, in both cases, the angelic supplication is an entreaty for that which is good.

(1) This is extracted for its established correctness 1010 as a Hadith narrated by Abu Hurayra. Regarding the explanation thereof An-Nawawi states, 'The scholars note that here, "spending wealth" refers to riches spent while engaging in noble deeds of piety, as well as worthy, moral causes; such causes include almsgiving and freewill offerings, hospitable treatment of guests, and so on. A rich man spends his wealth on such activities so as not to be found guilty of withholding his riches from those in need, or from being called intemperate and wasteful. Likewise, the "miser" in this Hadith refers to one guilty of refusing to give of his means to the poor.'

Continuing with the verse, we read: '…Allah is indeed the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful' (ash-Shura: 5). We said that the invocative ala is a rhetorical device used to open a statement, or to call attention to what one wishes to say. A speaker is free to speak whenever he wants, whereas, a listener is not free or is not as free; for he may miss a part of the speech. That is why the speaker must occasionally alert the listener to what he says, in case the listener is not following the speaker's points. This is true especially with regard to important statements that the speaker wishes to make, and which he wants the listener to understand in their entirety. Thus, a speaker says ala at the beginning of a statement or speech, as if to say, 'Pay attention', or 'listen to my words'. We see this in the following line of poetry from the pre-Islamic (jahili) poet (1):

'Wake up from your sleep, O wine maid, with your bowl, and Give us our morning drink

And do not spare the wines of Al-'Andarina (a village in the Levant).'(2)

Returning to the final part of this verse, we read: '…Allah is indeed the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful' (ash-Shura: 5). This is an appropriate note to end on, considering what we have discussed in terms of the angels' plea for forgiveness for those on the earth: it is as though Allah Glorified is He is saying to us, 'Pay attention, for He from whom forgiveness is requested is All-Forgiving, and a dispenser of mercy.' He is the All-Forgiving, Who pardons faults and erases the effects thereof; and He is the Most Merciful, the One Who, after pardoning sins, bestows grace sufficient to help keep us from committing future sins.

(1) 'Amr ibn Kulthum Abu Al-Aswad, member of the Banu Taghlab tribe and pre-Islamic poet (extraordinaire), he was born in the northern Arabian Peninsula, in one of the towns comprising the Rabi' area; he died on the Furat Peninsula in the year 39 BH. His people, the Banu Taghlab tribe, reigned among the desert tribes of the region when he was only a boy, and they flourished for many years. His most famous work of poetry is his hanging ode/ Mu'allaqa, the opening line of which is quoted here by Sheikh Ash-Sha'rawi.

(2) This is the opening line of 'Amr ibn Kulthum's hanging ode, which is comprised of 125 lines in its entirety and written in the wafir (abundant) meter.

Then, the True Lord says:

وَٱلَّذِينَ ٱتَّخَذُواْ مِن دُونِهِۦٓ أَوۡلِيَآءَ ٱللَّهُ حَفِيظٌ عَلَيۡهِمۡ وَمَآ أَنتَ عَلَيۡهِم بِوَكِيلٖ ٦

As for those who take protectors other than Him, God is watching them; you are not responsible for them [6] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 6)

His words: '…other than Him…' (ash-Shura: 6) indicate anything other than Allah Glorified is He which some choose to worship. The word awliya' (protectors) means: taking them as allies and worshipping them besides Allah. Some of them worshipped the sun, the moon, demons or angels. Next, the statement: '…Allah is watching them…' (ash-Shura: 6) means that He is the One taking their actions into account, and that He is responsible for meting out their final reward or punishment. To Him is the final return.

As such, do not be sad O Muhammad, or kill yourself out of grief over them; for it is not incumbent on you to make them walk on the right way, but rather to proclaim the message to them. Allah says: '…you are not responsible for them' (ash-Shura: 6). This means that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not wakil (responsible) for their actions. The word wakil in Arabic takes the noun form fa'il, which can signify either a subject, as in the word rahim (one who bestows mercy); or an object, like the word qatil (one who has been killed). In this verse, the word wakil acts in the latter sense. Only the delivery of the message is incumbent on you, O Muhammad, and upon Us is the account. Then, the True Lord says:

وَكَذَٰلِكَ أَوۡحَيۡنَآ إِلَيۡكَ قُرۡءَانًا عَرَبِيّٗا لِّتُنذِرَ أُمَّ ٱلۡقُرَىٰ وَمَنۡ حَوۡلَهَا وَتُنذِرَ
يَوۡمَ ٱلۡجَمۡعِ لَا رَيۡبَ فِيهِۚ فَرِيقٞ فِي ٱلۡجَنَّةِ وَفَرِيقٞ فِي ٱلسَّعِيرِ ٧

So We have revealed an Arabic Quran to you, in order that you may warn the capital city and all who live nearby. And warn [especially] about the Day of Gathering, of which there is no doubt, when some shall be in the Garden and some in the blazing Flame [7] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 7)

This verse begins with Allah Glorified is He saying, kadhalika (so) or (in this way) referring to prior revelations given by Him – meaning: 'like these previous revelations, have We given you an Arabic Quran'. He says: '…We have revealed an Arabic Quran to you…' (ash-Shura: 7). It is called Quran because it is recited, and is also called Al-Kitab (the Book) because it was transmitted in lines organised into written form. The Quran is described here as being in the Arabic tongue because it was revealed through the language expounded by and belonging to the Arabs. As noted before, any language is a collection of terms through which the needs and desires of a people are expressed. We have also discussed how language is the 'daughter of imitation,' meaning that we learn to speak by imitating the sounds that we hear around us.

Language is not an inherent characteristic like blood type or physical gender, a point made clear by the fact an Arab child raised in a foreign land would speak the language of that land. This is so because language learning depends on imitating the sounds made by people around us when they speak a language. Even a native speaker encounters words which he does not know the meaning of; and the reason he does not know the meaning is that those words have never reached his ears before.

That is why we say: the best way to teach language is through talqin (the instructor says something and the student listens and imitates), a point which confirms the correctness of the following verse: 'And He taught Adam the names of all things…' (al-Baqara: 31). This shows that Allah Glorified is He is the original Teacher of mankind; otherwise, who would have instructed Adam peace be upon him in the letters and words of language, or in the names for all things?

Some orientalists have paused over the verse under consideration, pondering the description of the Quran as being in the Arabic tongue, when they know that it contains many words from other languages such as Latin, Persian and Ge'ez(1). In response, we say that the phrase: '…an Arabic Quran…' (ash-Shura: 7) means that the Quran was partly revealed in words which had circulated among the Arabs through interaction with various tongues and dialects, words which were in common usage before the revelation of the Quran. Because of this, a certain percentage of the words found in the Quran are not indigenous to the Arabic language of the time but which were nevertheless a part of the Arab people's lexicon. We may ask: how many are these words in comparison with the rest of the words of the Quran?

(1) The language of Abyssinia

Thus, we can say that the Quran is an Arabic Quran, which goes along with Allah's statement: 'We have never sent a messenger who did not use his own people's language to make things clear for them…' (Ibrahim: 4). By this, He means that the message of a religion is sent to people in their own tongue so that they might receive it and understand it; otherwise, it would be impossible for Allah's message to be proclaimed.

If you raise the question: how is this when Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent to all people of every time period and geographical location? We say: this is the responsibility of the ummah (the people) of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him after he dies. It was and is incumbent upon that community to learn to speak other languages, and to bring the message of Islam to the peoples who speak those languages, in whatever corner of the globe they are to be found. Muhammad was the seal of the prophets and the last of Allah's messengers on the earth. As for taking the message of Islam to the nations of the earth, this responsibility necessarily has fallen upon the Islamic community.

The Quran was revealed in the Arabic language because Allah Glorified is He chose the Arabs to carry His message to all people. We have discussed this idea previously in terms of the wisdom of choosing an unlettered man from an illiterate society to be the Messenger of Allah Glorified is He. The Quran is inimitable among Arabs due to its sublime style and pronunciation; Arabs have the unique privilege of reading it in the original language, and they may thus appreciate its unrivalled linguistic magnificence. Likewise, it is inimitable among non-Arab peoples because of its transcendent meaning, even when translated into other tongues. In either case, it is one of Allah's unique signs and wonders which appear to humankind from time to time, and which inspire awe and reverence for Him.

If Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were an educated man in a community of civilisation, what would the people of the world say, taking into consideration the multitude of infidels, obstinate people and atheists? By Allah, if this were the case, they would have said that Islam is a mere cultural leap forward, common to other nations. For this reason, we say: illiteracy is a defect in any person except for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and it is actually an honour. Why? This is because it shows that the great learning and culture which rested upon the Prophet came from on high. It proves that wisdom and knowledge ultimately stem from that loftiest of sources, the True Lord Glorified is He.

What is astonishing is that there are enemies of Islam who claim that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was in fact, a learned man. They also aver that it was he who wrote the Quran. Glory be to Allah! Are you (people who made this argument) more prejudiced in favour of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him than his followers? The Quran is clear in its refutation of this claim: 'You never recited any Scripture before We revealed this one to you; you never wrote one down with your hand. If you had done so, those who follow falsehood might have had cause to doubt' (al-'Ankabut: 48).

Thus, in spite of his illiteracy, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came bearing the news of the correct Path that subjugated all civilisations of the world, and to which the two greatest human civilisations, at that time, were subjugated: the Persian Empire in the East and the Roman Empire in the West. However, this was not forced obeisance, but rather a willing recognition of Islam's superior methods, supreme concepts, that provide a framework for daily life and organise the society as a whole, the striking manner in which it was presented, as well as the solutions it offers for those immoral and harmful behaviours which prevailed among their respective civilisations.

Continuing on with the verse under consideration, Allah the Most High says: '…in order that you may warn the mother of cities and all who live nearby…' (ash-Shura: 7). Indhar (to warn or to caution of something bad) means to tell someone about it before it happens, in order to give that person a chance to avoid it or to make necessary preparations for it.

The epithet 'the mother of cities' (ash-Shura: 7) refers to Mecca since it is umm al-qura (the mother of cities) or the root and foundation of all other cities and villages. This is because it is the location on earth in which awwala bayt (the first temple) was placed for people. Since Adam peace be upon him is a person among the people, then, awwala bayt was placed there before Adam peace be upon him. Thus, it is correct that the angels were the ones who placed the temple in Mecca.

His words: '…and all who live nearby…' (ash-Shura: 7) refer to those villages, tribes, and all other Arab peoples living within the vicinity of Mecca. Since Mecca is the mother and foundation of all cities, the tribe of Quraysh enjoyed special prominence among tribes on the Arabian Peninsula, since it had the distinct honour of service in and maintenance of the temple. Members of Quraysh were the established custodians of the temple, receiving people from other tribes as they came to Mecca during the season of the pilgrimage. It was their job to ensure security, safety and food stores. For this reason the caravans of Quraysh enjoyed protection and care in other parts of the Arabian Peninsula as they made their summer and winter journeys.

We see that service in the temple is what afforded Quraysh dignity and status among other Arabian tribes. Hence Allah's saying: '[He did this] to make the Quraysh feel secure [1] secure in their winter and summer journeys. [2] So let them worship the Lord of this House: [3] who provides them with food to ward off hunger, safety to ward off fear [4]' (Quraysh: 1-4). Their supremacy was a result of their authority in administering the temple worship, their proximity to the temple itself and the services rendered by them when people came to the temple on the pilgrimage. As a corollary, if the temple had been destroyed, the special privileges enjoyed by Quraysh would have come to an end, and they would have lost this prestige and high status.

Returning to the verse, Allah the Most High states: '…And warn [especially] about the Day of Gathering, of which there is no doubt…' (ash-Shura: 7). In other words: to warn them of this final day, namely the Day of Resurrection. The gathering, on that day, has several aspects: that day unites body and spirit; brings together the angels of the higher part of heaven and human beings; brings together the oppressor and the oppressed, as well as those who follow and those who lead.

If we look more closely at the phrasing in this statement, '…And warn [especially] about the Day of Gathering…' (ash-Shura: 7), we find that the direct object of the Arabic verb tundhira (warn) is left unsaid. In fact, this verb takes two objects, as in the following verse: 'If they turn away, say, "I have warned you about a blast like the one which struck *'*Ad and Thamud"' (Fussilat: 13). He said: 'andhartukum sa'ikah', '…I have warned you about a blast…' (Fussilat: 13). Here, he mentions the direct object 'you' and the indirect object 'a blast'. In the verse under discussion, He mentions the danger warned against, in general, and does not mention the object of andhir (warn). Why? This is because it will be clarified elsewhere, as in another verse: 'Warn them [Prophet] of the ever-approaching Day…' (Ghafir: 18). Here, the pronoun 'them' refers to unbelievers, which group of people represents the direct object; and 'the ever-approaching,' or the Day of the Gathering, represents the indirect object.

The phrase '…of which there is no doubt…' (ash-Shura: 7) means that there is certainty about the coming of the Day of the Assembly, '…when a party will be in Paradise and a party in the blazing Fire (Hell)' (ash-Shura: 7). This last statement from the previous verse refers to the law of reward and punishment established by Allah. Where there is taklif (obligation), there is obedience and disobedience. Those who obey shall be rewarded, and those who disobey shall be punished. This same code of living applies even in the daily lives of human beings, who have established their own system of reward and punishment in their societies. Likewise, on the day that is sure to come – the Day of the Assembly, all people shall be divided into two groups, one in paradise and the other in the fires of hell.

Examining the style of this final statement, we find that the verse employs what is known as al-ihtibak (reciprocal ellipsis), which is a rhetorical device that omits predictable words through context clues, such as contrast. An example of this is Allah's statement: 'There has already been a sign for you in the two armies that met (in combat)…' (Al-'Imran: 13). In this verse, the righteous, or those who fight in Allah's Cause, are contrasted with those who fight for Satan (Iblis). Contemplating this Quranic style, we find that the word 'believers' is omitted because it is indicated by the phrase '…one was fighting in Allah's Cause…' (Al-'Imran: 13); and the description of the opposite army 'one was fighting in Satan's cause' is omitted because it is connoted by the phrase '…and as for the other (they) were disbelievers…' (Al-'Imran: 13). Each description serves, as it were, to cancel out that of its opposite. This technique, as noted, comprises the rhetorical device of reciprocal ellipsis.

Moreover, Allah's saying: '…when a party will be in Paradise and a party in the blazing Fire (Hell)' (ash-Shura: 7) exhibits an initial process of separating the righteous from the wicked, after gathering all souls on the Day of the Assembly. This separation after collection is another feature of the Quranic style which involves the assembly of souls on the Day of the Gathering, followed by a process of sifting believers from unbelievers, and ending with a final division and distribution of reward and punishment. We see this, for example, in the chapter of Hud, where Allah Glorified is He states: 'On the Day when it comes, no person shall speak except by His (Allah's) Leave. Some among them will be wretched and (others) blessed' (Hud: 105). The process of separation after collection is found in: 'Some among them will be wretched and (others) blessed' (Hud: 105). Then there is the process of division and the designation of groups: 'As for those who are wretched, they will be in the Fire, sighing in a high and low tone. They will dwell therein for all the time that the heavens and the earth endure, except as your Lord wills. Verily, your Lord is the doer of what He wills. And those who are blessed, they will be in Paradise, abiding therein for all the time that the heavens and the earth endure, except as your Lord wills, a gift without an end(1)' (Hud: 106-108).

However, why does this verse include such a description of sifting between believers and unbelievers in the statement: '…when a party will be in Paradise and a party in the blazing Fire (Hell)' (ash-Shura: 7)? The answer is that the True Lord Glorified is He fashioned His creatures and endowed them with free will after He offered them the trust (amana) of carrying moral responsibility. This is made clear in the following verse: 'Verily, We did offer the trust [of reason and volition] to the heavens, and the earth, and the mountains: but they refused to bear it because they were afraid of it. Yet man took it up – for, verily, he was unjust and ignorant (of its results)' (al-Ahzab: 72). The meaning here is that Allah offered the choice of carrying this trusted responsibility to all creation, which refused it in fright at the seriousness of the charge. Aspects of creation such as the heavens and earth, therefore, preferred to be non-free willed, to be acted upon in whatever way their Lord wills. All except humans and jinn took upon themselves the trusted responsibility, thus becoming agents, endowed with the power to will and to act.

(1) The Arabic phrase ghayra majdhudh (unceasing, without being cut off) derives from the verb jadhdha (to cut off, break or divide). Therefore, Allah's saying: '…a gift without an end (majdhudh)…' (Hud: 108) means unceasing, never to be cut off (Al-Qamus Al-Qawim, vol. 1, p. 119).

Here, we also note the phrase '…verily, he was unjust and ignorant (of its results)…' (al-Ahzab: 72) meaning unjust to himself; while 'ignorant' means unaware of the consequences of the decision to carry the trusted responsibility of free will and reason. Clearly, one could be trustful of his ability at the time of undertaking the charge, but no longer so at the time of fulfilment as circumstance may come between the person and fulfilling the charge entrusted to him. Since humankind has chosen to take upon themselves the responsibility of free will, not fully aware of the implications of that choice, they must be asked about the charge entrusted to them and be held accountable for their actions. And depending on whether they have preserved or squandered the trust of having free will, a final reward or punishment has become necessary for them, dividing between those who deserve paradise and those who deserve hell.

وَلَوْ شَآءَ ٱللَّهُ لَجَعَلَهُمْ أُمَّةً وَٰحِدَةً وَلَٰكِن يُدْخِلُ مَن يَشَآءُ
فِى رَحْمَتِهِۦ ۚ وَٱلظَّٰلِمُونَ مَا لَهُم مِّن وَلِىٍّ وَلَا نَصِيرٍ ﴿٨﴾

If God had so pleased, He could have made them a single community, but He admits to His mercy whoever He will; the evildoers will have no one to protect or help them [8] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 8)

The general meaning of this verse is that Allah's Will is measured by the same absolute standard for everyone and that we should not, therefore, be surprised at the final division between the righteous and the wicked. If Allah so wished, He could force all people to believe in Him, leaving no choice for anyone but to follow His Path. Rather, He distinguished between coerced and voluntary faith out of love. The True Lord the Exalted wants devoted, believing hearts, not a forced appearance of piety. We have already seen this point illustrated with the classic example of a man who employs two servants, one free to move as he pleases, and the other tied to his master with a rope. When the master orders his two servants to do something, which of the two carries out his command out of true obedience and love?

Thus, when the True Lord Glorified is He offered the trust of reason and free will to all creation, He confirmed two parallel ways of coming to Him: non-free willed out of power and free willed out of love. So Allah established His Power and Dominion over creation by making a part of it, which are the heavens, the earth and all created beings except mankind and jinn, faithful and obedient to His Command by their very nature. They surrendered their choice to the Will of Allah. Second, Allah established love for Him by granting humans and jinn the capability of choosing Him. Consequently, they believed in Allah out of love, although they were capable of refusing to believe.

The statement '…but He admits whom He wills into His Mercy…' (ash-Shura: 8) refers to the believers. They shall enter paradise through Allah's Grace and Mercy rather than their good works alone. Their good works are the necessary means for entry to paradise. Following this, we are given a vision of the opposite group: '…and the wrongdoers have not any protector or helper' (ash-Shura: 8). The meaning here is that evildoers, or unbelievers, will enter hell, for hell is the established consequence of evil deeds done on the earth.

Allah's saying '…has not any protector or helper…' (ash-Shura: 8) means there is no close friend or confidant to protect and defend them; '…or helper…' carries a similar meaning, which means complete lack of help or support even from far away. No one, on seeing them overpowered, shall sympathise with them and offer help.

In the next verse, the True Lord the Most High goes into further explanation as to why this punishment is meted out to the wrongdoers. They have rejected the worship of the One True Lord and sought protection in sources other than Allah. So, they have deserved abandonment.

أَمِ ٱتَّخَذُواْ مِن دُونِهِۦٓ أَوۡلِيَآءَۖ فَٱللَّهُ هُوَ ٱلۡوَلِيُّ وَهُوَ يُحۡيِ ٱلۡمَوۡتَىٰ وَهُوَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ قَدِيرٞ ٩

How can they take protectors other than Him? God alone is the Protector; He gives life to the dead; He has power over all things [9] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 9)

After affirming that the wrongdoers have no protector or source of succour, the True Lord the Exalted puts forth the question: 'Or have they taken protectors [or allies] besides Him?...' (ash-Shura: 9) This is clearly an istifham istinkari (an interrogative that denotes disapproval and rebuke) where Allah asks, by way of censure, those wrongdoers if they have protectors that He does not know about! Since they cannot have protectors or guardians besides Allah, why have they not taken Him as their Protector? Or else the meaning could be that their taking refuge in other than Allah should have induced them to think over the matter and reconsider their position.

Indeed, as the rest of the verse confirms: '…But Allah – He is the Protector…' (ash-Shura: 9) meaning that He is the True Supporter Who can provide relief to whoever needs it. Then, He states: '…and it is He Who gives life to the dead, and it is He Who has power over all things' (ash-Shura: 9). This part of the verse mentions two exclusive Abilities of Allah: the ability to raise the dead and His Absolute Power over everything, neither of which applies to anything to which the wrongdoers resort for protection. These two characteristics describe Allah alone. Throughout the Quran we often find them accompanied by the personal pronoun of emphasis huwa (he) which is not required in Arabic for the meaning to be clear. This pronoun serves to emphasise that Allah uniquely possesses certain characteristics or powers. For this reason, the verse states: '…and it is He Who (huwa) gives life to the dead, and it is He Who (huwa) has power over all things' (ash-Shura: 9).

Elsewhere in the Quran, Allah the Exalted says: 'And that it is He Who makes [one] laugh and weep and that it is He who causes death and gives life' (an-Najm: 43-44). These actions – causing laughter and weeping, granting life and death – cannot be performed by anyone other than Allah. We understand '…it is He Who makes [one] laugh and weep…' to mean that Allah has placed within humans the instinct to laugh and cry. The fact that all people, from all nationalities and cultures, have these instincts is evidence that the impulse to laugh comes from Allah. Laughter is the same regardless of one's culture; an Arab laughs in the same way as an Indian or a Russian person does. The same can be said about weeping. So, it follows that it is an instinct placed in mankind by Allah. Life and death also belong to Allah alone, and no other than Allah has the power to give or take life.

In another context, life and death are stated by our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him among the blessings that Allah bestowed upon him:

‘…Who has created me, and it is He Who guides me. And it is He Who feeds me and gives me to drink. And when I am ill, it is He who cures me. And Who will cause me to die, and then will bring me to life (again)’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 78 - 81).

Throughout the Quran, the personal pronoun huwa (he) is added when discussing acts about which there could be doubt as to whether they are done exclusively by Allah; so the independent personal pronoun huwa (he) appears in order to emphasise that the act is exclusive to Allah, as in the statement ‘…it is He Who (huwa) guides me’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 78). The emphasis is placed here because guidance can come to a person through a human agent. Also, regarding the statement that Allah alone ‘…is He Who feeds me and gives me to drink...’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 79) since a father who provides food and drink to his children may read this and think it applies to him. It is the same with the next verse: ‘And when I am ill, it is He who cures me’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 80), as some may think that healing lies in the hands of doctors. For this reason, all these verses contain the personal pronoun of emphasis huwa (he) to underscore the fact that these actions, which are performed through humans, fall within Allah’s Power. As for statements referring to actions or powers belonging only to Allah, they do not contain the personal pronoun of emphasis, since only Allah, without partners or rivals, can carry out such deeds. As in Allah’s statement ‘And Who will cause me to die, and then will bring me to life (again)’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 81) in which the personal pronoun huwa does not appear.

Here, bringing the dead back to life refers to the resurrection in the Hereafter. For example, we read about this power in the story of 'Uzair (Ezra) peace be upon him(1) told in the Quran: ‘Or [consider such an example] as the one who passed by a township which had fallen into ruin. He said, “How will Allah bring this to life after its death?” So Allah caused him to die for a hundred years; then He revived him. He said, “How long have you remained?”

(1) Uzayr (Ezra) peace be upon him was a wise and faithful slave of Allah. In his book Qasas Al-Anbiya’ (Stories of the Prophets), Ibn Kathir states: ‘The most well-known opinion concerning ‘Uzair (Ezra) was that he was one of the Israelite prophets. He came at a time between Dawud (David) and Sulaiman (Solomon), and Zakaryya (Zechariah) and Yahya (John the Baptist). When there was no one left among the Jews who knew the Torah by heart, Allah revealed it to the mind of ‘Uzair (Ezra) peace be upon him who recited it to the Israelites from memory, having never studied it from a book. For this reason, the Jews claimed that 'Uzair (Ezra) was the son of Allah.’

The man said, “I have remained a day or part of a day.” He said, “Rather, you have remained one hundred years. Look at your food and your drink; it has not changed with time. And look at your donkey; and We will make you a sign for the people. And look at the bones [of this donkey] - how We raise them and then We cover them with flesh.” And when it became clear to him, he said, “I know that Allah is Able to do all things”’ (al-Baqara: 259).

We humans feel the passage of time through events. Without events, we cease to feel that time has elapsed. For this reason, after being dead for a hundred years ‘Uzair (Ezra) peace be upon him replied on being brought to life, ‘I have remained a day or part of a day.’ So in order to show the correctness of his view that it was a day or part of a day, the True Lord the Exalted ordered ‘Uzair (Ezra) to look at the food he had with him. When he looked at it, he found that it had not rotted or changed with time. And in order to prove that ‘Uzair (Ezra) peace be upon him had actually been dead for one hundred years, Allah told ‘Uzair (Ezra) peace be upon him to look at his donkey that had died and rotted down to the bare bones, something which would only be possible after one hundred years.

Returning to the verse at hand, the Most High Allah states: ‘…and it is He Who has power over all things’ (ash-Shura: 9). This is a clear indication of the Absolute Power which Allah possesses, testified to by the presence of many cosmic signs in the heavens, the earth and living beings.

Indeed, Allah alone is powerful over everything. He has shown us examples of His Ability to bring the dead back to life on earth – such as the story of ‘Uzair (Ezra) peace be upon him whom Allah caused to be dead for one hundred years – as evidence of that same Power to resurrect the dead in the Hereafter.

Another example comes to us in the following verse: ‘Have you not considered those who left their homes in many thousands, fearing death? Allah said to them, “Die”; then He restored them to life. And Allah is full of bounty to the people, but most of the people do not show gratitude’ (al-Baqara: 243).

It is because of the Lord’s Greatness and His Absolute Power over all things that He bestows a token of His Power upon His creatures. Hence, for example, the story of our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him who was granted the power of restoring life to the dead through Allah’s Will. In our scope as humans, when, for example, a strong person sees a weak person trying to lift a burden, he helps him and uses his strength to carry the weight for him. But in the end, the weak person he has helped will remain weak. On the other hand, when the True Lord the Exalted gives of His Strength to one of His servants, He makes him able to do what he wants himself. The difference, then, is that when Allah endows His creatures with aspects of His Power, those powers become subjective.

Let us take another example from the Quran to drive this point home. In the chapter of al-Baqara, we encounter in the story of our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him his request for Allah to show him the process of raising the dead: '…"My Lord, show me how You give life to the dead." [Allah] said, "Have you not believed?" He said, "Yes, but [I ask] only that my heart may be satisfied"' (al-Baqara: 260). That is, my Lord I am a confident believer, but I want to be more assured and bring myself to a higher level of faith. Some orientalist scholars have paused over this verse and wondered whether Ibrahim's (Abraham) entreaty for a sign from Allah to ease his heart does not reflect a lack of faith on Ibrahim's (Abraham) part; seeing that faith, by definition, includes being clear and tranquil in heart over things unseen or unknown.

But this is not the case. Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him did not say, 'My Lord, can You raise the dead?' Rather, he said, 'My Lord, show me how You give life to the dead…' (al-Baqara: 260). Evidently, he was a believer in resurrection and in Allah's Ability to raise the dead, but he wanted to know how it happened. He wanted to reach certitude about the manner in how it was done, rather than to affirm this attribute to Allah Glorified is He. In the same way, were I to ask you: 'How did you build that mosque?' Am I doubting the fact that the mosque has been built? Of course not, since it is already there. I just want to know how it has been constructed.

The True Lord the Exalted gave a logical response to His Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him given that the act of raising the dead can best be explained by its practice, rather than discoursing on the subject. Allah Glorified is He allowed Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him to raise the dead himself, giving Ibrahim (Abraham) the chance to participate in the act of resurrection, and, moreover, to see it with his own eyes. '...He (Allah) said, "Take four birds, then cause them to incline towards you”...’ (al-Baqara: 260). That is, inspect them closely for distinguishing marks, and then slaughter them; ‘...“then [after slaughtering them] put on each hill a portion of them; then call them, they will come [flying] to you in haste”...’ (al-Baqara: 260). As noted, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him himself was thus permitted to perform the act of raising the dead himself which indicates the greatness of The Creator Glorified is He.

Accordingly, Allah’s saying: ‘...and it is He Who gives life to the dead...’ (ash-Shura: 9) means that the power of resurrection belongs solely to Allah. Even if He sometimes imparts that power to whichever of His servants He pleases, He is still the original and rightful Possessor of this ability. Likewise with the statement: ‘...and it is He Who has power over all things’ (ash-Shura: 9). Certain creatures possess certain abilities or powers, such as humans or angels, whom some people worshipped instead of Allah. However, we know that the abilities possessed by these angels, and indeed all other creatures, are limited, and that angelic power to do one thing will not suffice to carry out something else. This is not so with the True Lord Glorified is He Whose Power and Authority are absolute. There is nothing He cannot do. His Power over all things is absolute.

وَمَا ٱخۡتَلَفۡتُمۡ فِيهِ مِن شَيۡءٖ فَحُكۡمُهُۥٓ إِلَى ٱللَّهِۚ
ذَٰلِكُمُ ٱللَّهُ رَبِّي عَلَيۡهِ تَوَكَّلۡتُ وَإِلَيۡهِ أُنِيبُ ١٠

Whatever you may differ about is for God to judge.
[Say], ‘Such is God, my Lord. In Him I trust and to Him I turn [10] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 10)

Here, ‘to differ’ refers to a lack of harmony or disagreement of opinions on a particular matter, with those who hold those opinions being divided into two or more opposing groups, each in support of its own views and in opposition to the others. Such dispute or disagreement may show up in a serious and fruitful discussion in which all participants are interested in discovering the truth; or in a vain argument in which people resort to lying and obstinacy, leading to no benefit whatsoever.

For this reason, the True Lord the Exalted instructs us as to how to resolve differences of opinion when they arise; we should refer ourselves to Allah's Judgment on the matter. Thus, when contention arose concerning the nature of the soul, those who held different views on the matter asked Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about it. So Allah the Exalted revealed the following instruction: 'And they ask you (O Muhammad) concerning the soul. Say, "The soul is one of the things, the knowledge of which is only with my Lord. And of knowledge, you (mankind) have been given only a little"' (al-Isra': 85).

In this way, the True Lord Glorified is He taught us the proper recourse in situations where opinions differ. We are also told not to draw hasty conclusions, but to seek out the truth of the matter with all objectivity. Indeed, there are situations in which people with seemingly different viewpoints are actually in agreement, even though they might not be aware of it. Take the Battle of the Trench, for example, in which the Jewish tribe of Banu Qurayzha laid siege to Yathrib (Medina). After the armies of Quraysh had returned to Mecca, and the Jews had gone back to their encampments, the True Lord made it known to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that the Jews were responsible for starting the war and igniting this crisis. He also made it clear that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him should go to the Jews and not take off the mantle and duty of battle. For this reason, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him went to his army, who were freshly returned from fighting, and said to them: 'Anyone who believes in Allah and the Last Day should not offer 'Asr (afternoon) Prayer except at Banu Qurayzha.'(1)

He meant by this to keep ready for the battle. The Companions, therefore, redirected themselves to the location where Banu Qurayzha had made camp. However, on their way to the Jewish encampment, there was contention as to the meaning of the Prophet's instructions. It was getting near the end of the time allotted for 'Asr (afternoon) Prayer; therefore, a group of the Companions said that they should pray right then before its time was over. The other group of the Companions said that they should not offer it until they had reached

---

(1) An agreed upon Hadith narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (no. 4119) and Muslim in his Sahih in the Book of Al-Jihad wa As-Sayr (p. 69) from the Hadith of Ibn 'Umar Allah be pleased with them both that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said to them on the day the Jewish Confederates retreated: 'None of you should offer the Zhuhr (noon) Prayer except at Banu Qurayzha's place.' According to another version, he said 'Asr Prayer.

Banu Qurayzha, as Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had commanded. In this way, the Companions were divided in their opinion over how they understood the Prophet's command, where some held that the focus was on the timing of the prayer, and they therefore offered the 'Asr Prayer on the way to Banu Qurayzha. The others insisted that the place where they were to perform the 'Asr Prayer was the focus of the command, hence they waited and did not pray until they reached Banu Qurayzha. On meeting up with Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they presented this difference of opinion to him. When he heard their disagreement, he affirmed that both views were correct, offering objection to neither group's opinions on the matter.

This is because the disagreement was in the letter of the law, rather than the spirit. The Companions did not realise that both groups were correct, and that they were in fact in agreement with one another. Thus, when differing opinions arise over issues, as we see in this example, we should refer matters back to Allah and His Messenger. We should seek an objective solution without blind insistence upon one viewpoint or another. This is with regards to disagreements among believers.

This also applies to the people of the Book, namely the Jews and Christians. Refer any disagreements with them to Allah. They believe in holy books, respectively, the Taurat (Torah) and the Injeel (Gospel). In fact, both of them contain affirmations pointing to Muhammad as the Last of the Messengers, as well as heralds of his coming, his characteristics, and marks of his prophethood. We see evidence of this when we consider, for example, the fact that many people of the Book believed in him after he was commissioned with prophethood. Therefore, you should refer your disagreements with them to Allah in order to keep from continuing down a path of stubborn argumentation and disputation.

Continuing with the verse, the statement '...the decision thereof is with Allah...' (ash-Shura: 10) also includes the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him since he represents Allah in making religious pronouncements. Allah gave him the right of passing rulings, as evinced by the following verse: '...and whatsoever the Messenger (Muhammad) gives you, take it; and whatsoever he forbids you, abstain (from it)...' (al-Hashr: 7). This right was a distinction which had never been granted to any of Allah's Messengers before Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Their duty was only to convey the message. As for our master the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him he was given the special privilege of making rulings. Therefore, in response to disputants who demanded evidence that the morning prayer should be two rak'as (units of prayer), the noon prayer four, and the sunset prayer three, the following verse provides such an evidence: '...and whatsoever the Messenger (Muhammad) gives you, take it; and whatsoever he forbids you, abstain (from it)...' (al-Hashr: 7).

So by referring controversial matters to the True Lord the Exalted and submitting them to what Allah and His Messenger have said, we can settle any disputes or contentions that may arise.

One can have no objection to seeking the arbitration of a Supreme Power that unites the hearts in serenity and satisfaction with Allah's Decision. Do you not see that sometimes you may refuse the judgment of a human like you, even if it is right? But when the judgment is from Allah, it is accepted without objections.

Continuing on, let us consider the statement: '…Such is Allah, my Lord in Whom I put my trust…' (ash-Shura: 10). The Arabic word dhalikum translated as 'such is' is a demonstrative pronoun used for glorification or aggrandisement. Dha is the determiner, indicating that which is being referred to; li or the letter Lam connotes the dimension or proportion of that reference; and ku or the letter Kaf is an element of address. You say: '…Such is Allah, my Lord…' with pride in the Power of Allah and glory in ascribing yourself to Him recognising that He is above anything and everything which the human mind can imagine. As noted, the word Rabb (Lord or Sustainer) denotes the role of provider and caretaker, and the one from whom all grace and blessings flow. For this reason, we trust Him in all things. Likewise with the statement '…and to Him I turn back' (ash-Shura: 10) which means returning to Him for the final accounting and reward in the Hereafter.

When I say: '…Such is Allah, my Lord…' (ash-Shura: 10), I am glorying in and boasting of Rububiyyah (Allah's Lordship) which provides direction and blessings. I am also glorying in and boasting of Uluhiyyah (state of being Allah/right of worship) which enjoins obligations and duties, which are, in fact, part and parcel of direction and care. The necessary requirement of any care and protection given to humans is that it provides them with all elements necessary for a happy existence. However, a happy existence cannot be fully attained in this world, which is temporary and eventually passes away. For this reason, true providence provides something lasting and enduring, namely the Hereafter, the reward of which is never-ending. The next life is enduring and everlasting. Its joys and delights never cease. They shall never become exhausted and I shall never die and leave them behind.

There are some who claim that providing care and direction is in terms of physical needs. While this is true, it also encompasses spiritual needs. Therefore, the Most High Allah says: ‘O you who have believed, respond to Allah and to the Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you life…’ (al-Anfal: 24). Here, what does the phrase ‘…that which gives you life…’ signify, seeing as those being addressed are alive and capable of hearing? Obviously, the intended meaning is a life other than this earthly, material one. Indeed, the implication here is a life of spiritual and moral excellence, an eternal life which does not pass away and from which we will never depart by death.

For this reason, the righteous doctrine, which provides the means to obtaining this everlasting life, is called ruh (spirit). Hence the following verse, which appears later on in the chapter of ash-Shura: ‘And thus We have revealed to you a Ruh (spirit) of Our Command…’ (ash-Shura: 52). Yes indeed, a life-giving book that endows you with an eternal afterlife, whereas that first, mortal spirit which has been breathed into us can only provide temporal, earthly life. For this reason, the angel who came down with this vivifying doctrine is called ruh. ‘The Trustworthy Ruh (Spirit – Angel Jibril (Gabriel)) has brought it down’ (ash-Shu'ara': 193).

Thus we may say that the life that we ultimately seek is not the temporal, earthly existence we currently live in. Rather, the mortal realm is a stepping stone, a means by which to arrive at an existence higher than this terrestrial one. And in order to obtain that better, choicer existence, we must adhere to the Law provided by the One Who will ultimately bestow upon us eternal life.

To sum up, the section of this verse that states ‘…Such is Allah, my Lord…’ (ash-Shura: 10) connects two aspects of Allah’s Nature. On the one hand, it expresses His Role as the Sole God worthy of worship, providing commandments and religious obligations; and on the other hand, it emphasises His role as a Sustainer Who guides, educates, provides, and confers blessings on us.

It is interesting to consider the diction used by the Quran to describe the issue of tawakkul (putting one's trust in Allah). In the phrase, '…my Lord in Whom I put my trust (`alayhi tawakkaltu)…', we see a style that the grammarians call qasr (restriction) in which the propositional phrase 'in Whom' is placed before the verb, 'I put my trust' (tawakkalt). The restrictive clause limits the meaning of the subject clause. It here underscores the fact that Allah is the only One in Whom trust is placed. If the sentence instead was, 'I placed my trust in Him,' it would include other people or things on which we can rely. Therefore, this choice of style confines and restricts trust and reliance to Allah alone.

Some scholars have said, regarding putting complete trust in Allah, that it is the source of funds for those who have run out of means. It is when humans let go of their own power and strength and entrust themselves to the power and strength of their Lord and Creator. Allah the Exalted has placed ways and means for everything, which, when they become lacking, we should turn to the Causer of everything. The Quran says: 'Is He [not best] who responds to the desperate one when he calls upon Him and removes evil...?' (an-Naml: 62). In this verse the word 'desperate' refers to those who have exhausted all the available means. Rather than falling into despair and succumbing to the pressures of circumstances, such a distressed person instead reminds himself that he has a Lord and Provider who is above all means. He is the Originator of all things, and He will not forsake me when I resort to Him.

We have previously discussed the story of our master Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when he was overtaken by Pharaoh and his soldiers, who surrounded Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and his followers at the edge of the sea. There appeared to be no escape, to the point that those who were with Musa (Moses) peace be upon him said to him: 'We are sure to be overtaken...' (ash-Shu'ara': 61). As far as they could tell, the reality of the situation was that the sea was behind them, their enemies in front of them, and they had nowhere to flee. That was the limit of their vision; whereas Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had other expectations from his Lord. Hence the response to their fears: 'Nay, verily! With me is my Lord, He will guide me' (ash-Shu'ara': 62).

Such is the reliance and confidence that comes from trust in Allah, the reliance shown by distressed people who have lost all means of help, and who have no other recourse than to seek refuge in Allah. Hence the True Lord's response to Musa came as a dazzling, eternal miracle: 'Then We inspired to Musa (Moses), "Strike with your staff the sea," and it parted, and each portion was like a great towering mountain. And We advanced thereto the pursuers. And We saved Musa (Moses) and those with him, all together. Then We drowned the others' (ash-Shu'ara': 63-66).

The style of qasr (restriction) is also employed in Allah's statement: '…and to Him I turn back' (ash-Shura: 10) in which the prepositional phrase '…to Him…' is placed before the verb. This restricts the meaning to one destination only – Allah. We also note an interesting difference between these two sentences in that tawakkul (reliance) is in the past tense tawakkalt, while inabah (returning) is in the present. This perfect precision is due to the fact that the speaker is Allah Himself.

Naturally, it is expected to find such perfect accuracy in the language of the Quran. Placing trust in Allah is a basic doctrine, adhered to from the beginning. Even before we begin to discuss the notion of putting one's trust in Allah, we know that it initially exists and is foundational. Only after first relying on Allah can we then turn to Him in subsequent future events. For this reason, this verse mentions trust in Allah first, then turning to Him.

The next verse discusses another aspect of the power of Allah the Most High, and clarifies His Role as the True Protector and Supporter for all creation:

فَاطِرُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضِۚ جَعَلَ لَكُم مِّنۡ أَنفُسِكُمۡ أَزۡوَٰجٗا وَمِنَ ٱلۡأَنۡعَٰمِ أَزۡوَٰجٗاۖ
يَذۡرَؤُكُمۡ فِيهِۚ لَيۡسَ كَمِثۡلِهِۦ شَيۡءٞۖ وَهُوَ ٱلسَّمِيعُ ٱلۡبَصِيرُ ﴿١١﴾

The Creator of the heavens and earth.' He made mates for you from among yourselves — and for the animals too — so that you may multiply. There is nothing like Him: He is the All Hearing, the All Seeing [11] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 11)

Here, the emphasis is on Allah as the Originator of creation. This can also be found in the first verse of the chapter of Fatir: 'All the praises and thanks be to Allah, the (Only) Originator [or the (Only) Creator] of the heavens and the earth...' (Fatir: 1). The word Fatir (originator) means the One Who originates and materialises creation without a prior model. This has a parallel in the industrial world where the products of some industrially developed countries have been copied by industrially developing countries. Even though the second group of countries may enhance and add features to the industrial products, still they are not the first designers of the original models. Thus, the meaning of the phrase '…Originator of the heavens and the earth…' (Fatir: 1) is that Allah is the One Who Created the heavens and earth originally without a preceding pattern or design.

Continuing on, the phrase '…He has given you…' (ash-Shura: 11) means that all things have been created for the benefit of the children of Adam, whom Allah has selected as His vicegerents on the earth. Therefore, the Qudsi Hadith says: 'O son of Adam, I created all things for your sake, and I created you for My sake. So do not preoccupy yourself with that which already belongs to you and be distracted from that which you belong to (namely, worshipping Allah).'(1)

Continuing with the verse, we read: '…He has made for you from yourselves, mates…' (ash-Shura: 11). By 'mates,' Allah the Most High is referring specifically to the bifurcation of the human species into males and females. This idea appears elsewhere in the Quran, such as the following verse from the chapter of Ya Sin: 'Glory be to Him, Who has created all the pairs of that which the earth produces, as well as of their own (human) kind (male and female), and of that which they know not' (Ya Sin: 36).

(1) Ibn Kathir stated in his exegesis (vol. 4, p. 238): 'It was narrated in some religious books that Allah the Exalted said: "O son of Adam, I created you to worship Me, so do not play. I have already set your share of sustenance, so do not weary yourself. Seek Me, you will find Me. If you find Me, you will find everything else; and if you miss Me, you will miss everything else. Indeed, I am more beloved to you than anything else." ' Narrated by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad (vol. 2, p. 358) as Hadith marfu` (a Hadith narrated from the Prophet with a connected or disconnected chain of narration) on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him who narrated from the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him that he said: 'Allah says: O son of Adam, free yourself for My worship, I will (in turn) fill your chest with satisfaction and remove your poverty. If you do not, I will fill your hands with distraction and will not remove your poverty.'

The notion of duality has been discovered by modern science to be present in all things, even in inanimate objects. Such as the positive and negative poles of electricity and the tiny particles that make up matter. In former eras, people observed this phenomenon in living beings: humans, animals, and plants. Now, science has advanced to the point where we see such a division in all things created by Allah. This proves the truth of Allah's Words: '...and of that which they know not' (Ya Sin: 36).

One of the remarkable aspects in connection with duality in creation is the presence of certain plants which have male traits, and others which have female ones. For these plants, pollination occurs through intermediary means such as the wind or insects. Even more astonishing than this is the existence of hermaphroditic plants, possessing both male and female characteristics. Sycamore trees fall into this category, as do palms. Mangoes, on the other hand, are self-pollinating, requiring no cross-pollination. Wheat and corn are also like them. They self-pollinate, due to the presence of both male and female traits in the same plant.

In this context, the phrase, '…He has made for you from yourselves, mates…' (ash-Shura: 11), therefore, refers to opposites which exist within the same species or type. Nature causes these opposites of the same species, that is, the males and females, to be attracted to one another, leading to cohabitation and the instinct to have sexual relations. For humans, this instinct carries with it both the pleasurable aspect and the procreative function.

Animals only engage in sex for the latter reason, evinced by the fact that a male is only attracted sexually to a female of a particular species until the female becomes impregnated; after this, the male does not come to her for copulation again.(1) Despite this difference between animals and humans, however, both share the procreative instinct. Why, then, do some call this instinct a 'bestial desire' doing insult to animal creatures by insinuating the baseness of their sexual impulses, when it is in fact shared by humans and animals alike?

(1) From Proofreader: This information is according to the knowledge and belief of Sheikh Ash-Sha'rawi Allah rest his soul and it was stated by him to further clarify certain points, but it does not necessarily conform to the scientific facts and information proven true.

One of Allah's Boons to creation was the formation of mates within the same species, allowing concord and harmony to exist between its members, as well as the procreation and preservation of that species. For this reason, the True Lord the Exalted most graciously conferred a favour by sending to the community of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him a Messenger from among themselves, carrying to them Allah's Message: 'Verily, there has come unto you a Messenger (Muhammad) from among yourselves. It grieves him that you should receive any injury or difficulty. He is anxious over you, for the believers (he is) full of pity, kind and merciful' (at-Tawba: 128). From this statement, we understand the care that Islam gives to family life, and that love, harmony, and intimacy must prevail in that sort of life. Therefore, Allah the Exalted says: '...and He placed between you affection and mercy...' (ar-Rum: 21).

The term azwaj (mates) has the singular form zawj in Arabic, (which often refers to a couple, as in a marriage relationship). However, zawj in this context takes on the sense of an individual being or thing which is accompanied by its like, rather than connoting two such things at once. Likewise, the word taw'am (twin) refers not to two twins at once, but to one individual.

Continuing with the present verse, we read, '…and among the cattle, mates...' (ash-Shura: 11). This idea has appeared in previous chapters such as the chapter of al-An`am: 'Eight pairs; of the sheep two (male and female), and of the goats two (male and female). Say, "Has He forbidden the two males or the two females, or (the young) which the wombs of the two females enclose? Inform me with knowledge if you are truthful. And of the camels two (male and female), and of oxen two (male and female)"…' (al-An'am: 143-144). Here, eight types of mates are mentioned, coming from four different species of cattle which are each divided into male and female counterparts.

Moving on, the phrase '…He multiplies you thereby…' (ash-Shura: 11) means to increase or augment the people in number by means of the Lord's creation of mates. We note that Allah the Most High has not said bihi (with or by) the creation of mates, but rather 'thereby' (fihi) meaning 'through' or 'by means of'. The preposition fi used with this specific meaning also appears in the Noble Hadith: ‘A woman was sent to hell by reason of (fi) her imprisoning a cat.’[1]

Allah’s saying: ‘...there is nothing like unto Him...’ (ash-Shura: 11) is particularly appropriate here. When the True Lord Glorified is He speaks of how all things are divided into mates, male and female, He wants to distinguish Himself from everything else in terms of bifurcation into male and female counterparts. He Glorified is He therefore states: ‘…there is nothing like unto Him ...’ (ash-Shura: 11). It would be one thing to simply say: ‘He has no equal’ which would suffice to negate any similarity between Allah and everything else. However, here the Arabic puts extra emphasis on this point by using the word kamithlihi (like unto) the frequent usage of which in human discourse shows how much people like to speak using comparisons. We see this in everyday Arabic speech, in which the phrase ‘like’ or ‘as’ actually refers back, by implication, to the subject of comparison. For example, a person may say: ‘One such as yourself would not do that’ as an injunction against a particular behaviour. The meaning is: ‘You should not do that, because a good person (such as yourself) would not do such a thing.’ One may therefore say, for example, ‘One such as yourself would not exhibit cowardice on the battlefield.’ Granted, it would be much easier to simply say: ‘You should not be a coward in times of war,’ rather than inserting the phrase ‘one such as yourself’.

However, the language here is operating on a different level, namely the level of allegorical speech. If, for example, one were to use the simile, ‘Zayd is like a lion’ this does not mean that Zayd is in fact a lion. It is a figurative device used to underscore some of Zayd’s personality traits which resemble those of a lion, but to a lesser degree; the lion is obviously more lion-like than Zayd, whose characteristics only bear a resemblance to the lion. Doubtless, the subject of comparison is worthier than the object with which the subject is compared. Therefore, we would not say that there exists something like the True Lord Glorified is He even when just assuming, since nothing would be truly like unto Him. Something 'like' Allah would not be Allah Himself, but rather, a creature or thing of a lower existence which, when compared to Allah, might resemble Him in some way. This is what the poet (1) means when he writes:

(1) Narrated on the authority of Ibn ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘A woman was punished in hell because of a cat which she had confined until it died. She did not give it to eat or to drink when it was confined, nor did she free it so that it might eat the vermin *of the earth.’ It was related in Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (3318). Ibn Hajar stated in his book titled Al-Fath (*vol. 6, p. 357): ‘The intended meaning of the phrase “the vermin of the earth” is the pests and rodents, such as mice and the like.’

I did not mean by saying, 'One such as You,' except Someone other than You, O Singular One without Like!(2)

Thus, in the phrase '…there is nothing like unto Him…' (ash-Shura: 11) the style of negating the existence of anything which compares to Allah goes beyond merely denying that there exists something which resembles Allah. Indeed, Allah affirms the fact that, even if such a thing existed, it still would not be 'like' Him, since comparison does not mean equation. The 'nothing' to which the verse refers encompasses any kind or sort of the various aspects of Allah's creation. So anything in creation that can be referred to as a 'thing' is entirely unlike Allah.

Continuing on, we read, '...and He is the Hearing, the Seeing' (ash-Shura: 11). This description of Allah involves two attributes which some of His creatures are endowed with. Allah sees and hears, and humans can see and hear. However, we must regard this description of Allah in the light of the phrase just discussed, which is that '…there is nothing like unto Him…' (ash-Shura: 11). Allah does not hear as humans do, nor does He see as they do. The description of Allah as 'the Hearing' means that He hears all sounds; and 'the Seeing' that He sees all visual things.

(1) Abu At-Tayyib Al-Mutanabbi Ahmad ibn Al-Husayn, born in Kufa (303 A.H. /915 A.D.). He was a wise, learned man and a poet. He was raised in the region of Sham (the Levant). From there, he went on to live in the desert with the Bedouin, where he began his career as a poet while still a youth. While living with the tribes of Samawa, he advanced the claim that he was a new prophet. He was captured and imprisoned for this after which he repented and forsook his pretensions to prophethood. He was most famous for his praise poetry to Sayf Ad-Dawla ibn Hamdan, the governor of Aleppo. Al-Mutanabbi was killed in Baghdad in 354 A.H. /965 A.D. at the age of 51.

(2) This is the final line of a poem by Al-Mutanabbi composed in the sari' (fast) meter and comprising 35 lines in total.

Elsewhere in the Quran, Allah Glorified is He states: '...and Allah is Seeing of what they do' (al-Ma'ida: 71). In this, we see that hearing is counted as an action, as well as speech and sight. As explained in previous sections, a person's actions consist of words and deeds. Words are confined to that which is uttered by the tongue, and deeds comprise all acts carried out by the sense organs except for the tongue. Accordingly, the tongue takes over one-half of a person's actions because with it a person makes statements, proclaims his faith and expresses himself.

So this verse teaches us how to place Allah the Most High above any peers, counterparts or equals. We have also learned to view the attributes shared between Allah and His creation within the frame of this belief ['there is nothing like unto Him'].

And why not, when such characteristics and abilities differ even from one human being to another? Different houses offer a simple, yet clear example. The sentinel of a town may have a house with an outdoor stone bench for receiving guests. The chief of the town and the mayor may also have their own houses with such a bench or a sitting room, each according to his means. But the town commissioner may have a larger house than all three of these men, filled with luxuries that the others could not hope to possess. All of these people own houses, but they differ in the type and quality of those homes. This brief example serves to illustrate the differences in characteristics or qualities from one person to another. If such differences exist between humans, how much more so in the qualities shared between humans and our Lord the Glorious and Exalted?

لَهُۥ مَقَالِيدُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ ۖ يَبْسُطُ ٱلرِّزْقَ لِمَن
يَشَآءُ وَيَقْدِرُ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ بِكُلِّ شَىْءٍ عَلِيمٌ ﴿١٢﴾

The keys of the heavens and the earth are His; He provides abundantly or sparingly for whoever He will; He has full knowledge of all things [12] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 12)

When considering this verse, let us first note the usage of the style of qasr (restriction) in the part saying: 'To Him belong the keys of the heavens and the earth…' (ash-Shura: 12) in which the propositional phrase 'To Him' is placed before the verb, 'belong'. In Arabic, this style emphasises the fact that the keys of heaven and earth belong to no one other than Allah alone. They are exclusively His own, and no one has any share of that with Him.

The word 'keys' here refers to Allah's possession of the keys of all beneficial and good things for mankind, whether in the heavens or on the earth. Allah also says in another place in the Quran: 'And with Him are the keys of the Unseen, none knows them but He...' (al-An'am: 59). The Unseen is just one of several storehouses, locked up away from the reach of anyone. When Allah grants someone a key to one of these depositories, giving him access to some knowledge of the Unseen, He empowers him to speak knowledgeably as a special bounty and honour bestowed upon him. It is by the grace of the Most High Allah alone that such a thing comes to pass. However, this access into understanding that has been granted to him does not make him an expert on the Unseen, as if he were fit to open an office of the Unseen sciences! Rather, such a person should make good use of the knowledge that Allah has conferred upon him, and return the key to its proper Owner. 'And with Him are the keys of the Unseen; none knows them except Him...' (al-An'am: 59). Indeed, those who claim to have knowledge of the Unseen lack courtesy with Allah.

In our common language, we also employ the word maqalid (keys) in various everyday contexts, (often with a figurative meaning). For example, we may say that a person possesses the keys of rule, or control or dominion to describe being in a management position or other occupation in which power has been granted to him over decisions or policies. We say of such a person, 'he holds the keys of power…' meaning he is responsible for management choices or decisions or controls the business and knows its secrets.

Continuing with the verse, we read: 'He enlarges provision for whom He wills, and straitens (it for whom He wills)...' (ash-Shura: 12). This goes along with the preceding discussion of the keys possessed by Allah, one of which is Providence, or the power to grant sustenance freely and easily to some people, or to give it meagrely or even withhold it from others, according to His Will. Allah expounds this idea elsewhere in the Quran: 'And there is not a thing but that with Us are its depositories, and We do not send it down except according to a known measure' (al-Hijr: 21). In other words, Allah bestows or withholds His Sustenance and Gifts according to his Knowledge and Wisdom and in Divine measure. Do not think that the distribution of wealth among people is random and haphazard. Indeed, the Distributor has full knowledge of His creatures and is perfectly aware of their secrets and their hidden needs and wants. He is the All-Wise Who puts everything in its proper place. Therefore, we should not be surprised to see a millionaire living in opulence and luxury, while his neighbour can barely find nourishment for the day. We should not be astonished to see some shop owners enjoying a healthy flow of commerce, with customers buying and selling all day long, while stores adjacent to theirs receive no customers at all. We should not be shocked by such discrepancies in wealth and sustenance because there is a higher wisdom behind such differences. Wisdom which some understand and others do not.

In this regard, it is sufficient to read Allah's saying: 'And there is not a thing but that with Us are its depositories, and We do not send it down except according to a known measure' (al-Hijr: 21). As a concluding explanation of this fact, the verse under consideration reads: '...verily! He is the Knower of everything' (ash-Shura: 12). He knows who to give to and who not to give. For this reason, our master, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said in explanation of the wisdom behind uneven distribution of sustenance that Allah the Glorious and Exalted says in a Qudsi Hadith: 'Among my servants are those whom if I make rich, they will become corrupted; and those whom if I make poor, they will be set right.'(1) Elsewhere, the True Lord the Most High says: 'No! [But] indeed, man transgresses. Because he sees himself self-sufficient' (al-'Alaq: 6-7).

And so we understand that there is wisdom behind the poverty of the poor and the richness of the rich. You should not raise objections to this. Instead, contemplate the situation. Perhaps wealth in your hands becomes a tool for assault, oppression, or violence. Or perhaps riches induce you to disobey Allah or kindle in you an inclination to evil. Excess luxury leads to any number of evil acts, which is why, when Allah withholds riches from some people, He is actually protecting them through poverty. Where wealth is appropriate to some, it may not be to others. You may act more righteously when you have little and show contentment with what Allah has allotted to you. You live contently and avert your eyes from gazing at the worldly belongings and riches of those who are of a higher status (financially) than you.

(1) *Narrated by Al-Bayhaqi in his book Al-Asma' wa As-Sifat (p. 121 - Egypt), and Al-Baghawi in his explanation of the Sunnah (*vol. *1, p. 142), and Abu Bakr Al-Kalabadhi in Miftah Al-Ma`any (190), and Al-Albani in As-Silsilah Ad-Da`ifah wa Al-Mawdu`ah (*vol. 4, p. 256). He commented saying. 'It is ranked as very weak.' It begins as follows: 'He who antagonises a wali (a good worshipper, a faithful obedient servant) of Mine, I declare war against him.'

We often see how corrupt the children of rich people can become due to the vast wealth at their disposal. Meanwhile, the son of a poor man is often protected from such vice, a fact which quite possibly makes his life better than that of the rich man's son. Examples of this abound in our lives.

A believer is only required to live within his financial means. However, there are those who try to set up a certain lifestyle for themselves before they have the means to pay for it. Struggling under financial difficulties, such people who do not have a sufficient income to sustain a lavish lifestyle often resort to illegal practices such as deceit, theft, bribery, and other unlawful means of obtaining the money necessary to cover their expenses. In this regard, Allah states: 'Let a man of wealth spend from his wealth, and he whose provision is restricted – let him spend from what Allah has given him. Allah does not charge a soul except [according to] what He has given it. Allah will bring about, after hardship, ease' (at-Talaq: 7).

When a believer enters a marketplace, for example, he finds all kinds of delicious, appetising foods – turkey, beef, fish, and fruits. And he may even desire them greatly. But in the end, he contents himself with the food he can afford, according to his means. He buys a kilogram of green beans and half a kilogram of cheese, and takes them home and eats them with his wife and children, finding in them a deliciousness which a rich man may not experience. However, if he were to fix his gaze on kinds of food which are beyond his means to buy, he would go into debt to be able to eat as wealthy people do. This might even lead to excess buying and eating to the point where the man becomes a spendthrift, squandering his means. This can go on for some time until his creditor knocks on his door one day, seeking repayment of the debt he owes him. On that day, the sweetness of rich foods will be nothing compared to the shame suffered due to debt.

For this reason, Allah Glorified is He addresses the son of Adam in a Qudsi Hadith: ‘O son of Adam, I have created you so that you would devote yourself to Me, therefore, do not deviate from this path of worship. And I gave you sustenance so that you might not suffer fatigue—not the fatigue that comes from bodily wounds, but from thought, concerns and mental preoccupation with your life’s sustenance. If you content yourself with that which I have provided you, I will bring peace to your heart and body, and you will be regarded as praiseworthy. But if you are not content with what I have given, by My Majesty and greatness I will give this world power over you, such that you race about it like a beast running amok in the wild; that you gather from it only that which I have allotted you and that you receive my rebuke. O son of Adam, I have created the heavens and the earth, and that was an effortless matter to Me. Do you not think, then, that giving you a loaf of bread is an easier task to me? O son of Adam, ask not for tomorrow’s sustenance just as I do not ask you for tomorrow’s obedience to My commands. O son of Adam, you are ever beloved of Me and it remains My right to ask you to be ever beloved to Me.’(1)

Therefore, if a poor person is content with that which the Lord has given him, and does not seek a lavish lifestyle beyond his means to pay for it, Allah will say to him: ‘You have been content with the small measure of sustenance which I have given you and now, I will bless you with an increased measure’. It is for this reason that we see numerous examples of successful, wealthy people who started from scratch and suffered meagre (2) conditions, and rose from the bottom of the social pyramid.

---

(1) This was mentioned in Ibn Kathir’s Tafsir (426/7, from the Dar Ash-Sha`b Al-Muhaqqiqa edition), and noted that summarised versions of it are found in several of the sacred books. Ismail Haqqi mentioned it in his Quranic commentary, Ruh Al-Bayan Fi Tafsir Al-Quran (59/7), in his exposition of verse 71 from the chapter of an-Nahl: ‘And Allah has favoured some of you over others in provision’ (an-Nahl: 71).

(2) The Arabic word used here, mudaqqa`, derives from the word ad-daq`a` meaning the dust of the earth. Thus, the word ‘“meagre’,” (mudaqqa) refers to one who clings to the level of the very dust, as it were, due to his extreme poverty.

When pondering the question of the limited economic conditions some of Allah's creations live in, we see that He withholds sustenance from some for a wise purpose, not only in terms of individual spiritual gain, but also for society as a whole. The apparent discrepancy between people's means leads to a form of harmony among the elements of a community, whereby everyone must rely on everyone else. The poor relies on the wealthy for sustenance- this we know-likewise, the wealthy relies on the poor for certain basic labours essential to any society. Not everyone can be a CEO as the world needs people to work in such professions like industrial production, agriculture and other fundamental occupations. Neither type of employment is better or worse than another type; each provides wages for the employee. A businessman needs to make money to live, so he engages in commerce. A maid, on the other hand, needs to earn her living, so she polishes, sweeps and cleans in people's houses. Consequently, it is out of material necessity and benefit that social classes are connected.

Another aspect of this discussion has to do with the quality of labour performed solely for the sake of money. For example, it is worth noting that many wealthy businessmen and CEO complain about their employees, grumbling that they only do their jobs when they run out of cash. As long as they have money in their pockets, the workers do not perform at their full potential. Along these same lines, I remember something my old professor, Musa Sharif, was fond of saying. He would lament, 'Oh that I could make learned men rich and mere labourers poor!' When asked about this statement, he would explain that people of learning take pride in knowledge for its own sake and would undertake to learn and to teach even if they were not paid well for it. Whereas, mere labourers work only for financial gain and do not have the same love for their vocation like the scholar.

As noted previously, the amount of work a person performs now will determine the payoff later. If a person works for ten years and saves his money, he will be able to live comfortably for the rest of his life. However, if that same person were to labour for twenty years, putting away his income, he would be able to provide a comfortable lifestyle for himself and his children after him. And if he undertook thirty years of employment in order to set aside his money, his grandchildren would still be enjoying the fruits of his labours long after his passing away. As a final note, we should remember that, despite one's best efforts, temporal conditions are subject to change. Allah Glorified is He says, 'And these days [of varying conditions] We alternate among the people…' (Al-'Imran: 140). So, today a person might enjoy sustenance and material blessings, tomorrow those things might be taken from him.

شَرَعَ لَكُم مِّنَ ٱلدِّينِ مَا وَصَّىٰ بِهِۦ نُوحًا وَٱلَّذِىٓ أَوۡحَيۡنَآ إِلَيۡكَ وَمَا وَصَّيۡنَا بِهِۦٓ
إِبۡرَٰهِيمَ وَمُوسَىٰ وَعِيسَىٰٓۖ أَنۡ أَقِيمُواْ ٱلدِّينَ وَلَا تَتَفَرَّقُواْ فِيهِۚ كَبُرَ عَلَى ٱلۡمُشۡرِكِينَ مَا
تَدۡعُوهُمۡ إِلَيۡهِۚ ٱللَّهُ يَجۡتَبِىٓ إِلَيۡهِ مَن يَشَآءُ وَيَهۡدِىٓ إِلَيۡهِ مَن يُنِيبُ ﴿١٣﴾

In matters of faith, He has laid down for you [people] the same commandment that He gave Noah, which We have revealed to you [Muhammad] and which We enjoined on Abraham and Moses and Jesus: 'Uphold the faith and do not divide into factions within it' – what you [Prophet] call upon the idolaters to do is hard for them; God chooses whoever He pleases for Himself and guides towards Himself those who turn to Him [13] (The Quran, ash-Shura: 13)

This verse provides further explanation and insight into the third verse at the beginning of this chapter: 'Thus has He revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and to those before you - Allah, the Exalted in Might, the Wise' (ash-Shura: 3). We note here the employment of a summary early on, followed later by the elucidation of details; this rhetorical device is one distinguishing feature of the Quranic style. To begin, we read Allah's statement, 'He has ordained for you of religion…' (ash-Shura: 13) meaning He has established and clarified the matter. The Arabic word shara` (ordained) is the source of such words as sharra` to make laws and sharia, i.e. the clear path which is used to refer to the legal code of Islam. This part of the verse refers to divine providence with regard to spiritual matters. We know that humans are comprised of two aspects, a material and a spiritual, and just as Allah provides food and air for the sustenance of the physical body, so too, does He breathe life into the human's soul, a life filled with morals and values.

Those standards make up the right way of Allah, which He revealed to the heart of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Indeed, it is by this way that He gives life to the hearts and spirits of people, just as He gives life to their bodies by providing food and water. This ordination of true faith is not something new, nor is the path established for humankind, but rather a law established by Allah for all those who have come before, according to that which was of most benefit to them.

It is for this reason that the next statement we read in the verse is '…what He enjoined upon Nuh (Noah)…' (ash-Shura: 13) meaning those things which Allah Glorified is He had commanded Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him to do, and the religious duties made incumbent upon him. Allah chose Nuh (Noah) for this because he was the first messenger to reveal Allah's words to people at large. Scholars point out that Nuh (Noah) was sent out primarily to call the people of his time to take refuge in the ark. This constitutes his particular mission as a messenger sent to give the commands of Allah to all people. Numerous prophets since Nuh (Noah) have had similar callings, in order to bring Allah's words to the masses. The final of these is, of course, the message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him a message intended for all nations and peoples found upon the earth.

Let us take a moment to reflect on the rhetorical style of this particular statement. The relative pronoun ma (that which), but with a more specific semantic intent. It would have been logical to use the word 'that which' in the next statement '…and that which We have revealed to you, [O Muhammad]…' (ash-Shura: 13) except that this refers to revelation given to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him Therefore, the more general relative pronoun, which, is the principle relative pronoun by grammarians of Arabic, is used in this particular context, leaving the pronoun, that which, to be used in the other statements regarding revelation found in the verse. We also note the verb 'He has ordained', which appears in the first person singular form of the present perfect tense. This is different from the statement referring to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessing be upon him in which we read, '…and that which We have revealed to you, [O Muhammad]…' (ash-Shura: 13). Here, the verb appears in the second person plural form, which is often called the plural of majesty. Then, next clause returns to using the relative pronoun, that which, in another form, 'and what We enjoined upon Ibrahim (Abraham) and Musa (Moses) and `Isa (Jesus)' (ash-Shura: 13). The fact that this verse employs a different relative pronoun- the principal one- when referring the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him is evidence of his special status, being set apart from all the other messengers peace be upon them.

We read, then, that Allah Glorified is He has ordained something and set it apart. The clause which follows elaborates what this thing is, beginning with the word ‘that’, which introduces the subjunctive mood expressing a wish, and signals an explanation of what Allah Has ordained exactly and set apart, namely, ‘…to establish the religion and not be divided therein’ (ash-Shura: 13). This is similar to another verse where Allah says, ‘And We inspired to the mother of Musa (Moses), “Suckle him…”’ (al-Qasas: 17). In short, Allah ordained to these prophets that they establish true religion and that they do not allow discord or enmity to exist among them. Delving further into this point, to establish something means to cause it to stand, i.e. to be firm. When something stands, it is ultimately evidence of the power or ability to do something since no one exerts more energy than he has to spare. If a person gets tired of standing, he sits down and once he is tired of that, he lies down. And so, when Allah Glorified is He tells us to establish the true religion, He wishes for us to stand for religion, rather than to sit idly by or to lie down in the wake of trials. The idea of standing here is a metaphor for attention to the establishment of religion and its preservation thereof. Finally, the phrase ‘…and not be divided therein’ (ash-Shura: 13) means that you put an end to the differences and squabbles between you.

The Arabic word for ‘divided’, appears elsewhere in the Quran in the story of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him: ‘And there entered the prison with him two young men. One of them said, “Indeed, I have seen myself [in a dream] pressing wine.” The other said, “Indeed, I have seen myself carrying upon my head [some] bread, from which the birds were eating. Inform us of its interpretation; indeed, we see you to be of those who do the good.”’ (Yusuf: 36)

The final statement ‘…indeed, we see you to be of those who do the good.’ (Yusuf: 36) refers to goodness, not just that which comes from those who do good, but also from those who commit acts of disobedience. However, the meaning here is that the degree or ability to do good deeds is not a gift from Allah, but rather, it depends on our adherence to Allah’s orders.

In the next verse, Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him expounds this example, which has allowed him to exercise dream interpretation: '…Indeed, I have left the religion of a people who do not believe in Allah, and they, in the Hereafter, are disbelievers. And I have followed the religion of my fathers, Ibrahim (Abraham), Ishaq (Isaac) and Ya`qub (Jacob). And it was not for us to associate anything with Allah. That is from the favour of Allah upon us and upon the people, but most of the people are not grateful.' (Yusuf: 37-38)

From this explanation, we understand that Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him wished to portray the ease of obtaining divine gifts and the ability to use them. He, therefore, first expounds the way by which this is accomplished, instead of going right into his interpretation of the dreams of his prison cellmates. He saw that they had a more immediate need for spiritual direction, guidance, and counsel, rather than an explanation of the visions they were shown. For this reason, he took advantage of the fact that his companions were attentive to his words since they wanted him to interpret their dreams. For this reason, he engaged in this discussion with them about faith: 'You worship not besides Him except [mere] names you have named them, you and your fathers, for which Allah has sent down no authority. Legislation is not but for Allah. He has commanded that you worship not except Him. That is the correct religion, but most of the people do not know.' (Yusuf: 40) In this verse, Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him discusses true worship and the inadequacy of revering multiple gods. Only after having this conversation, in which he invites his prison companions to adhere to the true path of Allah, does he begin his interpretation of their dreams: 'O two companions of prison, as for one of you, he will give drink to his master of wine; but as for the other, he will be crucified, and the birds will eat from his head. The matter has been decreed about which you both inquire.' (Yusuf: 41)

If Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him had given his interpretation of the two dreams first, then followed it with his counsel about following Allah's commands, his cellmates would not have listened to him with the same concentration. It is a fact of human nature that people do things primarily to satisfy their interests; Yusuf (Joseph) would have fulfilled his companions' needs right away if he had immediately told them the interpretation of their dreams, causing them to divert their attention away from his advice about faith which would follow. He, therefore, began with what he desired to pass on to them, leaving their needs aside until he has finished he intended to say. From this story, then, we learn that, if a person wishes to have full attention of another person who has approached him in need, the first person should postpone fulfilling the second person's need until he has said what he wishes to say.

Continuing with the verse, we read: '…to establish the religion and not be divided therein' (ash-Shura: 13). This means that the believers are not to take any but Allah as their Lord and only God. It is also a divine order against division into factions and parties, as Allah says elsewhere in the Quran: 'Indeed, those who have divided their religion and become sects - you, [O Muhammad], are not [associated] with them in anything.' (al-An'am: 159) In that moment in which people are separated into opposing groups, they have gone astray, since it is incumbent upon us to gather together around Allah, united in faith.

In the next part of the verse: 'Difficult for those who associate others with Allah is that to which you invite them.' (ash-Shura: 13) The Arabic word kabura (difficult for those) means to be a burden or a trouble to someone; this differs from the word kabara, from the same tri-literal root, which means to increase in age. This statement uses the former because monotheism and sincerity of belief in the one true Lord are burdensome and painful to the disbelievers. It is troublesome for them to bear testimony that 'there is no god but Allah', knowing as they do what it really means. They realise it signifies a way to lead one's life, complete with obligations and requirements, rather than mere words which are spoken. Accordingly, their reluctance to say them, 'It is also a burden upon the disbelievers to think that all people should be equal, like the teeth of a comb, one neither greater nor lesser than another, except in matters of devotion to Allah and performing good deeds'. This is because they came historically from the elite and they had a difficult time dealing with a religion like Islam, which brought with it the idea that master and slave are equal as human beings. This idea is troublesome to them and a burden. For this reason, they disputed with the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and took a stand against him. But Allah Glorified is He never left him to face them by himself and assured him by saying: 'Allah chooses for Himself whom He wills and guides to Himself whoever turns back [to Him]' (ash-Shura: 13). It is as if He is trying to say, 'Do not fret over their antagonistic attitude towards you or their rejection of your invitation to follow the true religion. It is only natural for them to approach you in this way because your message threatens to remove the power which they have enjoyed for so long. It will prevent them from spreading corruption in society and benefiting from it, as they have done in the past; and from subjecting the people to their whims, leaving them without power to escape. Their animosity towards you is evidence that you are in the right when you call them to repentance. Thus, their hostility is to be expected, since they follow their nature and you follow yours; they behave in a spirit of aggression and stubbornness and arrogance and you in a spirit of longsuffering'.

Therefore, Allah's statement 'Allah chooses for Himself whom He wills and guides to Himself whoever turns back [to Him]' (ash-Shura: 13) refers to those powerful leaders who stubbornly resist the call to true religion. It means that there will be those among them who decide to answer that call, who will uphold it and be like an ensign for it. Allah Glorified is He consequently comforts His Messenger, telling him not to be sad or to worry, since he will lead many disbelievers to the faith one by one. This is upheld by the acceptance of Islam by several of the Companions, such as `Umar and Khalid and `Amr and `Ikrima Allah be pleased with them and others. It should be noted that the Arabic word yajtabi (chooses) means that Allah selects and sets apart those of His slaves whom He wishes, in order for them to be protectors of His true religion. That setting apart is as if it were the first step, a preface to being able to receive His guidance. That is why He begins with the statement that He chooses whom He wills, following it with the affirmation that He: 'guides to Himself whoever turns back [to Him]' (ash-Shura: 13). He first calls and sets apart those whom He wills, softening their resistance to the call to true religion and making faith beloved to them, in order to prepare them to be guided by Him.

In historical accounts of wars and invasions, we read examples of how Allah Glorified is He preserved those disbelievers, whom He later converted to Islam. There are numerous stories of about the companions of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him who would return home from war, feeling dejected after unsuccessful attempts to kill such then known to be disbelievers like Khalid, `Amr and `Ikrima Allah be pleased with them who were counted among the enemies and later converted to Islam. At the time, the Companions were unaware that Allah had set these men apart and preserved them, in order to prosper His true religion and exalt His word through them. Indeed, Allah safeguarded these men, calling them from among the disbelievers and choosing them to be later guided by accepting Islam so that they would carry its banner and spread its message to all peoples and nations.

Before leaving behind the thirteenth verse, let us consider two points of controversy among some orientalists concerning what Allah says, ‘He has ordained for you of religion what He enjoined upon Nuh (Noah) and that which We have revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what We enjoined upon Ibrahim (Abraham) and Musa (Moses) and `Isa (Jesus)…’ (ash-Shura: 13). The first point involves the question of revelation. If Islam were the same yesterday, today and forever, then why would Allah reveal different laws to different messengers in different times and places? This goes along with the second point of contention, which involves a seeming contradiction between this and other verses. We read elsewhere in the Quran: ‘To each of you We prescribed a law and a method’ (al-Ma‘ida: 48). In other words, every prophet has his respective law and Muhammad had things revealed to him which were not revealed to those who came before him.

In answer to the first point, we know that Allah Has revealed certain truths and doctrines which are incumbent upon all people and for this reason He has made them known to all His messengers. The inspired revelations received by Allah’s messengers all agree concerning these fundamental principles, the foremost of which is the oneness of Allah and the absence of any god other than Him. After this first principle, come other basic doctrines such as faith in the holy books and in the messengers of Allah. These first truths are unchanging, divine revelations seen in the words of every prophet; they represent the cornerstone of true religion and they are what is intended when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘He has ordained for you of religion what He enjoined upon Nuh (Noah) and that which We have revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what We enjoined upon Ibrahim (Abraham) and Musa (Moses) and `Isa (Jesus)…' (ash-Shura: 13). The word, 'revealed', here refers to those necessary, unchanging principles common to all religions inspired by Allah's word. The truth behind Allah's Oneness is expressed by every righteous messenger; likewise, acts of worship such as prayer and almsgiving appear as obligatory practices in every religious law preceding Islam, making it impossible for any inspired message to neglect their importance.

For example, we see the importance of prayer illustrated in the story of our prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him who took his family to live in a parched valley which was a hardship for them due to the lack of food. He explains the reasoning behind this decision, which was made in the following verse: '…that they may establish prayer…' (Ibrahim: 37). In this same story, Allah Glorified is He states: 'And [mention, O Muhammad], when We designated(1) for Ibrahim (Abraham) the site of the House, [saying], "Do not associate anything with Me and purify My House for those who perform Tawaf and those who stand [in prayer] and those who bow and prostrate."' (al-Hajj: 26) We see this also in another story, that of prophet Shu`aib (Jethro) peace be upon him: 'They said, "O Shu`aib (Jethro), does your prayer command you that we should leave what our fathers worship…"' (Hud: 87)? And yet again, in the story of prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him: 'So the angels called him while he was standing in prayer in the chamber…' (Al-'Imran: 39).

Likewise, the practice of zakat is present in the inspired message of every prophet in every religion. For example, in the following verse, Allah Glorified is He explains this concept: 'He has certainly succeeded who purifies himself. And mentions the name of his Lord and prays. But you prefer the worldly life, while the Hereafter is better and more enduring. Indeed, this is in the former scriptures, The scriptures of Ibrahim (Abraham) and Musa (Moses).' (al-A'la: 14-19) In this manner, all divinely inspired religions encourage believers to rid their bodies and souls of those sins and transgressions which harm both self and society; omission of sin is prerequisite to true submission to Allah. Every inspired religion enjoins personal purity upon its followers—from one's heart all the way to the soles of one's feet, a true believer cleanses himself from sin and error. Take the heart, for example as a symbol of one's thoughts and feelings; it is the foremost of human organs, exerting the most influence on one's overall disposition. That is why the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said: 'However, there is in the body a morsel of flesh which, if made pure, will purify the entire body; and if corrupted, will corrupt the whole self. This morsel of flesh is the heart.'(1) There are a number of things which believers are asked to remove from their hearts, such as the thought that there are any gods other than Allah Glorified is He insistence on transgressing or rebelling against His law. They are also required not to have feelings of security from Allah's Wrath or lose hope in His Mercy.

(1) Designated means facilitated for him a place. Similarly, Allah mentions in another verse: 'And [remember] when you, [O Muhammad], left your family in the morning to post the believers at their stations for the battle [of Uhud] …' (Al-'Imran: 121) which means that Allah placed them in the battle field- without leaving it- to fight. (Adapted from Al-Qamus Al-Qawim 1/88)

Likewise, followers of Islam are required to rid their tongues of impure speech since the tongue is the vanguard of expression and clarity. There are a number of things which believers should purge from their daily communication, including the telling of lies, slandering women of good repute, perjury and swearing the dipping oath.(2) Finally, true believers should rid themselves of spells which magicians pronounce.

As for the belly, we are obligated to cleanse it of alcohol, usury, and stealing from orphans' money. Believers are also to keep their hands clean, avoiding such acts as theft and murder. Likewise, the genitals are to be kept free from prostitution and those other sex acts prohibited by Allah. Even one's legs are to be prohibited from going to any place that displeases Allah, i.e. doing acts of harm.

Among other established principles of any religion, we find the principle of disobedience to parents, which all religions prohibit, but to which human nature is ever inclined. Allah Glorified is He forbids disobedience to one's parents because learning to comply with the demands of a parent is a training ground for obedience to Allah Himself. Parents are the direct means by which we live on earth, just as Allah is the indirect means thereof. Reverence for one's parents, therefore, helps us to follow Allah's Commands and we should respect our mothers and fathers, even if they worship something other than the True Lord, Allah Glorified is He. This is clearly stated in the following verse, where Allah says, 'But if they endeavour to make you associate with Me that of which you have no knowledge, do not obey them but accompany them in [this] world with appropriate kindness…' (Luqman: 15).

(1) Al-Bukhari extracted it for its authenticity (52) and also Muslim, based on An-Na`man ibn Bashir's Hadith (1599).

(2) It is called a dipping oath because it 'dips' the one swearing by it into the hellfire, as it is a reason why people lose their rights. Ibn-Mas`ud said regarding it, 'It is considered one of the major sins for a man to falsely swear an oath in order to cut from his brother's wages.' Lisan Al-`Arab

For this reason, Allah teaches us about the importance of respecting one's parents in every inspired message which He Has revealed. We see this, for example, in the story of prophet `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. Since a lack of obedience to parents was a possible chink in `Isa's (Jesus's) spiritual armour, through which Satan might have gotten hold of him, Allah commanded 'Isa (Jesus) to revere his mother. However, because `Isa (Jesus) was born of a mother and not a father, this injunction was for him to respect his mother alone, in order to fend off Satan's temptations: 'And [made me] dutiful to my mother, and He has not made me a wretched tyrant.' (Maryam: 32). Whereas in the story of prophet Yahya (John) peace be upon him who was born of a mother and a father, the command is to obey both of his parents: 'And dutiful to his parents, and he was not a disobedient tyrant.' (Maryam: 14). We note that prophet `Isa's (Jesus's) statement, 'And [made me] dutiful to my mother…' (Maryam: 32), is a recognition of this difference. In the story of Yahya (John), it is Allah who tells us of his reverence for his parents, especially since his very birth was miraculous; his parents were both advanced in age and his mother was barren. The incredulous circumstances surrounding Yahya's (John's) birth represent a potential way for Satan to tempt Yahya (John) to disbelief, by making him question his existence, 'How would I come to being while my mother was barren and my father an old man'?

To conclude, we know that Allah wishes us to cleanse ourselves of all the sins and transgressions mentioned in this discussion. He desires that we rid our bodies of all spiritual filth, turning them into vessels for building society and mutual respect and love among all people. He wants us, through personal purity, to build our own communities in such a way as to help guarantee a good and happy life for all those with whom we coexist. This command, to cleanse ourselves so that we could help others, is a common denominator of all religions and it represents the intended meaning of Allah’s statement ‘He has ordained for you of religion what He enjoined upon Nuh (Noah)…’ (ash-Shura: 13).
